Our Kentucky Correspondent.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—Our county fairs, a source of enjoyment to all good housewives and farmers, on account of the rivalry and competition they afford in a social and hospitable way, are now in full blast, and some good trotters and many good roadsters are blooming out. A great feature of these fairs now, is trotting race or races every day—a progress of the last twenty-five years, within which time every farmer has made himself familiar with valuable attributes of trotting blood, and has secured for breeding purposes one of "the best to be had," or more than one if able to finger handsomely from the sales of his surplus crops. And these mares and their youngsters are generally the pride of the household. The thoroughbred mare is more expensive, and suitable sires are not so conveniently located, so they are not so plentiful or so generally diffused, but such is the envy felt toward those who have them that they are already encroaching upon the trotter.

The report that Mr. S. H. Baughman's Lincoln, (two-year-old by St. Martin; out of Olena by imp. Buckden), was permanently broken down, I am glad to say is a mistake. He threw out a bow in his right fore leg, from which he is recovering very well and with no other hindrance will be at the post next spring, when it is hoped he will clearly demonstrate that he is a better race horse than his full brother Santaleone, as he is known to a few to be.

Olena has now a splendid suckling by her side by Concrete (full brother to Drake Carter), of which we may have occasion to write much in the next year or two. Many like him better than Santaleone or Lincoln at the same age, and it is to be hoped that he will be purchased by some good hands as Mr. B. does not race nor enter in stakes, but only raises to sell, having some sixteen or eighteen mares collected within the last four years. The writer has the satisfaction of having induced him to buy St. Martin, and give his attention to thoroughbreds instead of mules. Mr. Geo. McAllister, of this place, another recent Richmond on the racing field, won his maiden race at our county fair the other day, with a very sprightly b f two-year-old by St. Martin, dam by Lee Paul. Though the time up to 56, it was a good half-mile performance as the track was very muddy, and she won handsily. What a loss to racing was occasioned by the death of St. Martin, everything by him given even a half preparation goes to the front! His last are now yearlings, only a few and all in this vicinity, three or four of them colts, are of highest promise.

Mr. John Farris, of this place has in charge some good trotters, among others, Adam Pence, a three-year-old that does his mile handsily in less than 2:35 after a very short preparation.

A peep at the stables at Danville, Ky., discovers some very good material for sulkies. Cecil Bros. have nearly fifty trotters in training, some of the best are Carter P. g g six years (by Gov. Sprague), record 2:25. Mary T. four years, by Gov. Sprague, can better 2:30. Mistake goes in 2:30, no record, is a promising four-year-old. Miss Bonesetter five-year-old goes in 2:33, two-year-old g c by Mappy Medium, dam by Nutwood; granddam Jay-Eye-See's dam, can trot a mile out under 2:40. C. C. two-year-old by Nut Hurst, dam by Onward; second dam by Hero of Thorndale, third dam by Belmont, paces in 2:40.

Tip Bruce has b h Jake, five-year-old by Messenger Chief, dam by Bourbon Chief trots a mile out in 2:26.

Two-year-old b o by Barney Wilkes, dam by Lumber, shows a nice 2:28 gait.

Matty H. two-year-old, full sister to Geneva S, record 2:20, bids fair to eclipse her distinguished sister.

Mr. Bruce has also Mr. Robert McAllister's Messenger Breeze, five-year-old, full brother to the celebrated Maud Messenger record 2:16, by Messenger Chief, dam by Gentle Breeze; second dam by Alexander's Abdallah, third dam by Red Jacket, etc.

Messenger Breeze is one of the most renowned show horses this country ever laid claim to. A perfect model in which no eye can find an objection. His entrance to the ring compels such admiration that other beauties are lost to the judges, and alike to spectators. His action and style, like his conformation is par excellence. Mr. J. W. Guest has reopened the old Spring Hill Race Course at Crab Orchard for training purposes, and has sent in charge of Mr. Will Guest, McCarthy, Irene Dillon, Isis and others to prepare for the winter races south. Irene Dillon is a remarkably fast two-year-old filly by Bannock Lath. She won her maiden race at Louisville last spring: when she started at 30 to 1 shot, and Mr. Guest had but one little pool on her. She soon went wrong and was not able again to score a bracket, disappointing her owner as badly as did Miss Boyle, a full sister to Terra Cotta, who, by the way, we learn has developed into something of a rogue since going into the Chicago stables, possibly, judging from the performance of other horses in that stable, there are other rogues than Terra Cotta, therein.

STANFORD, KY., August 14th, 1888.

St. Julien, 2:11, who has celebrated his nineteenth birthday, has been turned out for good, and will be permitted to spend the balance of his days in idleness.

Turf Notes and Anticipations.

If the Leicestershire Summer Handicap had not been sandwiched between such important events as the Kempton Park and Eclipse Stakes, a great deal more attention would have been paid to it. It was certainly an interesting contest; indeed, most of the racing seen at Oadby this week was quite up to the average. King Monmouth had a very easy victory, and he has done another good turn for Mr. Lowther. King Monmouth is evidently in his old form, and he has been a useful servant to Enoch's stable. Woodland once more proved himself a rare deceiver, as he would not try when it came to the finish, and those who took notice of Toscano's straight formation in front, previous to the race, scarcely expected to see him come down the hill at all comfortable. Johnny Morgan ran a perfect pig, and he has evidently lost all the good manners that he was displaying in the springtime. Unfortunately for the Duchess of Montrose and the Mauton stable, Seclusion's good fortune at Leicester on Monday was not followed up by the victory of Eiridsford in the Eclipse Stakes, at Sandown, on Friday. He appeared to be backed in a most genuine fashion, not only by the public, but by the stable themselves; and yet, if one might judge by his appearance in the paddock, there was nothing to lead one to suppose that he would be led back the winner. His hocks are as coarse as ever, and his off fore fetlock appeared large and puffy. Indeed, the thirteen runners were rather a ragged lot. Orbit and Ossory were the best, but neither of them is within a stone of a good horse, and Enterprise looked as if his preparation had not only been hurried, but there was a shifty look about him that told the initiated that he would only gallop when he liked. Florentine is a bloodlike looking horse, but he is unsound and a flatcatcher, whilst Martley is only of handicap calibre. Nina is nothing like the filly she promised to be as a two-year-old, and The Baron is one of the most disappointing customers that ever carried a saddle. Love-in-Idleness and Estafette are quite second-raters, if not worse than that, and such animals as Derwentwater, Patchouli, and Bright Star would have been more at home in a small handicap than contesting one of the richest prizes of the year. Had Enterprise been the Enterprise we saw on the Two Thousand day, he might have won; but although he galloped fast for six or seven furlongs he failed to stay, and the long, tiring Sandown hill is not the kind of finish one would select for such an animal as Sterling's son, who, in most of his races, has shown a disposition not to put his best leg foremost, except when he likes. Still, if Ryan can keep him sound he will be better by the Launceston Plate day, and as the distance is more in his favor, he may be well worth looking after then. Orbit proved not only that he is a game staying colt, but that the Ascot running was all wrong. Still, his performance did not impress me particularly, and it is a question if he would have won, had his stable companion, Ossory, been started on his merits, and had not been severely handicapped by making his own running. As if to further instance the inferiority of our present four-year-olds, three-year-olds occupied the first, second, fourth, and fifth places at the finish. As it was, Orbit won by a length, according to the judge's verdict, but he was all out, and had not Ossory bored away to the left the winning distance would have been nothing like that. Credit is due to the Cautious, father and son, for their horsemanship, and it is a feather in the cap of the Danebury trainer that he should have been on the backs of both the Eclipse Stakes winners. Of course after Orbit's success it was only natural that a desire should be shown to support him for the St. Leger, and at the first rush he came to a much shorter price. Perhaps when matters cool down somewhat he will not be quite so good a favorite as he now is, though he must stand an undeniable chance should anything happen to Seabreeze and Ayrshire. I, however, still have a sneaking fancy for Ossory, who will be benefited with time. Amongst other items of turf gossip, I learn that Ayrshire will go to Goodwood, but he will not run. It will be remembered that something the same sort of thing took place with him at Ascot. The Eclipse Stakes was fully in accordance with my anticipations, as Orbit not only realized my expectations, but Martley got the exact place I awarded him last week.

REFEREE.

Loco Poison.

The physiological effects of this weed upon the horse, has been made the subject of investigation by a gentleman connected with the press in this city.

His attention was drawn to the poisonous effects of this plant by Mr. Schneider, Hyde Ranch, Cornwall, during the season of 1887.

The plants producing Loco disease are known to botanists as the Astragalus and Oxytropis, nearly allied genera of the Leguminosae order. Several plants belonging to this genera are known as "Rattle weed," or "Loco." In California the Ast: Lentiginosus, Ast: Mortonii, Ast: Hornii, are known to be poisonous to sheep.

There are not less than 150 species of Astragalus; the Oxytropis family is quite as large, and contains the lead-plum Oxytropis lamberti, which is very poisonous to horses, and has obtained its name from a supposition that its presence indicates a deposit of lead in the neighborhood. This plant and the Astragalus Mollissimus, Nutt: are those commonly known as Loco weed.

It has a powerful effect on the sensory ganglia of the central nervous system, the animal is thereby rendered unable to receive impressions. It has a stupefying action on the brain, in fact it is a narcotic. It is similar to digitalis in its action upon the heart, at first reducing its force and frequency; temporarily increasing arterial tension, but finally decreasing it. It increases the salivary secretion, and greatly dilates the pupil. This latter effect can be produced topically, and Dr. Hodson was induced to try the effect upon himself. The pupil enlarged on the introduction of a small quantity of the preparation, and remained steadily so for some time.

The diminution of sensibility; its slowing action upon the heart; and its action as a mydriatic (enlarger of the pupil) may eventually serve to call the attention of medical men to its qualities.

There has so far been no Alkaloid obtained from the Astragalus or Oxytropis, in fact its effects so far observed, almost preclude the presence of a vegetable peptone as the cause of all the symptoms.

We hope to hear from those readers of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN, who may have observed the various effects of this weed upon their horses; and would particularly like them to give the appearances on opening the brain cavity. A large quantity of serum has been discovered in many instances by one careful observer.

The almost blindness produced by a dilatation of the pupil would account for the horse mistaking a small obstacle for a large one, and hence making great efforts to avoid it he would leap high; the want of co-ordination in his movements which is also a result of loco-poisoning would intensify this action.

The animal would also sweat freely, and when shying at an object, fall back, being unable to maintain his balance. He would step high when walking, and walk over a heap of rubbish or a bank instead of going round it. The position of utter indifference to surroundings, with lowered head, is an example of the narcotic effect of "loco."

Cattle are subject to its influence but do not, as a rule, eat it. The horse, when feed is plentiful, will not touch it, but having once acquired the habit, there seems to be no way at present known, whereby he can be prevented from seeking it out and eating it on all occasions. The doctor thinks that it is somewhat similar to the opium or cocaine habit in man.

Many horses are yearly lost by the baneful effects of rattle-weed, every endeavor to meet the question squarely is deserving of encouragement, and our pages are open to a discussion on the subject.

Some Grasses of the Dry Regions.

In the report of the Agricultural Department on the grasses of the arid districts of Texas, New Mexico, Arizona, Nevada and Utah, for 1887, there is mention of 200 species of forage plants which have been collected for examination and report. We select four of the most common species:

Gramma, mesquite grass, is the most common on the great plains. The name Buffalo grass has been applied to this species. Wroughly so, however. Gramma is botanically known as Bouteloua oligostachya, whereas the true Buffalo grass is the Buchloe dactyloides.

On the arid plains of the West, Gramma is the principal grass. It grows chiefly in small roundish patches, closely pressed to the ground, the foliage being in a dense cushion-like mass. The leaves are small and crowded on the short stems at their base. One or two spikes crown the flowering stalks, which are about one foot in height. They stand out at right angles like a miniature flag flying on the breeze. Where the ground is moist it forms a pretty close sod, this makes good grazing but is much too short for profitable cutting.

Stock of every description are fond of it, and prefer it to other feed. It is very nutritious, and as it dries and cures on the ground, there is always a supply for winter consumption. Buffalo grass is spread extensively over the region known as the Great Plains. It grows in extended tufts or patches, seldom reaching more than four inches above the soil. It spreads by means of off-shoots (stolons) in a similar way to Bermuda grass. Flowering culms are thrown up from these stolons as they root. The leaves of the radical tufts are three to five inches long, one-half to one line wide, with a few scattering hairs. The flowering culms are chief / dieocious, but sometimes both male and female flowers are found on the same plant, but on different parts.

Bunch grass, Festuca scabrella, is a perennial grass, and is so-called from its manner of growth. From Colorado to California this grass is met with. The culms are usually two to three feet high, erect and smooth. The radical leaves are numerous; the blade is inclined to separate when old, leaving the familiar leafless sheaths at the base. In Montana it is called the great bunch grass, and is considered one of the principle grasses in that region. It is well suited for cattle and horses, making excellent hay for the latter, for which purpose it is usually cut. As it is found on slopes six to seven thousand feet above sea level, it ought to be suitable for sheep, but it is too hard for their mouths. The cattle men of Eastern Oregon and Washington have a high opinion of its importance.

Indian Millet, oryzopsis cuspidata, has a wide distribution; it reaches as high as British America, and is found from the Sierras of California reaching to the Missouri river. It is a perennial, growing in extremely dense tufts. The culms are from one to three feet high, with about three narrow convolute leaves; the base of the pedicle is enclosed by the long inflated sheath of the upper leaf. As this grass thrives well in a sandy soil it is well adapted to the needs of those localities where it grows. The nutritious and fattening properties of the seeds of this grass render it of great value in the eyes of stockmen. We shall notice the clovers and sanfoin in our next issue.

Mr. Ashe Returns.

Mr. R. P. Ashe reached this city by the noon train last Tuesday direct from New York. The season was not especially successful or profitable for him. Triboulet died before he had realized the hopes of his owner. Geraldine went lame. Tracy was sick all the spring, so bad that he could not be galloped at all. Soundness had too much temper to be of service as a race-horse, and with only Flood Tide to depend upon, Mr. Ashe concluded to abandon the campaign and ship home. He made an arrangement to send home the horses in the car with the Gebhardt string, but as it would be much crowded he changed his mind at the last moment and shipped independently, thus escaping the holocaust. The horses, such of them as are in condition to do so, will run at the fall meeting of the Blood Horse Association.

The Fair at Chico.

The people of Butte and adjoining counties are enjoying a fair and race meeting at Chico this week. No detailed report has yet reached us but the outline telegrams to the daily press indicate that in all departments the fair is a gratifying success. The exhibits in the stock and industrial sections are large and attractive, and the racing gives excellent sport. We will present full summaries of the speed contests and notes of the other features of the fair next week.

A telegram from Matt Storu, at Port Jervis, N. Y., informs us that he is improving fast and hopes to soon be able to come home.

Senator Hearst's two colts, Surinam and True Briton, have fallen lame and been turned out.

Foaled May 15th, at Redwood City, the property of F. F. Moulton, Esq., bay colt, small star, black points, by Mambrino Wilkes—dam young Fanny Wickham, by Arthurton, second dam Fanny Malone.

G. Valestin's filly Gold Leaf is another of the record-breakers so justly prized by California. Her record of 2:20½ made at Santa Rosa, Aug. 14th, is the best record to date for a three-year-old pacer. The former champion of this age and gait was Dodd Peet, record 2:22½, by Paucoast 2:21½, out of Belle Dudley by Belmont. Gold Leaf it will be remembered is by Sidney, 2:19½, out of Fern Leaf by Flaxtail. Sidney lowered his record, Aug. 23, at Petaluma, to 2:19½, and his yearling daughter Fleet, the day before, made a yearling record of 2:44, the best yet made in a race.

Petaluma Fair.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—To-day was the opening day of the Sonoma and Marin Agricultural Association at Petaluma, and from the attendance and outlook, promises to be a most successful meeting. The agricultural and mechanical display is splendid, while the exhibit of blooded stock, prize cattle, sheep, hogs and chickens is far in advance of former years. Fifty new stalls have been built and still the accommodations are short.

The town is full to overflowing, and not a room was to be had for love or money as early as Tuesday morning.

Gambling is in full blast, and on every side may be heard the click of faro checks from the open doors of the saloons, while ever and anon the shrill voice of the "coon" with the wheel can be heard shouting, "Come on, boys, Come on, Come on! Even up on the red and black. Around she goes and where she stops nobody knows."

The programme of races includes some of the most noted and fastest horses in the State and provides purses for which a most lively competition will be made.

A number of "phenoms" are supposed and expected to be "shown up" at this meeting, and a number of records broken. The attendance on the first day was far above the average and was very creditable, but was fully recompensed as first-class racing was the order of the day.

THE FIRST DAY—AUGUST 21TH, 1888

The opening race was an introductory scramble of five-eighths of a mile for two-year-olds, in which Jack Pot was a strong favorite at $25 against the field (Joe Hodge and Little Phil). The race was a walk away for Jack Pot who won "hand's down" and never was headed. Winning in a canter in 1:03, Joe Hodge second, Little Phil third.

The 2:30 Trot—The next on the card was a 2:30 trot for a purse of $700.

This was a great race, Elector the loser of this class at Los Angeles was installed at once favorite at $30 against the field of Franklin (the winner at Los Angeles), and Rosie Mc (the winner at Santa Rosa), at $16.

The First Heat—Elector on the tap of the bell went off in the lead, which position he maintained until the head of the stretch, when he was challenged by Franklin and left his feet about 150 yards from the wire, and Franklin won the heat in an easy jog in 2:22, Rosie Mc third.

Second Heat—Pool selling changed very little, or not as much as would be expected by an outsider, for Elector was still favorite at $30. Franklin at $20 and Rosie at $4.

On the tap of the bell Elector was at a "bobble" and broke immediately after and fell back so far that Hickok only drove to save his distance and give his horse an easy heat, which he did. Franklin won by a length after a struggle with Rosie Mc, who drove him back in 2:22. Elector just inside the flag.

Third Heat—"Hold up your hands." What? Yes! "You are right they can't beat him," was heard on every side. "A Rob," "No?" "Wait and see," and sundry expressions were made all over the track, and the "talent" were at a loss to know what to do. Get out! they could hardly, still they staid and bought Elector at $12, Rosie Mc at $4, while the gelding of suspicious breeding brought $25.

Soon after the tap for the "go" Franklin made a disastrous break and fell away back, and the heat was left to Elector and Rosie.

Elector won apparently with ease, Rosie Mc second and Franklin trotting easy inside. Time, 2:24.

The Fourth Heat.—A wild rush was now made on the "box" and betting was lively, as Elector sold for $30 and the field for $16. Elector went off in the lead and was never headed, although he was closely pressed by Rosie Mc, and only beat her by a head at the finish in 2:24, after a whipping drive for fifty yards.

The Final Heat.—The pools were sold on this heat as it looked a foregone thing for the pool-buysers that the Electioneer stud would win. But "there's many a slip twixt the cup and the lip," as the sequel will show.

Go! Elector took the lead, closely followed by Franklin who trailed him to the three quarter pole about two lengths away, with Rosie (who is worthy of mention as she was a sick mare and had fought every heat from start to finish) away back.

Around the upper turn Donathan, the driver of Franklin, began to close on Elector, and as they swung into the stretch it was seen that Hickok had carried Franklin to the extreme outside and had him against the fence. Here Franklin broke, and one of the most masterly pieces of horsemanship ever displayed on this Coast was displayed by Donathan.

Taking his horse back, catching him quickly, pulling him to the inside, and winning the heat from Hickok and Elector by a head, was greeted with cheers by both winners and losers. Time 2:25.

The 2:30 Class:—This race was devoid of interest, for despite his serious (?) illness at Santa Rosa, McMans was able to drive Alfred S., and no betting could be had to any amount against him, and the summary will show the full result of the race.

August 22d.—To-day was the second day of the fair, and a larger crowd was in attendance than yesterday. The weather was much warmer, and fane and ice water were in great demand.

The stock parade this morning was splendid, almost a complete circuit of the track being made by the line of animals exhibited. The Clydesdale horses were the finest ever shown on this coast.

The cattle show was noticeable by White's herd of Holsteins, twenty-eight in number, said to be the finest in the State; Page's Shorthorns, twenty-four head; George Bement's Ayreshires; E. Steiger's Holsteins also made an excellent display. Some of the prominent horses shown were: P. J. Shafter's gray stallion Rustic and family; W. L. Appleby's thirteen thoroughbreds; T. Skillman's Suffolk Pnnch, French Coach and draft horses; McNear's and Denman's Clydesdales; J. R. Rose's roadsters, and H. Wilsey's Norman and Clydesdales.

This morning, at the track, Fred Ross was exercising the two-year-old runner Young Prince, when the horse stumbled and fell into the picket fence, at the head of the stretch, and threw Ross into the ditch just inside the inclosure, and falling on a picket the colt was killed. Ross was considerably shaken up and bruised, but not seriously hurt. Young Prince was a very promising two-year-old, by imp. Young Prince, out of Mercedes, and was owned by Dr. C. E. Farnham, of San Francisco, who valued him at $3,000.

The running mare, Daisy D., also met with a slight mishap this morning, but nothing serious, as she ran in the mile and repeat to-day and won. She stumbled and fell against the fence, throwing her rider over it, but he escaped with a few bruises, while the mare only skinned her back and fore-leg. At 1 o'clock sharp the judges entered the stand and the sport began.

August 22d.—Running. Purse $200, $50 to second. For all ages. Mile heats.

Time 1:45, 1:44.

Pools: Daisy D, $25; Field, $7.
At the word to go Fusilade and Daisy D. rushed off in the lead and ran head and head to the head of the stretch, when Daisy drew away and won the heat easily, St. Patrick distanced. Time 1:45.

The second heat was a repetition of the first only that Daisy won with greater ease by three lengths. Time 1:44.
The bell then rang and the colts appeared for the three-year-old District trotting race for a purse of $250.

Alfred G was the favorite in the pools, bringing $25, Ben Davis $20 and the field (Redwood, Alice and Anti-coolie), fetching $11.

First Heat—A beautiful send-off was given, and soon after leaving the wire Davis assumed the lead, followed by Alfred G, who broke on the turn and was passed by Redwood. These positions were maintained to the half-mile pole, when Alfred G moved up fast and he and Redwood were head and head about a length behind Davis. At the three-quarter pole all three were bunched, but down the stretch Davis drew away and Alfred fell back. Davis won the heat in a jog from Redwood, who broke at the draw-gate, Alfred third, Anti-Coolie fourth, Alice fifth. Time 2:33.

Second Heat—The pool selling now "chopped" and Ben Davis sold for $25, Alfred G $8 and the field $4. A good many tiresome scores were necessary before a start could be had after twenty attempts. Billy Donathan, the driver of Redwood, and McGrath, the driver of Alfred G, were fined $5 each for not scoring as the judges told them. When at last the bell tapped Alfred went away fast and opened a big gap to the quarter, with Anti-Coolie second and Davis six lengths back. Up the backstretch Davis closed up to Alfred and on the upper turn collared him. Redwood, who had broken badly, then got up to third place, but ten lengths off. On swinging into the stretch Davis carried Alfred to a break and came on and won the heat as easily as he did the first in a jog in the improved time of 2:31. Alfred was second, Redwood third, Anti-Coolie fourth, Alice distanced.

Third Heat—At the word, Alfred as usual, went off in the lead to the quarter, with Redwood six lengths off, and Davis breaking and acting badly. Around the upper turn Redwood took hold of Alfred and beat him down the stretch in a handy manner, Alfred second, Anti-Coolie third, and the favorite, Davis, last. Time 2:35.

Fourth Heat—Davis was still the favorite at $40 to $8 for the field. Alfred broke on the turn, and Davis and Redwood fought for the lead. At the half Redwood out-trotted Davis and opened a gap around the turn, where Davis made a series of breaks, and Redwood came down the stretch at his ease and won by five lengths, Davis second, Alfred G. Anti-Coolie last. Time, 2:31.

Fifth Heat—The pools changed and the field sold for $30 against $24 for Davis. This was a beautiful and exciting heat. Redwood and Davis were in the lead at the quarter, at the half Alfred crawled up and the three struck the turn in a bunch. Alfred then broke and the struggle was between Redwood and Davis, but the former kept his feet and lasted the longest, winning the heat, race and money in the fastest heat of the race. Ben Davis second, Alfred third, Anti-Coolie distanced. Time, 2:30.

The third race was the District trot for yearlings, and was won by W. Page's b f Leoline, by Clovis, dam Leah. Leoline took the lead and was never headed, beating Peck's b c Ferndale by Anteeo by 15 lengths. Time, 3:54.

Time, 3:54.

The fourth race on the card was the two-year-old trot, and was sandwiched in between heats of the other race. Sunol was conceded a sure winner, and there was no pool to speak of on the other two. The first heat was won easily by Sunol after falling away back on the first turn from a bad break just after the bell tapped. Margaret S. was second and Fortuna third. Time, 2:28. In the second heat Sunol at once took the lead and opened a gap at the quarter on Margaret S. of five lengths, which she maintained to the wire, winning the heat and race in a positive jog, Margaret S. second and Fortuna third. Time, 2:26.

Same Day—Trotting. for two-year-olds; $60 entrance, $250 added; 12 entries.

Time, 2:28, 2:26.

The special race that was given in place of the 2:20 class, which did not fill, was the last race on the card, and the pools sold as follows: Lady Escott, $20, Fallis, $9, Perihelion, $5, and the field (Ben Ali and Sonnet) $7.

First Heat—Lady Escott took the lead and was closely followed by Ben Ali, but he could never head her and she won the heat; Ben Ali second, Sonnet third; Perihelion fourth, Fallis fifth. Time, 2:26.

Second Heat—Twenty odd scores were made in the second heat. At last a good send-off was made and a beautiful race was the result. From the quarter pole home Lady Escott, Ben Ali, Perihelion and Fallis were all in a bunch, and it was anybody's heat all the way to the wire, when Fallis trotted fast and won by a head, Lady Escott second; Perihelion third, Ben Ali fourth, Sonnet distanced. Time, 2:26.

Third Heat—Pools now sold, field $20, Fallis $20. It was nearly dark when the horses were sent off and the heat was very close, but Fallis stood the strain the longest, and won by a length from Lady Escott, Perihelion third and Ben Ali last. Time, 2:28. The race was then postponed until 12:30 o'clock Thursday.

Aug. 23.—Weather still warm. The attendance was the largest of the week.

Promptly at 12:30 the judges called up the horses for the unfinished race. Betting was lively at the following odds: Fallis $20, field $8, Lady Escott $6.

The fourth heat had a beautiful send-off, but at the first turn the horses were all jumbled up, as each made a break or two, and, when they got straightened out at the quarter, Lady Escott was in the lead, closely followed by Ben Ali and Perihelion, with Fallis last. At the half all were going very fast. Fallis had crawled up and was on even terms with Lady Escott and Perihelion, with Ben Ali dropping back.

Around the turn Fallis out-trotted the band, and, coming home fast and true, won the heat, race and money in the fast time of 2:23, with Lady Escott second, Ben Ali third and Perihelion fourth.

Petaluma, August 23.—The attendance at the park on the third day was large. There were five races on the programme for the day's sport. The first was the unfinished special between Fallis, Ben Ali, Perihelion and Lady Escott. Fallis was the favorite. At 12:30 they were given the word with Lady Escott leading to the quarter, Ben Ali and Pere-belion disputing inch by inch. Fallis broke on the first turn, and was trailing at the first quarter. Down the backstretch the big son of Electioneer trotted fast, and came up to the Lady and out-trotted her, and won in a jog in 2:23, Lady Escott was second, and won second money; Ben Ali third and third money; Perihelion last. Fallis is another one of Electioneer's colts, and is owned by F. Lowell, and is bred for a trotter, and this son of Electioneer is yet to be heard from, as 23 is no limit to his speed.

RUNNING, ONE AND ONE-EIGHTH MILE DASH.

Four thoroughbreds faced the starter. Leon was the favorite at $50 against Nancy at $15, and the field, with Nabean and Oscar Wilde at $5. The flag was dropped on the fifth attempt, with Nabean a length behind. Nancy cut out the running and led her field at a merry clip to the quarter, where Leon came up and led under a strong pull to the wire, and caught the judge's eye first in 1:58. Nancy came fast on the stretch and best Nabean out for the place, Oscar Wilde fourth.

TROTTING, FREE-FOR-ALL.

This was the race of the meeting. The free-for-all not filling, the directors offered a special purse of $1,000 for Arab, Adair, Woodnut and Alfred S. In the pools bidding was lively, with Arab, the favorite, at $50 against $9 for the others.

The First Heat—The bell was tapped with third attempt to a splendid start. Arab went away in the lead and was never headed. At the quarter he led Alfred by an open length, with Woodnut and Adair trailing. Woodnut came fast on the backstretch and at the three-quarter pole he had caught Alfred, but the big chestnut was from here out trotted and was beaten home by a length. Adair was a poor fourth. Time 2:21.

Second Heat—The judges announced that Adair was withdrawn on account of being lame. Pools sold Arab $50 and the field $4. The short end had plenty of backers at this money. But Arab again went away in the lead and was never headed. The field was never near enough to crowd Hickok, who won in a jog in the slow time of 2:24. Woodnut was too much for Alfred S. and beat him home by a length. Alfred was third.

Third Heat—Arab was barred in the pools now and the talent thought Alfred had a sure thing for the place and bought him for $50, against $7 for Woodnut. The judges took Tommy Kenney down from the son of Nutwood and put up Jas. Dustin with Donathan behind Alfred S. Hickok again went away and led to the quarter, with Alfred close up. On the back stretch Woodnut came with a burst of speed and passed Alfred and crowded Arab, who won the heat in 2:17. Woodnut second and second money, Alfred third and third money.

THE YEARLING TROT.

Brought out two starters—Count Valensin's Fleet by Sidney out of Flight, who sold for $50 against Capt. B. E. Harris' Lorena by Jim Mulvanna, dam by Elmo, $8. Fleet was the favorite and she went away at a merry skip and led at the quarter, where she broke, but caught again and trotted like the fleet little lady that she is, and came under the wire a winner by 200 yards in the remarkable time of 2:44. This gives her the yearling record in an actual race for yearlings. The best previous performance being by Mambrino Bismarck, in Kentucky, 2:49. Valensin was present and held a watch on his fast yearling. In fact it was a Sidney day as he himself paced against his own record of 2:49, and succeeded in making the mile in 2:19. Sidney was driven by Jno. McConnell, better known as "Buster." He was assisted during the mile by a running mate, and made the half in 1:13, and the mile in 2:19. The driver of Sidney after the trial acknowledged that he could have made the mile several seconds faster, had it not been for a mistake in his watch on the first half mile, of five seconds.

THE 2:24 RACE.

This brought out six side-wheelers, five of them intent on defeating if possible the great three-year-old, Gold Leaf, and if not, in securing for themselves second place, on which thousands of dollars were wagered. In this they most signally failed, as the summary will show the race in detail; for at no time was the result of any heat in quandary, as Gold Leaf won in three straight heats. The second and third monies were divided between the other three, as their scores were exactly the same.

Monmouth.

NEW YORK, August 18th.—The race for the Omnibus stakes Monmouth Park to-day fully sustained its reputation as an event in which favorites fare badly. It has now been run seven years, with only one favorite winning, Green Morris' Drake Carter in 1883, with odds of 2 to 1 on him, and as he beat Pierre Lorillard's Pizarro, that gentleman at once bought the winner for the handsome sum of $17,500. In 1882 Clinton Bell brought Harry Gilmore down from Saratoga and cleverly beat Mr. Lorillard's Wyoming, an even money favorite. In 1884 Mr. Withers' Minnie beat the late Commodore Viston's Ratapodan, who started at 11 to 10. In 1884 Dwyer Bros' Richmond beat Pierre Lorillard's Wande, she being a trifle better favorite. In 1886 Dewdrop carried the Dwyer red and blue, with betting at 5 to 6, but she was second to Cassett's tricolor, carried by The Bard, while last year the Dwyers were again disappointed in seeing Hanover at 2 to 1 beaten by Mr. Withers' Laggard.

What with the defeat of Sir Dixon and Belle B. to-day by Paragon, the Omnibus is anything but a good race for favorites, while it is especially disastrous to the chances of the Brooklyn brothers. That they are racing in very bad luck is more apparent than ever. Their horses look well to the eye, but seem to lack the fine edge of condition for which the Brooklyn stable has always been famous. Sir Dixon did not at any time run up to his former speed. That he was carrying a penalty of seven pounds, and there was actually eleven pounds between him and Paragon, is admitted, but yet Sir Dixon in prime condition should have won. Paragon is a fairly good colt, and Hayward was just able to keep the pace slow enough in the half-mile to be able to stand a drive in the last quarter if necessary. It was not necessary for Paragon to win without being ridden out, but had there been pressure he could have scarcely won. He ran out of his course and pulled up so tired that he could scarcely get back to the paddock. In fact it was rumored that he was broken down.

This other great event was the Criterion for two years at three-quarters of a mile. The result gave a new aspirant for two-year-old honors—Captain Sam Brown's filly Senorita by Prince Charlie, out of Gondola. She was not a favorite, her unnamed stable companion, King Alfonso (I Never Could colt), having that honor; but Senorita won by a short head, so closely followed by at least four others that many spectators thought that several of them were winners, but the judges gave Pierre Lorillard Jr.'s Eric second and Withers' Dawdle colt third, while the reporters could not agree whether Florentine or I Never Could colt was fourth or fifth. It was a great finish considering how bad a start the winner got, she being almost borne down by some of the others in the break. When all were extended she was a dozen lengths behind the leaders. She was well ridden by that very promising light-weight colored rider Barnes, who, with great patience made up for lost ground inch by inch until he could make a dash in the last fifty yards. The others all must be looked upon as dangerous, and the most interesting battles on the turf for 1888, will be for the two-year-old horses.

In the other races the favorites also fared badly, although those who did win were not lacking in supporters. Mrs. Withers' Fitzroy beat the favorite, Aurelia, for the opening dash of a mile. Garrison who rode Aurelia was slow to get away and seemed to lack his usual energy. In fact, while he rode King Italian in the fifth race "The Snapper" was not himself.

In the fourth race handicap of a mile and a quarter, saw Oriflame and Kaloolah first and second favorites beaten by Hypocrite, who was ridden out with great determination by Barnes. Both Oriflame and Kaloolah seemed to hang badly when asked to run in the last quarter. The Welter handicap was a runaway victory for Maroon, the outrider of the four starters. George Oyster was the favorite, but little Oriflame hung badly at the lead and was beaten for place by King Idle, who got much the worst of the start.

The selling race had a better finish with Hamilton mincein on Rowland, apparently not liking to see his colored brother Barnes, who was riding Banyan, get all the honors. The steeplechase had its usual ups and downs, but at the finish Jimmy McGowan, top weight and third choice with the backers, won easily. The following is a summary of the races:

One mile—Fitzroy won in 1:42½, Anrelian second, Fiageoletta third.

Criterion stakes, three-quarters of a mile—Senorita won in 1:15½, Eric second, Dawdle colt third.

Omnibus stakes, one mile and a half—Paragon won in 2:41, Sir Dixon second, Bella B. third.

One mile and a quarter—Hypocrite won in 2:10, Ten Brock second, Oriflame third.

Three-quarters of a mile—Maroon won in 1:14½, King Idle second, George Oyster third.

Seven-eighths of a mile—Rowland won in 1:20, Banyan second, Malaria third.

Seventh race, steeplechase, full course—Jim McGowan won in 5:05½, Schoolmaster second, Westmoreland third.—S. F. Chronicle.

Young Prince.

The two-year-old colt Young Prince, met an untimely death at Petaluma last Wednesday by being impaled upon the pickets of the track fence. Some details of the accident will be found in our Petaluma report. Young Prince was a bay colt of high form and was probably the largest thoroughbred two-year-old in the State. Notwithstanding his unusual size, he was perfect in his action, had speed to a remarkable degree and had shown in his work that as a race-horse he was first-class. He never started in a race, but it was the intention of his owner to put up the silk at Oakland and Sacramento and the Blood Horse meeting this fall. He was owned by Dr. C. E. Farnum of this city. Young Prince was bred by Mr. G. Pacheco, of Navato, Marin County, and was the last foal got by his sire imp. Young Prince. His dam, Mercedes by Lodi, was sold in foal at auction, and the colt was foaled the property of Capt. A. J. Hutchinson of Los Angeles. At Capt. Hutchinson's sale last spring Dr. Farnum bought the youngster for a small price. From what he had shown he was unquestionably the making of a great race-horse.

A little gray mare is owned at Lamertine, O., that has a war record that any horse could be proud of, and although she is now thirty years old she bids fair to live several years yet. She was captured in Georgia in 1863, and was with the Union army during "Sherman's March to the Sea," was in hard-fought battles and still carries the scars of a wound in the neck made by a minnie ball. Her owner proposes to take her to the grand encampment of the G. A. R. at Columbus, O., this fall.—National Stockman and Farmer.

A Tussle With Tempus.

The Directors of the Golden Gate are considering a proposition which we think will prove an attractive card. The idea is to trot against time for a purse of $800 or $1,000, if the latter amount, divided into four moneys and without entrance fee. The race to rule which permits three trials if desired, and accompanied by a "teaser" i. e. a horse to go with them, galloping or otherwise, but not harnessed to the same vehicle. This is the fairest test of speed, as each horse will trot under like conditions, whereas in a race against other horses there is an element of luck. There will be at least eight horses on the ground with records inside of 2:20, six of them stallions.

The eastern press have been suggesting new departures in trotting, and this is one which is likely to prove popular in California. So many stallions which are fast, and these seeking, in place of avoiding a record, will make an exciting spectacle. Surely, too, as one of these can be preparing while a competitor is making his effort. There is no "tin enp" flavor, if even it is not a test of the other racing qualities outside of speed. There will be a liberal reward, pools sold, etc., so that there can be no question of the fairness of the performance. It will probably be added to Saturday's programme, which will give the stallions which trot on Monday a chance to recover.

Samuel Gamble took charge of the preparation of the track Thursday last, and from what he accomplished in a few hour's work, we have not the least hesitation in predicting a fast track for the meeting. Should it be otherwise it will be owing to interference.

Golden Gate Fair—The Triangular Trot.

We have an indistinct recollection of the triangular duel described by Marryatt in which the duelists were stationed at each apex of an equilateral triangle, and when the word was given each took a shot at the man in front of him.

The stallion trot on the opening day of the Golden Gate Fair is also of a triangular shape, and the probabilities are that it will be fully as exciting and interesting as the fight of the midshipmen. As the men were stationed twelve paces apart, each armed with the same kind of weapon, it was eminently fair, and though A shot at B, B at C and C at A, each had the same show. Until the lots were cast which designated where the positions would be, all that was known was that a fight was on hand.

Well assured are the drivers of Stamboul, Guy Wilkes and Woodnut that there is going to be a battle, but where the effective shots are to come from is still in the dark. From the great performances of Stamboul at Los Angeles he will unquestionably be the favorite with those who speculate, and the honor of having made the fastest mile ever marked by a stallion in California, and that a second faster than is credited to California-bred trotters, will also secure him the favor of the people assembled.

Great as that was, it does not insure him an easy victory, and, furthermore, it does not absolutely prognosticate success. The two horses which he has to meet are not uncertain quantities. Guy Wilkes went through one season without defeat; in the next he gained greater honors than ever before, and in the race he was beaten showed four heats which were not far behind the mark of his successful competitor. Harry Wilkes won the first, second and fourth heats in 2:15½, 2:16, 2:15; Guy the third in 2:16½.

Stamboul trotted the three heats in 2:15, 2:17½, 2:16½. Now it is evident that the time of these heats would not have beaten Guy Wilkes the day he trotted against Harry Wilkes, and though there is a reasonable presumption that Stamboul could have trotted faster, there comes the proposition that if Stamboul reduces his record from 2:17½ to 2:15, why shall Guy be debarred from making some redemption? Turn and twist the question as you may, it is likely to form a very pretty fight. While the admirers of Stamboul and Guy are casting about for points to sustain their favorites, it will not do to lose sight of Woodnut.

That he will be "there or thereabouts" is just as certain as that the day will come and that no misfortune befalls him in the meantime. But we are not intent on furnishing data for those who are speculatively inclined, the object being to present the sport-loving public with an inkling of what is likely to be put before them. Now as a starter we will enter the claim that three trotting horses closely matched are enough to make a race which will have all the elements of an interesting and exciting spectacle. Although the outside horse is placed at a disadvantage, he is not hopelessly handicapped out of the race. Off they are sent and so nearly equal that there is practically no difference. The scoring has been transitory, so that there is a likelihood of all behaving well, and with three horses to manage, all of them good actors, it is within bounds to predict that three scores will be the maximum number of times they will come up for the word. This usual annoyance is, therefore, avoided and the good nature of the assemblage, as well as that of the horses has not been disturbed. Nos. one and two are intent on beating each other from the sounding of the starting gong. Number three thinks it undesirable to keep up that furious gait and quietly drops behind number one. Number one has a trifle the best of it at the quarter, number two a neck in advance at the half. Around the further turn number one is eased a trifle and number two has his head on the shoulders of his competitor. Long odds that number one pulls away from the pole when he strikes the homestretch in order to get a firmer footing, or it may be that he has "carried number two out" before reaching the stretch. In that case number three has a show for the heat as he will have the benefit of not losing an inch of ground, and he may have eased his horse so much in the three-quarters that he finishes with more speed and vigor than either of the others. Or should he be a length behind when the others are fairly "straightened" into the stretch, and there is no opportunity for taking the inside, he can work a long diagonal from inside so as to reach the wire in front. Or he may have made up his mind that his chances are increased by letting numbers two and three fight for the heat without interruption, and while they are doing the mile in very fast time, he is contented to obtain the benefit of the hundred yards allowance. Not too far back at the quarter, not too great a gap at the half or three-quarters, but a gradual easing on the last stretch. To take the same length of time to go 1,660 yards that the others are completing more than a full mile in, is a potent aid in this repeating business, and so long as it is not palpably apparent that a horse is not outclassed, number three will be as closely watched as the others.

Let us forsake the numerals and draw a sketch which is not entirely fanciful.

A brown (or so nearly brown that the bay melts into a shade which is nearly that of a piece of old mahogany, the tints deepened by age and the polish heightened by careful housewifery), a blood bay and a golden chestnut. The brown secures the pole and he goes off with such regular nervous action that even an uneducated eye is aware that he is going fast. The bay hangs to him, not so taking in his action but sticking to his adversary with a will which compels admiration. There is a shrewd look on the visage of the driver of the chestnut as he takes in at a glance the situation, and while the pilot of the bay is urging his horse along, and that of the brown is evidently determined that the bay shall stay behind, his "mind is made up." The handsome chestnut is taken back soothingly, and he shortens the semicircle by keeping close to the pole. The brown has the best of it as the quarter is reached, though the bay is on his haunches, and when the straight work is before him he redoubles his efforts. For a time there is a hope that he will succeed in forcing the brown off his feet, and his driver's shouts of encouragement can be heard in the stands. Gaily the leader glides along, stubbornly, gallantly the bay is striving, stolidly sits the gray-haired driver of the chestnut amid the clamor which reaches him from the front, restraining his horse by word and bit. They sweep around the turn with the brown still in the lead, the driver of the bay is apparently hiding his time for another onslaught on the homestretch. Still there is the cheering voice, the intimation to go along, and he is not far off when the commencement of the straight run home is made. Now comes the supreme moment. The words of encouragement have given way to sharp ejaculations, the wish of the whip can be heard and there is a look of anxiety on the face of the brown's driver plainly seen through the binocular. But the rosewood hued steed is still keeping up the rapid, energetic action, there is no faltering or scrambling, and now they are close enough so that the binocular is not needed to notice any movement that is made. The driver of the bay is nearly frantic in his endeavors to overcome the slight gap. The whip is not so much depended upon as voice and reins. At the bridge the rebound of the soil-covered plank added to the great flight of speed sends the bay off his feet; he bounds on as though a bomb had been exploded under him, throws up his head, gives a couple of nervous jumps, the left forefoot is extended beyond its usual reach and when it strikes the ground the trot is again resumed. Notice the drivers. He of the brown has a blanched face, though the set teeth and the flash of the eye exemplifies resolution; he has a taut rein, is sitting still, and though the whip is held in a position where it can be called into requisition it is not used; but he has a good length the best of it, as the three in five distance is made. The driver of the bay has worked himself into a delirium of eagerness. His head thrown forward, his shoulder elevated so as to touch his neck. His face is glowing with excitement and his whole frame is in a tremble of fervency. Ecstasy and pain, pain predominating so far as can be judged from appearances. Short, snappish shrieks, now lifting on the reins, now shaking the bit and at every stride the snap of the lash. The horse is fully out, not an effort wanting, he hangs with marvelous pertinacity until the wire is over head, his competitor a few feet in front of him. Horse and driver succumb to the inevitable, the heat is won and lost. The driver of the chestnut has not lost sight of the struggling animal for an instant, and as he drops quietly in when they are turning around he, too, wears a satisfied look as he notes the effect of the hard-fought battle.

A heat of that kind will be well worth the journey across the bay to witness, and it is just as likely that all three of the horses will fight for every heat. No matter how the race is handled there is scarcely a question but that it will prove of exceeding interest. That each will use every endeavor to win is so absolutely certain that it appears somewhat foolish to mention that were it not for the queer ideas which prevail about racing and trotting.

In occupying so much space space with the Stallion race, the other events cannot be noticed as fully as we would like. But as the full entry list appears in the advertisement, a reference to that will show that it is a programme which cannot fail to insure the best of sport, racing, trotting and pacing. We feel that the Stallion race is such an emphatic commencement of the speed programme of the fair that no one can afford to miss it, and after that there will be enough to draw "pool crowds" all through.

The Big Purse—Bay District Course.

In the advertisement of the Trotting Meeting of the Bay District Association, appears a $5,000 purse, free for all. The advertisement puts it on the 27th of October, but in order to secure entries from the stallions engaged in the National, Mr. Hinchman has resolved to change the conditions. When conversing with Mr. Hinchman it was thought sufficient to incorporate a clause so as to provide for a postponement of the National, and that it would answer to say that should the stallion race be postponed from the day set, there should be a similar postponement of the free-for-all. There is an objection to this which was overlooked in the conversation. The National has the condition incorporated if "good day and good track," and if not good on October 20th, the first day there after when the conditions are fulfilled. Were it postponed until the following Monday, Tuesday or Wednesday, the $5,000 purse would be forced to one of these days on the following week. To offer so much money in a trotting purse in San Francisco, Saturday must be the day fixed for decision in order to give a reasonable chance for a return for the risk. Should the stallion race be trotted on Monday, then the following Saturday would do, but if later in the week they would come too close together, and Saturday of the next week be the time, provided that does not clash with the Blood Horse Meeting.

There is time enough, however, to consider this feature, though in the meantime we desire to call the attention of Eastern owners of trotters to Mr. Hinchman's liberal offer. Arrangements can be made so that the horses can reach here in time for the date announced, and should there be a postponement they will be ready for it. We feel that October 20th will be a fine day, and the track in good shape, still such a contingency as that mentioned must be provided for.

The Fairs Past.

Los Angeles, Ione and Santa Rosa have brought their fairs to a close, Petaluma and Chico coming to an end with the close of this week. A review is hardly proper until all are brought to a conclusion, and though the most salient points have been noted, a retrospect a couple of months hence will be better than if presented now. Notwithstanding that the California fairs are so far in the lead of all others there are chances for improvement. The question of dates is intricate and that there must be elating is a fixed fact. That a better arrangement can be made is just as certain. Los Angeles this year seriously effected Santa Rosa and Ione. Indirectly the holding of the fair so early was prejudicial to San Diego. With two fairs on the magnificent scale which marked these southern exhibitions, held in consecutive weeks, and after the northern associations had closed their gates there would be in attendance all of the most famous horses of central and northern California.

While it is true that Los Angeles was far more successful this year than when the fair was held later, it was not nearly so much so as should have followed the active and persistent efforts made by those who had the management in charge, and there were good reasons for a lack of competitors in previous years. Although without official information we hear from a reliable source that the trotting purses at San Diego did not fill. This is to be regretted by every one who has even a slight interest in trotters as southern circuit would in time add greatly to the trotting attractions of the whole coast. From what we hear of the people in San Diego who took the affair in hand, there is little fear that one failure will be accepted as final. Now that their beautiful city and surrounding country has caught the eye of so many people of means. Many of whom will become permanent residents, and others who will winter there; the sports of the turf and track must become a feature. This we feel assured is not far off.

Favonia and Sunol.

Still another crack, still another phenomenon to the credit of the "half-and-half" diversion, the dam of Favonia being from Lightsome by Glencoe, the dam of Sunol from a daughter of Lexington. Thus the mare which many deem to be the coming star of the tracks has the same granddam as Luke Blackburn; the more enthusiastic predicting that the next to score 2:10 or better will be the daughter of Widgewood and Fadette. A few whom we thought were so thoroughly imbued with prejudices against near crosses of thoroughbred as to preclude candid avowals admit that a granddam will do, but nothing nearer, but how is a granddam to be secured without having obtained the dam?

Never mind! Events are marching on, and with the aid of Palo Alto there will be more half-and-halves to adorn the breeding paddocks. Writing Palo Alto brought Sunol to our remembrance, well worthy she is to be coupled with the heroine of the Grand Circuit, and those who have seen her trot asseverate that she can mark the teens whenever afforded a fair chance. From what we hear there is little question of her ability to give a year and a beating to any colt in the State.

Look Out for a Singlefooter.

Not Antaire who has troubled us so long with his persistency in going at that popular (to some) saddle gait, but a dark bay, 15½ hands, black points, left hind foot white, full black tail, branded on left shoulder C. P. He is stylish in harness or saddle, and altogether what may be termed a handsome horse.

The title is in our friend Sanford Bennett, but unfortunately some — scamps are in possession, having stolen him from the owners stable in Alameda a week ago last Wednesday night.

Shrewd scamps evidently, as something like a half score horses, besides wagons and harness, have been stolen in the past few weeks, and that so skilfully as not to leave a scent which sleuth hounds of the law could follow. It is a long time after the commission of the crime to send the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN after them, but as after being started the paper will travel faster than the horse singlefooter we saw at St. Louis in 1859, which reeled off a mile in 2:43, it may be that some one of our readers man intercept the fugitive.

Welcome Sudie D.

I hear that Mr. John S. Clark intends to send Sudie D. to California this fall and that Mike Bowerman will prepare her for a fast two-year-old record. She has a high mark to beat in Wildflower's 2:21, but there is a possibility that Sudie D. may beat it, as she did Hinda Rose's record as a yearling last October.

The above was cut from the Sporting World, and we can assure Messrs. Clark and Bowerman that they and their grand filly will receive a hearty welcome. Unquestionably she will be granted a trial of Sunol's speed, with, perhaps, Visalia as an accompaniment, and should she defeat one or both of the Occidental damsels, many a humper will be quaffed to her honor, and the burrahs re-echo from the massive portals of the Golden Gate. Given one of our glorious October or November days, the Bay District course in the order we have seen it in either of these months, the fillies right, and it is a hundred to one that a new record will be established. Not honor alone, if the Kentucky filly can take the measure of the home-bred, barrels of dollars can also be captured.

Glenbrook Fair.

There are long sides to the triangle, the points of which mark the location of the fairs which will be held next week. The base running from Oakland to Marysville, the short line from Marysville to Glenbrook, the hypotenuse from there to the starting point. We cannot name the number of miles either leg will measure, though if each apex were made the point within a circle, the circumferences of which would touch, a country would be included, which the world could not excel. Not having a map within reach we cannot authoritatively say where the meeting place would be of the circles which had centers in Marysville and Glenbrook, but there is little doubt that the latter would embrace a section which had all the elements of wealth and prosperity within its periphery.

Nevada and Placer are the counties embraced in the district. Rich as are the goldmines of this section, there is no lack of everything else to make life comfortable, and add a variety of charms to existence. "Corn, wine and oil" in abundance, valleys as fair as the Happy Valley of Rasselas, hillsides gorgeous with the flowers of spring time, and in the autumn brilliant with every variety of fruit. It is not surprising that the annual fair should bring so many thousands of people to witness the contests, when it is rare to find a family which is not "comfortably fixed" And miners, too, are proverbial for making the most of life in the sunshine, and their hearty burrahs show that underground work does not tell injuriously on their lungs. They will have plenty of chance to cheer, as there are so many of the blue bloods engaged, and better than prophecies, and of greater force than predictions is the following list of entries. A grand array, a sure token of plenty of sport. The entries follow:

GEORGE FLETCHER, Secretary.

We have received a photograph of a new mile track built at Alaville, Calaveras County, by Mr. J. H. Walter. The first races were run over the track on July 3rd. Mr. Walter proposes to encourage the sport in his section by giving races occasionally, and will accommodate horsemen who desire to use the track for training purposes.

On Aug 10th, W. H. Wilson, Abdallah Park, Cynthiaana, Ky., had the misfortune to lose a fine colt foaled May 29th, 1888, by Sultan 2:24, dam Mambrino Kate, record 2:24, by Mambrino Patchen. This is quite a loss as the colt was valued very highly.

The three-year-old trotter Memo, owned by Mr. Jas. P. Kerr of this city, cut his quarter severely at Petaluma last Tuesday and had to be withdrawn from the stake trotted yesterday. It is doubtful if the colt will be started before the State Fair.

Secretary Smith informs us that there are over 400 cattle stalls, with double the accommodation for sheep, swine and poultry, that they had last year. There will be 305 boxes and 100 open stalls for horses, nearly all this room has been secured.

Marysville Fair.

Next Tuesday the Marysville exhibition opens. That the fair of this year is sure to be the best which has ever been held there, will be readily conceded by those who have attended prior exhibitions, and who will examine the entries published in the paper of last week. Never before such a grand list of entries, the past does not show a like gathering of fast horses. Eighty-five is a goodly number when named in fifteen races, and when the names are looked over, it will be seen that a great majority of the contestants are horses of note. While the horses at the Golden Gate will be under the eye of thousands of people, at the same time there will be dense crowds on the up-country grounds. There are horses enough and people enough in California now to permit fairs being held in three places without the risk of failure, and when the reports are received from Glenbrook, Marysville and Oakland there is no hazard in stating that included in the reports will be notices of "large attendance" at every place. There has been a fair division of the trotters between Oakland and Marysville and the classes at either are well represented. Those which did not fill to the standard will be replaced by others, and as that association is more than liberal, horses which have not been engaged can go there with an assurance that a place will be made for them. The best commentary on this fair, however, is the republication of the entry list as even a slight acquaintance will show that a rare bill is presented.

However, letters mailed at any point in the State on the 10th are entitled to be received as legal entries, and there may be some yet to arrive. In any event a fine list of races is already assured as there is a good lot of entries, eighty-five in all.

Age of Guy Wilkes.

Last week we accepted the age of Guy Wilkes as given in Wallace's Year Book. This says that he was foaled in 1878. Mr. Corbitt has a letter from his breeder in which he places the date of foaling quite late in 1879, July, if we remember correctly, though knowing the great care which is taken to be accurate in compiling that greatest of all trotting books, we thought that Mr. Dunn, perhaps, had inadvertently given the wrong year. Mr. Corbitt informs us that he has additional proof, so that probably the error is in the Year Book.

"Change in Luck."

The following is what "Black and Blue" has to say in the Mail and Express in relation to the changes of luck in prominent racing stables. Unpleasant as it is to the recipients of the frowns of the blind priestess, when she so persistently insists that wrong cards shall come out of the box and keep "a-coming," it is a good thing for the royal sport. Were it possible to hold the advantage for season after season by one of the big stables, just so surely would interest fly. The glorious uncertainty is the grand charm and without that, racing would play out. The victory of Proctor Knott in the Junior Champion, was a god-send to those who attend the races, if even it was a huge turn of good luck to our old friend Sam Bryant. Now was a time when it was thought Col. W. R. Johnson of Virginia was invincible. He was dubbed the "Napoleon of the Turf" and certainly, if any one was entitled to the honor, it was the man who had made so many successful campaigns. There were Waterloos in store for him, and the defeat of Henry by Eclipse, and Boston by Fashion, proved that in the games of the turf there could be disaster as well as in the realities of the battle field. The McDaniels' confederacy conquered year after year, until things began to crack, and so long a list of names could be presented all of them telling the same tale.

Mr. J. B. Haggin did not succeed in winning the Junior Champion Stakes at Monmouth on Saturday last, but he managed to win the August stakes yesterday with his colt Fresno, that ran third in the Junior Champion. Fresno was not fast enough to defeat that royally good two-year-old Proctor Knott, but he was reasonably sure of winning the August Stakes, with every winner penalized. Fresno is a colt of good quality, and so is his stable companion, Salvator. The two will win useful victories for Mr. Haggin's stable, and it is a pity that they have not been ready before this to take their share of the equine honors that have gone to the two-year-old horses. When Mr. Haggin reduces the size of his stable he will have less forfeits to pay and more stakes to his credit.

While the ill-luck of Mr. Haggin's stable has been on the tongue of every turf-goer this season, especially since the beginning of the Sheepshead Bay meeting, there has been little attention paid to the misfortunes of that once most powerful stable known far and wide as "The Dwyers." At this time last year, and for many years before, they were in the height of their prosperity at Monmouth. That famous track knows them no more. It is true that on Saturday last they went there and tried to win the Junior Champion Stakes with Oregon, and the Senior Champion with Kingston. Miserable failures they made in both races. Last year they won the two Champion Stakes.

To-day the once mighty Dwyer stable, that is the ahreds of it, can be found at Saratoga. On Saturday last Oregon and Kingston were beaten off. Yesterday Bessie June was made to look like a South Carolina mule, so badly was she beaten in the race she ran. The same is the case with Brussels, Serbia and Prospect. The same is true of many other horses in the once all-conquering stable. Inspector B. and Pontiac are crippled once again. Hanover is not himself. Kingston can not run as he did last year. Tea Tray is useless. Perkins is a counterfeiter. Bella B. is useful once in a while. The entire stable has gone wrong, and what was once the most powerful combination on the turf has no longer the power to defeat the piratical confederacy that annually infests Saratoga.

Such a going to pieces of a stable has rarely been seen. It is no wonder that Mrs. Michael Dwyer thinks her husband would be better off in health should he abandon his turf enterprises. She has said she would like to see him retire, because the worry and the work are not repaid by the profit. The case begins to look like it has been painted. The Brooklyn stable has certainly lost its supremacy. The "all black" of Brookdale and the "maroon" of Babylon are in the van. Those that were so often defeated are the conquerors. They act as if they had come to stay. Mr. Withers, of Brookdale, has the champion two-year-old horses taken as a whole, and Mr. Belmont, of the Babylon stable, follows in close order. In the list of three-year-old colts Mr. Belmont, takes the lead, and in the three-year-old fillies the lead goes to Mr. Withers.

All this change has come within a few months, to be sure, but it means at least, the reign of a season. The Haggin stable next to the Dwyers has felt the strain in the largest degree. Mr. Galway, of the Preknessa stable, has had his share of good fortune. Capt. S. S. Brown, the Pittsburg turfman, has sadly felt the change from victory to defeat. Blue Wing went wrong for him. Stuyvesant went lame. Rightaway broke down. The Don was put on the sick list, so was Sunbeam. Good fortune would not smile on him, and he follows close to the Dwyers in the matter of misfortune. When Defaulter was ripe for victory he went wrong, after patient nursing he was once again prepared. He won a stake and defeated Badge. Then again he went wrong, and it is no wonder that Capt. Brown, in the face of all these unexpected reverses, thinks it would be a good thing for him to quit the turf and leave it to those like Pulsifer, who have odd streaks of luck with second class horses.

There is no doubt that the fortunes of the Dwyers have not been at so low an ebb in many years. They have paid high prices for their stock. They have made nominations in all the rich stakes, and it is certainly galling to them to be compelled to leave Monmouth Park and race their best animals at Saratoga. Even there they cannot win with any conspicuous success. The cloud of ill-luck hangs over them. Their horses go astray when most depended upon. There seems to be no certainty for the Dwyer stable, no matter what the race or what the class they start in. The Dwyers, however, are philosophical enough to withstand their present run of misfortune. They have a great stable when properly managed. They may win many triumphs in the autumn of the year, and if they should not they have good two-year-old stock to fall back on in the two-year-old stakes of 1880.

SALES OF TROTTERS.—W. H. Wilson, Abdallah Park, Cynthia, Ky., sold to R. K. Livingston, Hamersville, Ohio, bay mare Madam Victor by Indianapolis, record 2:21, dam by Indian Chief, sire of Lady De Jarnette, record 2:23, and Warrior 2:26; second dam by Joe Downing.

W. H. Wilson, Abdallah Park, Cynthia, Ky., has sold to Geo. H. Hopper, New York City, bay filly Bessie Oton by Sultan 2:24, dam Nettie Ward by Echo, sire of Belle Echo 2:20, and others; second dam by Goldfinder, third dam by Langford.

CORRESPONDENCE.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—I notice in your issue of August 4th that Jay-Eye-See received a bad gash in one of his fore legs by coming in contact with a barb wire fence, while playing in his paddock at Hickory Grove Farm.

Allow me to inform you that such are not the facts of the case, as there is not a particle of barb wire on Hickory Grove Farm. He did, however, receive a gash in his left fore leg, but it was done by running through a wet place in the paddock, his forelegs became somewhat mired and being at speed his hind foot struck the fore leg. If he had had shoes on I think it would have permanently ruined him, but as it was he did not take a lame step.

The only unsound spot Jay-Eye-See ever had is in the tendon of the right fore leg. This was punctured last February, and I think beyond doubt he will be as sound as ever in 1880.

I presume your information in regard to his accident was obtained in some way through the Chicago daily papers. I am sorry to say they seldom report correctly in regard to my horses. Yours truly, J. I. Case.

Mr. Remfree, Antioch.

The best record of the trotting horse Dexter was 2:17.

Inquirer.

What is the record in a yearling race.

Answer.—The fastest yearling records are: Norlaine's 2:31, Studie D.'s 2:35 and Hinda Rose's 2:36, all are made against time. In a race the fastest yearling record is that of Fleet made at Petaluma, August 22 of this year, 2:44. Previous to that date the best was that of Hambrino Bismark, 2:49, made at Lexington, Ky., Oct. 12, 1887. Studie D. had beaten him Oct. 1, in 2:54. The information now at hand does not show that more than two or three other yearlings ever beat 3:00 in a race. Your inquiry arrived just as the forms were closing, and there was no time for a careful search.

Fair Notes.

The importance which attaches to the State Fair at Sacramento, is second to no similar institution in the United States. Everything in California is done on a large scale, she has great products, the finest live stock, and the fastest racers in America. She offers the largest prizes and has the largest pavilion this side of the Mississippi. California, young as she is, can hold her own against the world.

We have received the Premium list of the 28th Annual Fair of the Contra Costa County Agricultural and Industrial Association. We find it to be not only neatly gotten up, but quite comprehensive and extensive. In addition to the long and liberal list of awards, it is the intention of the management to give special premiums to articles of merit not enumerated in the published list. With energetic and thoroughly reliable officers of the fair and a rich and wonderfully productive county, the exhibition should be a success in every particular.

The fair at Chico was the most successful one held. More stalls were built than last year to the number of 60. A herd of polled Angus cattle from Sacramento, was a very attractive feature. The Petaluma fair also succeeded in making a successful showing; the best in nine years.

Coming Cattle Sales.

We hope that the exceptionally fine grades of cattle which are soon to be offered for sale by Messrs. Dunlap of Galesburg, Illinois; and Burnham of Kansas, will attract the renewed attention of breeders of the Pacific Coast to the necessity of obtaining nothing but the highest class of animal. Our hope extends farther; it is that these and other Eastern dealers will in time find that the resources of Oregon, Washington Territory and other places west of the Rockies, will be amply sufficient to increase and perpetuate the best strains, this in time rendering our farmers less dependent on the present yearly sales of Eastern bred animals. The cattle interests on this Coast are large, they are worthy of every effort which can be put forth for their advancement, and we trust that Messrs. Dunlap and Burnham's shorthorns will meet with appreciative and enthusiastic buyers.

We had the pleasure of meeting Mr. D. M. Dunlap at the Bodeu Farm sale of Shorthorns. Mr. Dunlap comes to us all the way from Galesburg, Ill., bringing with him a herd of Shorthorn Durham Cattle. These cattle have all been selected from the best herds in Illinois and Iowa, and each one irrespective of pedigree, will be sold on his individual merit. Mr. Dunlap is thoroughly a cattleman, loving the business sufficiently to render him an enthusiast in fine and choice strains. Aside from the claims he has to our attention as dealer in strictly first-class stock, he has the additional advantage of possessing a happy, genial nature, and the rare gift of a thorough knowledge of his business. We wish him all success in this his latest venture.

His herd will be ready for inspection August 1st, at P. H. Murphy's, one mile from Perkins, which place is eight miles from Sacramento. There are eighteen thoroughbreds offered for sale.

Mr. Burnham no doubt thinks it as easy to sell good cattle in California as bad ones at home; he has come well prepared, the pick of Higginbotham's and Bill & Barnham's herds are to be exhibited during the fair week at Sacramento. Mr. Burnham has secured a vacant lot opposite the fair grounds. Col. S. A. Sawyer will conduct the sale on the Tuesday and Wednesday of the last week of the fair.

Mr. F. H. Burke, 401 Montgomery street, San Francisco, informs us that he will sell large numbers of thoroughbred Holsteins at the conclusion of the Reno Fair next month; and as he has promised us every facility for obtaining information concerning them, we purpose to give a detailed description in a future issue of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN. He is an enterprising Californian and as such deserves especial encouragement from those on this Coast who wish to obtain the very best blooded stock.

W. Scott Moore, one of the most prominent cattlemen of the southwest, died at Albuquerque, N. M., on August 17th.

There was a group of men talking horse, says the Free Press, in the office of the hotel Cadillac when they were joined by a stranger who kept putting in his oar at every opening, and who finally observed:

"Yes, I expect I owned the first horse which ever trotted a mile in three minutes."

"You? Did you ever own a horse?" sharply queried one of the group.

"Of course I did."

"A real horse?"

"Certainly."

"Flesh and blood?"

"Yes, sir."

"Look here, my friend, you've heard of a spavin on a horse, haven't you?"

"I should say I had! I've cured a dozen of 'em."

"Then you are just the man to settle a dispute. Do these spavins break out in the lower jaw? Don't answer me off-hand, but take time to think, as much depends on it. Walk about a little and be sure you are right."

The stranger got up in a dazed way, walked to the door, and as he turned to come back he saw that his chair had been filled, and that it was a cold cut on him.

"Where do spavins break out?" he muttered as he surveyed the group. "That's according. If I can get hold of the fellow who made a fool out of me spavins will break out of him in ten thousand places at once, and they'll be gosh darned spavins to boot!"

Several cases of glanders have appeared at South Butte this summer. A. J. Spear has been compelled to shoot nine head of horses and mules. Great care should be taken to prevent any spread of the malady.

The first creamery in Iowa was settled fourteen years ago. Now there are 495 creameries in the State, beside fifty-six cheese factories and 85,000,000 pounds of butter are exported yearly.

CANOEING.

Oakland Canoe Club.

The float being under repairs it is almost impossible to get canoes into or out of the clubhouse except at high water, and in consequence there was very little sailing done last Sunday. One day last week however, a very pleasant moonlight party was organized. Canoe Flirt and Conchita left the clubhouse at 4 o'clock and running up the creek anchored off Chestnut street, Alameda, their skippers going ashore. Returning about 7:30, a gay party embarked, and sailing down the creek were joined lower down by the Mystic, Hebe and Gypsy, all with ladies on board. The night was perfect moonlight and a warm light breeze, not strong enough to necessitate sitting out on deck, so well tucked in with wraps and to musical accompaniment, the tour of the basin was made. When the boathouse was reached, and the canoe housed, supper was enjoyed in the clubroom. Mr. Geo. Wright has just returned from a trip to Oregon and reports a visit to the boathouse at Portland. There is no distinct canoe club there, but a good many are owned and kept in connection with the rowing club. They are not very far advanced in scientific canoe sailing, and enquiry regarding an interstate canoe race provoked little enthusiasm. Most of their boats are of Bowditch's build.

THE GUN.

Dove shooting is about done, the birds having been so thinned out as to make it hardly worth while to look for them. Mr. John Ferguson spent a day last week at Antioch in company with Mr. Remfree. The foot hills about Antioch were shot over, but only a few dozen doves were shot, and those not in the best condition. About Pleasanton a little better sport is to be had, and about Dry Creek, above Napa, the birds are still fairly plenty. The creeks back of Winters always harbor a good many doves, which go out into adjacent fields at morning and evening, at which time or when the birds are returning to water, very good shooting may be had, although the heat is so intense that the barrels soon become oiled, and the shooter is fairly baked. Some time since, two well-known San Francisco sportsmen as well as tyled Maynard and Bennett, went to Putah Creek near Winters in company with J. M. Bassford, Sr.; Henry A. and Joe Bassford. The Bassfords, by long years spent in the torrid Vaca Valley had grown Salamander like and were not annoyed by the heat. But the portly San Franciscans, used only to refrigerant sea breezes, fairly melted in the Sirocco which swept up Putah Creek, and took off garment after garment, until they stood uncovered except for their gunk. They shot doves a few moments, then plunged into the creek, then shot awhile longer, then repeated the plunge and so continued for several hours, until one of them felt a tingling in the back; within an hour they were lobster red and in all the agony usually reserved for small sunburned boys. Salt butter applied freely, did not appear to lessen their distress. Strange imprecations fell from their generally pure lips, and not until they had reached a friendly farm and been painted with thick cream were they appeased. Dove shooting in such weather is risky, both to health, and because the game, almost certainly becomes tainted before it can be used.

Death of Seth Green.

On August 18th at Rochester, N. Y., Seth Green died, aged 71 years, and more full of honors than of years. Born at Rochester, he while young was engaged in fishing the adjacent lakes for market, and incidentally invented many most ingenious appliances and methods of taking fish at least cost and preserving them in condition most suited to command ready and profitable sale. He remained a fisherman for about thirty years, accumulating a modest competency, and then purchased a plat of land through which a part of Caledonia Creek runs, a stream well suited to experiments in fish culture. His first plant was not extensive, but his success was so marked that increased accommodation soon was needed, and he enlarged his facilities little by little until he had an extensive and perfectly appointed hatchery, embodying his peculiar ideas as to systems of impregnation and care of spawn. Confining his attention to the salmonidae at first, he afterward succeeded in hatching many other edible fishes, including shad and white fish. In 1868 he was appointed a Fish Commissioner of New York, and in 1870 was made Superintendent of the Commission, his duty being in the main to attend the hatcheries at Caledonia and Cold Spring Harbor, both of which he maintained at the highest point of efficiency up to the time of his death. A severe and practical man, Mr. Green exerted an influence within the lines of his chosen work, greater perhaps than that of any pisciculturist of the generation. Never misled by science falsely so-called, and possessing deep knowledge of the habits and worth of the more useful sorts of fish, his work always told perceptibly in useful ways. Nor was he merely a grubbing plodder. There was a humane side, which developed when in company with anglers and made him one of the most interesting of men. Able to cast a rarely good fly, he achieved fame at various casting competitions, and in leisure days had fished about all likely waters of the Atlantic seaboard. Not the least valuable of his diversified labors, were his contributions to angling literature, either in answer to queries or voluntary. His writings were always clear, exhaustive and readable. He died mourned most deeply by his neighbors and those who knew him best.

Reports from Webber are very favorable, and the day fishing has very much improved.

The premier fish of the season was taken by Mr. John M. Adams on August 12th, out of Carmel River above the dam, a few miles below Monterey. It was a trout 16½ inches long, and weighed five and a quarter pounds. Taken on a Little Green Drake, tied on a No. 3 sneak bend hook, in the presence of Messrs. Austin C. Tubbs, W. B. Tubbs, Wm. Hatton, Jerome B. Lincoln and F. W. Tallant. The trout was rather slender but lively and gave good play to the skillful angler, whose worthy good fortune it was to strike him. The kill is described by the witness as being most artistically made, and the lucky sportsman receives congratulations.

Inter-Club Match.

The third of the matches between teams from four of the local gun clubs for the trophy presented by the Selby Smelting & Lead Company, was shot off on Saturday last at Adam's Point. The cup had been won twice by the Blue Rock Club team and another win would have settled ownership of the prize, but the Encinal team was in too good form. Shooting lasted until seven o'clock P. M., the later scores being made in twilight. The average work done was superior, Dr. Knowles taking premier position with his heavy 16 bore Greener. The Blue Rock team held up well on singles, as indeed did the others, but at doubles, the Encinals were too strong. Another match for the cup will be shot within thirty days, the Blue Rock Club having challenged the winners.

At 50 single Blue Rock targets and ten pairs. Chamberlin rules.

Walla Walla Tournament.

The fourth annual tournament of the Sportman's Association of the Northwest has come to a close, and as secretary of the Walla Walla Rod and Gun Club I submit the following scores and details.

Promptly at 9:30 Monday morning the contestants for honors at the shooting tournament took their positions and the contest opened. One side of the grand stand was occupied for pigeon shooting while the other side was devoted to the breaking of clay birds. The event of the day was No. 2, for the Individual Championship medal of the association, valued at $250. On the score Moore and Stine tied, and a shoot-off was won by Moore. Throughout the entire day the shooting was exceedingly close, as will be seen by the following scores:

First Match.—Seven live pigeons; entrance $5. Five traps to shoot from.

Close, 6; Moore, 7; Eberly, 7; Thompson, 4; DuBray, 5; Brooks, 4; Foster, 7; Evans, 7; Davis, 5; West, 6; Kellogg, 2; Conkey, 4; Straight, 7; Stine, 7; Ellis, 6; Bringham, 5; Albright, 1; Dodge, 7; Arberry, 5; Schumacher, 7.

On the shoot-off Eberly, Stine and Evans divided first money, the other money going to DuBray and Arberry, who also divided.

Second Match.—For the association medal. Twenty-one clay birds; entrance $3.75 per cent of the money to go to the holder of the medal for the past year.

Moore, 19; Eberly, 17; Kellogg, 14; Stine, 19; Foster, 17; Schumacher, 9; Close, 15; West, 9; Evans, 13; Bringham, 14; DuBray, 17; Brooks, 14; Thompson, 11; Dodge, 19; Ellis, 12; Davis, 17; Straight, 14; Albright, 18.

Ties on 19 at 5 birds.

Moore..... 1 1 1 1 1 Sam Stine..... 1 0

Moore wins medal, and Albright 200 Chamberlin Shells for second best average.

Third Match.—Seven live pigeons; entrance, $5.

Eberly, 7; Close, 7; Stine, 6; DuBray, 6; Thompson, 5; Arberry, 5; Mullen, 5; Ellis, 6; Davis, 6; Bringham, 4; Evans, 6; Foster, 7; Straight, 3; Dodge, 4; West, 7; Brooks, 7; Macomber, 6; Taylor, 6; Moore, 7; Schumacher, 4; Conkey, 5.

Eberly and West divided first money; Stine, Ellis and Macomber divided second money, and Evans took third money.

Fourth Match.—Ten single and five pair American clay birds; entrance, $5.

DuBray, 16; Macomber, 16; Eberly, 19; West, 13; Evans, 14; Foster, 17; Brooks, 12; Ellis, 15; Bringham, 15; Moore, 15; Albright, 15; Riley, 11; Davis, 8; Kellogg, 11; Stine, 17.

Eberly took first money. Stine and Foster divided second money, and DuBray and Macomber third money.

Match No. 5, at 10 live birds, entrance, $10, was participated in by 14 of the shooters. The score was: Eberly, 7; Evans, 10; Davis, 7; DuBray, 10; Close, 8; Foster, 9; Stine, 9; Hingate, 7; Ellis, 9; Brooks, 7; Bringham, 8; Moore, 10; Dodge, 8; West, 6. Evans, DuBray and Moore having tied on ten straight birds, divided first money. Foster, Stine and Ellis shot off the tie for second money, resulting in Ellis coming off the victor. Third money was divided between Close, Bringham and Dodge.

Match No. 6, at 10 single birds, $3.50 entry, was participated in by 18, the score standing: DuBray, 6; Bringham, 6; Eberly, 8; Brooks, 8; Davis, 7; Ellis, 9; Schumacher, 8; Macomber, 7; Close, 6; Albright, 9; Evans, 9; Dodge, 8; Riley, 4; Stine, 9; Moore, 10; Foster, 8; Straight, 8; Chapman, 6. Moore took first money amounting to $25.50 on a straight score. Second money was divided between Stine, Evans, Albright and Ellis, they preferring not to shoot off. Eberly, Brooks, Schumacher, Dodge, Foster and Straight, who tied on eight hits, shot off for third money. Foster winning.

Match No. 7 was the feature of the day's shooting, and probably the best contested match of the tournament, was at 15 live birds, the entrance being $14.50. The Parker gun company had put up a fine gun to be shot for, valued at $100. Seventeen participated, and the score stood: Eberly, 14; Close, 11; Bringham, 10; Davis, 12; Brooks, 14; DuBray, 11; West, 11; Evans, 13; Stine, 11; Dodge, 1; Ellis, 13; Moore, 13; Arberry, 6; Straight, 11; Foster, 14; Taylor, 6; Hingate, 9. In this match first money and the prize gun were divided by Eberly and Foster who tied. Second money, $64, was divided between Evans, Ellis and Moore. Third money, $48, was won by Davis without a tie. Fourth money, $32, was won by Close.

Match No. 9, at 5 pairs clay birds, with following score: DuBray, 6; Ellis, 7; Eberly, 6; Stine, 7; West, 6; Brooks, 7; Macomber, 7; Bringham, 6; Davis, 4; Evans, 7; Straight, 5; Dodge, 7; Moore, 7; Albright, 5; Close, 10; Foster, 10. First money, amounting to $15.20, was divided between Close and Foster. Second money, $9.10, was won by Brooks. Third money, $6.10, was won by Moore.

Match No. 9—At 20 single clay birds; entrance $3; for the championship banner. The following teams entered, with records: Walla Walla—DuBray 15, Eberly 16, Foster 16; total 47. Portland—Davis 13, Moore 18, Evans 18; total 49. Tacoma—Ellis 14, Dodge 12, Albright 13; total 39. Kalama—Close 15, West 12, Brooks 17; total 44. The banner was won by Portland, and 200 Chamberlin shells by Walla Walla.

Match No. 10—At 10 live birds; entrance $10. Moore 7, Brooks 10, Close 9, Dodge 7, West 7, DuBray 9, Eberly 10, Davis 8, Foster 9, Bringham 8, Stine 8, Evans 10, Ellis 9, Albright 8. Brooks, Eberly and Evans divided first money. Second money was divided between Close, DuBray, Foster and Ellis; third money between Stine and Davis.

Match No. 11—At 15 single clay birds; entrance $3.70. Davis 8, Eberly 14, DuBray 12, Stine 12, Moore 14, Foster 13, Jones 9, Evans 13, Bringham 12, Brooks 11, Dodge 10, Albright 10, Eberly 9, Ellis 11. Eberly and Moore divided first money; second money was divided between Foster and Evans, third money was won by DuBray, after shooting off the tie with Brooks, at 16 birds.

Match No. 12—At seven live birds, was not shot, owing to a lack of birds.

Match No. 13—At 50 live birds, was not shot, but reduced to 20 on account of not having enough birds, entrance being placed at $25. Foster 14, Brooks 19, Moore 19, Eberly 18, Evans 14, Close 15, Bringham 16, DuBray 15, Stine 16. Moore and Brooks divided first money, Eberly winning second money without a tie. In the shoot-off for third money between Bringham and Stine, the former won.

The fine gold badge presented by the Selby Company, for the best general average, was won by W. A. Eberly, of this city. In this the best possible score was 76, and the five leading ones were: Eberly 67, Moore and Foster tie at 65, and Stine and DuBray tie at 64. Walla Walla thus furnishes the winner of the prize, and four out of five of the best scores.

E. W. Moore, of Portland, who won the Individual Championship, shot splendidly during the entire contest, and with Al. Eberly, of this place, divided the honors as being the best shots on the ground. Both of these men shoot Parker guns and Chamberlin ammunition. J. Foster, the winner of the badge last year at Seattle, also shoots the same make of gun and kind of ammunition, he and Eberly winning the Parker gun, donated by the maker to this tournament.

The entire Portland team shot Parker's and Selby's Standard Chamberlin shells, while over nine-tenths of all money and prizes were captured with this combination. The highest scores on live birds were made with Schultze powder in one or both barrels, Eberly killing twenty-three straight birds the first day with one barrel.

It is, therefore, quite evident that the Selby Smelting and Lead Company, manufacturers of the shot gun ammunition under the Chamberlin patent, are thoroughly up in the manner of loading this, the very best of all explosives, where both barrels may be used.

The club had intended shooting at American clay birds throughout the tournament, but as four out of five traps sent with the birds broke down before 2,000 had been thrown, and as two of these could not be repaired in time, we had to fall back on our old reliable Peoria and traps and they never failed.

The verdict of nearly all the shooters present was that the Peoria is decidedly a fairer and better target than the American clay bird, while the traps for throwing the latter are pronounced by all who have seen them as simply execrable. They are made of the commonest kind of iron, and are so hard to set that they are bound to smash up after very little use. In our case two broke down before we had thrown 800 birds from the whole set, so let this be a warning to those contemplating an investment in this direction. The Walla Walla Gun Club is done with the American clay bird and trap, simply because neither gives a satisfaction.

The tournament throughout has a decided success, the umpiring of Mr. Sorrage gave universal satisfaction, his decision being correct and just in every instance. At the meeting held here Mr. W. D. Close, of Kalsma, was elected president of the association, and a more congenial, amiable and better man could never have been found. He is a general favorite among shooting men, a splendid shot and a gentleman. Our next meeting will be at Tacoma, when it is quite certain there will be a large gathering of representative shots from all this great northwest.

I will close with a simple remark. Five years ago every man went to a tournament with ammunition specially loaded by himself and thought nothing has quite so good as his own shells. In our last shoot only one or two men used, for a time, shells of their own loading, yet look at the scoring and remember that they were very nearly all made with Standard Chamberlin shells, that the leaders without exception used them; then compare our shooting with that made at other tournaments and that ought to weigh something in favor of the Shelby shot-gun cartridge.

Schultz Powder in Chamberlin Shells.

It has afforded me the greatest pleasure to write and speak in terms of unbounded praise regarding the true excellence of the Standard shot-gun cartridges loaded by the Selby Smelting & Lead Co., of San Francisco, and now in addition to what I have heretofore said about this absolutely faultless ammunition, as proven by experiment of my own, I cheerfully relate what occurred at our August Tournament now just closed. To those familiar with what is going on in Europe in the pigeon shooting line, I can impart no information; but as all of us do not read foreign newspapers, I may be permitted to say that the man who shoots at pigeon matches in Europe and uses black powder, at least in his first barrel, is regarded as an easy victim by any man nearly his equal, skilled or rather accustomed to shooting the nitro compound; more particularly the Schultze which is far ahead of all others. To be more explicit, in a field of forty to fifty shooters in London at the International Contest, recently held there, one or two men at most used black powder in their first barrel, and I will emphasize this by adding that he or they won absolutely nothing. While the men using Schultze carried all before them. Now to bring things nearer home I will mention that the best shooting at live pigeons, done during our tournament last week was done with Schultze powder loaded under the Chamberlin patent by the Selby Company.

That in itself would prove nothing to the skeptical, but when it is known that the man making the highest score (over 91 per cent of birds shot at being scored)—had never used half a dozen loads of Schultze before this tournament, then the statement becomes of value; and as there can be no doubt of its authenticity, why it is clear that Schultze powder, when properly loaded, is just the very thing with which to make good scores when both barrels are allowed.

As a particular instance I will mention that Mr. Al. Eberly killed on the first day of our shoot twenty-three straight birds, using but one barrel for each; furthermore, that he and many others used Schultze in both barrels, killing many birds with the second at distances varying from fifty to sixty yards.

All the shells were loaded with No. 8 shot, there being nothing larger for sale on the grounds—several contestants suddenly became inspired with confidence when they saw the manner in which those Schultze loads were chopping down the birds, and very soon nearly all were using it—many never having fired a load of it before in their lives—in fact, some were averse to it merely out of prejudice probably engendered by the slow and drawing ignition of American Wood powder.

We have been told that Schultze is dangerous because it absorbs moisture, or is liable to become terrific in its strength if overdried or heated. Those objections may, and probably did exist formerly, but the new issue, so branded, is proof against these drawbacks and is warranted safe and about equal in strength to No. 4 Curtis and Harvey's English powder, while it actually exerts a lesser bursting force in the gun barrel, i. e., is safer and less liable to rend a gun apart. Care should be taken, however, not to overload, as that in any case and with any explosive is obviously hazardous, while there is no corresponding benefit to be gained thereby.

I don't pretend to know much about Schultze powder myself, having used only a few cases of it; but when I see men totally unaccustomed to its use killing long strings of pigeons with it, and making vastly better scores than they ever approached with black powder, then I feel justified in inviting the attention of my brother sportsmen to what I consider a good thing, and would like to hear through these columns what shooting men of this coast think of Schultze powder, when loaded by the Chamberlin machine. I am particular in stipulating how loaded for I find that hand loading is not conducive to best results with any of these nitro-compounds, unless indeed it be done by an expert. And while I have loaded as many shells as most amateurs, I must frankly confess my inability to produce as regular and even ammunition as that loaded by the Chamberlin machine, more especially when using Wood or Schultze powder.

Legal Quail Shooting.

Sportsmen, properly so called, join in deprecating the slaughter of young quail and other birds out of season, but for reasons not far to seek, few lovers of the gun care to express their sentiments publicly. Such an one is not our friend Mr. B. C. Hinman of San Diego, who writes the following vigorous admonitions to the poachers of his section.

"For the benefit of a few unscrupulous persons or game-hogs who want the earth and are now shooting quail out of season, and will neither join a gun club nor respect the game laws, the following may not be of interest, but it will pay them to read it carefully and look out a little. The San Diego Gun Club and several prominent sportsmen of this city outside of that club have determined to put a stop to this wholesale slaughtering of young quail out of season and are having several large signs painted which read as follows: 'Any person caught violating the quail law will be prosecuted by the San Diego Gun Club.' These signs will be placed in the different valleys, in the most conspicuous places, where they can be seen by the individuals who are violating the law.

The season in San Diego county opens September 15 and closes March 15. Certainly, six months in the year is long enough time in which to shoot quail. Any shooter who is not satisfied with such an extended season is a natural game-hog, and should be made an example of. The Gun Club has several of those law-breakers under its eye, and they will be closely watched from now until September 15. The Gun Club and other sportsmen of this city have made up a purse of $50, which will be given to the person causing or giving information leading to the arrest or conviction of any one violating the quail law. San Diego county enjoys the disinction of having the finest quail-shooting in the country, and with proper protection and a strict observance of the law, fine shooting can be had for several years to come; but if these law-breakers and game-hogs are allowed to continue their slaughter out of season, our fine quail shooting will soon be a thing of the past."

That excellent journal The Rifle has been changed in form and style and under the title Shooting and Fishing is still more essential to sportsmen who desire to keep fully abreast of these stirring times. General departments covering about all branches of legitimate sport have been added; although its rifle section is still as carefully prepared as heretofore, and will continue to be authoritative.

A recent addition to our exchange list is Sports Afield, ably edited by Mr. Claude King, and published at Denver, Col. It is devoted to field sports; is clean, bright, newsy, attractive, conducted on a high plane and covers a land of promise to the sportsman, where elk, trout, deer, chickens and quail abound. Success to it, and as much cheer to its readers as only sportsmen deserve.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN.—The Waterloo Kennel, of Great Bend, Kansas, with Mr. D. N. Heizer and Mr. G. N. Moses, of the same city, received Sunday, August 4th, four greyhounds from the kennel of Dr. Walter Iliffe, Kendal, England. Three females are half sisters of the famous Waterloo winner, Miss Glendyne. Lady Graham Glendyne is by Jester—Lady Glendyne and Little Lady Glendyne and Milly Glendyne by London—Lady Glendyne.

Tales, the young dog designed for the stud is by Wandering Tom—Little Emily 3d. Wandering Tom is by Williamstoke, by Banker out of Meg O the Park; dam Martha by Benefactor out of Venus Aphrodite.

Little Emily 3d, by Villiers out of Rose Mary, Villiers brother to the famous Alec Halliday. Rose Mary by Hannibal out of a sister to Benylrier. He is an elegant fellow, and valuable for the stud.

There was also received at the same time by Mr. D. S. Suse, of Great Bend, a sixty pound black bitch by Daylight—Colerain Diamond. This is the largest and most important importation ever made in this country and will greatly stimulate the interest.

A brother of the Glendyne bitches sold in England less than a month ago for $1,220.

The coming meeting of the American Coursing Club held Oct. 15th, at Great Bend, Kan., promises to be one of unusual interest. Prizes aggregate $1,000. The champion cup offered by The American Field is worth $300 cash to the winner. We shall expect a large delegation from California, but should they fail to put in an appearance we shall think that their famous coursers are only famous for beating ordinary dogs. Come and visit us we want to know all of the greyhound men, and are especially anxious to see the California men.

To Eradicate Mange.

A subscriber writes from Holden, Mo., requesting a cure for mange. Such a query is easily written, but to answer adequately is not so easy. Tine mange is not so common as many suppose. Every erythema or eczema is styled mange. Every blotchy, surfeited dog is said to be mangy. Leucocythemia with its incident marasmus usually subjects the unfortunate subject to a course of irritant and unpleasant unguents wholly inapplicable. If our querist has the parasite about his kennels, which alone gives rise to true mange, he can readily cure affected animals, and insure against recurrence by following these suggestions. All dogs should be removed from the kennels and yards to a close pen, and confined there until the kennels can be thoroughly swept, the yards scraped, and all bedding destroyed. All wood-work, flooring, fencing and such trees or shrubs as may be within the kennel enclosure should then be thoroughly painted with a strong wash of lime in which common glue and Little's Phenyle have been dissolved. A half pound each of glue and phenyle to each gallon of wash will not be too much. Care should be taken to fill all crevices with the wash, and to apply several coats to such places as have been chosen as scratching spots. A solution of phenyle ten parts to ninety of water should be sprinkled over all earth in the yards until the surface is well wetted. While the kennels are drying the dogs should be taken one by one, placed in tubs of warm water, and very thoroughly scrubbed with a stiff brush and strong soap.

Every part of the body should be reached, and on such portions as are crusty or thickened, the rubbing may even be so severe as to bring blood without disadvantage. After the scrubbing, good rubbing with cloths should follow and the animals then be permitted to dry. When dry, a solution of phenyle should be rubbed and brushed into the skin. No mere careless exhibition of the remedy will suffice. The skin is the seat of the disease, not the coat, and the phenyle should be made to penetrate and well soak the epidermis. A proper solution is about one-third phenyle to two-thirds water. In very heavy coated dogs it is well to clip the coat short, using an ordinary horse clipper. After the first application of phenyle the dogs may be returned to their kennels, if the latter are dry, and given fresh bedding. After two days all those which show disease should be subjected to treatment similar to that indicated. Three, or at most four, exhibitions of the remedy will almost certainly destroy all parasites, and leave the animals pure in so far as the skin is concerned. A little vaseline well rubbed into bare spots will start a growth of hair of natural color, and a very few weeks should transform a patchy, distempered kennel into clean, lively animals, always provided proper food is given and sufficient exercise. Constitutional treatment is not usually indicated in mange proper, but general condition is always worthy the gravest consideration, and owners will find their profit in careful study of all the incidents in the lives of their charges.

Californians will note with pleasure any successes scored by Tom Pinch, in competition with such cranks as are apt to be gathered at Richmond. It is unfortunate that the show does not occur in the Spring, so that the dog might go through the American Kennel Club circuit. Tom Pinch can hold his own on the bench in any company, and unless the company is of the rarest quality, the imperturbable Tom will certainly carry away all honors. The judge at Richmond is Mr. Tracy, a close student of form and a sportsman as well, in whose hands the pointer classes will be judged, not guessed at.

"Writing of agriculturalists it occurs to me that very many could add considerably to their reputed low incomes, were they to take up breeding of high-class dogs. Who can have better chances, whether it is in breeding, rearing or breaking? No one could compete with them with their huge advantages, and now that any sort of a dog will fetch twenty guineas, I think many readers will agree with me, that dog breeding is a matter that should not be lost sight of. I will undertake to say that some farmers in this country, whose names run through my mind as breeders of high-class dogs, make very much more out of them than they do out of their other stock and produce."—London Cor. of Turf Field and Farm.

A departure from beaten paths is to be noted in the premium list of the first dog show of the Virginia Field Sports Association listed for October 9, 10, 11, and 12th, next. A class is made for "Virginia Native Setters," the limitation being: "A class open only to dogs bred in Virginia. To be judged upon the merits of the dogs with reference to beauty of setter form and workman-like appearance, without reference to color. Cross-breeding of English, Irish and Gordons in the ancestry will be no objection to dogs in this class, but the judges in awarding prizes will judge form by the English setter standard. Dogs to be eligible in this class must furnish at least two degrees of pedigree in full, i. e., sire and dam and grandsires and grandams."

Mr. J. Martin Barney writes from Dutch Flat a note from which we take several items of interest. Speaking of the Tom Pinch—Galatea litter of pointers recently whelped he says: "They are fine. Mr. Henry A. Bassford wrote me that his father said after looking over the pup Bismarck that I sent him, that it was the finest pup he ever saw. Mr. Bassford, Sr., has lived long enough and seen enough of sporting dogs to be a pretty good judge." Another item of interest is this: "I received a few days since a letter and also a number of posters from Hon. John S. Wise, in relation to the dog show to be held at Richmond, in October. Mr. Wise is very anxious for me to bring Tom Pinch on, and as I have been thinking pretty strongly of going East for a few months' visit, I think of making it in my way."

There are other Pacific Coast dogs that should be shown in the East. Mr. H. R. Brown's pointer, Donna Sensation; Mr. A. B. Truman's Irish setter, Lady Elcho T; The California Kennel's English setter, Loadstone; Mr. J. B. Barber's English setter, Pilot; Mr. W. S. Kittle's English setter Luke, and others might be mentioned; any one of which will take a deal of beating. The cost of sending such a distance operates as a bar to most owners. Expressage to New York is about thirty dollars, and return as much. Incidentals would raise the cost of putting a dog through the circuit to probably not less than three hundred dollars, if the animal was placed in charge of some eastern exhibitor. If the owner travelled with the dog the expense would be trebled. No wins could in any adequate degree recoup an owner in coin. His reward would necessarily be in honor, and while that is sufficient return, if ample means are at hand, the man in ordinary circumstances must think twice before crippling himself merely for notoriety.

A Turf Veteran's Recollections.

The mention of the name of Lexington in a group of Pacific horsemen the other day at a turf resort, brought out old Fred Collier, who knows more about horses than a good many others. He has travelled with the Baldwin stable at the East, and has spent two or three seasons at Louisville, Nashville and Latonia, and has been on all the great stock farms of Kentucky and Tennessee.

"D'ye see old Lexington's grave at Woodburn?" asked old Uncle Fred as he crossed his legs.

"I saw the marble tablet over the door of the stallion house," was the reply, "and I was told the flesh of the horse is buried right at the main entrance."

"That's so," said Mr. Collier, "and his bone are hung on wires—what's this ye call it?—artick—ar-tickle-ated, or some such things. Anyhow, they have them at the Smithsonian Institute in Washington. That's a big compliment to pay a horse; but it is not as much as old Alexander did for Asteroid." And then Mr. Collier told the story of how Asteroid the great four-miler, was stolen by guerrillas during the war, rid en 100 miles in fourteen hours; how a few days later the horse was recaptured and brought home, only to die.

Then the veteran spoke of the fine monument and inscription which Alexander had erected over the horse's grave.

UNCLE DAN McCARTY.

Mr. Collier finished his tale amid silence, and it was plain that the wells of equine sympathy were pumping. Then somebody changed the subject to D. J. McCarty's luck the other day with Sorrento, by which he won not only a fat purse $10,000, but as much more in the betting, and the very next day Mr. Baldwin carried off three races at Saratoga and Mr. Haggin a big race somewhere else.

"Yes, it was me that got Dan McCarty to buy that colt Sorrento," said Mr. Collier. "He is a full brother to C. H. Todd, who won the Chicago Derby, and a good deal better colt. Dan, I expect, is in high feather now. He already has his name up on the Eastern tracks and is pointed out more than Lucky Baldwin, Fred Gebhardt or Mrs. Langtry. That famous white hat of his will always make him conspicuous."

Speaking of Baldwin's great horse, Emperor of Norfolk, which has swept away everything for the past two years, Mr. Collier says that "Lucky" did not want to buy the colt at the Winters sale two years ago in Sacramento. He required a good deal of urging to bid on him. "He did not then until I had run him up to $2,100 for—well, never mind whom now, said Collier. "Then Lucky came in and got him at $2,550, and I thought poor Albert Cooper, the colored man with Winters' stable, would break his heart. He came to me with tears and said: 'Mass' Collier, dat colt jiss gin away—jiss gin away.'"

"Cooper was right. The colt was given away. He won $39,000 for Baldwin in his two-year-old form, and I haven't figured up how much this year, but the Chicago Derby alone was worth $17,000. I have an idea that the colt to date has made nearly $75,000 for Baldwin, to say nothing of the betting."

"By the way, Winters will be down here next week with a brother of the Emperor, the Czar of Norfolk. The boys had better keep their eyes on him.—S. F. Examiner.

CONDITIONS.

All trotting and pacing races best three in five, except as otherwise specified.
National Association Rules to govern trotting, and Rules of the State Agricultural Society to govern running, except as herein stated.

The Board reserves the right to trot or run heats of any two races alternately, or to call a special race between heats; also to change the day and hour of any race if deemed necessary.

For a walk-over in any race a horse is only entitled to its own entrance fee and one-half of the entrance received from the other paid up entries of said race, and to no added money.
A horse winning a race entitled to first money only, except when distancing the field, then to first and third moneys.

The winner of the mile and repeat, free purse, for all ages, of the State Fair programme for 1888, starting in races No. 8, will be required to carry five pounds extra.

Unless otherwise ordered by the Board, no horse is qualified to be entered in any District race that has not been owned in the District six (6) months prior to the day of the race, and any entry by any person of any disqualified horse shall be held liable for the entrance fee contracted, without any right to compete for a purse, and shall be held liable to penalties prescribed by the National Trotting Association and Running Rules of the State Agricultural Society.

All colts properly entered in District stakes, if sold, are entitled to start in said races.
If it is the opinion of the Judges, before starting a race, that it cannot be finished on the closing day of the Fair, it may be declared off or continued, at the option of the Judges.

In all races noted above, six or more paid up entries required to fill and no more horses to start; but the Board reserves the right to hold entries and start a race with a less number and deduct a proportionate amount of the purse; provided, however, that the Board hereby reserves the right to declare any race off when there are less than three (3) to start.

Trotting and racing colors to be named with all entries and used in all heats.

Races commence each day at 1 o'clock p. m. sharp.

Stables, hay and straw free to competitors.

Entries close August 1, 1888, with the Secretary.

FIXED EVENTS FOR 1889-90.

REMARKS AND CONDITIONS.

Nominations to Stakes must be made to the Secretary on or before the 1st day of August, 1888.

Entries for the purses must be made two days preceding the race, at the regular time for closing entries as designated by the rules. Those who have nominated in stakes must name to the Secretary in writing which they will start the day before the race, at 6 p. m. Horses entered in purses can only be drawn by the consent of the Judge.

All horses entered for District purses must be owned and kept in Nevada and California, east of the Sierra Nevada, for six months prior to day of race. Entries to all trotting races will close August 20th, with the Secretary.

Five or more to enter and three or more to start in all races for purses.

National Trotting Association rules to govern trotting races. Pacific Coast Blood Horse Association rules to govern running races, except as above.

All trotting and pacing races are the best three in five, unless otherwise specified; five to enter and three to start. But the Board reserves the right to hold a less number than five to fill, by the withdrawal of a proportionate amount of the purse. Entrance fee, 10 per cent. on purse, to accompany nomination.

National Trotting Association rules to govern trotting races; but the Board reserves the right to trot heats of any two classes alternately if necessary, to finish any day's racing, or to trot a special race. A horse making a walkover shall be entitled only to the entrance money paid in, when less than the required number of starters appear, they may contest for the entrance money to be divided as follows: 66% to the first and 33% to the second.

Horses that distance the field will only take first money.

In all the foregoing stakes the declarations are void unless accompanied by the money.

Please observe that, in the above stakes, declarations are permitted for a small forfeit.

In all races entries not declared out by 6 p. m. of the day preceding the race shall be required to start. Where there is more than one entry by one person, or in one interest, the particular horse they are to start must be named by 6 p. m. of the day preceding the race. No added money paid for a walkover.

Racing colors to be named in entries.

In trotting races drivers will be required to wear caps of distinct colors, which must be named in the entries.

Each day's race will commence promptly at one o'clock p. m.

All entries must be directed to C. H. Stoddard, Secretary, Reno, Nevada.

The Ormsby County District Fair, at Carson City, begins September 24th and ends September 29th. Six days' racing; gives $7,500 in purses and premiums; for particulars address J. D. Torreyson, Secretary, Carson City.

The Humboldt County District Fair begins October 2d, and ends October 5th. Four days' racing; gives $2,500 in purses and premiums; for particulars address A. W. Wise, Secretary, Winnemucca, Nevada.

The State Agricultural Society has built a new track, located half a mile from the town of Reno, the soil being of such a character as to make it one of the best on the Pacific Coast.

CONDITIONS AND REMARKS.

National Trotting Association rules to govern all trotting races. All trotting and pacing races are the best three in five, unless otherwise specified.

Rules of the State Agricultural Society to govern all running. Five to enter and four to start; but the Board reserves the right to hold a less number than four to fill by the withdrawal of a proportionate amount of the purse. Entrance fee, ten per cent. on purse, to accompany nomination. Trotting, pacing and running purses to be divided at the rate of fifty per cent. for the first horse, twenty-five per cent. to the second, fifteen per cent. to the third, and ten per cent. to the fourth.

All horses entered for trotting, pacing or running races, for which entrance has been paid and who go in the race designated, and fail to win any part of the purse, will have their entrance money returned to them after decision by the Judges.

The Board reserves the right to trot or run heats of any two races, alternately, or call a special race between heats; also to change the day and hour of any race, if deemed necessary. For a walk-over a horse is only entitled to its entrance fee and one-half of the entrance retained by the Society from the other entries for said race, and to no added money. A horse winning a race, entitled to first money only, except when distancing the field then to first and fourth moneys.

Non-starters must be declared out the day previous to the race they are engaged in by 8 o'clock p. m., or they shall be required to start or forfeit the entrance money.

All purses or premiums paid as soon as a decision is rendered.

Entries to the races, except No. 8, will close with the Secretary August 10, 1888.

Races commence each day at 1 o'clock p. m. sharp.

The Association is a member of the National Trotting Association. The Board of Directors will have charge of the grounds during the week of races, and will see that the Rules are strictly enforced.

Address all communications to the Secretary.

Admission to Fair Grounds, 50 cents; Children under 12 years, 25 cents. To the Pavilion, 25 cents; Children under 12 years, 15 cents.

BREECH-LOADING GUN!

L. C. SMITH,

Manufacturer of both Hammer and Hammerless Guns.
SYRACUSE, N. Y.

A Demonstration of the Shooting Qualities of the "L. C. Smith" Gun.

At the Cleveland Cartridge Co.'s tournament, held at Cleveland, O., from September 13 to 16 inclusive the "Smith" gun won first money in every class. It also won nearly two-thirds of the entire amount ($3,000) of cash prizes, and championship trophy for the best average in the 90 class. In the 90-class it won the 1st, 2nd and 4th moneys; in the 80-class it took the 1st, 3rd, 4th and 5th; in the 70 class it took 1st and 2nd, with the 1st and 6th in the 60-class, making a total winning nearly four times greater than any other gun, of either foreign or home manufacture.

We think this a most excellent showing, as there was seven different makes of guns used by the nineteen contestants in the ninety class.

Figaro.

The artotype we publish this week is that of a typical Hambletonian—Figaro, the stable companion of Jester D., whose picture appeared in our issue of last week. Both horses are the property of Gilbert Tompkins, the proprietor of the Souther Farm, San Leandro, which was briefly described in our article on Jester D. Figaro was bred by Mr. Peter Coutts of Mayfield, on the property now occupied by the running track and stables of Senator Stanford. The latter purchased Figaro and his dam Emblem from Mr. Coutts when the colt was about two years old. He became the property of his present owner in January, 1887.

His breeding is remarkably good, and the more it is examined the better it appears. Figaro, bay stallion, black points, little white on left hind coronet, 16½ hands high, weight about 1250 pounds. By Whipple's Hambletonian 725, dam Emblem by Tattler 300, son of Pilot, Jr. 12, second dam Young Portia (dam of Voltaire, 2:20½) by Mambrino Chief 11. Putting it in tabular form:

FIGARO.	Hambletonian, 725 (Whipple's)	Guy Miller ..	Hambletonian, 10. (Rysdyk's.)
		Bolivar Mare.
	Emblem.....	Martha Washington.....	Burr's Washington.
		Dam by Abdallah, 1.
FIGARO.	Tattler, 300.....	Pilot, Jr., 12.
		Telltale.....	Tellamou. Fica.
	Young Portia	Mambrino Chief, 11.
		Portia by Roebuck.

Everybody knows what Whipple's Hambletonian, the sire of Figaro, has done for the trotting stock of this Coast. He produced trotters from mares of every sort, shape and description, and his offspring were known and liked from one end of the State to the other. Several of his sons have produced trotters, and his daughter, Countess, produced Nutwood's great son Dawn, 2:19½. Another daughter, Lady Babcock, is the dam of Soudan (by Sultan), record 2:30 as a three-year-old, and also Elector, 2:21½, by Electioneer. This family is noted for endurance, action, docility and general usefulness. Their speed is proved by the fact that Whipple's Hambletonian had to his credit at the close of 1887, fourteen trotters and one pacer, with records of from 2:19 to 2:30. He had good right to produce speed, for his sire Guy Miller, son of Rysdyk's Hambletonian was a great horse for his opportunities.

Guy Miller deserves more than a passing mention. He died in 1861 when scarcely six years old, and of course left very few sons and daughters. Yet of these few, six are producers of speed. Whipple's Hambletonian 2:39½, has been already mentioned. The Commodore 2:35½ sired Mohawk Prince 2:28, Young Guy Miller produced Josephine S. 2:24½, from the loins of Delmonico came Darby 2:16½, Young Saline is the dam of Monroe 2:27½, "Hattie's Dam" produced Hattie 2:29½. Delmonico was also the sire of Sultana the dam of Sultan 2:24, sire of Stamboul 2:15.

The study of the breeding of Emblem, the dam of Figaro opens up one of the most interesting departments of trotting literature and records—the producing qualities of the combination of the blood of the two great Kentucky stallions, Mambrino Chief and Pilot Jr. Emblem's dam, Young Portia, was by Mambrino Chief. She was bred to Tattler—record, 2:26—the best son of Pilot Jr., as a source of speed, staying qualities and producing blood. The results of this cross are shown in the following table of the offspring of Young Portia, she produced:

By Tattler, 300—	Voltaire 2:20½, sire of Bessemer (pacer).....	2:15
Planet (thoroughbred)—	Emblem, dam of Figaro (trial).....	2:32½
Harold 413—	Portland, sire of Minnesota.....	2:27½
Belmont 64—	Consuela, dam of Cunningham.....	2:24
	Yolande, "Yuba".....	2:24½

The following table shows how well Tattler produced from Mambrino Chief mares. He sired from

Young Portia—Voltaire, 2:20½, sire of Bessemer.....	2:15
Emblem, dam of Figaro, trial.....	2:32½
Indiana—Indianapolis, 2:21; sire of Indigo, 2:28½; and Budd Doble (pacer).....	2:20½
Norfolk Belle—Abbot, sire of Kitty Abbot.....	2:26½

These two tables show how well the blood of Pilot Jr., through his son Tattler fitted in with the Mambrino Chief mares Young Portia, Norfolk Belle and Indiana. This last mare, Indiana, gave another proof of the value of this cross by producing to Pilot Jr. Pilot Mambrino, 2:35½, the sire of John Henry, 2:29½. Voltaire, the full brother of Figaro's dam, and Indianapolis (brother in blood to Voltaire and Emblem) were campaigners of great speed and endurance. Voltaire has a record of 2:20½, and if memory serves, trotted a sixth heat in 2:22. He was the victor in fifty-two heats in 2:30 or better. Indianapolis won a race at Buffalo, N. Y., on August 2, 1878, winning the first, third and fifth heats, and finishing second in the second and fourth heats. The time in the five heats was 2:23½, 2:21, 2:22½, 2:22½, 2:21½, Indianapolis trotting the last heat the fastest of those he won, and within three-quarters of a second of his best record, 2:21, which was made in the fourth heat of a race at Cleveland. Then Voltaire produced the pacer Bessemer, 2:15, and Indianapolis sired Indigo, 2:28½, and Budd Doble, pacer, 2:20½.

The successful combinations of these two great families would fill volumes; space only allows the following comparison of the breeding of the dams of several successful producers:

	No. of trotters in 2:30 list.	1st dam by	2nd dam by
Almont.....	21	Mambrino Chief	Pilot Jr.
Egmont.....	1	Pilot Jr.	Mambrino Chief.
Mambrino Wilkes	2	Son of Mam. Chief	Pilot Jr.
Nugget.....	2	Pilot Jr.	Mam. Chief.
Figaro.....		Son of Pilot Jr.	Mambrino Chief.

Of the above Almont has been dead for several years, Egmont is fifteen years of age, Mambrino Wilkes is fourteen, Nugget is ten and Figaro seven, all comparatively young horses of great promise, and good examples of the transmission of producing qualities from brood mares which combine the blood of Mambrino Chief and Pilot Jr.

Figaro is standard under rule 6, and will be registered in Vol. VIII., is powerfully and symmetrically built and trots in splendid form. He has no public record, but last year was driven by Mr. J. A. Dustin a third heat in 2:34 after but eight days training. Two weeks later he made a trial in 2:32½, but went wrong and did not start in the race for which he had been entered. His owner hopes to give him a record in 1889. The horse made his first season in 1887. The colts of this last spring are large, well shaped, and are mostly good lot-trotters. The most promising are from mares by Erwin Davis, son of Kentucky Hunter, and Patoben Vernon, son of Geo. M. Patchen Jr., 31. They will be heard from later.

Golden Gate Fair.

Whoever desired a finer afternoon than that which was apportioned for the opening of the Golden Gate Fair would be altogether of too exacting a nature. The first desideratum was sunshine and the grand luminary was doing his part. Sunshine may bring discomfort, and when the rays are too fervent there were prayers for friendly clouds to intervene. Then again there may be chilliness when the air currents come rapidly after being in contact with the crested waves, and these cooled by the stream which flows from the far north. But with temperature just right, the brilliant sunshine gave life and vigor, and brought the spirits to the right point for full enjoyment of the races. The track was in good shape, far better than could have been expected a few days ago, and excepting a few yards on the lower turn, which were a trifle soft, might be termed fast. Day and track good and with such renowned horses engaged it was nearly certain that there would be a large assemblage. Our estimate made a couple of weeks ago was not far from being right. Scarcely a seat in the stands unoccupied, carriages all along the outside fence and stationed in the field, while in the space between the track, stands and hotel was so crowded that it was difficult to work a passage through. The area in front of the pool-stand was thronged with an excited lot of speculators, and long before the hour fixed for the horses to be summoned, auctioneer and clerks were busily engaged. Lively betting. People from the Sunny South and those who had seen Stamboul in his great race with Arab at Los Angeles held him invincible, and were ready to post $100 on his chances against $40 for Guy Wilkes and $8 for Woodnut. The takers of the "short end" based their acceptance of the odds on the knowledge of what Guy Wilkes had done, and the fact that he was emphatically a "moneyed horse," and not a few who had so much confidence in the skill of Goldsmith as to offset the glamour of 2:15. Notwithstanding that Guy and Goldsmith had such staunch supporters the odds rather increased as the pool-selling progressed and many of the small bettors regarded the case so hopeless that to encourage them a mutual box was opened in which Stamboul was barred. This seemed to do a good share of the business, though in the other boxes there were tickets purchased on the outsiders.

Some of the shrewder waited for the warming up heat to obtain a line, and if anything, that increased the favoritism for Stamboul. He wound up the work by trotting the home-stretch in 34½ seconds, and appeared to do that with great deal of ease. It was the general remark that Guy moved with more ease than he showed in bygone years, and a select few put a few more dollars on him before the calling out bell rang. Woodnut seemed to be an unknown quantity. He looked well, and there were whisperings of what he had shown at Petaluma, and yet there was a sort of distrust, misgivings as to the part he would play.

THE STALLION RACE.

First Heat—Promptly they were called on time, and with equal promptitude the call was answered. Stamboul drew the pole, Woodnut second, Guy on the outside. The people within the enclosure were permitted to hang on the fence, and even horses attached to carriages were hitched to the posts. This seemed to trouble Stamboul, and he hung back when coming for the word, though at the first-attempt Wilkes broke, and at the second Stamboul followed the example, though at the third score the signal was given, Stamboul and Guy being nearly together, Woodnut two lengths in the rear. Before fifty yards were trotted Stamboul broke, a bad tangling break, which enabled Guy to take the pole at the commencement of the turn, and making good use of the advantage, sped along at a rapid pace. Woodnut was far in advance of Stamboul when a furlong was trotted, and at the quarter pole (34½ seconds) Guy led Woodnut at least four lengths, the latter being fully as far in front of Stamboul. Down the backstretch Guy increased his speed, the gap being longer between him and Woodnut, while Stamboul was closing rapidly on the second. Guy passed the half-mile mark in 1:07½, nearly six lengths in front of the others, which were almost parallel when passing the middle mark. Guy trotted fast, Stamboul still faster. He parted company with Woodnut, and the space between him and the leader was growing shorter and shorter. Before reaching the three-quarter pole Stamboul's head was on the wheel of Guy, at the head of the stretch it looked as though he was on even terms. Three-quarters in 1:42½, Guy having made the middle half in 1:08½, Stamboul must surely have trotted it in 1:07, and that strain was more than he could bear. Another bad break. Woodnut passed him. Walter took him in hand, and Guy keeping on the even tenor of his way, won the heat by six lengths from Woodnut, Stamboul dropping inside the short distance. Time 2:18.

The loss of the heat was so evidently caused by the two breaks, and Stamboul having clearly demonstrated that he had the "foot" of Guy, his supporters were still willing to put $100 on him to $60 on Guy and $12 on Woodnut. The expectation had been strong that very fast time would be made by Stamboul, and the loss of the heat did not have the effect to discourage his backers that would have followed a faster exhibit. Wholly owing to the break at the start by which he lost so much, was the reasoning, and that so generally concurred in as to sustain the prior favoritism.

The Second Heat.—There were six futile attempts to get off, the main cause of the delay being Woodnut's dilatoriness. A good start, however, was effected at the seventh score, and Stamboul going level and fast succeeded in taking the pole when a furlong had been covered. At that point Guy was a clear length behind, and at the quarter, which Stamboul made in 33½ seconds, he was two lengths behind, Woodnut six lengths in the rear of Guy. But the bay horse was trotting fast, closed on Stamboul so that when opposite the tank his head was at the latter's shoulder. After passing the bridge Stamboul drew away again and at the half, which Stamboul made in the fast time of 1:07, he had resumed the position held at the quarter. This he retained for a greater part of the way around the turn, and at the three-quarters, 1:42, he was still a couple of lengths to the front. Fairly in to the stretch, and the fancy sketch published in the paper of last Saturday is not far from being a correct representation. With one exception, and one only. In that the bay is made to break as he crosses the bridge which divides the homestretch into nearly two equal parts; in the real scene he does not leave his feet. But he is shortening the gap as he hears the winning score, and at the three in five distance he has still a chance for the heat. It proved a forlorn hope as, notwithstanding Goldsmith made every effort, Stamboul led him across the score by a few feet, Woodnut awsy back. Time 2:17.

Gny had made so good a fight that there was no depreciation in his stock, and against $110 on the favorite, $52.50 was banked on him, while Woodnut had still friends willing to risk $21 on his show. In all the pool-selling so far, the bidding had been brisk and there was little cessation in the work of the auctioneer and clerks.

The Third Heat—Four times they came up for the word but something was in the way of getting them off, though at the fifth, the start was remarkably good. Woodnut, perhaps had a trifle the best of it but could not retain it, and at the quarter in 34½ seconds Stamboul led Wilkes two lengths. The same relative positions were held at the half in 1:03½, and at the three-quarter mark in 1:44½, it was still Stamboul two lengths in front of Gny, ten between him and Woodnut. For a time it seemed as though there was to be a very close thing between the two, Wilkes broke at the bridge, caught quickly, came again faster than ever, but Stamboul would not be caught, crossing the score half a length in the lead of Guy, with Woodnut far in the rear. Time, 2:19½.

After that exhibition, Guy's backers lost heart in a measure, and it required a good deal of urging on the part of the auctioneer to obtain a few dollars against a "century" on the scion.

The Fourth Heat—Short time was occupied in scoring, and at the third trial they were sent off level. Midway of the first turn Stamboul broke, and as usual, that entailed a serious loss. But the pace was slow, the quarter occupying 36½ seconds, Wilkes four lengths in front. When a third of the way down the hacketretch Wilkes broke, losing more than is his custom, and when he reached the half in 1:11½, Stamboul had his head on the wheel of the leader. Neither had much speed in coming around the turn, Guy still leading by a couple of lengths at the head of the home tangent, and, in the effort to reduce it, Stamboul broke when opposite the seven furlong mark, Goldsmith kept Guy moving and the last quarter was made at a good rate, though the heat was no better than 2:24.

Still Stamboul ruled the roost, retaining his hold on the affection of the speculators so that they were willing to put up $50 on him to $15 on Guy and $4 on Woodnut. Some thought that Woodnut had a good chance, as it was palpably evident that Stamboul and Guy were tiring, neither being in condition to stand a strain of three such heats as were the first, second and third.

The very fast half mile which Stamboul trotted from the quarter to three-quarters in the first heat would have told on horse in the heat of order, and that could not be claimed for Stamboul, notwithstanding his race at Los Angeles was such a good effort. In his work a day or two previous to the race, he foamed and "lathered" wherever a strap touched him, which was not an indication of capacity to make five heats. Although Gny showed less disposition to profuse perspiration in his work, his exercise before coming to Oakland had been slow, and there was not time to remedy the defect. While he moved with greater ease than in former years, even action and speed must be accompanied by practice to ensure such an amount of endurance as three heats will inside of twenty require, and therefore it was not unreasonable to expect that Woodnut, who had not been called upon after the first heat, should enter a claim for the purse. But he was in the same boat evidently, as the winding up proved.

The Fifth Heat was anxiously watched. The drivers were intent on not losing an advantage, and that Mr. Holly was inspired by hopes of victory was apparent from the eagerness with which he took his position in front in scoring. The third move Woodnut was a length in the lead of the other two when the word was given, but this advantage was lost by a break when scarcely more than fifty yards away. Guy was on the inside, Stamboul level with him, until nearing the first furlong, when he had the best of the situation. But the advantage was of short duration. Just at a time when he appeared to have got in front enough to take the track, he broke, and at the quarter in 36 seconds Guy had three good lengths to his credit. At the half in 1:11 there was little change, though rounding the turn Stamboul closed a portion of the gap and his friends breathed more easily. Short was the relief. He broke, but made his best effort in that line of the day, and caught quickly. Goldsmith was not to be caught napping, however, as he did not permit Guy to slacken his efforts until he was close at home, and Stamboul's breaking again when opposite the distance the first stallion race of the series came to a close, Guy adding another bud to the garland emblematic of many victories. Time, 2:25.

The pacing race was called between the third and fourth heats of the stallion race, but the scoring was so prolonged that the time to summon the stallions expired, and they were sent from the track. After the fourth heat of the first race the pacers were recalled.

In the pools before the start Gold Leaf was a pronounced favorite, bringing $100. $50 on Linderman, Damiana, Little Hope, San Diego and Ned Winslow, grouped as "the field" $30.

First Heat—Little Hope had the pole, Tom Linderman second, Ned Winslow third, San Diego fourth, Damiana fifth and Gold Leaf outside.

At the quarter Ned Winslow was in the lead, closely followed by Gold Leaf, the others bunched, and hop, skipping and skiving and changing places at every jump.

At the half-mile pole Gold Leaf challenged Winslow and drove him to several running breaks, and on the turn took the lead and won the heat as she pleased, but beating her own record (2:20½), and again reducing the three-year-old pacing record to 2:19 1-5. Winslow was second, Tom Linderman third, San Diego fourth, Damiana fifth and Little Hope last.

Second Heat—Pools now sold: Gold Leaf $100, Linderman $40 and the field $15.

On the send-off Gold Leaf took the lead, closely followed by Linderman, the others strung out behind, and being "herded in" by Little Hope. At the head of the stretch Linderman got up within a length of Gold Leaf, and these positions were held to the draw-gate, where both drivers drew their whips, and drove as for their lives.

Ten lengths from the wire the little mare gave it up, and Linderman, under severe punishment, won the heat by the shortest of heads. Winslow was third, Damiana fourth, San Diego fifth and Little Hope again last. Time, 2:19.

Third Heat—Pools now chopped, and the Salt Lake horse was made the favorite at $100, while Gold Leaf brought $27.50 and the field $15. Gold Leaf went off very slow, and tangled up on the turn in a bad break, and Andy took her back and only drove to save his distance. Linderman and Winslow made a hard fight for the lead, about seven lengths ahead of the others, who were all strung out. These positions remained unchanged to the head of the stretch, when San Diego made play for the leaders, and all three came down the stretch together.

Just above the distance both Linderman and Winslow left their feet, and San Diego, coming fast on the outside, snatched the victory of the heat in the last jump by a head. Linderman was placed last for running, as his driver made no attempt to catch him after he broke on the stretch. Little Hope was second, Damiana third, Winslow fourth, Gold Leaf fifth. Time, 2:23½.

Fourth Heat—Pools: Linderman $50, Gold Leaf $24, field $19. Linderman was at a break when they were sent off, and made a standstill break on the turn and fell a distance out. Gold Leaf at once assumed the lead, and it was never disputed until the middle of the stretch, when Little Hope got so close that Andy was forced to draw his whip, and vigorously did he use it from there home, but to good purpose, as the little mare won the heat by a nose, San Diego third, Damiana fourth, Winslow fifth and Linderman, although he ran over a quarter of a mile, was let in and placed sixth by the judges for some unexplained reason. Time, 2:21½.

When the horses were called out for the next heat, Donathan was put up behind Linderman by the judge.

The pools now sold: Gold Leaf $50, Linderman $19, field $9.

Fifth Heat—Linderman made another break at the first turn, and fell twenty lengths behind. Gold Leaf took the lead and kept it to within ten lengths of the wire, when Little Hope came fast and beat her out by a length. San Diego third, Damiana fourth, Winslow fifth and Tom Linderman last. Time, 2:23½.

The pools again changed, and Gold Leaf became the favorite at $50 against $10 for Tom Linderman and $10 for the field.

Sixth Heat—Gold Leaf at once took the lead, and led until well down the stretch near home, when Little Hope came along, and after another driving and punishing finish beat her handily to the wire in the last fifty yards by three lengths, San Diego securing second place, Gold Leaf third and Tom Linderman distanced—the other two, Winslow and Damiana, having been sent to the stable as ruled out for not winning a beat in five. Time, 2:26.

It had now become dark, being after seven o'clock, and the finish of the race was postponed.

The postponement was considered a positive assurance that Gold Leaf would win, though such a strain as six heats on a three-year-old filly was enough to lay an ordinary youngster up for a week at least.

Promptly at 1 o'clock the horses were called out for the unfinished race of yesterday, the 2:27 pacing class, for a purse of $700.

In the pools the mare sold for $50 against $8 for Little Hope and San Diego as the field, and these odds proved correct, for immediately on the send-off Gold Leaf took the lead and was never headed, winning the heat, race and first money, San Diego second and third money, and Little Hope third and second money. Time, 2:20.

This was the most wonderful performance ever made by a three-year-old pacer, as the time of the seven heats will show.

SECOND DAY.

The second day of the Golden Gate Fair was allotted to racing, and an enjoyable day it proved to all but the losers. The afternoon was if anything pleasanter than its predecessor, and the track in good order. The attendance was up to the usual mark of a second day, though after the large concourse, which the fame of the trotting stallions attracted, it appeared below what it really was.

The first race was the Introductory Stake for two-year-olds, a dash of three-quarters, in which were twelve nominations, five of which came to the post. According to one of the advertised conditions, all races of three-quarters of a mile were to be started from some sort of a "patent chute." Looking across the track it appeared a conglomeration of canvas, ropes, posts, etc., and for some time before the start a gang of men were at work preparing it for action. From the flapping of the canvas in the wind it did not seem a favorable place for a lot of two-year-olds, and according to the following account, cut from one of the daily papers, it can hardly be called a success:

The first trial of "Finigan's chute," which was only a piece of canvas to separate the horses, proved that in its adoption it was wrong on the part of the Directors, for on the first attempt Bessie Shannon tore her mouth so badly on one of the guy ropes that she not only lost the race, but will be laid up for the season. Jack Pot, whose chances as a field horse were very favorable, got tangled in the canvas and tore it to pieces, so that when the start was made there was no "Finigan chute" between him and Bessie Shannon.

Don Jose was largely the favorite with the bettors. He would bring $100, to $15 on Lady Helen, $13 on Bessie Shannon, and $13 on Jack Pot and Naicho B coupled.

The start was delayed for some time, and when they were sent off Don Jose had slightly the advantage, and from that time until the finish there is little to describe. He ran in the lead, and at no time was any of them close enough to jeopardize his chances, Lady Helen finishing within a length of him, Jack Pot that much in the rear of her.

Time, 1:16½.

The next race was the Pardee Stake for three-year-olds, one mile, in which were eight nominations, four of which answered the call to saddle. These were Leon, a prime favorite in the pools bringing $100, Heliotrope $42 50, Welcome $37.50 and Sid $10. Notwithstanding the high favor in which Leon was held, the others received hearty support. Rumors were rife that Heliotrope was likely to run quite close to the best time ever made on the Coast, Welcome had shown well and the victories of Sid in the spring were recalled.

There was little delay at the post and when the flag fell all were close together and each one in motion. Sid was the quickest to get away and he held a decided lead when the first furlong was covered. He led past the quarter, the others bunched, and when half way down the back stretch he had not surrendered his advantage. But on rounding the northern turn all were together, and at the head of the stretch the probable winner could only be surmised. The favorite was in a good position, so were Heliotrope and Welcome, Sid was out of the heat. Down the stretch they came merrily, Welcome leading a trifle when within one hundred yards of home and at the winning score she had a good length to her credit. It was a very pretty fight for second place between Leon and Heliotrope, the former getting it by a short neck.

SUMMARY.

Pardee Stake—For three-year-olds; $50 entrance, half forfeit; $400 added; $100 to second; $50 third. Horses who have not won in 1888 a purse amounting to $300, or over, allowed five pounds; maidens allowed ten pounds. One mile.

Time 1:43½.

The third race proved to be the biggest betting affair of the meeting. From the time the first pool was sold till the horses were marshalled at the starting post, there was rapid work on the part of sellers and buyers. In response to "how much for first choice?" would come $100, and with five dollar raises until $200 or over would be the figure, and the second choice likely to bring more than the first. Thousands of dollars must have been posted, and this came from one of the contestants, Sleepy Dick, having won a very fast race at Los Angeles, the same distance, and his main competitor, Lida Ferguson, was known to be very fast. There were queer features, too, but "ebort horses" are always provocative of suspicions, and as the ruling had also a queer aspect the suspicions were strengthened.

Heats of half a mile for all ages, under the title of the Contra Costa Stake, was the event with Sleepy Dick, Lida Ferguson, Johnny Gray and Kildare the starters. As stated before, the pools ran high, none less than $200, some of them over $400. There was the usual delay at the post, Lida being averse to turning her head in the direction in which she was to run until she had the advantage. In the actual start, however, Johnny Gray had the "bnlge" and making good use of his heels, led for rather more than a furlong, though at the commencement of the straight run home the two favorites were in advance. Both are very fast horses, and the clatter of their hoofs came with a quick rattle as they neared the stand. The rider of the mare was urging her along, the jockey on the horse sitting in comparative quiet. It looked as though a rider like Murphy, Hamilton, Garrison or some of our California artists could have nstled the short neck he was beaten by, out of him in the last few strides; but, perhaps, the prefix to his name precludes the art of the jock being effective and he was really doing his best. At all events, the time was lively if the riding was slow, and 48½ seconds the verdict of the watches, which was practically the record for both; Jonny Gray a fair third, Kildare, who had the worst of the start, some distance behind.

About the only betting after the heat, was on the part of those who desired to "hedge" and per contra the lucky ones who thought it safest to place themselves on "velvet." Lida brought $200, Sleepy Dick $50, the field $30. The second heat differed from the first by Lida taking the lead at the start and never surrendering it and the rider of Diok wakening up when it was an impossibility for him to win. Fast again, 49 seconds.

Time, 0:48½-0:49.

The last race of the day elicited encomiums from all. Losers joined in the favorable comments, and the recollections of dollars gone were sweetened by the knowledge that they had not only been vouchsafed a good run for their money, but also enjoyed the pleasure of witnessing one of the best races of this or any other year.

Although the favorite won, the third choice was second and a fielder third. The race was for a purse of $300, with eleven starters, and the starting was a novelty. Several months ago C. S. Crittenden explained to us a new plan he had for starting racehorses, and from that explanation we were satisfied that it was meritorious. Simple enough, merely holding a strap or rope across the track in front of the horses, to be lowered when the starter gave the signal. By vibrating the rein the horses were deterred from breaking away, and when that happened, the instant it was struck, fell harmless to the ground. In this case the men who held the reins were stationed forty yards from the post, and though one of the horses, Spray, was as troublesome as is usually met, there was only a short delay and a capital start the result. A stripe of white webbing would be an improvement.

Away they went, so close together that it was impossible to separate them at any point. All in a jumble around the turn, puddled together as they swept down the backstretch, excepting that two were far behind. The crushed strawberry was among the leaders, part of the time distinctly in advance, but the brown under it showed that it was not on the favorite. She was about midway of the neck, and when making the further semi-circle it seemed that Lanra Gardner, who carried so much money, could not get through in time to overtake the first flight. Idalene Cotton was first to reach the straight, the white and blue hoops on Applause were within striking distance. Half a dozen for that matter were in a position which was emblematic of victory, but as they neared the goal Lanra came with a rush, wresting the laurels from Idalene, Applause a good third.

THIRD DAY.

The main feature of the third day was the three-year-old trot, and this was blasted by the lameness of Direct and Memo. There are some who hold Grandee to be the peer of any colt of the age which has yet appeared, and after Direct made so good a fight with him at Petaluma, not a few good judges claimed that the son of Director and Echora was his equal. Memo showed phenomenal speed in his work before going wrong, so that the contest would have been watched with great interest. We have heretofore presented our estimate of Grande, and after making due allowance for favoritism, inspired by his being a grandson of Nourmahal, that estimate is not far out of the way. Still we hold the opinion that he will be better as he grows older, and when fully matured prove one of the great guns of the track.

The 2:40 class resulted, however, in a good race. Good from every point of view, even the distancing of the favorite lending additional interest. Steve Whipple is one of these unfortunates to which a break means certain discomfiture, and it was an exasperating sight to his backers to witness his hand gallop on the backstretch, while the other horses were nearing the three-quarter pole. That it was well fought all through is evident when the synopsis is consulted, four heats in exactly the same time, and the fifth only two seconds slower. The winner, Ben Ali, Sonnet and Duhec, proved that they were sure enough trotters. Ben came again when it seemed he was beaten; until Sonnet showed lameness she looked like a winner, and the four-year-old Dubeo grew better, and better as the battle progressed, and could he have gained the fifth heat there would have been plenty of backers. The time and placing will be found in the

FOURTH DAY.

Although the morning was somewhat gloomy, by the time the races were called the clouds had broken up so that the sunshine came through pleasantly, the breeze toned down to moderation.

The special race was soon concluded. Not winning in two heats. By the time the three-quarters of a mile dash was called, there was a fine attendance, and though behind that of Monday, the assemblage thronged the stands, and the space between the track, club-house and stands,

The first race was a dash of three-quarters, with even starters. These were Applause, Welcome, Idalene Cotton, which in the pools sold as the field for $100. Daisy S. was the next choice at $75, Edelweiss $55 and Notidle $45. The betting was lively, field and individuals finding warm support. The start was fair, Notidle having the last position as they came out of the chute, and so far behind that she ran in the rear until reaching the turn. Taking the outside Notidle bettered her position so that when she entered the stretch was among the first. The others were so closely hunched that about all that could be told was that Applause and Daisy S. won among the leaders. The run down the stretch was exciting to a degree. The last one hundred yards it was a struggle between Notidle and Applause, the latter winning by a head, Daisy S. third, in the good time of 1:15½.

Time, 1:15½.

The second race was a dash of one and one-quarter miles with only two starters, Canny Scott and Leon. At the first opening of the pool sales there was little difference, each having friends willing to shake dollars against dollars, but towards the close Canny Scott was the favorite at 2 to 1.

The race requires a brief description. Leon took the lead at the dropping of the flag, keeping two lengths in front all of the time, and though Canny Scott closed on the back stretch, Leon shook him off with little trouble and won by three lengths in 2:10.

The first quarter was run in 26½ seconds, the half in 53, the last mile in 1:43½.

It was so generally conceded that Don Jose had the best of it in the two-year-old race that he brought $130 to $33 on Lady Helen and $21 on the field Naicho B. and Jack Pot. As in the preceding races the betting was brisk, there being a general tendency to take the odds. Foolish notion, for though Lady Helen made a good run, Don Jose held the race at his command, winning in a gallop by half a length in 1:30, very good time for the weights, Don Jose carrying 118 pounds, the lowest his rider could scale, Lady Helen 112, Jack Pot 114, Naicho B. 112.

Time 1:30.

The concluding race of the day was heats of three-quarters of a mile. Lanra Gardner installed favorite at $110; Daisy D. second choice at $52.50, Susie S. $35 and the field, Fusilade's Last, Elwood, Heliotrope and Oro, $26. This was another lively affair for the speculators. Heaps of coin and its equivalent going into the box. Lanra Gardner had fairly earned the premiership, and Daisy D. had friends who thought that even her efforts in the first race had not diminished her chances, Edelweiss has always hacking, and there are some who stick to the old adage that the field is always a good horse.

There were several breakaways, the favorite being always in a good position, and when the flag fell she was first off. The others were not far behind and when the turn was reached five of them were so closely together that about all that could be told was that the crushed strawberry and white dotted jackets were in the front rank. Well towards the close of the heat the two came away from the others, and a lively tippie it was which should reach score first. Daisy gained it by a neck and there was a shout of approval from those which had the courage to back the daughter of Charley and Black Maria. Heliotrope was third, Fusilade's Last fourth, Elwood fifth, Susie S. sixth, Oro last. Time 1:15½.

The betting after the heat showed equal favoritism between Laura Gardner and Daisy D. $100 each, the field thought so little of as to sell for $25. Occasionally Laura would sell for $150 to $100 on the other.

Again, Laura had a good start and she led the way at a merry pace, a clear length in the lead as the half mile post was passed. There was such a mixing up around the turn that it was difficult to place them with any degree of accuracy, though Laura had lost some of her advantage and was closely pressed by two or three, which could not be separated. But close to the rails a big chestnut, with blaze face, was striding along. At the trotting distance he was on even terms, and he swept under the wire a good length in front of Daisy D, Laura Gardner third, Heliotrope next, the others scattering. Time, 1:15.

The victory of Elwood raised a huge commotion. The big bettors were in a maze, and as will be learned from the recital of the concluding heat, got into a worse place than before. The big money on Laura was irretrievably lost unless a part of it could be prized out by backing the winner. Under the rules all save Daisy D, and Elwood had to retire, and if he could win a second heat in 1:15 it seemed that his high breeding should carry him safely through the third ordeal. Two hundred on Elwood, seventy on Daisy D, and more buyers than takers of the odds. The glorious uncertainty once more prevailed, as Daisy D. won the deciding heat in 1:16½, a grand race for the fielders, dismay to the heavy speculators.

The mutuels paid $131 on Elwood for a place.

The Rational Horseshoe.

We have for years advocated the necessity of allowing the horse's foot to do what nature intended it should—namely, come in actual contact with the ground, instead of, as in ordinary shoeing, being kept entirely away from it, and with horses that have to draw loads a long way from it by having to wear thick shoes clogged up at the heels, producing contraction and navicular disease. We have long thought that some adaptation of the "Charlier" system could be introduced, and this has been happily effected by Mr. W. South, the well-known M. R. C. V. S., of 40 New Bond Street, who has invented what he calls—and properly so, too—"the Rational Shoe." Instead of a rim of iron enclosing the whole of the hoof, the "Charlier" was designed to fit the fore part of the foot only, and tapered off towards the heel. The frog was thus made to get a grip of the ground, a distinct improvement upon the old plan, which prevented its natural use altogether. A grave objection to this method of shoeing is, however, in the fact that it throws the foot out of its proper balance, the fore part being raised by the thickness of the plate. Each time the hoof is put down it is at a wrong angle, and the tendons are strained in a similar manner to that caused in the human leg when high heeled boots are worn. The "Rational" shoe, writes an English exchange, entirely obviates that difficulty, and enables the frog and heel to be brought into natural healthy use, the hoof being put down flat on the sole. Does not the foot wear away, the reader will probably ask? It does quickly, and is as quickly replenished; the growth of the horn and the frog is very rapid, and the foot, instead of being in an unnatural position, and, therefore, more or less unsound, is in a healthy state, and the circulation through the intricate series of veins which extend through the foot renews the growth as quickly as it is worn away. We have lately seen horses who have been working for years shod on this system with the most perfect feet. The shoe is made of specially prepared steel bars, varying in thickness from 3/16 in to 1/4 in, according to the size of the horse, and fits the front half of the hoof only. A groove is cut in the edge of the hoof to the shape of the shoe, so that the plate fits in exactly flush with the wall and with the sole. The horse is thus able to place the foot down flat in the natural way, the front rim of the hoof being protected by a steel shoe against the friction of hard wear on the road, and the whole of the natural frog and the sole is brought into use. The footing thus secured is perfectly safe on the most slippery roads, as the frog affords a hold superior to all artificial pads of indiarubber or ronghing. Navicular disease and contracted feet are perfectly unknown, and the sole becomes firm and tough. Shoeing on the "Rational" system can be done by any shoeing smith, all necessary instructions, together with complete sets of shoes, of steel bars for making them, and knives for cutting the grooves, being supplied by the inventors. And we strongly advise our reader to see that these instructions are carried out under their own eyes, as we know, particularly in the country, how prejudiced farriers are in favor of the old method. We are fully convinced, when this system is generally adopted, as it must be, the painful sights which are of daily and hourly occurrence, of horses slipping up on asphalt and wooden pavement, will be almost, is not wholly, prevented.—Melbourne Sportsman July 20, 1888.

Horse Scraps.

At the Rockaway Steeplechase Association, New York, race August 27th, Foxhall Keene, son of James R. Keene, won all four of the races on the flat riding against professional and gentlemen jockeys. He also won three races over the same course last Friday and one on Saturday, the best record of any jockey for the meeting.

At the ranch of Mrs. Davis, near Lincoln, a few days since, it was discovered that a valuable horse in some unaccountable way had sustained a frightful injury, says the Sacramento Bee. There was a deep wound almost directly between the horse's eyes, and it was at first thought that he had been shot. The animal was brought to this city, however, and put in charge of a veterinary surgeon, who probed the wound and ascertained that the opening was caused by some hard substance. When the horse's mouth was opened it was found that the object producing the injury had penetrated so deep that it formed a lump in the upper roof of the jaw. The surgeon proceeded to make an incision at the surface of the wound and then inserted a pair of forceps, with which he took a firm hold of the hard object. By exerting all his strength the surgeon was able to extract a piece of wood over six inches in length and nearly an inch in thickness.

It was deemed certain that the injury would prove fatal, but it was decided to make an effort to save the animal. The piece of wood, the surgeon says, did not miss the animal's brain the sixteenth of an inch. The wound was opened in the horse's mouth that all of the pus might flow therefrom, and the wound was washed out regularly and is healing nicely. The horse submits to the treatment without objection and almost human intelligence. It is now assured that the animal will recover, with no further damage than the loss of an eye—a result regarded by horsemen as extremely remarkable. It is not known how the injury was received, but it is believed that the horse while at play ran violently against a projecting board.

Saratoga Races.

SARATOGA, Aug. 21.—It was very cloudy here to-day, although the attendance at the races was large. The several events were all well contested and especially was this so in the fourth race, which was won by Belle d'Or by a head, Leo H. second, half a length before Clay Stockton, third. Kingston captured the Beverwyck Stakes easily and without urging, Murphy having his hands down. It was a good day for the talent, as four out of five favorites won, and Vosburg, the second choice in the second race, caught the judges' eye first. The track was fast. Following are the details:

First Race—The Misses' Stakes; for fillies 2 years old; $50 each, h. f. with $750 added; the second filly to receive $100, and the third $75 out of the stakes; to carry 100 pounds; winner of any race of the value of $1,000 to carry 4 pounds extra; of two or more such races 7 pounds extra; maidens allowed 5 pounds. Three-quarters of a mile. Excelsior Stable's b. f. Gipsy Queen, by Rayon d'Or—Liahtunah, 107. Melbourne Stable's b. f. The Lioness, by Billet—Vega, 107. R. Pryor & Co.'s b. f. Daisy Woodruff, by Bramble—Daisy Hoey, 95. L. E. Simmons' b. f. Queen of Trumps, by The Ill Used—Nellie James, 100. B. F. Pettitt's b. f. Miss Flood, by Harry O'Fallon—Jennie Flood, 103. S. Bryant's b. f. Bonnie Bounce, by Long Tow—Bounce, 95. Castle Stable's chestnut filly, by Reform—Madge, 100. Time 1:17.

Pools—Gipsy Queen barred, The Lioness $25, field $25. Betting—5 to 2 on Gipsy Queen, 9 to 2 against The Lioness, 20 to 1 each Daisy Woodruff and Queen of Trumps, 25 to 1 Miss Flood, 40 to 1 Bonnie Bounce, 60 to 1 Madge filly. Place—Gipsy Queen barred, 5 to 3 on The Lioness, 3 to 1 against Queen of Trumps, 4 to 1 Daisy Woodruff, 6 to 1 Miss Flood, 8 to 1 Bonnie Bounce, 12 to 1 Madge filly. Mutuels paid $6.70.

To a good start the Madge filly showed in front, but before reaching the end of the chute The Lioness took the lead, a length before Gipsy Queen, who was running under a pull. In the stretch the latter was let out, and coming on she won by a length, The Lioness second, half a length before Daisy Woodruff.

Second Race—Free handicap sweepstakes of $20 each, if not declared out, with $500 added, of which $100 to the second horse; entries to be made by 4 p. m. on Saturday, Aug. 18; weights to be announced by 11 a. m., and declarations to be made by 4 p. m. on Monday, Aug. 20. One mile and a sixteenth.

O. Bowie's ch. g. Vosburg, 4, by Vassal—Australia, 92. Oasler Chicago Stable's ch. g. Santalene, 3, by St. Martin or Harry O'Fallon—Ollena, 97. E. J. Baldwin's b. m. Burch's b. g. Pasha, 5, by Saxon—Papoose, 107. Time, 1:49.

Pools: Daruna $14, Mollie's Last $13, field $25. Betting: 2 to 1 against Daruna, 3 to 1 Mollie's Last, 4 to 1 Vosburg, 5 to 1 Santalene, 7 to 1 Elmira, 10 to 1 Pasha. Place: 10 to 7 each on Daruna and Mollie's Last, 6 to 5 against Vosburg, 8 to 5 Santalene, 2 to 1 Elmira, 3 to 1 Pasha. Mutuels paid $9.50.

Vosburg made the pace under a pull to the turn, where he led Daruna two lengths, the others well up. In the stretch all were whipping, but they could not catch Vosburg, who won by half a length, Santalene second, two before Mollie's Last, third.

Third Race—The Beverwyck Stakes. A sweepstakes for all ages; $50 each, horse forfeit, with $1,000 added by Hon. M. N. Nolan, proprietor of the Beverwyck brewery; the second horse to receive $250, and the third $100 out of the stakes; winner, this year, when carrying weight for age or more, of any two races of the value of $1,500 each, to carry five pounds extra; horses not having won this year a race of the value of $1,000, nor two or more races of any value other than selling races since June 1st, allowed 7 pounds; those not having won a race this year, selling races excepted, allowed 14 pounds; maidens, four years old or upward, allowed 20 pounds. One mile and 500 yards.

Dwyer Bros.' br. c. Kingston, 4, by Spendthrift—Kapanga, 118 lbs. T. H. Stevens' h. f. Wary, 4, by Warwick—Mary Anderson, 113 lbs. Chicago Stable's ch. h. Terra Cotta, 4, by Harry O'Fallon—My Maryland, 123. E. J. Baldwin's b. f. Grisette, 4, by Glenelg—Malta, 113. Time, 2:13.

Pools: Kingston $100, field $41. Betting: 2 to 1 on Kingston, 6 to 1 against Wary, 7 to 1 Terra Cotta, 8 to 1 Grisette.

Place: Nothing against Kingston, 9 to 5 Terra Cotta, even money Wary, 2 to 1 against Grisette. Mutuels paid $7.40. Terra Cotta led to the stand, where Grisette showed in front, with Wary second, Kingston being under a pull. At the turn the latter and Terra Cotta began to move up, and Kingston led into the stretch and won without urging, Wary second, a length before Terra Cotta.

Fourth Race—Purse $400; entrance money $15 each, to second horse; for horses three years old and upward, beaten at Saratoga this season, and not having won a race since July 15; weights 5 pounds below the scale; those not having won a race since May 1 allowed 7 pounds; those not having won a race this year, allowed, if 3 years old, 10 pounds, if 4 years, 14 pounds; if 5 years or upward, 20 pounds. Three-quarters of a mile.

O. Bowie's ch. f. Belle d'Or, 3, by Rayon d'Or—Belle Meade, 101. D. A. Honig's br. f. Leo H. 3, by Rapture—Carrie Watson, 101. M. N. Nolan's b. f. Clay Stockton, 6, by Longfellow—Lida Gaines, 91. Pools—Leo H. $40, Belle d'Or $20, field $25. Betting—6 to 5 against Leo H., 4 to 1 Belle d'Or, 7 to 1 each Royal Arch, Boccaccio, Della and Clay Stockton, 10 to 1 Harry Glenn, 12 to 1 Dynamite, 15 to 1 Elgin. Place—5 to 3 on Leo H., 8 to 5 against Belle d'Or, 3 to 1 each Clay Stockton, Della and Boccaccio, 3 to 1 Harry Glenn and Royal Arch, 4 to 1 Dynamite, 5 to 1 Elgin. Mutuels paid $11.40.

Leo H. and Belle d'Or got a little the best of a good start, Leo H. cutting out the work. In the stretch all were whipping, but Williams, on Belle d'Or, obtained the verdict by a head; Leo H. second, half a length before Clay Stockton, third.

Fifth Race—Free handicap steeplechase, purse $450, of which $100 to the second horse; entrance free; entries, announcement of weight and declarations as for above handicap. Fractional course, No. 2, about one mile and a half.

M. T. Downing's ch. g. Killarney, a, by Orion—Young Utilla, 139. P. Gorman & Co.'s b. g. Beechmore, a, by Creedmoor—Manda, 144. H. Bradley's h. g. Nat Goodwin, 4, by Uncle—Tattoo, 127. Newman & Loughlin's ch. h. Abraham, a, by Milesian—Elastic, 155. Time 2:54.

Pools—Killarney $30, field $25. Betting—7 to 5 each against Beechmore and Killarney, 5 to 1 Abraham, 8 to 1 Nat Goodwin. Place—3 to 1 on Beechmore, 5 to 2 Killarney, even against Abraham, 2 to 1 Nat Goodwin. Mutuels paid $9.30.

Abraham led at the start, but was quickly passed by Beechmore and Killarney, the race being between the two last named. Killarney won by two lengths, Beechmore second, Nat Goodwin third.

Saratoga, August 22d.—The track to-day resembled a quagmire, and the thoroughbred in splashing through the mud so generously besmeared their riders that it was difficult to tell the colors of the rear horses as they passed the half. The sport, however, was good, and the races in many instances were well contested. Owing to the dark and gathering clouds the attendance was only fair. Outsiders had a field day, as not one of the five favorites caught the judges' eyes first. The surprise of the day was the fourth race, in which Rebellion came home a winner by three lengths before the favorite, King Crab. The details follow:

First Race—Purse $300, of which $50 to second horse; for two-year-olds; penalties and allowances. Five furlongs.

Pools—Chandler $14, Skip $10, Juanita colt $8, field $25. Betting—5 to 2 against Chandler, 5 to 1 Skip, 6 to 1 each Chestnut Belle, Victress and Cartoon, 7 to 1 May W, 8 to 1 Carlton, 10 to 1 each Laborer, The Raven, Navigator, Fiddlehead and Juanita colt. Place—6 to 5 against Chandler, 2 to 1 each Skip, Chestnut Belle, Victress and Cartoon, 5 to 2 May W, 3 to 1 Carlton, 4 to 1 each Juanita colt, Fiddlehead, Navigator, The Raven and Laborer, 6 to 1 Penman, 8 to 1 Althea colt. Mutuels paid $7.10.

Cartoon got away first and led to the lower turn. Here Victress and Chandler were given the whip, but they could not catch the leader, and Cartoon won by two lengths, Chandler second, three lengths before Fiddlehead, third.

Second Race—Purse $300, of which $50 to second horse; for three-year-olds; penalties and allowances. One mile.

Place—5 to 3 each on Bonnie S. and Pee Weep, 2 to 1 each James A. II, Ten Doy and Argo, 12 to 2 each Countess and Littrell. Mutuels paid $10.

Bonnie S., James A. II. and Ten Doy got away on nearly even terms, but at the stand James A. II. was in front. These positions were maintained until the head of the stretch, where Ten Doy forged in front and won by two lengths, Bonnie S. second, two lengths before Pee Weep.

Fourth Race—Purse $450, of which $100 to second horse; for all ages; penalties and allowances. Six furlongs.

SARATOGA, N. Y., Aug. 24.—Clear, breezy weather and one of the best extra cards of the meeting drew a large crowd to the track to-day. The several events had about the most evenly matched field of the meeting and the talent had hard work to pick the winners. Not a single post favorite got home first, except in the last event over hurdles, but as all the other winners were second and third choice the book-makers were hardly winners on the day. Gov. Bowie was not in the judge's stand to-day, but the other officials, Messrs. Owens, Kernaghan and Surget again failed to please the crowd in the second race, which they gave to King Crab, most people thinking Von Trump was the winner. Letretia's running in this race gave rise to much unfavorable comment, as, instead of going out in front, as has been done with her in her late winning races here, she was taken back and waited, failing to get up in the stretch. She was the favorite at the start, King Crab second choice, and Von Trump next, the latter taking the lead on the first turn and leading all the way round. In the stretch Von Trump appeared to have the race in hand, his jockey eased up, watching Letretia and Wynwood. King Crab, however, shot up fast next the mile, and the judges decided that he had beaten Von Trump, though most people thought the other way. Letretia was a fair third, a neck from Wynwood.

With eleven starters in the first race, most of the betting was between Little Minnie, Clay Stockton and Spinnette, and they were backed in that order. Clay Stockton, however, had four pounds over, and Ossler was weak from having to reduce. That shifty and uncertain mare, Spinnette, won with consummate ease. Clay Stockton got away and piloted the party to the stretch, where Winchell brought up Spinnette on the outside and had the race safe at the betting stands. She won in a gallop by two lengths from Little Minnie, who beat Clay Stockton as far. As the track was fully two seconds slow from the recent rains, the time, 1:17, was very fast.

Twelve maiden two-year-olds started in the third race, Pryor's Daisy Woodruff the favorite. The same stable had Navigator in the race at a long price in the betting, and putting up Covington they brought off a neat colt. After Daisy Woodruff and Carlton had led to the stretch, Covington brought up Navigator and won by half a length from his stable companion, Daisy Woodruff, who beat Carlton two lengths. The winner was a fifteen-to-one shot. Baldwin's Rosebud run well in the stretch after getting away badly and being pocketed; she was fourth.

Bettors were rather at sea in the fourth event, but Mirth was a trifle the favorite, with Perkins second choice and Pocatelle next in favor. Nettle, Mint Bloom and Perkins alternated in the lead to the half, where Perkins took a decided lead and looked the winner in the stretch. Then, however, he tired badly and Pocatelle and Mirth both headed him. The boy on the latter waited too long and should have won. Nettle ran fairly well.

Lucky Baldwin made a pot on the hurdle race. He and his friends backed his horses, Voltigeur and Lijero, heavily, the former to win and the latter for a place, and they finished that way. Percy was the only one to race with them, and he finished a close third. His jockey claimed a foul after the race, but did not get it.

All the Dwyers' horses leave here to-morrow for Sheephead Bay.

Among the spectators of the racing to-day were James W. Gnest, of Kentucky, the former owner of Terra Cotta, and S. Montgomery, vice-president of the Memphis Jockey Club.

How a Great Race was Won.

The Florin City Stake was for horses that had never beaten 2:30 at the time the entries to the event closed, and it was a stake only in form, as the Rochester Association, over whose track the race was to be trotted, guaranteed that it should be worth $10,000, no more and no less, the money to be divided in the usual manner, fifty per cent. to the winner, twenty-five per cent. to the second horse, fifteen per cent. to the third, and ten to the fourth. Of course when the names of the men who had bought nominations in the stake were made known many months ago, a pretty fair idea could be gleaned of what animals they intended to start, because no man undertook to pay $250 cash in the winter, $250 more early in the spring, and then plank down $500 more to start his horse unless he had one in hand that had shown him close to 2:20. But there were such a tremendous lot of nominations subscribed for, that it was at once evident that the Association was sure to get the purse back in entrance fees alone, and that this was true is shown by the fact that when the bell rang for the race last Tuesday no less than eighteen horses came to the wire, the purse being thus at once made good. It was the grandest lot of trotters ever seen in one race, and the average speed of the contestants, as developed in the previous races, was phenomenal. At the top of the ladder in this regard was the little black gelding, Guy, that after a rest of a year had come out in better humor with himself and the world in general than ever before, and under the careful management of Millard Saunders the son of Kentucky Prince had been taught to behave reasonably well in scoring, so long as the field was a small one, and had won creditable races at Detroit, Cleveland, and Buffalo, making a record of 2:14½ at the last-named place in a race against Prince Wilkes, a horse that he should have beaten at Detroit when the pair met there.

Of course there was nothing in the Rochester race that could compare with little Guy, so far as speed went, but the critics were sure he would not act well in a big field, and that by reason of this fact he would be asked to expend his speed energy in overcoming gaps caused by his refusal to get away in his proper place and in line with the others, because it was folly to suppose that the interests of every other horse in the race were to be sacrificed in order that Guy might have a good start, as was the case at Detroit when he distanced the field in the three-minute race. At Rochester there was far too much attention paid to Guy, although the judges had been warned by the owners and drivers of the other horses that it was unfair to allow one horse to frustrate the efforts of a dozen others, all of whom were anxious to effect a good start. To bring to the wire a good horse that has been taught to score properly is as much the business and duty of the driver as it is to bring one that goes on a trot instead of a run, and it is a rank injustice to other horses in the race, and to their owners, that any attention be paid to a confirmed bad actor like Guy, other than to give him a reasonable opportunity to score up with the other horses. Any other practice is positively wrong, and should not be tolerated. There are plenty of trotters in every class that can and do act well, and it is to these animals that the public must look for amusement. It is also this class of horses that furnish ninety-nine entries out of every one hundred that are made.

In the first heat at Rochester Yorktown Belle, the mare that Jack Phillips has done so well with this season, had a trifle the best of the start. Newton B., that was reckoned a sure starter, was drawn at the last moment on account of sickness, and it was lucky for the others that he was thus kept out of the fight, as barring Guy there was not a trotter in the party that had a chance to beat him, either for speed or staying qualities, as he can beat 2:20 all the time, and his rush down the home-stretch is simply electrical. But with Newton B. out of the way Yorktown Belle went away in great shape for the first mile, and for seven-eighths of the distance she and Geneva S. had a rattling fight for the lead, but the five-year-old outlasted the Belle a little and won by something more than a length. It was a tame finish for a race where the purse was $10,000, but it has always been the experience of track managers that when fifteen or more horses start in a race the cumbrousness of the lot effectually prevents anything like a fair start for all of the horses and almost invariably results in finishes which lack the elements of closeness and quality.

After the disappointment at the straggling start in the first heat at Rochester, and the still more straggling finish had subsided, the people waited for the announcement of the time, supposing that it must be very fast, but the distance was only done in 2:22½, and the clip was a steady, rating one all the way, none of the quarters being trotted in phenomenal time. Guy had got away six or seven lengths ahead of Yorktown Belle, and as the other boys were not in any hurry to let Saunders through, he stayed well to the rear until the homestretch was reached, by which time the great field was pretty well scattered, and by dint of going a long mile Guy managed to finish sixth. He did even better than this in the second heat, and because he had acted so well in the first mile, never offering to break, there was plenty of support for him, and he sold even with the field as fast as the pools could be written out. This time he got a good start, being under full headway when the word was given, and those who have seen him go are well aware what this means. He went through the others as if they were tied to the fence, was in front at the half-mile pole, and from that point to the wire there was simply a procession of horses with a little black one far in the lead. Guy won handily enough in 2:18½, and was then a tremendous favorite. But it was now that Budd Doble and the gallant gray gelding Jack came to the front. Jack had finished well up in the previous heats, being third in the first and fifth in the second, and this gave him a place in the front rank of horses when the word for the third heat was given. Guy had been on his bad behavior again, and seeing him on a trot the judges finally gave the word, although he was not in his place. In trying to get out of the pocket Guy broke, and was lucky not to be distanced, so far behind did he fall before striking a trot. Then Saunders foolishly took a good deal out of him by a hard drive all the way to the wire, finishing fourth. In the meantime Jack had beaten Geneva S. and Mount Morris, after a pretty tight struggle on the home-stretch, winning by half a length in 2:20½, which lowered his record a couple of seconds. The long brush at the finish of this heat had cooked Guy's mutton, and in the fourth heat he made a break which looked very like a tired one, and it is no wonder that the little fellow gave in at last, for he had been horribly butchered. Jack won the fourth heat easily in 2:20½, Geneva S. being his only competitor during the entire mile, Guy making another break and in general behaving badly. The little black and the little gray came together in good earnest during the fifth heat. Guy got a scudding start on the outside, having finished in sixth position the previous heat, and so well did Saunders take advantage of this fact that by the time the quarter-pole was reached he was in the lead, and at the half there were two lengths of daylight between the pair.

Of course everybody thought the heat was over, but Doble kept the gray going, and to the astonishment of the crowd he overhauled Guy in the home stretch and won easily in 2:22½, the son of Kentucky Prince making a tired break at the critical moment.

Habits in Animals.

The Des Moines (Ia.) Register of July 3 contains the following: "Kittie Hoppin, the two-year-old Longstrider filly owned by Mr. William Wilms, is full sister to Nettie Hoppin, with a record of 2:20. She has been handled at the fair grounds for the past two months and exercised at 9 o'clock every morning. She was brought home on the first of the month and put in Mr. Wilms' pasture. The next morning at the usual time she took her regular exercise and paced three times around the pasture at what seemed to be her dead level best. This is a remarkable instance of what habit will do, even in an animal."

Precisely at what date or place horses were first used it is difficult to say. According to the scientist, Petermost, the Aryans tamed and used horses nineteen thousand years before Christ. Zaborowski, in his "Migration of Animals," states that the ancestors of the Chinese tamed the horse no less than seventeen thousand years before our era. Prof. William H. Brewer, of Yale College, gives the first historical appearance in Egypt at the time of Shepherd Kings, about four thousand one hundred years ago. Twelve hundred years later the Hebrews were using horses, and three hundred years still later we have history of Greece valry.—Exchange.

Kingston Wins a Race.

SARATOGA, Aug. 21.—The weather to-day was cloudy and threatening, but there was a large attendance because of the two stake attractions on the card. There was great interest felt in the meeting of Gypsy Queen and The Lioness. The hollow manner in which the Queen won justifies the statement that she deserves to rank in the first flight of two-year-old fillies. She has shown consistent improvement her first race at Gravesend in the spring of this year. The meeting of this cracks in the Beaverwyck Stakes was also an exciting struggle, and taken all in all, the racing was highly enjoyed. The first contest on the programme was for the Misses' Stakes; for fillies two years old, $50 each, h f, with $700 added; the second filly to receive $200, and the third $85 out of the stakes; to carry 100 pounds; winner of any race of the value of $1,000 to carry 4 pounds extra; of two or more 7 pounds extra; maidens allowed 5 pounds. Three-quarters of a mile. These started:

Horse.	Weight.	Jockey	Odds.
Gypsy Queen.....	107	Martin	2 to 5
Daisy Woodruff.....	95	Winchell	20 to 1
Bonnie Bounce.....	95	Ossler	40 to 1
Miss Flood.....	100	Drake	15 to 1
Queen of Trumps.....	100	Grimes	10 to 1
The Lioness.....	107	Taral	5 to 1
Reform filly.....	100	Soden	60 to 1

Auctions (Gypsy Queen barred)—The Lioness $25, the field $25. Gypsy Queen was first away at the fall of the flag. The Reform-Madge filly showed the way first down the chute. The Lioness was leading at the turn a length before Queen of Trumps and came strong as she was straightened out in the stretch. Martin then sent Gypsy Queen for the stake and coming away won rather easily by a length, The Lioness a length and a half before Daisy Woodruff, third. Time, 1:16. Mutuels paid $6 70.

VOSEBURG IN FAST TIME.

Second on the programme was a free handicap sweepstakes of $20 each, if not declared out, with $500 added, of which $100 to the second horse; entries to be made by 4 p. m. on Saturday, August 18th; weights to be announced by 11 p. m. on Monday, August 20th. One mile and a sixteenth. The horses that came to the post were these:

Horse.	Weight.	Jockey	Odds.
Elmira.....	100	Breckenridge	7 to 1
Vosburg.....	92	Ossler	4 to 1
Mollie's Last.....	104	Williams	3 to 1
Santalene.....	97	G. Covington	5 to 1
Pasha.....	107	Martin	10 to 1
Daruna.....	107	Winchell	2 to 1

Auctions—Daruna, $14; Mollie's Last, $13; field, $25. Daruna was first away. Vosburg took the lead at the grand stand under pull, held it, lapped by Daruna to the home stretch, where Daruna fell back. Vosburg won by half a length, Santalene second, Mollie McCarthy's Last third. Time, 1:49. Mutuels paid $9 50.

A RACE FOR THE DWYERS.

The cracks came together in the Beverwyck Stakes, a sweepstakes for all ages, $50 each, h f with $1,000 added by Hon. M. N. Nolan, proprietor of the Beverwyck brewery; the second horse to receive $250 and the third $100 out of the stakes; winner, this year, when carry weight for age or more, of any two races of the value of $1,500 each, to carry 5 pounds extra; horses not having won this year a race of the value of $1,000, or two or more races of any value other than selling races since June 1st, allowed 7 pounds; those not having won a race this year, selling race excepted, allowed 14 pounds; maidens, four years old or upward, allowed 20 pounds. One mile and 500 yards. The Dwyers made a plunge on Kingston and the outside public had very little chance to get their money on except at a short price. These were the starters, jockeys and betting:

Horse.	Weight.	Jockey.	Odds.
Kingston.....	118	Murphy	1 to 3
Wary.....	113	J. Lewis	6 to 1
Terra Cotta.....	124	G. Covington	7 to 1
Grisette.....	108	Williams	8 to 1

Terra Cotta led for the first quarter, where Grisette went out and made the pace. Wary was second, Kingston third and Terra Cotta trailing. Grisette was a length in front of Wary at the inturn for home. Kingston and Terra Cotta were a length behind Wary. In the homestretch Kingston easily took the lead and won hands down. Wary was second a length before Terra Cotta, Grisette pulling up. Time, 2:13½.

LEO H. COULDN'T WIN.

The fourth race was for a purse of $400; entrance money $15 each, to second horse; for horses three years old and upward, beaten at Saratoga this season, and not having won a race since July 15; weights five pounds below the scale; those not having won a race since May 1st allowed seven pounds; those not having won a race this year, allowed, if three years old, ten pounds; if four years, fourteen pounds; if five years or upwards, twenty pounds. Three-quarters of a mile. The starters:

Horses.	Weight.	Jockey.	Odds.
Elgin.....	113	Covington	30 to 1
Royal Arch.....	110	Stoval	7 to 1
Dynamite.....	106	Winchell	12 to 1
Leo H.....	101	Taral	8 to 5
Belle D'Or.....	101	Williams	7 to 1
Harry Glenn.....	99	Breckenridge	8 to 1
Boccaccio.....	99	Martin	8 to 1
Deila.....	94	Grimes	12 to 1
Clay Stockton.....	91	Ossler	5 to 1

The race was won by Belle D'Or, Leo H. second, Clay Stockton third. Time, 1:15.

A gentleman who recently saw J. H. Shults' celebrated stallion Pancoast, writes: "During a visit to Long Island I had a good look at poor Pancoast. I was heartily sorry to see the great horse in such a pitiable plight. The lightning struck him at the base of the left ear. This left ear is now dead, the left eye apparently sightless, and the lower lip on the left side of the mouth considerably out of shape. His walk is feeble and tottering. He is improving, however, and his owner hopes that after some time Pancoast will be again available for service.—Chicago Horseman.

In horses the pulse at rest beats forty times, in an ox from forty to fifty-five, and in sheep and pigs about seventy to eighty beats per minute. It may be felt wherever a big artery crosses a bone. For instance, it is generally examined in the horse on the cord which crosses over the bone of the lower jaw in front of its curved position, or in the bony ridge above the eye, and in cattle over the middle of the first rib, and in sheep by placing the hand on the left side, where the beating of the heart may be felt. Any material variations of the pulse from the figures given above may be considered as a sign of disease. If rapid, hard and full it is an indication of high fever or inflammation; if rapid, small and weak, low fever, loss of blood or weakness. If slow the possibilities point to brain disease, and if irregular to heart troubles. This is one of the principal and sure tests of the health of an animal.

Grand Circuit Horses.

ROCHESTER, Aug. 18.—From this point the Grand Circuit Stables make a tri-partition. Some of the horses go back to Chicago for the meeting there next week, others are now en route for Poughkeepsie, but the majority keep on the time beaten path to Utica. Budd Doble is one of those who go to the Windy City, taking with him Jack, the hero of the Flower City Stake; Arrow, the invincible; Ed Annan, still a speedy pacer and game as a bulldog; Clingstone, the demon, whom he will drive in the match against Prince Wilkes on Thursday, besides Charlie Hogan, Geneva, Editor and several others as yet unknown to fame. Budd tells me he will rejoin the Grand Circuit at Hartford with Jack in the 2.23 class. Crit Davis, too, drops out of the regular line for a week, but will be on hand at Island Park. The big Kentucky trainer informed me last evening that he had shipped Katherine S back to Harrisburg, where she will remain in seclusion for the season. Prince Wilkes should trot the Chicago track very fast, and Clingstone will hardly be able to carry the pace that the sturdy grandson of royal George Wilkes will cut out for him, if he up to his form shown here on Thursday, when he made the third mile of the special with Rosalind Wilkes in 2.15½, with a full second more in his hand. Matches with Clingstone have proved the Waterloo of all the cracks, and Prince Wilkes has a great opportunity to show that there is one newcomer able to measure swords with the veteran.

There has been a lot of talk all the week about the heavy punishment inflicted on Knapack McCarthy for the alleged foul with Gny in the memorable fifth heat of the big stake. Knap still declares his innocence, but that is to be expected. Most of the drivers side with him, for a precedent of that sort is not a pleasant thing to contemplate. It cost McCarthy an even $2,500 to spoil Clingstone's sulky, to which Gny was harnessed. True, he got $2,000 of it back on Friday, but the odium of the affair is not pleasant for a man whose income largely depends on his reputation as a reinsman. Mr. Gordon wrote a letter from here on Tuesday to a friend in Cleveland, complaining in strong terms of the injustice done Guy in the race. The horse behaved wonderfully well in the big field, and it is not improbable that his previous reputation as a scorer operated against him, and that without any design or animus on the part of the judges.

There are many rumors in the air of matches between star performers of the year. On Thursday the gossips had it that Prince Wilkes and Favonia were soon to meet in a harness duel. I asked Mr. Singerley, owner of the gelding, if the report was true. He replied: "You may say that no such race has been heard of by me." The meeting of the great pair would be a strong card for any meeting, but it is not likely that either Mr. Clark or Mr. Singerley are ready to see who has the fastest animal, for both have numerous engagements to fill. Favonia is entered at Utica, where she will meet a comparatively weak field unless TTS starts in the same class. This big fellow eats his eighteen quarts of oats every twenty-four hours, and is fit to trot against most any of the good ones.

It is generally admitted that there was a neat little scheme by which Loretta F failed to win second money in the 2.15 class on Thursday. The mare was in splendid form, and, with Favonia barred, sold in the pools as favorite for second money. She had no trouble in beating Hogan and White Stockings in the first heat. She made a couple of losing breaks in the second mile, and Hogan got the place. He was at once made favorite, though Loretta was well supported by those who knew her quality and thought they were getting a drive for their money. White Stockings had been in the rear up to that time, but in the last heat he was allowed to get second place. The Stewarts, who own the horse, are on the turf more for glory than for money, having already an abundance of the latter. In my opinion there was a quiet settlement by which White Stockings got a better place than he could have won on his merits. Before the third heat the summary stood:

Charles Hogan.....3 2
White Stockings.....4 3

It was possible for the three to finish so that the rest of the purse could be evenly divided after Favonia had her 50 per cent. Loretta trailed Hogan to the third quarter with White Stockings far behind. Coming into the stretch McHenry pulled the mare close to the pole, where the footing was not nearly as good as in the centre. Hogan was further out, and when White Stockings came up there was not room for him to get between. Suddenly the pocket opened wider and the Kansas City gelding slipped through. Loretta was finishing fast and had Hogan beaten for third place, when she made a break, and just lost the place by a head. Had she been kept steady, as she doubtless could have been, the equal division of the moneys would have been necessary. But Hogan got another "3" to his credit, which gave him second money. The judges seemed to overlook this side issue, which was in fact as important as any other event, the winner of second money standing in the same position as that of a first premium horse in an ordinary contest. I do not think the pool-box was worked, but the result was as unfair to those who supported Loretta F as if there had been a killing.

Guy will be on hand for the blue ribbon stake at Hartford. Mr. Gordon has bought a nomination, and Sanders says he will retrieve the honors lost on Tuesday.

Mr. Middleton, owner of Jack, is said to have refused $10,000 for the gray trotter the day after he walked off with the big plum.

For the Utica meeting the 2.30 class should lie between Sprague, Goldust and Geneva. Milton Blackwood is improving with every race, but is hardly ready yet. Moulton, who has Ready Boy and others of Mr. Hill's string, is having no success, though he has likely young horses. His specialty seems to be trying to beat the flag instead of the watch. Wicopee is a fast pacer, but Moulton has not got him to the front. Bessemer has again a prospective walk over in the slow pace, and TTS is still the autocrat of the 2.22 class. There could be a good race in the 2.27 trot. Frank Buford and J. B. Richardson will fight last Wednesday's battle over again, and I should take a ticket on the Tennessee stallion. There are only three entries for the free-for-all pace. Argyle and Joe L have not started yet, and if they are still kept in the stable, Jewett can beat Puritan as he pleases. Spofford can beat the field in the 2.20 class, unless his speed forsakes him, as it did here. Feek thinks Lady Whitefoot will be fit to start in the 2.24 class, and I can see nothing dangerous with Newton B still out of shape. Favonia will be barred again in the 2.18 class, and Loretta F can win second money. With Prince Wilkes gone from the free-for-all trot, Rare Ripe has a good show for the race. It is impossible to gauge the 2.33 class, as there is not knowing what horses will start. As the list stands, Elda B is the best of the lot. In the 2.17 pace, which closes the meeting, Charley Friel is my selection. Balsora Wilkes is fast, but has been overworked. Friel is fresh and I hear has lots of speed.—CHARIOTEER, in Sporting World.

The Great Trotting Sires.

The entrance of J. B. Richardson into the 2:20 class at Cleveland last week places George Wilkes and Electioneer even in 2:20 performers, each having nine to his credit up to August 4th, as follows:

BY ELECTIONEER.	BY GEORGE WILKES.

Albert W.....2:20	J. B. Richardson.....2:19½
Ansel.....2:20	Tom Rodgers.....2:20

As George Wilkes has been dead several years, and Electioneer is still in the zenith of his glory, it is more than likely that the great California sire will again assume the leadership as a sire of 2:20 trotters.—Cal. Spirit of the Times.

The Two-Year-Olds.

The World of the 20th has the following to say in regard to the two-year-olds of 1888. Adopting the rule that when a lot of youngsters run in a bunch the whole batch is inferior, it might be argued that so many winners implied a paucity of merit. But when the watch tells that fast time has been the rule, and that in order to win three-quarters of a mile had to be compassed in from 1:14 to 1:15½, it must be admitted that the law is at fault. "Why should geldings be allowed three pounds?" is pertinent. While emasculation may lessen the powers of endurance, in these short races speed is the main factor, and the fleetest of short horses have been among the mares and geldings.

Whether the two-year-olds of 1888 are a bad lot or not, they certainly make good racing. Nearly every two-year-old stake produces a good winner, with others so close up that sometimes, as on Saturday for the Criterion, the crowd must wait the judges' decision as to the placed horses. The meeting at Monmouth has continued nearly seven weeks, with one or more two-year-old races of some kind every day, numbering in all twenty-six races, of which sixteen were stake or handicap fixtures that closed in 1887 or in the spring of 1888. The twenty-six races in question were won by twenty-two different horses, Lady Margaret, Chemise, Minnie and Sorento being the only horses to win twice. From a time standpoint a majority of these races were run very fast, Proctor Knot winning the Junior Champion in 1:14, Auricoma the Lassies, in 1:14½, Lady Margaret the Atlantic in 1:15, and Independence in 1:15½, the Cylone colt the Seabright in 1:15, Tipstaff the Sapling and Minion the Red Bank in 1:15½, and Senorita the Criterion in 1:15½. There are several valuable two-year-old stakes yet to be run at the Monmouth meeting which as likely as not will be won by horses not heretofore credited as winners—horses like the Dawdle colt, Invercauld colt and Florentine.

With the two-year-old honors thus so widely scattered, the races for the autumn two-year-old fixtures at Sheepshead Bay, Gravesend and Jerome Park will be of more interest than ever before. Two weeks from to-day the Futurity will be run at Sheepshead Bay. It will be the richest stake ever contested for in this country, and the first straight three-quarters of a mile run east of the mountains. The number of starters will certainly not be less than twenty or twenty-five. At the present time Proctor Knot, the winner of the Junior Champion at Monmouth Park, is the public favorite—as well he may be—for with the benefit of five pounds breeding allowance he virtually escapes the penalty of five pounds incurred at Monmouth. Thus with an allowance of three pounds as a gelding he will only have to carry 112 pounds. The success of Proctor Knot this year and of Raceland last year has brought up the question. Why should geldings be allowed three pounds? In many instances they are fully as able to carry weight as colts are—certainly Parole was—while in a very fast run race like the Junior Champion the three pounds is a big advantage in the last hundred yards. Geldings get no such allowance in England, and the chances are that before the stakes that usually close January 1st and March 1st are announced, the rule of allowing geldings three pounds will be abolished. There are several other horses in the Futurity that will be benefited by the breeding allowance of three and five pounds, and as there is also an allowance of seven pounds for maidens, there are great chances of the winner of the Futurity coming from the dark division. The committee of the Coney Island Jockey Club will certainly have to be particular in the matter of breeding allowances, for, contrary to the usual rule that all such allowances must be claimed at entry, the conditions read: "The produce of mares or stallions which have never produced a winner prior to January 1, 1886, allowed three pounds, of both five pounds; the produce to be entitled to such allowance at time of starting whether claimed or not in the entry of the mare. Maidens allowed seven pounds, which allowance shall not be cumulative."

The bull, Kinsman second, which took first prize at the Galloway competition of the Highland Show, has already several representatives on this side of the Atlantic. He was in the same position at the Royal Show, Newcastle, last year. It is a note worthy fact that the export of Galloways to this country from Scotland this year is largely in excess of all other breeds combined.

Grand Meeting Assured—Every Race Full.

PROCEEDINGS OF BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

On Saturday last, the 10th day of August, the Board of Directors of the 11th District Agricultural Association, met to award privileges, examine bids, etc. President Thompson, Vice-President Byers, Secretary Davis, Asst. Sec. J. R. Murray, Treasurer D. C. Hyer, and Directors Chandler, Carter, Bransford, Reavis and Hall were present. Director John McBeth was absent.

It is certain, from the great number of entries to the races, inquiries for Premium Lists, etc., that this will be the greatest Fair ever held in Northern California, not excepting a single one. The entries are over three times the number entered last year, in many cases the entrance money is equal to the purse. Every one is busy preparing for the exhibit, both of stock and for the pavilion. Following are the proceedings of the Board and entries.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

It was ordered that ten new closed stalls be built for exhibition of stallions.

Upon motion of J. S. Bransford, D. L. Haun, of Quincy, was appointed starting judge in running races.

Upon the motion of J. S. Carter, H. E. McClelland was appointed to act as marshal, he to appoint his own aids.

Upon the motion of Bransford, W. D. Minckler, was appointed to act as entry clerk at grounds.

On motion of J. J. Reavis, E. E. Dixon was appointed Mounted Patrol.

Board adjourned to meet September 24, 1888.

The Queen of Trotters.

[The World.]

Maud S. whinnied joyfully one evening as an attendant and a World reporter entered her commodious stall in the large brick stable near Fifty-fifth and Fifth avenue. Mr. Bonner is putting his peerless mare through a course of training, and expects this summer to lower her record of 2:08½, the fastest trotting time ever made. She is now a trifle high in flesh, but a few weeks of active work will put her in magnificent condition. The stablemen say she was never in better health. Last Monday Maud S. made a mile at Fleetwood Park in 2:12½, and the Monday before in 2:12½. The fastest previous time made on the track was 2:13½, by Maud S. herself, when Mr. Vanderbilt owned her and John Murphy handled the reins. Both Murphy and Mr. Bonner say that 2:12½ on the Fleetwood track, which is notoriously heavy, is equal to 2:08½ on any ordinary track. On neither of her last trials was Maud urged very hard.

"I never strike her," said Murphy, "because if I do she sulks. If she keeps on in her present form for a month longer, Mr. Bonner says he has no doubt of his great mare being able to surprise the trotting world. She trotted three miles Monday afternoon," he continued, "and the third mile was made faster than any of the others. Her strength, you know, lies in her staying power and her capacity to make the last quarter faster than the first."

Mr. Bonner drives Maud S. nearly every afternoon, and she recognizes his voice, and indicates her joy at his appearance in various ways. He trains her himself almost exclusively. "I could easily have beaten 2:12½," said Mr. Bonner, "but I told Murphy to ease her as he went up the hill."

From the stall adjoining Maud S. an old bay horse poked his head over the dividing wall. Very few would recognize in his stiffened legs and fat body the trim, fleet-footed Rarus of other days, once the pride of the East and the greatest trotter on the turf. There are a number of young ones in the stable, of whom great things are expected.

There is no question that Fleetwood track is a good deal slower than a majority of the trotting courses of the country, provided the starting and finishing points are the judges stand. But if the trip is from the half-mile post to it again it is not far behind. Before the improvements there was a descent from the judges' stand to the half-mile mark of between 20 and 30 feet, and, of course, a corresponding rise in the last half. It may be that Maud S. was indulged in down grade at the finish. We have known this to be done when the desire was to make a fast mile.

The tiniest horse in America is a graceful little quadruped named Yen Hoc, which recently arrived from China. The little animal stands just thirty-six inches high and weighs only seventy pounds. Experts say he is four years old and fully grown. One peculiarity about him is that he has but four teeth in either jaw; otherwise he is a perfect miniature of an ordinary American horse. This horse is about the size of the fossil horse found by Prof. Thos. Condon in the Columbia river basin some years ago. This fossil which is the only fossil horse that has been found on the American continent, is now in the museum of the university at Eugene City, Oregon.—Rural World.

English Racing Gossip.

LONDON, August 11.—Lord Douglas Gordon is dead. Few of the writers of his biography have made mention of the fact that it was in his black jacket and French gray cap that Cadogan ran second to Charibert for the Two Thousand of 1879 and afterward started first favorite for the Derby. Last week there were tidings that he was slightly better but it was the last flicker, and the family vault at Orton, near Peterborough, now contains all that remains of what was one of the most buoyant and light hearted of mankind. He was in every sense of the word an all round sportsman. He was a crack at Melton, and no mean performer at Croxton Park, Lewes, Sandown and the Bibury Club. He was the second surviving brother of the Marquis of Huntly, and was heir presumptive to the marquise. He was only thirty-six when he died, but for some years he represented Aberdeenshire in Parliament, and subsequently, in the Liberal interest, he opposed Lord Mandeville, and beat him, for Huntingdonshire, much to the astonishment and chagrin of the powerful Montagu family, whose eldest son was so ruthlessly overthrown. Until 1880 he was in the Coldstream Guards, leaving with the rank of captain. He had been ill for nearly two years, and was treated for rheumatism; but it was something much more terrible—it was the heart that was ailing him, and we fear that he suffered much pain. In racing he was associated principally with the Findon stable, and was in most of their good things, which, however, of late years have been few and far between. When in 1878 the colt by Cremorne, out of Chance, made his debut for the Woodcote Stakes at Epsom, the most extraordinary rumors were afloat as to what he could do. He was the property of the late Mr. F. Swindell, a gentleman who made handicaps his study and who looked upon running a good dark horse in a weight for age race as suggesting some sort of mental weakness. When, therefore, Mr. Swindell ran the Chance colt for the Woodcote Stakes, and took even money about him, and the horse won in a canter by four lengths, and at once became first favorite for the Derby, people were lost in wonderment. Mr. Swindell's ordinary policy would have been to have kept the colt, who was subsequently named Cadogan, until he was four years old and got him in the Cesarewitch with about 88 pounds. His own explanation was that he was becoming an old man, and could no longer afford to look forward two or three years. A price of £10,000, we believe, was put on Cadogan, and at this figure, with Woodlands thrown in, he was sold to the Marquis of Huntly. Whether the sale was ever completed or not, we do not know, but most certainly Cadogan ran for the Two Thousand in the name and colors of Lord Douglas Gordon. A great stake would have been landed if the horse had won this race, and coming over the hill he looked all over a winner until Cheribert, with Archer on his back, cleared him. For the Derby, Cadogan, notwithstanding his defeat, started much the better favorite; but he was in reality all to pieces, was easily beaten, and never ran again. These defeats made a sad inroad into a not over full bank, but Lord Douglas Gordon was just as happy without money as with it, and there was not a country house that did not give him its warmest welcome. From Welbeck, during the St. Leger week, he will be especially missed. He was a man of fashion as well as a sportsman, and there were plenty to follow him when he donned the spotless white ducks and revived the grab of Count D'Orsay and Lord Chesham. He was simple, manly and generous, full of courage and brimful of fun and good nature. There are many in the world like him, but unfortunately they are not readily found.

Exit Mr. Manton. That lady having said to Mr. Milner, "With all my worldly goods I do thee endow," Eidsford & Co. figure in the Cesarewitch in the name of that gentleman. What his colors will be or whether the horses will continue to carry the scarlet jacket we do not know. The entries for the Cesarewitch and Cambridgeshire are decidedly weak, nor do they cover much ground, some stables having half a score or more of horses engaged. It is such a matter of notoriety that Tenebrouse is the great tip for both races that there can be no harm in mentioning the fact, or that Minting is favorite for the Cambridgeshire. This became a matter of course the moment he was entered, as here all that he will be called on to give the bottom weight will be 63 pounds. It was not so in the Royal Hunt Cup, in which, there not being two forfeits, the handicapper could take what range he chose. Ryan, considering his powerful stable, has very few horses engaged, and the Robert Peck division are very badly represented. The course for the Cambridgeshire will be a mile and a distance, on the flat, this meaning a mile and 220 yards.

An idea prevailed that the action of Wood against Lord Durham would not be gone on with, but this proved to be altogether wrong. At the last trial it was the admission of evidence as to general character that ruined Wood, and caused the damages to be fixed at a farthing. This evidence will not be admitted at the next trial, and Lord Durham, in appealing against the order made for this defense to be struck out, has failed. The meaning of all this is that the race will, practically speaking, be run over again, and this time Wood will have a pull of 21 pounds in the weights. It was anticipated that an application would be made in the Chetwynd case, but it will be very cold weather before that issue is tried.

As was generally expected, Bismarck won hands down at Lewes, but a mild sensation was created by the lodging of a protest against the winner on the ground of a cross. This was soon overruled, however, and the minds of backers set at rest. Deuce of Clubs was third, but as the jockey did return to the scales, the stewards taught him a salutary lesson by disqualifying him and assigning third place to the fourth, Ginestra.—Sporting World.

Mr. George A. Singlerly, Philadelphia, denies positively the report that Prince Wilkes, his great horse, and Favonia, will start for a special purse on one of the grand Eastern circuit tracks.

Mr. Begg, vice-president of the San Diego County Agricultural Association at Oceanside, is in the city to visit the business men and merchants in the interests of the association. The object of this association is not merely to hold a little county fair, an exhibition to show what a single neighborhood can produce, but from Mr. Begg it is learned that the object of this association is much grander in scope than a mere country side exhibit. Its object is nothing less than the placing in competition the various districts by means of neighborhood exhibits. A premium of $25 will be given for the best neighborhood exhibit with a beautiful banner, and such neighborhood will be known as the banner district of the county. The banner will be surrendered to the association at the end of a year, to be again competed for, thus creating emulation between the great producing section of this county. At this fair the emigrant will see the products of all parts of this county brought in competition.—San Diego Bee.

Jockeys and their Temptations.

Among the many trades and professions and modes of earning a livelihood or a competence which are open to youths in these colonies, there is hardly any in which marked ability, perseverance, and integrity are so well rewarded and lead to prosperity and comparative opulence as in that of the professional jockey. Yes, although this is the case (writes "Sterling"), it is also true that there is hardly any vocation which exposes its followers to so much temptation to deviate from the right path.

Thus a lad who shows courage and ability upon horseback gets into a stable ere he has received the rudiments of education, and perhaps before his moral sense has been cultivated in any way. He roughs it among the ordinary stable lads, and learns all the evil they know, be it much or little. Showing ability in riding work he soon gets a mount in public, and his employer allows him to ride other people's horses, and sometimes gives him a show on one of his own. Ere long he wins a race. If it is on a favorite, besides his winning fee he is sure to get presents from those who have backed his mount, whilst should he get home on a rank outsider, the Ring, or rather some of its members, encourage the lad to do so again by making him a present. With a second or third success soon occurring, he looks for and receives like treatment, has a host of followers, flatterers, and adulators; is asked to drink with one and another, and if not strong-minded, he comes fond of liquor and greedy for coin; while in and near great cities like Melbourne, other and more seductive inducements help him on the downward path. If he is a weekly servant, as most lads now are, unscrupulous owners or trainers soon seduce him from his first employment, and he becomes a rolling stone, staying for no length of time in any place, and falling into habits of dissipation which render his downfall a certainty. If he is not a weekly servant, and is bound to his first employer, he is still subject to hosts of temptations, and may yield to them. Perhaps he rides a horse for his master, which is not thoroughly well, and he is told not to knock him about if he finds him beaten. One who has backed his mount, or laid against the favorite, promises him a sum of money to win. He tries his horse at the distance, and finds him in trouble, but the promised reward tempts him, and he sits down and savagely gruels the horse home with whip and spur, and one or two of the best division pulling off, he gains third honors, having ruined his horse and the owner's prospect of winning when the horse has got well, even should here cover from the effect of the useless punishment he has received. Finding that, in the cant of Turf, he "listens to reason," his next temptation comes when he rides a favorite. Then one who is bad against it, or one who has backed another heavily, bribes him to stop the horse he rides; or if he is not on a favorite, to get in the road of a horse that is; and his purse is replenished with ill-gotten wealth. It soon becomes an open secret that he cannot be trusted, hence his downward path is rapid. That "evil communications corrupt good manners" is more applicable to those making their debut as jockeys than of almost any other class of lads, and it behoves those who rule the Turf to see what steps can be taken to prevent the contaminating influences above described exerting their power upon the lads, who, properly directed, shall become the Halcases or O'Briens of the future.

The enormous increase in the number of race meetings now held has, of course, increased the difficulties in dealing with this matter. But even allowing this, such difficulties as these are not insuperable.

It must be admitted, of course, that in many stables boys are to a great extent protected from exterior influences. In these no lad is engaged in the first instance except as an apprentice for a fixed term of years. They are not allowed to visit the metropolises unaccompanied. Their tuition and education are looked to, and their morals cultivated. Such stables, alas! are few and far between, and the discipline they impose does not make them popular with boys, although they ultimately learn its benefits.

But something more than this is necessary, and it behoves those who regulate and legislate for our turf to take this matter into their serious consideration.

The first step necessary is to pass a rule preventing any lad now unlicensed under the age of twenty receiving a license as a jockey or riding in a race until he has served, or while he is serving, his apprenticeship in a training stable for a term of not less than three years. Secondly, that while in such apprenticeship he shall only be at liberty to ride such horses as his employer may direct, and that all moneys he may earn for riding shall be payable to his employer, to be by him banked in the Post Office Savings Bank for the lad's benefit at the expiration of his term of apprenticeship.

These rules would have the effect of making boys learn their trade properly, and, by depriving them of the free use of money, preventing them from betting.

Everyone who visits suburban meetings knows that lads who ride 6st. 7lb. in a good saddle beat heavily, starting with cash and finishing with credit. Once they owe money to a bookmaker they are virtually his servants. And even human nature, as exemplified in metallic circles, is fallible, and with a man owing him money riding a horse he was had against, he might like to speak to the lad. Verb. sap.

Only the other day a very useful lad in the employ of one of our straightest racing men rode an animal at a suburban meeting. It did not win, and the boy was disqualified for suspicious riding, thus depriving the employer of the services of his best lad and interfering with the preparation of a large string of two-year-olds. In this case the lad was an indentured apprentice.

Thus the innocent may suffer for the guilty. There can be no question as to the necessity of malpractice being firmly repressed. But prevention is better than cure. Regulations which will guard the lads in the ranks of our horsemen from temptation and its consequences are urgently required; and surely among those who are our turf legislators there are men of enough practical ability to frame such rules as shall give much needed protection to the employer and the lad. —Melbourne Sportsman, July 13, 1883.

At the obsequies of General Sheridan, Guy, the General's favorite horse, a beautiful dark bay charger, was led immediately after the funeral car. He was saddled and bridled in military style ready for a mount. The gold embroidered saddle-cloth bore the insignia of General Sheridan's rank as lieutenant general, a golden eagle and three stars being woven in gold in the corners. Beneath the cloth in front were two pistol holsters. The general's military boots, reversed with epurs pointing forward, were secured in the stirrups. The horse was the one General Sheridan got from Lexington, Ky., four years ago while in Chicago, and he liked it much, because in his three white feet and in other respects he resembled his old war horse Winchester.

Sale of Mrs. Lorillard's Horses.

A Total of $11,900 Obtained for Eleven Head—$5,050 for Strideaway.

There was a large number of horsemen present in the paddock at Mounmouth Park when Col. S. D. Bruce sold at auction the horses in training and the yearlings belonging to Mrs. George L. Lorillard. The bidding was spirited and the prices obtained remarkably good. Following is a summary:

Thoroughbred Sires.

The Kentucky Live Stock Record has compiled the following table of thoroughbred winning sires, whose get have won from $5,000 upwards from January 1 to July 14, 1883. The compiler notes it as a strange fact that of the largest winners of the stallions named only three have no cross of the Lexington blood—Defense, Exile and Pampero. Egmont, Favor, Gallifet, Oregon, Ten Penny, Terra Cotta, Maebeth II, and Princess Bowling have a double cross of Lexington, while Caliente and Geraldine have a triple cross of this blood. Mr. Bruce has for years contended that the Lexington cross is the best in America. Hindoo's winnings have been cut short by the unfortunate accident to Hauover:

Since Susie S. finished at Buffalo in 2:18, there is an impression that Maunzita's four-year old record 2:26, is in danger. It was feared that her great display of speed, 2:20, last week might have served to retard her, but the contrary seems to have been the fact.

CATTLE.

The Cattle Exhibit at Petaluma.

The Petaluma Fair has always been noted for the extraordinary fine display made each year in the line of fine bred horned stock of all breeds. The twenty-second annual exhibition of the Sonoma and Marin Agricultural Association being held this week at Petaluma, in this particular is no exception to the general rule. This year in the line of fine stock there are shown a number of the finest herds of imported and domestic bred cattle on the coast. To those interested in this line of stock, the exhibition is one of great practical interest.

In the parade of stock Wednesday and Friday morning, aside from a display of horses of all classes which strung out over a mile, was a long line of sleek, fat and fine looking cattle, numbering well up in the hundreds. The famous herd of Holsteins owned by H. White of Lakeville was the principal feature of the stock exhibit. This herd, twenty-eight in number, is the finest Holstein herd in America. All of the cattle are registered and of the best breeding. The herd is headed by the full-blooded imported bull Oro Blanco. The handsome appearance of this beautiful herd with their beautiful black bodies, with white belly and legs attracts universal favorable comment. In the herd are several fine full-blooded milk cows with large full bags. Also several two-year old and yearling bulls who show the points of their sire and are fine clean limbed animals. The calves and heifers are handsome and valuable pieces of flesh. The Catate Ranch, by Wilfred Page, have their large and full blooded herd of short-horns entered. The herd is headed by three year old imported bull Mugwump by Kirkington Caral, dam Belle Medero. Mugwump is followed by the two-year-old bulls Protector, by Cherry Prince, dam Mazarka Caroline, and Rogue by Cherry Prince, dam Rhoda. The one-year-old bulls are Holdfast by Sonoma Chief, Belt, The Parson, Cheeseit, and Princess by Cherry Prince, Blood and Cluli by Catchpenny, and Sonoma Bank and Sanberry by Sonoma 2nd. The following full blood bull calves are also entered: Gilt Edge, by Royal Duke; Pickrill, by Sonoma Chief, and To-morrow by Royal Duke. The three year old cows are Marta, Belle Medico, Henerietta Page, Belle Strawberry and Peerless Rose. Two year old cows, Christmas Eve, Enregma. Heifers, Belle of the Oaks, Gold Nut, Zuluka; and calves, Mannela and Sweetmilk.

Geo. Bennet & Son, of San Mateo, are up with their herd of Ayrshires consisting of ten head. This herd of Ayrshires is well known to stock raisers throughout the coast. The animals are in splendid condition and form one of the principal features of the department. The stock raised by Bennet & Son have so often carried away the first prizes that they are familiar to all persons interested in this particular breed. The Ayrshires have been shown to be a most valuable breed as milk producers, and naturally Bennet and Son's entry attracts particular attention from stock men.

J. R. Rose of Lakeville, fails this year to put in an appearance with his large herd of Devans.

Robert Crane has a fine yearling Durham bull, Hopkins and Durham aged cow Nymph, also grade cow Swan, as representatives of his stock upon the grounds.

E. Steiger of Sonoma, in addition to his usual entries, has three fine specimens of full-blooded Holsteins entered. The bulls Diamond Dick and Jessie James are splendid specimens of their race, and have numerous fine young animals scattered over Sonoma Valley which sustain their reputations as good breeders. The Holstein cow, Alvina, is a perfect specimen, with splendid record as a milker. They also enter a handsome grade cow, Constance.

John Lynch exhibits a herd of Durhams which show good breeding and careful attention. The bulls, Sonoma Chief and Little Pat, Jr., are handsome, clean built animals. The calves, Buttercup, Prince and Cherry Richardson, are Durhams in every point.

Hall Brothers' herd of the favorite Jerseys are as handsome a lot of cattle as can be seen anywhere. These clean limbed little animals, with their graceful build, soft eyes and handsome coats, always earn the admiration of the fairer sex. As representatives of the stock, Messrs Hall have entered their full-blooded bull, Wildwood, and the cows Gazelle, Pansy and Wildwood.

J. R. Jewell has one member of his Shorthorn Durham herd entered. The animal is the full blooded registered four-year-old bull, Duke. This animal has been used by Mr. Jewell upon his large dairy ranch in bringing up the grade of his dairy stock. He is a fine specimen of his class and has shown splendid qualities as a breeder.

The herd of nine Jerseys owned and entered by T. L. McGee, is one of the finest on the coast and embraces several well-known registered bulls and cows, besides a number of promising heifers and yearling bulls. This herd is among the principal features of the stock department.

R. H. Crane has entered a fine Durham bull, Breadlebane, and aged cow, Maud. Both animals are fine formed and show good points.

J. Lynch has four fine-looking graded shorthorns entered. They are Lady Jane, Flora, Lillie and Mabel. These animals clearly demonstrate the benefits of judicious breeding from good bulls in raising the standard of grade cattle. They are healthy looking animals, good milkers, and in every way valuable animals for dairy and domestic use, as well as heavy in weight as beef cattle.

W. Page enters Belle Medico as a fat cow. She is a full-blood short-horn and as fine an animal as ever seen on exhibition. D. S. Dickson's Jersey bull Poet is a fine bred animal and a good specimen of the Jerseys.

A. L. Guerne's Holstein herd is headed by full-blooded registered bull Jesse James and the cows Aloma and Agnes. Mr. Guerne takes a pardonable pride in these splendid Holsteins. They are as fine as can be found in any part of the country.

Besides the herds enumerated there are a number of entries embracing all breeds and grades, the animals being owned principally in the vicinity of Petaluma.

The stock department has always been a principal feature of the Petaluma Fair and the Association is noted throughout the State for the excellence of this department. The stock department this year has been worth a close investigation by cattle breeders.

The entries in the sheep and swine department were not as large as they should have been, but still a very good exhibition is made.

Robert Crane is one of the principal exhibitors, with a fine lot of Southdowns, including ram, three ewes, three ram lambs and three ewe lambs. The animals are heavy in fleece, and their wool shows a splendid texture and quality.

R. H. Crane also has a number of pens filled with Southdowns, which appear to be good representatives of the breed.

S. Zimmerman exhibits in the swine department a heavy weight sow.

R. H. Crane, has entered in this department a China-Poland boar, a sow and six pigs.

The Poultry exhibit is very good, and embraces a number of large exhibits.

J. V. Hill has several coops of bantams, brown leg-horns, cochins, light brahmas, and brown leghorn chickens entered.

A. J. Christie makes large exhibit of Pekin and Rouen chicks.

John Lorenger has several coops filled with game chickens including red games, duck-wing games and black game chickens.

R. H. Crane has entered light Brahma chickens and chicks, bantams and bantam chicks and several Toulouse geese.

O. Elmore makes an exhibit of six coops game chickens including, black breasted games, duck-wings and brown reds.

J. Blackburn exhibits Wyandot's and Plymouth Rock chicks and chickens. In the last three departments there seems to be but little competition this year, although the exhibit is still far from being a poor one. These branches of farm industry should not be neglected. In the vicinity of Petaluma are large and fine droves of sheep, also a number of stys of fine bred swine, which should be represented in the annual exhibitions of the district.

Oakland Fair—The Cattle Make a Good Showing.

The excellent quality of the cattle which represent agricultural district number 1, comprising the counties of Alameda, Contra Costa and San Francisco, was the subject of much favorable comment this week. The Durhams of Messrs. Page and Younger were the picture of good beef makers. Mr. Pages' bull, Mugwump, calved Oct. 22, 1884, was a very fine specimen, a magnificent chest and quarters to match, color all that could be desired, a deep rich brown. A calf, "Sweetmilk" by this bull is a perfect beauty and speaks well for the care and attention the brothers Page have given to producing the highest class of stock. Their cow Maia is the belle of the show. She was sired by Kirkelevington Prince.

Mr. Edward Younger made a good choice when he chose Third Kirkelevington, a four-year-old bull of the Kirkelevington breed. His points were unexceptionable, and any man ought to be proud of having such an animal at the head of his herd. This bull beat the cup winner of the Royal Society's Show in the sweepstakes class, England, last year. He is by Duke of Kirkelevington, bred by Mr. Alexander, Kentucky.

His bull, 5th Kirkelevington was a first prize animal at the State Fair, Sacramento, last year; broad chested, finely ribbed, deeply flanked and of good color, he was a most noticeable feature in Mr. Younger's most creditable exhibit. Both gentlemen are well represented. Their cows and yearlings all have special points worthy of mention, and speak well for the future of the Durhams in Agricultural District No. 1.

In the Ayrshire class, Messrs. George Bennet and Son, Contra Costa County, have a most creditable display—these gentlemen purpose removing their stock to The Briant Ranch during the course of next month.

Lord Faxon is such a bull as every lover of stock would wish to see on a California ranch. He was calved Oct. 21, 1885, and bred by Mr. Bennet. Archie, his sire, was imported by Mr. Peter Cootes from Canada; this bull is by Adonis, by Scarborough Chief; his dam was Lady Faxon, sire and dam both imported from Scotland. Hotspur is a splendid young bull by Archie also, calved May 2, 1887.

In the Jersey class Mr. Thomas Ward, of 1458 Linden Street, San Francisco, teaches us all what can be done within the limits of a city. In a comparatively small yard he has bred a number of very beautiful and excellent cattle. No judges could pass him by without special notice; as a whole, all his animals are above the average. Here is a gentleman without ranch or grazing ground earnestly endeavoring to support himself and a large motherless family by rearing thoroughbred stock in a back yard; it is an idea of what can be done, and that will be done by many a Californian when he is fully initiated into the full importance of buying nothing but the best, even though he has not many animals to start with. Mr. Ward's bull, Billy Ralston 365, Cal. R., by William, is an exceptionally large and perfect Jersey; his head and neck are well proportioned, his body finely developed, round and shapely. A pretty calf by this bull is worthy of careful observation. This calf is the image of its mother, Lady Maud, a cow of excellent parts, pure fawn color, and with an elder large and well-shaped. She has all the requirements of a first-class milker, and her record is over two pounds of butter per day, and four gallons of milk. Mr. Ward has at present an order for "four of his best for Calistoga." They are all good.

Mr. John Brannan is the only other exhibitor in this class. His cow, Dolly of Marin 1000, Cal. R., was purchased by him from the well-known Cameron herd, Tulare County. She was sired by Santiago, dam Daisy of Marin. Head and color good, the latter a light fawn. She is an excellent milker.

Holsteins—In this class of beautiful and useful animals, Messrs. J. H. White and Frank Burke vie with each other, and a close contest will no doubt be the result. Our examination of the stock at Oakland Fair having been undertaken on Monday, some cattle were not seen at the best advantage. They will no doubt be ready for a final view before we go to press, at which time we hope to have the prize list at hand.

Mr. J. H. White's Holstein bull, Oro Blanco, was sired in Europe by the splendid and well known thoroughbred Pieter, his mother Ontong was in calf when imported into America. He is three years old and weighs 21 cwt. He is well shaped and possesses good beef-making qualities. He has a splendid frame and the addition of 3 cwt. more to his weight would immensely add to his appearance as a show animal. The want of it does not lessen his value in our eyes.

Two bulls Juneau 3797, H. F. H. B., and Huachuca 3743, are excellent samples of the Holstein. The first is by Yonge Gelbrig 8043, by Usurper 3636. The latter was sired by the Prince of Haarlem. Two yearlings sired by Usurper are also shown. They are both very promising animals. Also a five months calf by Oro Blanco and a six months one by the Prince of Haarlem.

At many agricultural shows this principal of showing so many of the one strain of blood—sire, dam, yearling and calf, gives the observer and buyer a most excellent opportunity of judging of the all round merits of the stock on exhibition.

Mr. Frank H. Burke made a display in this class which does the utmost credit to his good judgment, skill and taste. We have no doubt, from a careful examination of this gentleman's exhibit, that the best strains of Holstein cattle are well adapted for breeding purposes in California.

At great expense, by giving much time and taking much trouble, Mr. Burke succeeded in obtaining by a visit to Holland, the best strains in milk and butter, such as Twiaks, Netherlands, Aaggies and Menlos. In a conversation with Mr. Burke we regretted to learn that his many business engagements compel him to give up breeding Holstein cattle on such a large scale as in the past. He means to sell a large number at Reno Fair, and as the stock exhibited at Oakland Fair is also to be exhibited at Sacramento, buyers are sure of seeing some of his selected animals before they are taken to Reno. It is a rare chance, as it is seldom that so valuable a herd is broken up. Forty calves of the best strains, and many other animals at present on his ranch will be also taken north for sale.

Mr. Burke's bull Sedro, 3163, H. H. B., calved May 28, 1884, is a perfect picture—just what the head of a herd should be. Large, full, square, broad and finely formed. Rich golden skin and fine coat, give a finish to his appearance which will attract the attention of the most unobservant. Their particularly fine coats and pretty markings, together with their excellent condition made Mr. Burke's one of the most interesting exhibits of cattle at the fair.

Sedro was bred by E. M. Washburn, Maas., a noted breeder of Holsteins; sire and dam were both imported. His dam Imported Antie Laan, was noted for giving much and very rich milk. His weight is 2,300. The cows, Thissa and Koverije, are very attractive animals; the markings of the latter are particularly fine; she is good at all points. Thissa took the Ohio and Illinois calf prizes against a large number of competitors; she has every attribute of a first-rate milker, and we hear that she has a very large record in Holland.

We have now noticed all the exhibitors of cattle at the Oakland Fair. We had the pleasure of personally conversing with most of them, their courtesy in describing to us the pedigree of their various animals was extreme, as the cards had not been put up on our visit. We shall soon have more to say about them and their thoroughbred, but space is limited during Fair Weeks.

Our Breeds of Live-Stock.

For some time past, a list of American pedigree registers has appeared in revised and complete form in the Breeder's Gazette. It appears that of the herds of cattle which have been imported into this country, which are at all known as "improved," the Kerry and Black Welsh alone are missing. In the list as published, there are seventeen different registers for pedigrees of cattle. Jerseys and Holsteins are each represented by three registers; there are, therefore, no less than thirteen distinct breeds represented, viz:—Aberdeen—Angus, Ayrshire, Brown Swiss, Devon, Dutch Belted, Galloway, Guernsey, Hereford, Holstein—Friesian, Jersey, Red Polled, Short-horn and Sussex.

The number of registers for swine is fourteen, but here again we have duplications of herd books for one breed. There are five records for Poland-China swine. Chester White breeders are represented by two records. The number of breeds of swine as represented by the registers is therefore nine, viz:—Berkshire, Cheshire, Chester White, Duroc-Jersey, Essex, Gothland, Poland-China, Small Yorkshire and Victoria.

Sheep are registered as "Mutton breeds," six; and "Fine wools," fourteen; inasmuch however as "these merino register associations are scattered over different parts of the country, and as most of them are of comparatively local importance, some being established in the interests of "merino" sheep and others in behalf of what might be called their sub-varieties," we have been counting them as such; the following seven distinct breeds of sheep are represented in the registers, viz:—Cotswold, Leicester, Lincoln, Oxford Down, Shropshire, Southdown and Merino.

We have here altogether twenty-nine improved breeds of live-stock; a most creditable record, and one which bids fair to become an enormous and successful industry.—Breeder's Gazette.

The Aberdeen-Angus Polls.

In a talk with Mr. Frisbie, of Shasta County, some time since, he told the writer that he thought very highly of the Aberdeen-Angus stock, but let one of our readers obtain a well-bred, well-shaped Aberdeen-Angus bull, and try the effect of crossing on well bred Shorthorns. In the hands of English farmers this has proved a most remunerative proceeding, and for feeding purposes cannot be excelled. There are farmers who make a practice of carrying on this system of breeding, and who obtain from $125 to $200 each for their steers, from eighteen to twenty months old. The polled Angus and the cross are a very hardy race, doing well on pastures which afford but a bare living to other breeds. They are excellent breeders and experience but little difficulty in calving. In the British butcher's eyes their "remarkable weighing qualities, smallness of bone, and lightness of offal" give them a high recommendation.

For shipping purposes their hornlessness gives them especial advantages, and in the fields young horses and other stock are safe from injury. We have little doubt but that a fair trial of this breed and its cross with the Shorthorn would give most remunerative profits to our western stockmen.

Governor Waterman has appointed Dr. H. Latbam, of Oakland, a member of the District Board of Agriculture for District No. 1, vice A. B. Spreckels, resigned.

The famous cattle trail between Texas and the North will soon be wiped out. It was 600 miles long and one mile wide, and when the original survey of Colorado was made, this strip was left for the use of the cattlemen. The railroads have now rendered it useless.

Mr. Elmer Rea, of Gilroy, has sold to Mr. W. E. Bridges, of this city, the five-year-old black colt Platarch, sired by Rea's Nutwood, dam by George Moore Jr., a running horse. The price was $2,000. Platarch trotted a full mile in 2:32 on the morning of the sale.

CORRESPONDENCE.

GOLD LEAF—The Champion Pacer.

DEAR SIR:—In your issues of August 11th and 25th, pages 85 and 119 of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN, you speak of the pacer Gold Leaf in such a manner as to lead a reader to believe that Mr. Valensin still owns the filly. He bred and raised her, but she is now (and has been ever since its inception), the property of the Pleasanton Stock Farm Co.

You may be a little lishle to get mixed from the names, as Mr. V. calls his place The Valensin Stock Farm of Pleasanton.

I know no error was intended, but just call your attention to the fact so as to give credit where it is due. Mr. McDowell is driving for this company, and if there is any credit in bringing a three-year-old to the front and downing records, he and the manager of this company should get it and not Mr. Valensin. Most respectfully yours,

J. H. NEAL, Clerk P. S. F. Co.

PLEASANTON, CAL., Aug. 26th, 1888.

A curious error has been going the rounds of the press in regard to the ownership of the wonderful three-year-old pacer, Gold Leaf. We, too, stated that she belonged to G. Valensin, while in fact though bred by him, she is owned by his neighbor, Judge Salisbury. Both the great stock-farms of Pleasanton may feel proud of the performance of the chestnut mare, for she again set the mark for pacer three-year-olds, as she made a mile in 2:19 1-5. In another column will be found a complete report of her victory of this week.

The Petaluma Pools.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—Will you be so kind as to correct the statement made in your article about the pool-selling privileges at the State Fair to the effect that "The Petaluma society awarded its privileges to Whitehead & Co., and when Mr. Killip offered figures he was informed that the contract had been awarded to Whitehead. This satisfied Mr. Killip, and no more was said." Last year Messrs. Killip & Co. did not make a bid for the Petaluma pool privileges, though requested to do so. This year Messrs. Killip & Co. did make a bid, but were out-bid by Whitehead & Co.

August 27, 1888. WILFRED PAGE.

The Los Angeles Course.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—At your suggestion and to place all controversy at an end, we have had this day Messrs. Hansen and Solano, the most reliable and prominent engineers and surveyors in this vicinity, to re-survey our race course. Later they will furnish a report in detail. Originally the measurement is correct, one mile. The rail or pole has been set a little out, making the mile 3 ft. from the rail, 2 and 30 100 ft. long or about 28 inches over one mile. From the wire to the first quarter is 1320 1/2 feet (setting that point); the second quarter is 1323 1-10 feet long, or 3 1-10 feet longer; the third quarter is 1319 feet, or 1 foot short; the last quarter is 1320 and 70-100 feet long, or 8 inches over length, so that all points excepting the one-half are about as accurate as the eye. In regard to the Lanra Gardner time, I have looked up some facts. First the starters flag fell, and the time flag fell after the horses had travelled 70 feet, which was correct in order to give the proper time stationed as he was. Five gentlemen are positive that the time flag dropped at the proper time. As the distance is correct, you are safe in assuring your patrons that the time made by Laura Gardner, 2:07 1/2, is correct; she had full 113 lbs. up. I have heard some comments touching the accident occurring to Palo Alto's mare Manzanita. Two eye-witnesses assure me that during some early morning exercise she was driven too close to the damp track; she balled up and slipped, wrenching her so close that she pulled up lame. No irregularities in the track affected her or any other horse here. Our track, our horses, our climate and our people are fast, a combination hard to beat. Respectfully,

E. A. DECAMP.

LOS ANGELES, CAL., August 22, 1888.

From Chico Fair.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—The great surprise of the meeting was the defeat of Wallace G. and a good field of horses by the countryman and his horse Victor. He appears on the track with no shoes, tips forward, no check, with kicking strap, hitched to a little sulky, looking like a small country milk cart. The driver, and owner, Mr. Dougherty, appears in his seat dressed in a soldier's suit, everybody laughing and "guying" him. In getting away for the first heat he is the last to get "off." He trots around them all and wins the heat in 2.25, the reins in one hand, one foot out of the stirrup, dangling between the shaft, his soldier cap setting over on one side of his head. Everybody rushed for the box. Wallace G. is still a big favorite. Old gentleman, a granger, is standing at the box taking the $5 in $60 on Victor. Away they go for the second heat, everybody sitting in great suspense and quiet. Here they come at last, thundering down the stretch. A shout goes up, Victor in the lead. Finish of the best, Victor in the lead. Another rush for the box. Victor a big favorite. Off they go for the third heat. The drivers of the different horses on their mettle, off with a tremendous rush of speed, take the pole from the little horse Victor, g-tting him in a pocket. He quietly moves along until swinging in the stretch. There is an opening, which he darts through and wins the heat and race, showing himself a general and a soldier, and the performance withal was a grand one, the thermometer being 112 in the shade. The time for the respective heats is as follows: First heat, 2.25; second, 2.25; third, 2.26. Respectfully, J. M. KILLIP.

Our Kentucky Correspondent.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—Some time since, Mr. B. G. Bruce, editor of that excellent paper and authority on equine matters, The Live-Stock Record. Through his paper advocated a new system of employing jockeys, and suggested a moderate fee for first call, and a fee for each mount as better than paying an extravagant and unearned salary, setting forth that the jockeys are to-day the autocrats of the turf, and despotic dictators to proprietors of horses and stables, and that something should be devised and acted upon, to relieve the almost powerless horseman of the imposition, and at the same time divest the autocrats of their assumed authority. Such a step should be taken by the Turf Congress, which has of late years accomplished a great deal for the good of racing, consequently of breeding, as the one could not exist without the other.

Now, another matter that might be very easily remedied which causes at times much complaint from the public, who really support racing by attendance and by supporting the bookies, is the running of horses under stable ownership. What number of ordinary attendants out of fifty know who are the real owners of the stables? Men complain who do not keep themselves posted, that they are sometimes led to back horses really owned by bookmakers, and by others whom they have lost confidence in, by not knowing who were the owners by the insignificant proprietorship designated, as such and such "stable's" horse. Complaints and dissatisfaction tend to weaken attendance, and moreover, "the liberal public" endures much that is wholly wrong; and is entitled to more consideration. I think with Mr. Bruce's new rule, should also be another requiring each horse to start under the real owner's name. And yet another evil which is of late years beginning to tell on racing is the Timers Stand. More than it has ever done of injury is now being executed. The rivalry of associations in preparing tracks with a view to making best time, is seriously misleading horsemen, who like to run where their horses get the best records, as that to some extent, enhances their value. Now, it is patent to everyone that tracks are not in the best condition for horses to run over when they are at their fastest, for the firmer the track the faster the speed, and firm tracks cause nearly all the fresh-downs. "So much the better for the breeders," says one; but not so, men after a time will tire of paying thousands per head for horses when break-down becomes—as it is fast approaching—the rule, instead of the exception. It is not necessary to look back but a few years, to the days of mighty equine heroes who were so, from the fact they ran all distances, and continued to do so to the age at which some of our best are grandsires, sent to the stud at three and four years old, when they should be in their early racing prime.

If it is due or partly due to our timing system, then let us follow John Bull and raise the timers stand. Of course it is competition in the race that sets the killing pace; but it is the condition of the tracks that impress more horses than pace or distance. This will some time or other be acted upon, and the only apparent remedy is to abolish timing. The sooner, the better. Since writing you my last, in which I mentioned Mr. J. R. Farris' three-year-old Adam Pence, the horse started at Harrodsburg, Ky., in a three in five trot, and won the third heat in 2:36, losing the race, however, by an accident in the fourth heat. Mr. F. refused $3,000 for him, and thinks the horse has never yet approximated his best in public. The few horses in training (runners) in this vicinity have done nothing in the last week on account of rain, which to a great extent has injured the most abundant corn crop ever produced here. Thousands of barrels are on the ground, and will decay before time to put away. But we will have the finest growth of blue grass for fall and winter that has been seen in years. And with good winter grass and corn to waste, cattle will be better kept and ready for market earlier next spring than usual; and many a small hog will feel the slaughter knife that might have lived another year had crops been light. Mr. J. W. Guest has gone to Saratoga to bring home with him Heron and turn out for the remainder of this season. Heron has been "off" for some time, and did not start for the Jr. Champion, which stake Mr. Guest had at one time felt certain was within his grasp. Luke Blackburne's winnings foot up to within the neighborhood of forty thousand, and if Proctor Knott takes in the Futurity, as he is now very likely to, Luke will scotch the laurels of Longfellow and of Billet by a lead of twenty or more thousand won by his progeny.

J. C. Davis, Pelaluma, Cal.

I had the pleasure of seeing one of your valuable papers, the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN, and in noting its pages I see that you are recognized as an authority for the breeding of stock. I would like to make some inquiry of a horse that was stud in Sacramento some years ago by the name of Norwood, he by Rysdyk's Hambletonian. I have a fine gelding that is represented to be from Norwood, and it is claimed by some that he is from Norwood as he looks so much like him, his dam is an imported mare, Sancitt from Kentucky. She was owned by Crittes & Hoffman, of Yolo Co., Cal. I would like to know of you if there was a mare by the name of Norwood, and of any note in the trotting sire; and if you would be kind enough to give me some little history of the same it would confer a great favor to me.

Inquirer.

Please answer the following question through the columns of your paper. "If an association gave a purse of $500, with five to enter and three to start, ten per cent. entrance with the conditions. Reserve the right to hold the entries and start the race with a less number and deduct a proportional amount of the purse." They start it with four entries. What amount of money is the association entitled to take out of the purse?

Names Claimed.

B₂ Martin Carter, Irvington, Alameda Co., Cal.

LONG BRANCH, for bay colt, star and snip, left hind ankle white, by Antevolo; dam Zolo, by Steinway, grand dam Fannie Mahone.

I also claim to have the closest related colt to those three great stallions that trotted last Monday and won, by Guy Wilkes. He is by Guy Wilkes, record 2:15 1/4, out of Lida W, pacing record 2:26, and half-sister to Woodnut, record 2:19 1/4, her dam by George M. Patchen, Jr., record 2:27, half-brother to Grandeur of Stamboul, record 2:15, both being by George M. Patchen, record 2:23 1/4.

E. Newland, Oakland.

ANTONITA, for a bay filly, one white hind foot. Foaled June 2, 1888, by Antevolo from Lurline, she by Bell Alta, granddam by Langford; the Langford mare's dam by Belmont.

Los Angeles Track.

In addition to the communication from Mr. DeCamp, published in this number, we are in receipt from Messrs. Hanson and Solana, surveyors of Los Angeles, of a diagram and measurements of the Los Angeles track. The survey was made August 22d, each furlong marked. As the eighths do not figure, in the case of Stamboul there is no necessary for copying time; the quarter is six inches over 1,320 feet, the half mile 3.60 feet long, three-quarters 1.60 feet long, and the whole circuit two feet six inches more than the mile, measured as the rule directs three feet from the inside fence. This settles the question in regard to fractions as well as the full distance, and though fractional parts of the mile are not fully trustworthy, those given in the Stamboul-Arab race are worthy of as much credit as others.

The Helena (Montana) Races.

We clip from the North Pacific Rural Spirit the following account of recent racing at Helena.

HELENA, Mont., Aug. 20.—Three running races and a trotting race made up the programme. The results were as follows:

First race, running, purse $200, two furlongs. J. P. Sutton's Jim Miller (Missoula), won; J. W. Kufong's Weazel (Butte) second; H. R. Baker's Sunday (Helena) third; time, 0:22½.

Second race, running, purse $300, six furlongs. Whitmore Bros.' Laura D. (Portland, Or.), won; R. E. Bybee's Superba (Portland, Or.), second; W. H. Babb's Diavola (Echo, Or.), third, time, 1:16½.

Third race, running, purse $200, 600 yards. H. R. Baker's Sunday (Helena), won; S. N. Ledue's Red Elm (San River), second; W. H. Babb's Bogus (Echo, Or.), third; time, 0:30½. The time recorded is the best on the record, beating it four seconds. The drum was sounded for the start several seconds ahead of the dropping of the flag and the time was taken from the flag. The judges decided that, owing to the peculiar circumstances, no time would be taken, but the race would be considered as run.

Fourth Race, trotting, purse $500, 2:32 class.
C. G. Bradshaw's Col. Bradshaw..... 1 1
Alfred Gonzalez's Junior..... 2 4
Wesley Walters' Leona..... 3 2
F. Fancher's Prince..... 4 3
Time 2:26, 2:23½, 2:22½.

Aug. 21.—There were four events, resulting as follows:
First race, Helena Stakes, trotting, for two-year-olds, 2 in 3; $50 each, $100 added; $300 more if 2:50 is beaten—Marcus Daly's Hatie D. (Butte) won, C. B. Jeffries' Tempest Belmont (Butte) distanced; time, 2:40. There were thirteen entries but only two starters.

Second Race, running; one mile, purse $500—Matlock Bros.' Repetta (Pendleton, Or.) won, W. H. Babb's Duffy Winters (Echo, Or.) second, R. H. Baker's Vice Regent (Helena) third, like Moorhouse's Daniel B. (Butte) fourth; time, 1:44. Repetta was the favorite.

Third Race, running; Derby Stakes for three-year-olds, 1½ miles—like Moorhouse's Nevada (Butte) won, Whitmore Bros. Coloma (Portland) second, W. H. Babb's Oregon (Echo Or.) third, time 2:39½. Coloma sold first choice. Bettors lost heavily. D. R. Wells' Humboldt, an Oregon horse, was scratched.

Fourth Race—Trotting; 3:00 class; purse $500.
Sam Scott's Fantasia (Deer Lodge)..... 2 2 1 1 1 1
Chas. Fickett's D. W. K. (Los Angeles, Cal.)..... 2 1 2 2 2 2
S. O. Ewing's Dennis Ryan (Salt Lake)..... 1 3 3 3 3 3
Wesley Walters' Carrie C. (Baker City)..... 4 4 4 4 4 4
Time, 2:31½, 2:31½, 2:31½, 2:29, 2:29, 2:34.

Lee Chauer's Murray (San Francisco), Breech & Fisher's Little Dica (Helena), were scratched.

The third heat was declared off, the judges declaring that D. W. K.'s driver made no effort to win.

August 22d.—The events resulted as follows:
First Race—Montana Stakes. Trotting; for three-year-olds; $50 each, $200 added; $300 more if 2:36 is beaten.
Juanita..... 1 1
Lord Byron..... 2 2
Time, 2:5, 2:24½.

Mentua, Archbishop, Frisco, Ilton, Maud Singleton and Idaho were drawn.

Second Race—Pioneer Stakes. Running. Six furlongs; for two-year olds; $50 each, $500 added—Bybee's Jr.'s Jubilee (Portland) won, R. E. Bybee's Broadchurch (Portland) second, Whitmore Bros.' Pat Curran (Portland) third, W. H. Babb's Arthur H. (Echo, Or.) fourth. Time, 1:18.

Jubilee was badly cut on the leg by one of the other horses during the race.

Third Race, running; half-mile heats, 2 in 3.
W. H. Babb's Bogus, Echo, Or..... 1 1
L. W. Ledue's Red Elm, Salt Lake..... 2 3
Whitmore Bros.' Laura D., Portland..... 0 2
R. H. Baker's Sunday, Helena..... 3 0
Suiter & DeCamp's Sorrel John, Idaho..... 0 0
Time for half beats, 0:48—the best on record. Bogus was a hot favorite.

Fourth Race, trotting; 3 in 5, 2:27 class; purse $1,000.
Marcus Daly's Senator, Anaconda, Mont..... 1 1
A. C. Breckwold's Ollie, Evanston, Wyo..... 2 2
D. J. Arnold's John F., Helena..... 3 3
Charles Fickett's Contractor, Los Angeles..... 4 4
W. H. Raymond's Carrie Belle, Montana..... 6 5
C. G. Bradshaw's Col. Bradshaw, Butte..... 6 6
A. G. Brey's Kitty Ham, Portland..... 7 0
Time, 2:26½, 2:24½, 2:25.

Ira D., S. S. and Cottowood Chief, Montana horses, were drawn, as was Kitty Ham after she had demolished her sulky in the first heat.

Deck Wright is twenty years old and is probably the fastest trotter of his age in the world to-day.

Petaluma Fair.

Completed from Last Week.

The attendance for Friday the fourth day of the Petaluma Fair, gave the Association the largest receipts ever had. Weather warm; track in fine condition and fast.

The sport began with a running race, a dash of one mile, and had as starters Kildare, Faeilade's Lest and Nancy which was won by Kildare; time, 1:45½.

The great three-year-old trot followed, which had been anxiously looked forward to, by all horsemen because of the wonderful performances in the work of Grandee, Direct and Memo. Unfortunately Memo jumped on his quarter a few days before and had to be drawn. In the pool Grandee brought $50 to $25 for Direct, and thousands of dollars were invested.

On the first attempt they got the word and went away very fast, but on the turn Direct made a bad break and fell behind ten lengths at the quarter. In the straight, up the backstretch, he made another break, and was twenty lengths in the rear at the half. Grandee came on end won the heat handsly by a length. Direct, after his break on the backstretch, got to the half-mile pole trotting square and fast, coming from there home in 1:07½, the last quarter in 0:32½, and was only beaten out by Grandee a length in 2:26.

For the second heat the pools still sold as before, two to one on Grandee, as that wonderful burst of speed shown by Direct in the last half of the first heat gave his backers great confidence, with the proviso that he kept his feet. On the sixth attempt they got the word, and Grandee, with whirlwind speed, went around the turn and reached the quarter in 36 seconds, five lengths ahead of Direct, who was now under full headway and trotting very fast.

Up the backstretch Direct somewhat closed up the gap, and at the half in 1:13, was only two lengths behind. They both swung into the stretch close together, trotting strong and true.

From the 150-yard pole both Goldsmith and McDowell drew their whips, and, using every art known to the profession, endeavored to land their horses at the wire first, if only by an eyelash.

At the draw-gate Grandee made a bobble, but only made one single bound in the air and landed trotting, and still under the whip came on and won the heat and the race by two lengths in the first time of 2:23½.

Grandee is the property of W. W. Corbitt of San Mateo, and was bred and reared by him. He is by Le Grande, out of Norma by Artherton, second dam Nurmahai by Black bird. He is a beautiful bay gelding, about 15½ hands high.

SUMMARY.

W. W. Corbitt's b g Grandee by La Grande, dam Norma, 1 1
Pleasanton Stock Farm's b k Direct by Director, dam Echora, 2 2
Time 2:26, 2:23½.

The next race had only two starters for the four-year-old stakes, Elle and Mortimer, for which in the pools Ella was a most decided favorite.

She won the first and second heats as she pleased, the second heat very nearly distancing Mortimer.

Third Heat—Ella again led Mortimer to the quarter by two lengths, which she increased to four at the half. Mortimer came in fast on the last turn and outtrotted the mare on the stretch and carried her to a break near the wire. Mortimer first, Ella second.

Fourth Heat—Ella broke on the first turn and fell back a length, but caught up quickly and passed the stallion at the quarter-pole and increased her lead by a dozen lengths to the wire.

SUMMARY.

Palo Alto's b f Ella by Electioneer, dam Lady Ellen, Marvin 1 1 2 1
W. Page's b s Mortimer by Electioneer, dam Marti, Hickok 2 1 2 1
Time, 2:36, 2:29, 2:34½, 2:35.

The fourth race, for district stallions, brought out Capri, Whalebone and Echo Royal. The bell tapped on the first attempt, and a good start was made. Capri led from the post to the finish. Echo Royal came in second, with Whalebone third. Time, 2:56½.

Second Heat—Capri again led for the mile by a couple of lengths, and won the heat in 2:49, with Echo Royal second and Whalebone third.

Third Heat—Capri went away in the lead to the half mile, when Echo Royal passed him and won the heat in 2:50½, Capri second and Whalebone third.

Fourth Heat—Capri and Echo Royal disputed the lead throughout, and came down the stretch neck and neck. At the drawgate Echo broke and Capri led to within twenty yards of the wire, when he broke, and they both came under the wire neck and neck for a dead heat. Whalebone was last. Time, 2:49½.

Echo Royal won the fifth heat in 2:49, Capri second and Whalebone last. The race was then postponed until 1 o'clock, Saturday.

The fifth race of the day was for the district two-year-olds, with Thos. Smith's George Washington, and A. J. Zane's Captor. Captor was the favorite in the pool-box, and won in two straight heats. Time, 3:00½, 2:52½.

SUMMARY.

A. J. Zane's g c Captor..... 1 1
Thos. Smith's h c George Washington..... 2 2
Time, 3:00½, 2:52½.

Saturday, the fifth day, was much cooler, with a large crowd on hand. First on the programme was the unfinished race for district stallions of the day before. The bell was tapped for a good start on the first attempt. At the first turn the bay stallion broke and fell back three lengths. Capri trotted fast to the quarter and increased his lead to four lengths. The race now became a procession, and Capri came under the wire first in a jog, winner of the heat and race, Echo Royal a dozen lengths behind. Time, 2:54½.

Next came the Petaluma Derby, one and a half miles, with B. C. Holly's brown colt Sid, by imported Sidartha, dam Estella, and Wm. Boot's black gelding Index, by Thad Stevens, dam Gipsy. Sid cut out the running to the first quarter, where Carrillo brought Index up and the pair came past the stand the first time side by side. Both horses were running easy under a pull, but Index was only playing with his rival and came away on the backstretch and opened a gap of five lengths. As they swung into the stretch the last time Sid came fast and moved up within a length of the black horse, but could not quite reach him, and Index caught the judges' eye first.

Chico Fair.

The Ninth Annual Fair of Agricultural District No. 3, commenced at Chico, August 21st. The attendance was the largest of any preceding Fair of the district. The first race on the programme for first day was trotting for two-year-old colts, which was won by Annie, in straight heats. Time—3:00 and 3:01.

The second race was trotting for the three-minute class, which was won by Blockade. Time—2:33, 2:36 and 2:42.

The third race, a special one, was postponed after one heat was trotted. This was won by Jim L. in 2:22.

The second day was ushered in with crowds of people on the streets and at the pavilion and track. The day was very pleasant. At the pavilion additions of fruits, canned and jellied, were made.

The races began at 1 o'clock sharp, with the unfinished race of yesterday between the following horses: Jim L. Eros, Argent and Sunflower. The first and third heats were won by Jim L. in 2:32 and 2:30; the second, fourth and fifth by Sunflower in 2:28, 2:30 and 2:31.

The second was a trotting race for three-year-olds, mile heats, best three in five, for a purse of $300. The entries were Langmont, Strathway, Stranger and W. W. The first and second heats were won by W. W. 2:02½ and 2:47, Langmont distanced. The third, fourth and fifth heats were won by Strathway, time 2:47, 2:45, 2:49, W. W. distanced.

Number three was a trot for the 2:40 class, best three in five, for a purse of $500, with the following entries: Blockade, Lohengrin, Daisy Maxwell, Bird and Millboy. Lohengrin won in three straight heats, time 2:35, 2:36, 2:37, Millboy distanced.

The third day of the fair was a repetition of the success of the day before. The crowd was greater than ever.

The first race this afternoon was a running half-mile and repeat for a purse of $150. The entries were: San Luis Obispo, Nettie Moak, Three Cheers, Adonis, J. M. R., and Sage Bush. J. M. R. won both heats in 0:49 and 0:49.

The second race, pacing, was for a purse of $500. The entries were Almont, Patience, Pocahontas, Elwood and Bracelet. Elwood won in 2:23, 2:25 and 2:27.

The crowd in town was on the fourth day greater than any day preceding, and considerable excitement was centered in the trotting race. The entries were for the 2:27 class, mile heats, best 3 in 5, for a purse of $600: Wallace G., Jim L., Artist, Hahn, Victor, Haz 1 Kirke, Eros and Ed. Victor won in three straight heats. Time, 2:25, 2:25 and 2:26.

The last day of the Third District Fair was successfully closed on August 25. The attendance did not abate in the least, and the crowd during the week was the largest ever in Chico.

The races were very good. The first was a trotting for a purse of $500 for the 2:30 class, mile heats, best 3 in five. The entries were: Don Thomas, Argent, Sunflower, and Emma Temple. Don Thomas won the race in straight heats. Time, 2:28, 2:27 and 2:28. In the running race for a purse of $400, mile heats, best 3 in 5, the entries were: Peregrine, Adonis, J. M. R. and Noremac. Peregrine won in 2:00, 1:58, 1:59. In the trotting race for four-year-olds and under for a purse of $400, mile heats, best 3 in 5, the entries were Pearl and Altana. The latter won in 2:40, 2:42, 2:39.

Lot Slocum at the Helena, Montana Meeting, August 24th last, won the first, third and fourth heats, making 2:21 in the third heat, and being the fastest mile ever trotted in Montana. He trotted against Conde, Little Joe, Ranchero and Charlie Hilton.

The Solano and Napa District Agricultural Association will hold its fair at Napa from October 1st to 6th.

It has been necessary to erect 100 extra stalls for stock at Fresno Fair.

We publish in this issue the entries of the Nevada State Fair trotting and stake running races. The Running Purse races do not close until two days previous to the race.

Oakland Canoe Club.

Last Saturday canoes Conchita and Flirt left the boat house at 2 p. m. bound for Goat Island, with a strong ebb tide. Good time was made to the mouth of the creek, when the breeze stiffened rapidly. Reefs were taken in and the canoes put in shape for heavy weather. The wind continued to freshen and very soon there was considerable sea. The Conchita had on a large suit of sails which do not reef very small, and consequently made quite heavy weather of it. The Flirt is at home in a blow, and enjoyed the fun. The skipper of the Conchita had his wife on board as a passenger, and she proved herself of the right quality by making no fuss about a complete soaking before the Island was reached. However, a comfortable camp was soon arranged and everything dried out. Next morning the Mystic and Gypsy came out to the Island for lunch, and the combined fleet had a delightful sail home in the afternoon.

The Pirate and Sampler are undergoing complete repairs and Mystic has had her mainmast shifted about a foot further "forward."

The float is to be replaced in fine condition next Sunday, which will be a great comfort to the Directors who have had lots of trouble over it.

On September 9th and 10th the Canoe Club has invited the Corinthian Yacht Club to come over and participate in a regatta and general jollification. Last year this entertainment proved a success, and promises to be even more enjoyable on this occasion.

TRAP.

Eureka Gun Club.

The club finished the most successful season in its history, on Saturday last at Bird's Point, twelve members appearing, and doing excellent shooting. The day was well suited to the sport and a large number of spectators attended. The birds flew unevenly, some being dufferish, but most of them lively. Six of the twelve participants made clean scores, something unusual even among experts such as all of the Eureka men are. Four of the most reliable shots were out of form or had had luck, Mr. Howard Black scoring but 9, Mr. A. F. Adams but 8, Mr. W. W. Haskell 9 and Mr. Edwin Goodhall only 7. The prizes for the season were awarded after the shooting was done, Messrs H. C. Golcher and A. F. Adams tied for first, Mr. Golcher winning on the shoot off, a valuable pair of diamond cuff buttons. Mr. Adams took second a pair of pearl mounted opera glasses. For third Messrs MacMillan and C. W. Kellogg tied, Mr. MacMillan winning the tie and receiving a Colt's Magazine rifle. Fourth a split bamboo rod went to Mr. C. W. Kellogg. Fifth prize 250 Standard cartridges was won by Major S. I. Kellogg, a veritable carrying at coals to Newcastle. Sixth a case of perumery was awarded to Mr. Howard Black, and seventh a $2,000 Accident Insurance Policy to E. W. Chapin.

The scores and a summary of the season's work follow: at 12 birds Hurlingham, for club trophies, E. W. Chapin 9; S. I. Kellogg 12; C. F. Stone 12; H. Black 9; C. W. Kellogg 11; F. G. Sanborn 12; A. F. Adams 8; W. MacMillan 12; W. E. Mayhew 12; W. W. Haskell 9; H. C. Golcher 12; E. Goodall 7.

Los Angeles Tournament.

A very successful trap tournament was given at Los Angeles on August 18th and 19th, under the auspices of the Los Angeles Rod and Gun Club, and managed by Mr. T. E. Walker, President of the club. Gentlemen from San Diego, San Bernardino, Pasadena and Los Angeles were present and passed two days in lively shooting and social intercourse. On the first day the match of leading interest was at 25 single Blue Rock targets, the chief prizes being donated by the Tufts-Lyons Arms Co., agents for the Peters' cartridge, only that ammunition being permitted in the match. The winners were: Hamilton first, on a shoot off; Jones second; Chick third; Unger fourth; Britton fifth; Hinman, Morgan and Tafts tie for sixth. The shooting in the Peters match was of more than average merit.

At 25 single Blue Rock targets, Chamberlin rules. Entrance price of birds.

Hamilton 23, Jones 23, Chick 20, Britton 19, Unger 19, Hinman 19, Walker 18, Morgan 18, Morgan 18, Childs 18, Hart, Jr. 16, Woodbury 16, Maxwell 12, Benchley 11, Dickerson 11, Hart, Jr. 10, Campbell 10, White 9, West 9.

The second match of the first day was at 9 single and 5 pairs of Blue Rocks. Doctor Britton took first with total of 16, second, third and fourth being divided by Messrs. Hinman, Unger and Hart. The scores were:

Britton 16, Hinman 14, Unger 14, Hart 14, Hamilton 13, Woodbury 13, Tafts 12, Morgan 12, Childs 11, Chick 10, Maxwell 8, Benchley 8, Alpha 7, Campbell 7, Earles 5.

The third race was at 9 single and 5 pairs of Blue Rocks, $2.50 entrance. Four moneys, won by Doctor Britton, Messrs. Hamilton, Benchley, Cline, Tufts and Morgan dividing second, third and fourth. Scores:

Britton 16, Hamilton 14, Benchley 14, Cline 14, Tufts 14, Morgan 14, Chick 13, Hart 12, Unger 12, Hinman 11, Wild 11, Campbell 11.

SECOND DAY.

The chief attraction of the second day was the standard match for the rich medal offered to the shooters of Southern California by the Selby Smelting and Lead Co., and for six special prizes presented by leading firms of this city. The Selby gold medal is circular, indented on the reverse with a miniature blue rock target in silver, on the obverse a pair of breech loading shot guns, perfectly worked out in all details appear. The medal is suspended by links from a bar in which the monogram "1888" is pierced and the words "Champion, Southern California." The suspending ribbon surrounds an empty shell of gold and silver. A very tasteful and appropriate trophy. It was won by Mr. Martinez Chick with a score of eighty-five out of a possible hundred. Dr. Britton who won it at the San Diego tournament in July, scored but 73 in his latest effort to hold it. Mr. Chick took 50 percent of the entrance money with the medal. The other prizes were, 30 per cent of entrance won by W. J. Morgan, 20 per cent. won by M. E. Jones, 500 Standard Cartridges, by Dr. Britton, a year's subscription to the Los Angeles Tribune by S. Gunn, a pair of hunting shoes by J. Cline $5 cash by E. Unger, a $5 hat by Mr. Hart Sr., $5 cash by W. C. Hinman.

At 50 single and 25 pairs of Blue Rocks, Chamberlin rules. For $5 entrance and medal added by Selby Smelting and Lead Company.

M. Chick 85, W. J. Morgan 78, M. E. Jones 76, Dr. O. F. Britton 73, W. A. Hamilton 68, S. Gunn 65, J. Cline 63, E. Unger 63, H. Hart 62, W. C. Hinman 60, E. E. White 57, H. Jenks 56, Childs 56, E. Benchley 52, F. J. Woodbury 30.

At 10 single Blue Rocks, $250 entrance.
E. Unger 10, Dr. Britton 9, M. Chick 8, Hamilton 8, Childs 7, Hinman 5, Walker 5.

At 6 single and 2 pairs Blue Rocks, $250 entrance.
M. Chick 7, Unger 7, Britton 5, Hinman 5, Jenks 3.

Dove shooting is reported good near San Diego, and the quail season in that region bids fair to be first rate.

Near Hydesville, Humboldt County, Mr. Fletcher Harrow last week came upon a cinnamon bear in thick brush. Mr. Harrow had only a shot-gun, with which he shot the animal at short range without stopping it. As the bear came on the hunter backed away, and in doing so tripped and fell, the bear at once fastening upon him. A Mrs. Johnson, who was with Mr. Harrow, at once secured the gun and killed the bear, an unusual instance of womanly courage.

Dove Shooting at Farmington.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—The sportsmen of Stockton are proverbially hospitable, but not until last week was I able to speak from personal knowledge of their capacities as entertainers. In common with other San Francisco friends I received an invitation from Mr. J. C. Haas to visit him and have a little dove shooting, and loaded down with the traps usually considered essential. I reached his home on Friday evening last. Was soon installed as one of the family with such heartiness as could not but remove all timidity and passed the hours in talk about gun and dog with one of the most kindly men that ever took a brother sportsman into his heart. Early to bed was the order, and an early rising just as the sun was tinging the Sierra foothills with purple far richer than any of Tyre. After what some one has called a "hasty cup" of coffee, a light wagon drawn by a spanking pair of bays, bowled merrily out of Stockton. Besides a load of guns, shells, toggery and hamper, there were in the wagon, Messrs. Haas, F. E. Lane, Austin Sperry and the writer. Dr. S. N. Cross was to have been of the party, but a professional engagement prevented. A couple of hours drive, rather dusty, but made lively by the pranks and fearfully dry jokes of Lane, with an occasional absurd walk from Sperry, took the party to the shooting ground near Farmington. Caring for the team and indulgence in luncheon whiled away an hour and positions were then taken for the day's sport. Messrs. Haas and Sperry stopped at a water hole near by, while Mr. Lane and your correspondent crossed a field to another spring and camped under an oak for the day. The doves soon began to come to water, and the popping was continuous until noon, when the flight ceased for two or three hours. The birds then began to go out for the evening feed and both on the outward flight and as they returned afforded splendid shooting.

Mr. Haas has reduced dove shooting to an exact science, and did some superb work, taking the swift flying little birds as they came and almost invariably scoring. Mr. Sperry also proved himself a masterly hand at field shooting. Mr. Lane would have done much better if he had had time to leave off his stories and cease cracking his witticisms. As it was he lost many shots, but in occasional periods of silence and alertness showed that he could shoot doves. The heat rather oppressed the writer, but frequent applications to the iced tea brought along enabled him to account for a fair share of game. The sport continued until dusk, about a gross of doves being then in hand, mostly young birds and in prime condition. The wagon was then hurriedly repacked and the return drive made by clear bright moonlight. The twenty miles seemed but a span in such company, and it was with regret that the lights of Stockton were seen and the trip concluded. Another evening in delightful social intercourse and in the morning a return to this city rounded up what was one of the most pleasant excursions treasured in memory.

W. DEVAULT.

SAN FRANCISCO, August, 23th, 1888.

Riverside Sportman's Club.

On Friday night of last week the club met to modify its By-Laws and consult in regard to holding a tournament. The attendance was good, and a lively interest was manifested.

The first business was a report from the secretary and treasurer, Mr. C. F. Packard, which made a good showing of the standing of the club, including the improvements on their grounds, new traps, etc., at a cost of over fifty dollars.

The next matter brought up was the price of targets as thrown from the trap. The members have hitherto been charged two cents each, but at times there was a considerable loss to the club at this price, and after a full discussion of the matter, the vote was unanimous to raise the price to two and a half cents each. This is less than the usual price.

Having disposed of this subject the president of the club introduced the subject of holding a tournament at Riverside this fall, and stated that the Selby Smelting and Lead Company, of San Francisco, had offered a gold medal worth $100, for competition at the trap, open to actual residents of San Bernardino, San Diego, Los Angeles, Ventura, Santa Barbara, San Luis Obispo and Kern counties, the contests to take place under the auspices of different gun and shooting clubs of those counties.

The suggestion of holding such a tournament in Riverside met with universal favor and a committee consisting of A. K. Holt, president, C. F. Packard, secretary, and P. K. Klinefelter was appointed to confer with the Selby Company in regard to holding such a tournament during the Autumn.

The Chamberlin Cartridge Company's trap shooting rules were adopted for the use of the club.

The regular shooting meeting for the month was held on August 24th, Mr. J. Rule winning the medal. The scores were:

At 20 single clay pigeons, 18 yards rise,
J. Rule 13, C. F. Packard 9, A. K. Holt 8, L. C. Chamblin 6, P. Klinefelter 6, J. S. Castleman 5, T. Cundiff 5, J. E. Beamer 3, Frank Patton 2.

At 15 single clay pigeons, 18 yards rise,
A. K. Holt 7, L. C. Chamblin 6, J. S. Castleman 5, C. F. Packard 4, P. Klinefelter 3, S. Castleman 3, J. E. Beamer 3, F. A. Patton 2, J. Rule 2, S. Squire 2, Mr. Robb 1, T. Cundiff 1.

Gun Club.

But ten members were present for the August meeting at Adam's Point on last Saturday, and of those only three got into double figures, because of rather adverse luck and the extreme quickness of the birds, aided by a sharp breeze.

At 12 birds, Hurlingham. For club prizes. F. Butler 11, Jellett 11, Swett 7, W. L. Williams 10, Williams 9, Havens 9, Woodward 6, W. Leviston 5, Fox 5, Dr. J. C. Shorb 6.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—In your issue of June 23d you publish an article by "Gaucha," relative to the L. C. Smith gun owned by Mr. Vic. H. Kenecutte, opening at time of firing, in the match between that gentleman and Dr. Carver. The logic of the article from beginning to end is to prove that no other make of gun was ever known to open at time of firing, on which point I differ with him. If "Gaucha" holds in horror a gun that will open under heavy strain, caused by using the Schultze powder, what must he think of his favorite Parker gun opening at time of firing when using black powder. For the pleasure of friend "Gaucha" I will give a couple of cases:

A Parker gun in the hands of Mr. C. M. Hinsdale, of Newton, Iowa, during the tournament at Davenport, Iowa, in February of last year, opened at time of firing when using black powder so much so that he discarded it and purchased an L. C. Smith, as he said he considered the lock-bolt fastening of the L. C. Smith gun the strongest he had ever seen. A Parker gun in the hands of Mr. Lewis Wyckoff, of Plainfield, N. J., and a member of the Dunellen Gun Club, opened many times at time of firing when using black powder, and it also did the same when using Schultze powder. Now, if friend "Gaucha" should be in need of any information in regard to the Parker gun opening at time of firing when using Schultze powder, I can furnish it.

O. L. YEOMANS.

ORANGE, N. J., August 21, 1888.

The individual match for the Selby Medal, representing the championship of Central California, will be shot at Adam's Point on September 8th, beginning at 10 A. M. Besides the splendid medal, a long list of valuable prizes has been presented by the leading gun firms of this city and Oakland, which together with the substantial entrance money, should induce the attendance of the cracks from other localities. Stockton might send down its Haas, Merrill, Sperry and Lane. San Jose its Coykendell, Delmas and Anderson. Solano the Bassfords and Donaldsons. Sacramento, Geo. W. Watson, Todd and the Gebers. The match is of importance, as can be seen by consulting the advertisement in another column, where full particulars appear.

ROD.

Communications relating to this department should be addressed to BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN.

The Otter.

Trout poaching in local streams and preserves is not uncommon, but in so far as we know, is confined to worm fishing and to the use of explosives. In other countries, however, the poacher resorts to various singular methods, some of them most ingenious, such as the "otter."

The Scotch trout poachers are numerous and indefatigable, and of all the forms of poaching short of absolutely netting the water, the "otter" is the one which does most damage. In name this deadly implement is no doubt familiar to many who are ignorant of its method and use. The "otter" is an oblong or semi-circular piece of wood, weighted at the bottom with a leaden keel. The lead keeps the wood upright in the water, and to the wood a line is attached by sliding rings, and at intervals along the line a number of flies. This constitutes a working "otter." Some are hinged that they may be better concealed for carriage, since the "otter" fisher is amenable to the law, and his implements are liable to confiscation. The poacher reaches the scene of his depredations before daylight, and is ready to begin at dawn when the briskest and finest fish are on the take.

The time has come at last. The line is unwound with its hundred flies, the "otter" is placed in the water for a run, and the poacher makes a start. As he moves along the bank the "otter," something on the principle of a kite, moves outward and diagonally, the flies skimming the water. Twenty yards of line are hardly out when fish are hooked and splashing on the surface. They soon tire, and are dragged along. Then another is caught, and so on. The whole line having been paid out and the rings reversed, a run to bank shows a kill of twenty, from four ounces to a pound and a half. This process is repeated with varying luck as long as it is safe to remain. But as the sun shines on the rippling waters, warm and clear, the spoil is bagged, the gear hidden, and tracks are made for home, the poacher sorting and packing his catch in good time for the first train to the city, where such spoil find a ready and profitable sale. The "ginneller" is another who manages to take a good haul from the best preserved waters, especially when the water is low. Arms and legs bare, he stoops and stretches under the banks and stones, and "ginnells" out—as it is called—all that he can reach with his hands; those further away he pins with a harpoon made from two or three table forks tied on the end of a stick. The "hoop net" is also a ready way by which the largest trout and finest salmon are often brought to bank; as is also the small mesh net, so small that parr are often landed in bushels, to the certain destruction of the legitimate fishing on such waters.

In noting the capture of a large trout by Mr. John M. Adams last week, the length was given as 16½ inches. It should have been 26½. A five pound fish of the former length would be a curio.

ATHLETICS.

Schifferstein-Purcell.

It is now more than probable that the Eastern athletic fraternity will be denied the pleasure of measuring strides against V. E. Schifferstein and J. Purcell, whom the Olympic Athletic Club of California, originally intended to send East to compete in the American and Canadian championships. It is said that the former has given up his position to enable him to train for the event, and that Purcell is a sort of a track-master to a local club. A Western correspondent sends us the following:

"Does it not strike the promoters of the Schifferstein-Purcell Eastern tour that by their own foolish acts they have placed both of these men out of the amateur ranks? Schifferstein, especially, is irretrievably lost to amateurism. The first serious breach he was guilty of and which should at the time have called down upon his head the censure of the P. O. A. A., was when he ran against Bethune at the Oakland Grounds, and gave money was charged. There were two things at once calculated to disqualify him. Mr. Schifferstein should have known better than to have entered in a race against Harry Bethune; and, if not, the club directors should have understood their business and prevented the race.

"Purcell is in no way a Californian, and to send him back East as one, where he has already, as an Irishman, competed for honors, would be the height of absurdity, and place the club in a most ridiculous light.

"Presuming that Schifferstein and Purcell were the proper persons to send East to represent the Olympic Club, is it not probable that protests would be entered wherever they would attempt to compete? They are salaried men, too, paid by the month to represent the Olympic Club. Perhaps it will be held that that does not disqualify them? The club directors at first allowed Schifferstein $100 per month and Purcell $75 per month, and also $900 for their expenses, and at a subsequent meeting it was deemed advisable to not specify amounts, but lump the whole thing and give $1,240 to both men to divide between according to the salaries first settled on."

This situation of affairs, we think, merits the attention of the amateur athletic unions.—Austin in N. Y., "Sporting Times."

[A wish of the correspondent probably fathered the extract clipped. A sufficient corrective may be the statement that the P. C. A. A. is fully cognizant of Mr. Schifferstein's doings, and looks upon him as an amateur within the strictest definition. As to Mr. Purcell's amateur standing there is no question. Neither man is under salary from the Olympic club. A fair estimate of the expense incident to sending the men to the East was made, and the sum appropriated. They should not be handicapped by malicious trash from irresponsible scribblers, and the Sporting Times will merely do justice if it gives them the heartiest countenance and utmost encouragement. They go to win on their merits and if they do win, will bear honors modestly. The notoriety of several of the New York clubs has been gained by gentlemen of other than American birth, so that it ill becomes the organ of those clubs to slur Purcell because of Celtic origin.—ATH. ED.]

THE KENNEL.

Dog owners are requested to send for publication the earliest possible notices of whelps, sales, names claimed, presentations and deaths in their kennels, in all instances writing plainly names of sire and dam and of grandparents, colors, dates and breed.

Whelps.

Mr. W. D. Howe's pointer H. (Rex—Prairie Flower) whelped August 25, 1888, twelve, nine dogs to Professor, (Glen R.—Josie Bow), all liver and white.

The list of large litters recently whelped, was added to last week when Mr. Howe's Belle H. presented him twelve young pointers. Fortunately three-fourths of them, all which can be properly raised, are dog puppies.

The Philadelphia Times says: J. K. Emmet, the actor, has just purchased for $5,000 the St. Bernard dog, Plinlimmon, said to be the finest of the breed in the world. Plinlimmon is five years old, and has never been beaten but once on the show bench. This is the largest price ever paid for a dog.

Mr. Walters who has recently started a kennel at Galt, is doing thorough work on his string. He has them all in good yard form and will undoubtedly bring several well trained dogs to start in January.

A girl in Manchester, England, recently telephoned to the office of her father asking if her dog was there. An affirmative reply being given, she asked to have the dog held up to the telephone, and whistled to him. The dog pricked up his ears, and as soon as replaced on the floor trotted off home.

The Pacific Coast Field Trial Club moves along quietly, too quietly in fact. It has already announced the entries of its Derby of January next, and has selected Bakersfield for the trials, but the judges are as yet unannounced. The standing of the club is sufficient guarantee that its judges will be able and impartial men, but it is much more satisfactory to owners to know who will judge, than be left in the dark until a late moment.

Good reports come from the California Kennels. Breeding none but English setters, and those only of the rarest blood, it is to be expected that a proportion, will succumb to the ordinary diseases of puppyhood, but such an epidemic as decimated the puppies a few months ago, cannot be guarded against, and the losses must be taken philosophically. Only a half-dozen or so of young setters are now at the kennels. They are in good health however, and from among them Judge Post expects to select a winner for the year, the Loadstone puppy being especially likely.

A note from Mr. Geo. T. Allender informs us that the dogs in his charge are doing well. Mr. Schreiber's latest importation from Scotland, the pointer Nestor, by Gladsome, has quite recovered from his long trip, is filling out, and shows every promise of unusually high field quality, beside being a good looker. Of the Don-Sall litter of pointers, also imported in utero by Mr. Schreiber, Mr. Allender has two, both of which are growing fast, and show great quality. Of the older pointers, Mr. H. S. Wort's Feunimore, by Tom Pinch—Lassie, is making a bigish dog, sleek and puppyish as yet, but very keen and fast. Laddie, of the same litter, is also rather large, but more precocious, is already in fair form, and hunts like an old dog. The serious work of preparation for the coming Pacific Coast Derby will soon begin, and Mr. Allender will then take his string out into the hills, where he can have good ground and plenty of birds at hand.

The most persistent effort has failed to obtain full and accurate information about the intentions of the California Kennel Bench Show and Field Trial Club, in reference to a field trial this year. Paragraphs appear at intervals in the daily papers purporting to state definitely what is proposed by the leaders of the club, but personal interviews with those leaders invariably bring out direct negations of the rumors. The club will find no profit in secrecy. It should name the place of its trials as soon as possible, publish its entry list, give the names of the judges, and state the rules under which its competitions will be run. Quite a goodly number of entries might be made by the members and its trials might be run entirely in private, but records made in that way cannot be as generally received or as satisfactory to winners as those made under the eyes of all who chose to attend. Public criticism is a healthy corrective and should be courted.

The success of the P. C. F. T. C. is assured. It has, through the generosity of Messrs. Houghton, Lightner, Lechner, Borgwardt, Miller, Pyle and Seymour of Bakersfield been allotted the shooting over some ten thousand acres of superb quail ground, perfectly adapted for field trial uses. Comfortable club rooms in Bakersfield have been fitted up by the "Knights of the Trigger" of that city, use of which is freely tendered to the field trialers. A new hotel, affording ample and fit accommodations, has been erected. Teams and saddle horses of good quality and at fair rates can be had by any number of spectators. The distance from Bakersfield to the trial ground is only a few minutes' drive. The weather in Kern county in January is all that can be desired; days cool and fresh; and nights similar. Birds are more numerous there than anywhere else. All conditions are right, even to the hearty co-operation of the citizens of the city, many of whom took occasion last year to urge the sportsmen to return, an invitation which will be generally accepted. Plans are being made already by many leading owners of pointing dogs who were not present last year, to attend the coming events, and it would not be surprising if a hundred prominent exponents of sportsmanship should gather in pleasant Bakersfield in January.

If those who grumble at what they conceive to be the hardship incident to field trials in California could but attend some of the trials in the South their fault-finding would be turned into self-gratulation. No snow, no ice, no sleet, no black days with thunderstorms and cloud-barrata in California. In but two respects can High Point and Florence out-vie the Coast, and those are the occasional trees laden with golden persimmons and the fat "possums." Even the woodcock of North Carolina in November are not better than the snipe of Kern. True there is an amplitude about the entertainment offered by such men as Mr. J. Otto Donner, "Uncle Ned" Dexter, Governor D. S. Gregory, Wash. Coester, Colonel Arthur Meriman, and others of that ilk, that does not yet characterize local trials, but as those who were present at Bakersfield last January will remember, something akin to lavishness was proffered by Mr. L. J. Rose, Jr., Mr. W. W. Foote, Mr. Wm. Schreiber, and one or two others.

It is a rather singular fact that man's love for fine dogs and the sports of the field increases in inverse ratio with his ability to own the one and follow the other. The dream of the poorer man is to possess perfectly trained pointers and setters of purest breeding and highest form, and with them to follow the snipe and quail through months without interruption. As means increase other pleasures offer, and when the day comes, as it does come to a few, that any desire may be gratified, inertia is usually paramount, and the keen sportsman degenerates into a nonentity. There are exceptions, but they serve merely to emphasize the generalization.

In publishing the salient points of the constitution and show rules of the National Dog Club of America in a recent issue, we remarked that if the N. D. C. was organized in good faith to carry out the aims announced by its projectors, and not to antagonize the American Kennel Club, it might be successful. The progress of the N. D. C. since then, and the development of the real moving animus of the organization have compelled the conclusion that if it was not specifically instituted to cripple the A. K. C., it has been so directed as to make it merely an instrument in the hands of a few disgruntled men who desire through it to wreak personal vengeance upon certain members of the great central kennel club of this country. A careful reading of communications from gentlemen of prominence in the N. D. C. leads to the belief that the club is without sufficient casus. There appear to be no glaring abuses in the management of the American Kennel Club. That it does not move in exact accord with the views of individuals here and there is of no general interest. In so far as appears, the objections to it and its conductors are trivial. No question of principle hinders adherence. Purely personal dislikes form the ground work of the opposition, and when a few malicious men suffering from the cacoethes scribendi, undertake in behalf of their own ends to whip the great body of American fanciers within narrow lines, it is time for such an indignant protest as cannot but come from all fair minded men who will be at pains to understand the motives underlying the actions of would be whippers-in. The American Kennel Club has the support of about all reputable kennel clubs in the country. It is officered by men above reproach and incapable of injustice. It has done good service and is daily strengthening its resources. It should have the co-operation of all, and will have the good will of all except those certain aly, hoodwinking persons, who mistake notoriety for reputation, and who prefer infamy to oblivion. It is impossible to take neutral ground, and those who fail to avow affiliation with the A. K. C. will work an injury to kennel interests, immeasurable by any present rule.

An opportunity was presented last week to visit the Elcho Kennel in this city owned by Mr. A. B. Truman. Excellent judgment was shown by the owner in selecting the site for his kennel. Far out on Bush street, where a brisk breeze blows every afternoon, and where the soil is porous and absorbent it is practically impossible for the place to become foul, especially so when the most constant care is exercised to remove all filth. A substantial kennel house has been erected affording ample storage room and roomy stalls with close boxes at the inner ends for live aged dogs. Adjacent to the house is a yard perhaps twenty-five feet square, boarded over with jointed lumber; inclining slightly to the center where a tight drain leads to a waste pipe, which carries off all moisture and the water used in washing the yard. The sun has free access to the yard at all hours and it was as dry and sweet on the day of our visit as any kitchen. In front of the kennel house is another yard of clay and sand where the dogs may dig and scratch without hindrance, when out for a romp. Spring Valley water is piped to both yards and to the house. Taken altogether it is as convenient and fit an arrangement as we remember to have seen. A little more roomy yards might be of advantage, and the owner will probably purchase adjoining lots as his kennel grows. The dogs are fed with clean bread, cracker scraps, meat broth, vegetables, and occasionally a little meat. Everything is well cooked, and the policy of the owner is to underfeed rather than to keep his pets in high flesh. The wisdom of the system is shown by the fact that sickness is unknown in the kennel. Even the commoner ills that almost invariably attack young dogs are very rare in the Elcho Kennel. Of much greater interest than the mere kennel arrangements, however, are the occupants, pointers and Irish setters. The stud pointer Rush T. by Sensation—Seph G., a handsome big dog showing Sensation all over, is an attraction worth a long trip to see. The pointer brood-bitch Patti Croxteth T. by Croxteth—Patti M., is at present raising a litter of eight, five dogs by Rush T. Despite the worries of maternity Patti is as sleek, neat and lively as can be. Her puppies, now four weeks old, are of good size and beautifully marked in white and deep rich liver. Even markings about the head add much to the beauty of a dog, and if there be fine body marks so much the better. The puppies, judging by the skin color will be much flecked.

In addition to the pointers there are two stud Irish setters, Mike T. by Nemo—Nida, and Lady Elcho T. by Champion Elcho—Champion Noreen. Of Mike T. we have before written. A fairly formed dog of rich color, but not of the highest character. Of the bitch too much cannot be said. In form, color, coat and quality she is undoubtedly as good an Irish setter as lives. It has fallen to our lot to see the best of the Irish setters in America, Dr. Jarvis' Elcho Jr., Mr. Van Horn's Patay D, Mr. Pierce's kennel, Mr. Jas. T. Walker's Glenclaire, Mr. Wenzel's Tim and Yonbe, and others. Among them all we do not recall one which could beat Lady Elcho T. in bench form. The Lady also has a litter by her by Mike T. Five sturdy big young Irish, as full of fire as any of that fiery breed and all solid red. As fine puppies as are to be had anywhere. A profitable hour can be passed in visiting the kennels and chatting with the owner, who has many theories that he is working out.

Three best on records were established at the Cleveland meeting. On the last day Johnston started to reduce Billy Boyce's saddle record of 2:14, which he made at Buffalo twenty years ago, and finished the mile in 2:13. Arrow reduced the five-year-old pacing record he made at Detroit to 2:13, and Brown moved the four-year-old colt record of Palo Alto down to 2:18.

GOMBAULT'S CAUSTIC BALSAM.

As a veterinary remedy this is taking the lead, and WHY? Because it is a remedy that can be safely used by any one with the best results, leaving no scar or blemish. Veterinary Surgeons, as a rule, consider it unprofessional to indorse any specific preparation, but some of them rise above this bigoted prejudice and boldly acknowledge its superior veterinary qualities. If you TRY IT ONCE you will always use it when occasion requires. We not only ask you to read the following testimonials sent us from some of the best veterinary surgeons and horsemen, but if any doubt exists, just write to them and satisfy yourself that what we say is a fact.

IT IS THE KING OF VETERINARY REMEDIES TO-DAY.

We could publish many more of equally good letters, but it does not seem necessary when it is so highly indorsed editorially by such papers as BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN, Turf, Field and Farm, New York Sportsman, Spirit of the Times, Chicago Horseman, Dunton's Spirit of Turf, The Ohio Farmer, and other stock papers. It is FAR SUPERIOR, MORE ECONOMICAL, and a PERFECTLY SAFE, RELIABLE and PROMPT remedy to use as compared with any other remedy used for like purposes.

IT WILL PAY YOU WELL TO TRY IT.

Every drop of it is imported from France direct by us, and every genuine bottle of THE GOMBAULT'S CAUSTIC BALSAM sold in this country or Canada has a label printed in English with fac simile of the signature of Lawrence, Williams & Co., who are sole and only importers. CONDITIONS.

All trotting and pacing races best three in five, except as otherwise specified.

National Association Rules to govern trotting, and Rules of the State Agricultural Society to govern running, except as herein stated.

The Board reserves the right to trot or run heats of any two races alternately, or to call a special race between heats; also to change the day and hour of any race if deemed necessary.

For a walk-over in any race a horse is only entitled to its own entrance fee and one-half of the entrance received from the other paid up entries of said race, and to no added money.

A horse winning a race entitled to first money only, except when distancing the field, then to first and third moneys.

The winner of the mile and repeat, free purse, for all ages, of the State Fair programme for 1888, starting in races No. 8, will be required to carry five pounds extra.

Unless otherwise ordered by the Board, no horse is qualified to be entered in any District race that has not been owned in the District six (6) months prior to the day of the race, and any entry by any person of any disqualified horse shall be held liable for the entrance fee contracted, without any right to compete for a purse, and shall be held liable to penalties prescribed by the National Trotting Association and Running Rules of the State Agricultural Society.

All colts properly entered in District stakes, if sold, are entitled to start in such races.

If it is the opinion of the Judges, before starting a race that it cannot be finished on the closing day of the Fair, it may be declared off or continued, at the option of the Judges.

In all races noted above, six or more paid up entries required to fill and three or more horses to start; but the Board reserves the right to hold entries and start a race with a less number and deduct a proportionate amount of the purse; provided, however, that the Board hereby reserves the right to declare any race off when there are less than three (3) to start.

Trotting and racing colors to be named with all entries and in all heats.

Races commence each day at 1 o'clock P. M. sharp. Stables, hay and straw free to competitors.

Entries close August 1, 1888, with the Secretary.

CONDITIONS.

All trotting and pacing races best 3 in 5, to harness, unless otherwise specified. Six to enter and three to start, but the board reserve the right to hold a less number than six to fill, by the withdrawal of a proportionate amount of the purse. Entrance, ten per cent. on amount of purse, to accompany nomination. Any horse distancing the field will only be entitled to first money.

American Association Rules to govern all trotting, pacing and running races, but the board reserve the right to trot heats of any two classes alternately, or to trot a special race between heats; also to change the day or hour of any race if deemed necessary.

A horse making a walk over shall be entitled to only one-half of entrance money paid in. When less than required number of starters appear, they may contest for entrance money paid in, to be divided as follows:

6 to 1st 33 1/3 to second.
In all entries not declared out by 6 P. M. of the day preceding the race shall be required to start.

When there is more than one entry by one person, or in one interest, the particular horse they are to start must be named by six P. M. of the day preceding the race.

If in the opinion of the judges any race cannot be finished on the closing day of the meeting it may be continued or declared off at the option of the judges.

Non-starters in running races will be held for entrance under Rule 3.

Racing colors to be named on entries.

In trotting races the drivers shall be required wear caps of distinct colors, which must be named on their entries.

These last two rules will be strictly enforced.

All races to be called at 2 P. M. sharp.

Entries to all the above races to close with the Secretary at 1 P. M. Saturday, Sept. 15, 1888.

All entries for exhibits must be made prior to September 25th. It would be better in order to get good accommodations for stock to notify the Secretary as early as possible the number of head and kind you intend to exhibit, so we can arrange for them. Although we have a hundred boxstalls on the ground, we find it necessary to build more, on account of advice from parties intending to make exhibits. Send for catalogue.

REMARKS AND CONDITIONS.

Nominations to stakes must be made to the Secretary on or before the first day of August, 1888. Entries for the purse must be made two days preceding the race, at the regular time for closing entries as designated by the rules. Those who are nominated in stakes must name to the Secretary in writing which they will start the day before the race, at 6 P. M.

Horses entered for District purses must be owned and kept in Nevada and California, east of the Sierra Nevada, for six months prior to day of racing.

Entries to all trotting races will close August 20, with the Secretary.

Five or more to enter and three or more to start in all races for purses.

National Trotting Association Rules to govern trotting races. Pacific Coast Blood Horse Association Rules to govern running races, except as above.

All trotting and pacing races are the best three in five, unless otherwise specified; five to enter and three to start. But the Board reserves the right to hold a less number than five to fill, by the withdrawal of a proportionate amount of the purse. Entrance fee, 10 per cent. on purse, to accompany nomination.

National Association rules to govern trotting; but the Board reserves the right to trot heats of any two classes alternately, if necessary to finish any day's racing, or to trot a special race between heats. A horse making a walk-over shall be entitled only to the entrance money paid in. When less than the required number of starters appear, they may contest for the entrance money to be divided as follows: 66% to the first and 33% to the second.

Horses that distance the field will only take first money.

In all the foregoing stakes the declarations are void unless accompanied by the money.

Please observe that, in the above stakes, declarations are permitted for a small forfeit.

In all races entries not declared out by 6 P. M. of the day preceding the race, shall be required to start.

Where there is more than one entry by one person, or in one interest, the particular horse they are to start must be named by 6 P. M. the day preceding the race. No added money paid for a walk-over.

REMARKS AND CONDITIONS.
Nominations to Stakes must be made to J. Secretary on or before the 1st day of August, 1888.
Entries for the races must be made two days preceding the race, at the regular time for closing entries as designated by the rules. Those who have nominated in stakes must name to the Secretary in writing which they will start the day before the race, at 6 p. m. Horses entered in purses can only be drawn by the consent of the Judges.
All horses entered for District purses must be owned and kept in Nevada and California, east of the Sierra Nevada, for six months prior to day of race. Entries to all trotting races will close August 20th, with the Secretary.
Five or more to enter and three or more to start in all races for purses.
National Trotting Association rules to govern trotting races. Pacific Coast Blood Horse Association rules to govern running races, except as above.
All trotting and pacing races are the best three in five, unless otherwise specified; five to enter and three to start. But the Board reserves the right to hold a less number than five to fill, by the withdrawal of a proportionate amount of the purse. Entrance fee, 10 per cent. on purse, to accompany nomination.
National Trotting Association rules to govern trotting; but the Board reserves the right to trot heats of any two classes alternately if necessary, to finish any day's racing, or to trot a special race. A horse making a walkover shall be entitled only to the entrance money paid in. When less than the required number of starters appear, they may contest for the entrance money, to be divided as follows: 66 2/3 to the first and 33 1/3 to the second.
Horses that distance the field will only take first money.
In all the foregoing stakes the declarations are void unless accompanied by the money.
Please observe that, in the above stakes, declarations are permitted for a small forfeit.
In all races entries not declared out by 6 p. m. of the day preceding the race shall be required to start.
Where there is more than one entry by one person, or in one interest, the particular horse they are to start must be named by 6 p. m. of the day preceding the race. No added money paid for a walk-over.
Racing colors to be named in entries.
In trotting races drivers will be required to wear caps of distinct colors, which must be named in the entries.
Each day's races will commence promptly at one o'clock p. m.
All entries must be directed to C. H. Stoddard, Secretary, Reno, Nevada.
The Ormsby County District Fair, at Carson City, begins September 24th and ends September 29th. Six day's racing; gives $7,500 in purses and premiums; for particulars address J. D. Torreyson, Secretary, Carson City.
The Humboldt County District Fair begins October 2d, and ends October 14th. Four days' racing; gives $3,500 in purses and premiums. For particulars address Alex. Wise, Secretary, Winnemucca, Nevada.
The State Agricultural Society has built a new track located half a mile from the town of Reno, the soil being of such a character as to make it one of the best on the Pacific Coast.

A Demonstration of the Shooting Qualities of the "L. C. Smith" Gun.

At the Cleveland Cartridge Co.'s tournament, held at Cleveland, O., from September 13 to 16 inclusive the "Smith" gun won first money in every class. It also won nearly two-thirds of the entire amount ($3,000) of cash prizes, and championship trophy for the best average in the 90 class. In the 90-class it won the 1st, 2nd and 4th moneys; in the 80-class it took the 1st, 8rd, 4th and 5th; in the 70 class it took 1st and 2nd, with the 1st and 6th in the 60-class, making a total winning nearly four times greater than any other gun, of either foreign or home manufacture.

We think this a most excellent showing, as there was seven different makes of guns used by the nineteen contestants in the ninety class.

Golden Gate Fair.

The fifth day of the Golden Gate Fair was the first when there were features which seriously marred the harmony of the meeting. The afternoon was fine, the attendance larger than has been the case in former years on corresponding days, the track in good shape and two races on the bill which were likely to afford fine sport. In place of that there were good reasons for dissatisfaction; but as that will be fully treated on the editorial page, there is no necessity for a discussion in duplicate.

The first race was the 2:28 class for a purse of $1,000. Four of the entries appeared, viz: Rosie Mc, Franklin, Fallis and Bonanza. In the pools before the start there was little difference in the amounts placed on the two first named, a fair ratio being $100 on Rosie Mc, $90 on Franklin, and $40 on Fallis and Bonanza coupled.

There were doubts before the race commenced whether all the horses were "meant" or not, and the doubts gave way to a certainty in the minds of some that Franklin would not be permitted to win if he could. He had won at Los Angeles, was beaten at Santa Rosa, victorious again at Petaluma, where he beat Ector and Rosie Mc, Ector winning two heats; his fastest time made at Petaluma where he trotted the first and second heats in 2:22½.

The misgivings lent additional interest to the contest. Those who had made up their minds that something was wrong, were anxious to learn how it would be managed; those who were in the secret, if secret there was, were solicitous to know whether the job could be carried to a successful termination.

After a few scores a fair start was given, Bonanza behind, though his rider had nodded for the word. Franklin broke soon after, and Fallis went on with the lead though the pace was slow, the quarter occupying 37½ seconds; Franklin's head on the wheel of the leader. At the half, in 1:13, it was Fallis first by half a length and rounding the turn with the same advantage, had a trifle the best of it at the three-quarters. When opposite the seven-furlong mark Franklin seemed to be a trifle in advance, but from there home Fallis came the fastest, winning the heat in 2:26½. Rosie Mc had not made a move for the heat, neither had Bonanza.

After that heat Rosie Mc sold for $140, Franklin $130, the field $31. At the second score they were sent off level with the exception of Bonanza, his driver being willing to take the word if he was in the rear. Rosie Mc shot ahead from the third place and was leading Franklin by two lengths at the first furlong. He broke soon after, so that at the quarter in 37 seconds, Rosie led with Fallis close up, and at the half in 1:11½, Fallis was close but Franklin gaining on the leaders. The struggle down the stretch was between Rosie and Franklin, the latter winning in 2:23½. Franklin trotted the last three-quarters in 1:45½, though even after this exhibition of speed the mare was an equal favorite, the betting heavy. There is nothing to describe in the third heat further than to say that Rosie led from start to finish, Franklin coming in second a half a dozen lengths behind, Bonanza rather further back of Franklin, Fallis still further away. Time, 2:26½.

It was now $100 on Rosie Mc to $50 on Franklin, $6 on the field. The fourth heat was a stunner. Rosie went away at a good pace, at the half in 1:14½, she was ever so far in the lead, broke when making the second turn, came again until within 100 yards of home, when Goldsmith slowed her down, jogging under the wire in 2:31, the nearest of the others fifty yards back.

Not at all surprising that complaints were entered, not a whit remarkable that those who had wagered their money wanted a new set of pilots at the helms of Franklin and Fallis. Fallis had trotted a fourth heat at Petaluma with the same driver in 2:23, and the only construction which could be placed on losing a heat in 2:31, and so far back at that as to mean 2:35 at the best, was that the loss was intentional. Franklin, too, had shown to be quite a different horse than was marked by a poor fourth in 2:31, and his second heat in 2:23½ proved that if it were owing to lack of condition it must have been a sudden attack. Dustin was "put up" in the sulky of Franklin, McDowell in that of Fallis. The change was somewhat marvelous, if the acknowledgement is made that heretofore all was straight. McDowell got the "hang of the horse" he was driving right away, as after moving him past the stand and back and a couple of scores he trotted fast and steadily. Dustin was not so fortunate with Franklin though he made a fair showing. Rosie Mc having the inside position gave her an advantage, and she led a length at the quarter, Fallis second. The man who was marking the fractions for the reporters was so intent on watching the race that he failed to note the quarter, but at the half in 1:11, Rosie was two lengths in the lead. The same position at five furlongs, and from there McDowell sent the big horse along. At seven furlongs he had a neck the best of the tug-of-war, fell back so that his horses head was at the mare's girth, made another effort when within a few yards of the score, beaten by a short neck at the critical point. Time 2:23½!!!

The pacing was for a special purse of $600, and that also gave rise to suspicion. That may have been owing to the doubts, so strongly confirmed, of the honesty of the preceding contest. It took six heats to decide the question of supremacy, and though the betting chopped, San Diego was the favorite all of the time, the odds varying from $40 on San Diego, $35 on Little Hope, $20 on Ontario, and $17 on the field, Damiana, Mink and Racquet. These were the rates before the first heat; before the second San Diego brought $80, Ontario $31, Little Hope $26, and the field $27. Even after Mink had two heats and San Diego one he was the favorite, and when Little Hope won the fourth, the southern representative brought $50 to $52 on all the others. The placing and time will be learned from the

The sixth day of the fair was characterized by a continuation of the favorable weather, and the largest attendance of the week. Not a great deal of difference, perhaps, from that on the first day, though a manifest improvement, owing probably to Saturday afternoon giving a better chance to leave business affairs than at the opening of the week. The track was in better order, owing to the racing having ended on Thursday, and no pains had been spared to make it firm and smooth.

The first race was the 2:22 class, and four of the six entries appeared. These were Tempest, Alcazar, Thapsin and Gus Wilkes. Tempest, the favorite, at $100. Alcazar pressing her closely at $90; the others coupled $40. Alcazar was one of the great trio of three-year-olds of 1886, and the battle between him, Rexford and Valensin the most stubbornly fought contests of that season. Victory alternated, and it was difficult to award the first place. But fate was against them. Neither Alcazar or Valensin took part in the contests of last year, and Rexford came to an untimely end in the Palo Alto fire. The remembrance of what Alcazar had done was the cause of his strong support, although it was no secret that he had been off, and was far from being right now. Tempest had shown herself one of the speediest fillies ever bred in California, having gained a record of 2:21½ as a four-year-old in a race last September. Gus Wilkes has a record of 2:22½ and Thapsin 2:22½. This gave promise of a good race, but with the exception of the third heat, it was rather a tame exhibition. In the first and second heats the driver of Thapsin was contented to let Gus make a fight, and all that he could do with the help of several breaks was to force the favorite to 2:26½ and 2:25½. Alcazar could not trot, the flight of his three-year-old form being beyond his power, so that Tempest had everything her own way until the third heat was called, then she was the favorite at $100 to $16, and still longer odds seemed warranted by the superiority she had shown. The third heat was a different thing. Tempest and Thapsin went away from the score together, and he accompanied her around the turn so closely that at the quarter pole in 36½ seconds she was only half a length in the lead. From there the pace was increased, and the black was even with her at the three-furlong mark. At the half mile he had a neck the best of it in 1:10½, so that the back quarter was made by the mare in seconds, Thapsin having gone a shade faster. The second semi-circle was rapidly trotted, with a slight advantage in favor of the mare, and she was only a little better off until 150 yards from home. There Thapsin gave up the fight, and Tempest gained the first victory of the fair in straight heats.

The next race was for three-year-old pacers, and it is well within bounds to say that no harness race for colts of that age ever equaled it. Very lately have stakes or purses been given for three-year-old pacers. The only instance in our knowledge was last year at Nashville, Tenn., Dodd Peet winning the Ewell stakes over three competitors in 2:32½, 2:27½, 2:30, Sept. 30th and October 14th, at Lexington, Ky., for a "prize cup," against his own record, paced in 2:22½. The Ewell stakes was evidently a one-sided race in which the winner had it all his own way, while that of last Saturday brought together three contestants, two of which beat Dodd Peet's time away off and the other showed conclusively that she could also lower it. The starters were Gold Leaf, Adonis and Cricket, the two first-named by Sidney, Cricket by Steinway. When the pools first opened, Gold Leaf was the favorite, but in a short time it was dollar for dollar on them, and then Adonis brought $150, Gold Leaf $120, and Cricket $20. It did not require much time to give them a fair start for the first heat, and Gold Leaf having the pole made the most of the advantage by going off at a lively pace. Adonis was "locked on her" going around the turn and at the quarter in 35 seconds he was only half a length behind. Still faster went the filly with the colt in company until he broke, and she passed the half mile in 1:08½, Adonis 1:10 at the same point. A second and a half was a long gap at the rate of speed they were going, but the "fiery-footed" colt was snarely closing it, and rapidly as the filly neared the goal, he showed a still greater flight of speed. When at the 3 in 5 distance his head was on her wheel, McDowell had to drive with desperation to reach the score a neck in advance in the wonderful fast time of 2:18. The last three-quarters was made by Gold Leaf in 1:43, at the rate of 2:17½, the last half in 1:09½, while the colt came from the half in 1:08. This gave him a still higher place in the estimation of the bettors, and when the pool-calling was resumed he brought $420 to $140 on Gold Leaf, while Cricket went for $44.

The second heat disclosed a still greater burst of speed. Soon after the word was given Cricket broke and seemed so utterly demoralized that it was any kind of odds that she was distanced. Gold Leaf led by a neck at the quarter which was made in 34 seconds, the colt passing her soon after. At the half mile, 1:07, the colt led by a length. It was too hot for the filly fast as she is, and from there he had it all his own way. Soon after entering the homestretch McDowell saw that it was greater than a forlorn hope to think of winning the heat, he eased the filly, and Goldsmith pursuing the same tactics also took a pull jogging in 2:20, the concession enabling Cricket to save her distance. She lost so much in the first quarter that she was all of 150 yards in the rear when Adonis was at the half. She was timed from the quarter to the three-quarters in 1:09, and must have bettered that from the three-furlong mark to the seven-furlong pole. Phenomenally fast all round.

Any odds on Adonis. The third heat had some variations. A fair start was made at the second score, Adonis in the lead at the furlong mark when he broke, the fillies passed him when Gold Leaf broke, and Cricket was first at the quarter in 35½ seconds. Adonis caught quickly, however, and was first at the half in 1:11, Cricket only a length behind. McDowell was saying his filly, and the result was that Adonis took it easily gaining the heat in 2:23½, with Cricket second.

There were rumors that the fourth heat would be characterized by being as sensational as any of its predecessors, and it did not take long to discover where the excitement was to come in. Gold Leaf had slightly the best of the start and was pacing her best. For a short time it appeared that she could take the track, but Adonis was going still faster, and at the quarter in 34½ seconds he was half a length in advance. Gold Leaf surmounted that and was nearly even, though he shook her off and reached the half rather more than a length in front, in 1:07. As soon as the watches told of this grand display for a fourth heat it was a "fixed fact" that all excepting Adonis was done for, and the order was 1—2—3—quite a long dash between the numerals representing the actors in this exciting drama. Time, 2:23.

It is somewhat difficult to give this race a position. Beyond question the greatest exhibition of speed ever made by colts of that age either trotting or pacing. So much better than the best at pacing that there is no room for comparison. The fastest heat equals the fastest trotting, that of Sable Wilkes, which was made under more favorable conditions. That was "against time," and though Gold Leaf had the inside and was never headed, so that track conditions were practically the same. There was a faster track for Sable to perform upon. That pacer "come to their speed" sooner than trotters is established, or at least accepted as established, and therefore it is reasonable to assume that 2:18 is a better mark for a three-year-old trotter than a pacer of the same age.

There is another datum to figure upon. The fastest four-year-old trotting time is 2:16, the fastest pacing, 2:14; the fastest five-year-old trotting, 2:14½, pacing, 2:13½. The fastest pacing record is 2:06½, the fastest trotting, 2:08½. That pacing is susceptible of being cultivated into a faster gait than trotting is fairly proved up to the present time, and as a far greater proportion of trotters are bred than those which move a "side at a time," the preponderance of trained trotters, or it will be more proper to say, the small percentage of pacers is further proof that pacing is the speediest method of locomotion.

But taking the best three-year-old pacer of the East as a guide, and California outranks Kentucky in this department of breeding by several grades. Then, too, Sidney has distanced all other stallions in the way of producing pacing speed in youngsters. There cannot at present, be a further test in his case, inasmuch as three-year-olds are his oldest colts. There are so many interesting topics to discuss in connection with these colts, that in this hurrying time the subject cannot be handled in a manner at all commensurate with its deserts. A large field has been opened, a mine struck, which will yield new returns. One of the most interesting phases is that of breeding, and we can see startling episodes, many new and fresh ideas arising from the study of the genealogy of these youngsters.

In this connection it may be as well to state that Adonis is owned by John O'Rourke of San Francisco, who purchased him of G. Valensin his breeder last year, that he was driven at first by his owner, trained by Lee Shaner until he started on his late trip to Montana, since then trained by James Sullivan, and we understand that the first time Goldsmith sat behind him was when he got into the sulky to "warm him up" for this, his first race.

Differing from former precedents the directors resolved to have two extra days, Monday and Tuesday of the week following the regular meeting. This was at the request of several owners of horses, and the spectators could not find fault with the arrangement, as Monday furnished some races, which were quite interesting, Tuesday brought to the front another pacer fast enough to heat Gold Leaf, and mark the fastest pacing time made in California this year.

There were four events on the racing programme, the first a dash of a mile with Cito, the favorite with the pool-buyers bringing $40. Nerva, the second choice, $15. Spray and Oro coupled $10. Spray is persistent in her efforts to give the starter trouble, but after a short exhibition of her temper, a very good start was made. Cito and Oro went away at a rapid pace, and at the quarter there was little difference. At the half Oro had rather the best of the position, and he held it to the three-quarter pole, and from that point increased the lead. It was apparent that he had Cito beaten, though a new competitor came into the contest, Nerva rapidly closing the gap which at one time seemed to preclude hopes of victory. From the seven furlongs it was an exciting struggle between the three. Cito came again, his head at Oro's shoulder, the head of Nerva at the saddle girth of Cito. This she bettered so that she was the first to catch the eye of the judges, beating Oro a neck, the same distance between Oro and Cito. Time, 1:44.

The second race was heats of a mile, with Daisy D., Welcome and Fnsilade's Last to take their places at the post. Daisy D. was a favorite, though Welcome pushed her closely for pride of place with the betters, and in many pools the rates were $100 on each of these to $12 for Fnsilade's Last.

The first heat was apparently such an easy victory for Daisy D. in 1:45, that before the second it was $150 on her to $20 on Welcome, $6 on the other. The first heat Daisy galloped all the way in front, Welcome never nearer than a length, but the second gave promise of being somewhat more exciting. Daisy and Welcome made the semicircle so closely locked that it was difficult to say which was first at the quarter-post, but soon after passing that point Welcome showed in front. It was a brief advantage, however, and at the half in the good time of 51 seconds, Daisy was a trifle in front, Welcome fell back on the further turn, but just before reaching the three-quarter had closed on the leader, when she bolted to the extreme outside, permitting Daisy to come in an easy winner. The concluding race of the day, while it afforded little chance for description, illustrates how rapidly a horse can lose reputation, and from being a "pronounced favorite" sink into utter insignificance without any valid reason for the change. The race was for the Consolation purse in which eight were named. These were Idalene Cotton and Ella Wood, coupled in the pools and selling for $65, Susie S. $60, Kildare, Futurity, Johnny Gray and Spray (the field) $32.50, and Sleepy Dick $12. After the run which Sleepy Dick made in the race, beats of half a mile, it was somewhat of an anomaly that he should be held so lightly and to prove how utterly at fault the experts were, and how little dependence can be placed on the general judgment in horse-racing, he took the lead at the start never surrendering it until he crossed the home mark in the fast time of 1:14; Susie S. was second, Kildare third. Mr. Crittenden's new method of starting was put to another practical test in this race, and as before proved a decided success. What the future will show can only be surmised, though from the present outlook it seems to be unquestionably a decided improvement.

The second extra day and the closing one of the series was like its predecessors in respect to unchanged climatic conditions. In fact, the afternoon was one of the finest of the season, the track was in the best condition, and the attendance larger than it was reasonable to anticipate. There had been some expectation of bringing the fast half-mile horses together, but this was a futile hope owing to the departure of Sleepy Dick. Had he, Lida Ferguson and Cyclone met at that distance there would have surely resulted a race which it would do to describe in the fervid language evoked by the monkey and parrot controversy. Lida and the horse with the somnolent name had shown their rapidity, Tuesday morning we saw enough to convince old plumperduff himself that the other had claims which would be pressed to the last. With a straight half mile, an even start and equal footing, there would be a cyclone at the finish, more properly a tornado, as that implies a more direct line.

The pacing race, though on the whole an easy victory for the up-country horse, was not wanting in exciting elements. When the pool sales opened Gold Leaf was slightly the favorite but only for a short time, and when she brought $80, Almont Patchen would rate at from $90 to $100, Mink having supporters at $15 and Bracelet at $10. Close observers were impressed with the people who were supporting the stallion being ready to stake their money at these odds, knowing the mare's capacity, and reasoned that he had shown enough to warrant the estimate. He came out in 1886 as a four-year-old, gaining a record of 2:23, obtained at Sacramento in a dead heat with Mink. He is a large, fine-looking stallion, and Tuesday's performance is an indication of great merit. The first heat Mink broke soon after the word was given, and Almont Patchen led to the quarter in 37 seconds, the driver of Gold Leaf being willing to take the pace set by him for the first part of the heat. He led at the half in 1:11, Gold Leaf on his wheel, and when about midway of the turn she was a length in the lead. McDowell made a shoot for the pole, striking the horse with the wheel of the sulky causing him to break and that so badly that it seemed as though there was to be a repetition of the Steve-Whipple affair. He was more than a distance out when he reached the three-quarter post, but owing to McDowell easing his mare when close at home Almont escaped the flag. Time, 2:23½. Mink second, Bracelet third. Pools opened at $40 on Gold Leaf to $24 on Tilton Almont and $5 on the other two, but the horse picked up and when the bell rang to call them for the second heat he was pressing the mare closely. The second heat is the only one, thereafter, which requires detail. Gold Leaf led at the quarter in 35 seconds, at the half in 1:09½, and until the seven-furlong was accomplished had still the best of it. But "Jimmy" was driving Almont judiciously, crossing the score half a length in front of the filly in the good time of 2:17½. Bracelet third, Mink distanced.

The third and fourth heats were won by Almont so easily that at no time were his chances in jeopardy, the synopsis presenting all that is necessary.

Marysville Fair.

From the Marysville Appeal.

The opening day at the track was rather quiet, though the events were of sufficient interest to hold the several hundred who went out. The drive to the grounds was made more pleasant than usual by the absence of a great portion of the dust, and what little breeze stirred during the afternoon was cool.

The first race of the day was for two-year-olds, best two in three, for a purse of $100—$80 to first and $20 for second. There were but two entries, Wm. Merrill's Annie E. and W. M. Billups' Tart. The distance rule was by consent dropped, and after scoring several times both got off well. The horse took the lead, and from start to finish went at a very pretty gait. At the quarter he was twenty yards in the lead. Before the half was reached the mare went off her feet, and when she had recovered the horse had opened the gap to seventy-five yards. She was pushed at the finish and lessened the space considerably. Tart passed the ropes in 2:58 at a jog trot. The half was made in 1:26½.

Between the heats no pools were sold. A start was made without scoring. Tart took the lead, but was more closely followed by the mare this heat, and until after the half was passed the two trotted along pretty evenly, Tart managing to keep in front. On the up turn she broke and the horse went ahead, coming down the stretch about thirty yards in the lead, and finishing in 2:59.

THE HALF-MILE DASH.

The next event was a half-mile dash, running, for a purse of $120, divided for first and second, $80 and $40. C. F. Silva's Little Dick was withdrawn, on account of being too old, the race being for two-year-olds. A start was made with the second score, and from start to finish the race was a very interesting contest. Almont kept about a neck ahead, and finished about that much in the lead. Time, 0:52½. No money changed hands.

THREE-MINUTE CLASS.

The next race was the best one of the day, and for the first time there was a rush to the pool-box. The purse was $250, divided as follows: $125, $62.50, $37.50 and $25. The entries for this race were:

M. Biggs Jr.'s Blockade, W. H. Seale's Sunflower, R. H. Walton's Argent, J. R. Hodson's The Duke, D. E. Knight's Knighthood, Frank Grant's Surgeon, J. Greeley's Mill Boy, J. B. McDonald's Fedora, A. L. Hind's Cricket, I. E. King's Fred L., C. Raish's Patchwork, and F. G. Crawford's Bell C.

Durfee's Dick Raymond had been withdrawn on account of his having made a record of 2:26 recently.

In the pools Sunflower sold first choice at $15, Argent second at $10, Duke $5, Cricket 5, and field $2. The sales preceding the heat were made as fast as the auctioneer could knock them down.

The scoring was made three tiers deep, the favorites not having any better positions than the others. After three or four attempts the positions were changed, the result being that the second came down was a go. Almont went to the front with a steady and rapid gait, and the other eleven horses strung out from a few hundred feet past the stand to the half-pole. Almont kept well in the lead, never leaving his feet once, though the driver of Sunflower kept his horse on a run until on the up turn, when he did some trotting, and was for a short time close behind the stallion. On the finish Almont was again pressed by Sunflower, who again broke, passing under the wire first. The judges gave Argent first place, Cricket second, Duke third, Sunflower fourth, and all the others distanced. Time, 2:29½.

After the heat the pools were not altered much, Almont, however, selling nearer Sunflower. Each pool held about $35. After scoring three times the gong sent them on their way. Sunflower took the lead, closely followed by Cricket.

Almont, who was the favorite of many Snitterites, acted very badly, going off his feet five times. He managed to regain on the stretch, however, but not enough to secure more than third place. The little sorrel mare won the heat, Cricket second, and Dude fourth. The finish was a very pretty one.

Sunflower stock in the pools went away up, selling $20 to $10 for the rest.

The third heat was then called. The mare took the lead and retained it, being a good distance ahead at the half, but did not increase it any. On the up turn Dude passed Cricket and as the last quarter was entered, the three named were almost abreast. The driver of Sunflower used the whip liberally as they neared, and came in less than a length ahead of Dude, who had made some wonderful strides, and Cricket was but a short length back of the Dude, Argent taking a poor fourth. Time, 2:33.

The pools dropped from $10 to $5 on the favorite. Many of the horsemen, however, predicted that the mare had been put to the test, and that she could not do anything more. They were also evenly of the opinion as to which, Dude or Cricket, would be the successful one.

At the start the favorite took the lead and kept it to the half, being closely followed by Dude and Cricket. On the up turn the three leaders closed up and turned into the stretch, neck and neck. In this order they continued up to the close, when Cricket forged ahead, closely followed by Dude and Sunflower. Argent saved his distance though he was in the ditch for two or three seconds. Time, 2:32.

For the fifth heat but few wagers were made. When a start was effected Cricket took the lead and kept it until the quarter was passed, when Sunflower forged ahead and kept in the lead until near the last pole. Cricket then came to the fore and passed under the wire in 2:36, closely followed by Sunflower and Dude, Argent being a bad fourth. Time, 2:36.

Pools began to sell well on Dude as first choice, being about $10 against $4.

At the start of the sixth heat Cricket led, Sunflower second, Argent third, and Dude off his feet. They continued in this order until the half was passed, the rear horse closing up on them and taking the lead at the head of the stretch, and finishing in 2:37, followed by Cricket, Argent and Sunflower.

The backers of Dude then went wild. He had been bought at 20 to 1. Now they offered $10 to $2. The driver of the little sorrel mare, however, said he would win the race. Both the mare and Dude had then taken two heats, but the Dude people had all the confidence. Sunflower took the lead and kept it. Dude broke at the start, and was away in the rear but regained his feet and finished second, both horses coming in under a heavy lash. Time, 2:39.

Sunflower took first money, Dude second, Cricket third and Argent fourth.

The race did not end until 6:45 p. m.

August 29.—The track events showed a decided improvement over those of Tuesday. The attendance was much larger than on the previous day and both horsemen and spectators were apparently well pleased with the manner in which things shaped themselves. The pool-box was better patronized, and there were quite a number of large wagers made on positions of some of the animals in the races. The ladies out yesterday were very enthusiastic over the favorites. The judges were the same as yesterday. The timers were W. P. Harkey, Irvin Ayres and J. Greeley.

FIRST RACE.

The first race of the day was a consolation trot, best three in five, for a purse of $200, in which were entered: D. E. Knight's Knighthood, Chas. Raish's Patchwork, J. Greeley's Mill Boy and J. B. McDonald's Fedora. The pools sold, Fedora favorite at $5, Patchwork $4, Mill Boy $3, and Knighthood $1. The horses scored twice and started evenly. Fedora took the lead, closely followed to the quarter by Knighthood, who broke on passing that point. Patchwork then went up and trotted with Fedora until on the up turn when he went off his feet, quickly recovering, but going off again shortly after passing the last pole, making a bad second at the finish. Mill Boy had stayed in the rear from the start, and Knighthood had lagged so that both failed to save their distance. Fedora's time was 2:42.

Fedora sold at $10 and Patchwork at $5 before the second heat. At the start it was very evident that the heat was to be hotly contested. They started even and continued till past the quarter, heads even. Then Fedora broke, and it looked as though Patchwork would win the heat. On the up turn, however, Fedora began closing up the gap, and when well down the stretch it was very uncertain which would win. They passed under the wire even heads and the heat was declared dead. Time, 2:40.

Pools before the third heat sold about as they did before. The horses got a good start, but Fedora broke at the quarter and took the run for a considerable distance. She crawled up, however, and on the up turn was well in the lead, gradually increasing it to the finish. Time, 2:47.

Some of the Patchwork pool-buyers objected to Thomas Glascock as a driver, claiming that he was not driving her for what she was worth. Charles Raish, the owner, was put in the seat. A good start for the fourth heat was made. Patchwork broke before the quarter and Fedora took the lead and kept it, finishing easy in 2:48.

Fedora took first money, $100, and Patchwork second $50.

HALF MILE AND REPEAT.

The next event was a running race, half mile and repeat, free for all, for a purse of $200. The following horses were entered: San Luis Obispo, Little Dick, Perigrene, Little Cap, Heenan, Minnie R. and Menlo.

In the pools Perigrene sold for $10 against $2.50 for Minnie R. and $2.50 for the field.

A. L. Hinds started the horses at the third score. Perigrene took the lead, closely followed by Little Cap, who pressed him to good time. Minnie R. third, Menlo fourth, San Luis Obispo fifth. Heenan and Little Dick distanced.

For the second heats no pools were sold, the knowing ones having, so they said, received a straight tip that Perigrene would win.

Just before the second heat a strong southerly breeze sprung up, which was alike pleasant to spectators, horsemen and horses. Some delay was caused by the fact that Perigrene, the winner of the first heat, had thrown a plate and it became necessary to wait until it was replaced.

The five horses got a good start and made a very pretty spurt, though the favorite took the lead and seemingly held it from start to finish. Minnie R. gave a close chase, but down the stretch was tested by the liberal use of the whip, while Perigrene was untouched.

Perigrene took first money, $100; Minnie R. second, $50; Little Cap came fourth and took third money, $30; Menlo came a third and took fourth money, $20.

THREE-MINUTE RACE.

The next race was one on which most of the interest was centered. It was the 3-minute race for a purse of $300. The following were the entries: C. A. Durfee's Gossipee; L.

P. Looley's W. W.; L. E. Yates, Yolaude; A. L. Hinds, Balkan; Suel Harris, Director H.; W. M. Billups, Langmont.

In the pools Gossipee sold favorite at $20, Balkan second choice at $10, and the field for $5.

A good start was made with Balkan in the lead, Gossipee a close second before reaching the quarter. The others were so slow that it was very certain that they would be distanced before the leaders had passed the quarter. Until near the three-quarter pole the favorites traveled well up, but there Gossipee went off his feet and lost ground. Though the gap was not lessened any, Gossipee traveled well, but Balkan seemed to be driving to shut them all out, if he could. Gossipee made a fair second and all the others were distanced. Balkan's time was 2:31.

Pools on the second heat sold at $10 to $6 with Balkan as favorite. After the start and before making the first turn Gossipee broke and Balkan got a good lead, which he kept to the finish, his competitor gaining but a little on him on the last turn. He finished in 2:32.

For the third best Balkan was the favorite at $10 to $5, with few buyers. A good start was made. Both horses broke on the turn, but quickly recovered. Gossipee passed the quarter well ahead, and lengthened it out so that on the back stretch it looked as though he would distance Balkan. He was slowed up some, and passed under the wire an easy winner in 2:34.

For the fourth and what proved to be the last heat Balkan still retained the lead with the pool buyers. A good start was made. Gossipee broke at the quarter and lost the race. At the finish, however, he closed the large gap, and Balkan won the heat and race in 2:37. He got first money, $150, and Gossipee second, $75.

By agreement the 2:35 class race was put over until promptly at 1 o'clock to-day, when all the races will be commenced and put through.

The attendance at the track August 30th was a great increase over the previous days—it being conservatively estimated that fully 2,000 people were present. The grandstand was filled, mostly with ladies, while there were over 200 vehicles surrounding the judges' stand, which also contained many of the fair sex. The large attendance had been drawn by the fact that the races of the day were to be unusually good ones. The pool-buyers were about in large numbers, looking for tips. There were many wise ones without money, and they had various kinds of pointers to give. In fact, the buyers were all at sea from the information they obtained. The sorest delegation was the buyers of Wallace G., the Chico horse, as a favorite, after he had been distanced.

The management of the races of this fair is to be congratulated on the success attained thus far, and as the programme for to-day and to-morrow embraces good running contests, the attendance should creep upwards in point of numbers.

The first race of the day was the 2:35 class, for a purse of $300, divided as follows: First, $150; second, $75; third, $45. The entries were S. C. Tryon's Eva W., A. L. Hinds' Cricket and J. M. Dowell's Lobengrin broke after starting but recovered his feet quickly and followed the leaders, who were traveling nearly even. Cricket passed the half slightly in the lead, followed by Eva. On the upturn the favorite forged ahead of Eva and forced Cricket to do some good work at the finish. The latter won in 2:24, Lobengrin a good second and Eva a good third. The time at the half was 1:18.

In the pools for the second heat Lobengrin sold at $20, Eva W. $15 and Cricket $1. The start was good. Lobengrin went off his feet but again recovered. He kept third place however, Cricket second and Eva in the lead until on the up turn, when he passed them and entered the stretch in the lead. Eva W. broke several times but was held back. Lobengrin passed under the wire a good winner, Eva W. on a run and Cricket last. The heat was won by Lobengrin in 2:34. Cricket being given second place on account of Eva W. running.

For the third heat pools sold: Lobengrin $20; Eva W. $10; Cricket $5. The start was a repetition of the previous heat. Lobengrin took second place after passing the quarter. Eva W. kept a good lead, however, until on the up turn when they hunched and trotted into the stretch that way. Lobengrin lost his chance for first place by going off his feet, though he pushed Eva under the wire in rapid time. The mile was made in 2:36.

The pools for the fourth heat sold Lobengrin $10, Eva $6, Cricket $2. At the third score a start was made. Lobengrin went off his feet a few steps, passed the wire and took third place, which he managed to retain to the finish, much to the disgust of the pool buyers. Eva won without a skip easily in 2:36.

The fourth and what proved to be the last heat found very few pool buyers. Many who had Lobengrin wanted to hedge but could find no one to accommodate them. A good send-off resulted on second score. Eva took the lead and maintained it by not permitting either Cricket or Lobengrin to close up the gap until on the stretch when Lobengrin passed Cricket and came down but two lengths behind the winner. He broke near the wire but recovered in time to pass on a trot and secure second place. Eva took first money, Lobengrin second and Cricket third.

The announcement was made that the next two races, the 2:27 trot and the 2:20 pacing race, would be dovetailed.

The first one called was the trotting race for which the following entries were made: Artist, Ha-Ha, Hazel Kirke, Don Thomas, Wallace G. and Ed. Alpheus was withdrawn by consent. The purse was $600, divided as follows: $300, $150, $90 and $60. The pools sold, Don Thomas, $20; Wallace, $15; Artist $6; Ha-Ha $5; Field $3.

A good start was made. Ed. took the lead, Don Thomas and Hazel Kirke in close proximity; Artist and Ha-Ha being well behind, while Wallace G. showed unmistakable signs of falling behind the distance flag. Before the half was reached Don Thomas took the lead from Ed. The three then trotted a very steady and strong gait, coming down the stretch at a furious pace and finishing, Don Thomas first, Ed second, Hazel third, Artist fourth, Ha-Ha fifth, Wallace G. distanced. Time, 2:29.

The next race was the 2:20 pace for a purse of $400, divided as follows: First, $200; second, $100; third, $60; fourth, $40. The following were the entries: George Wapple, Almont Patchen, Bracelet and Pocahontas. In the pools Patchen sold at $30 to $15 for the field. At the third score a start was made with Patchen and Pocahontas in the lead and traveling together. Bracelet was back and Wapple acted as though he was looking for a distance. Patchen and Pocahontas went even until on the up turn, when the former went ahead and continued down the stretch, finishing so in 2:27. Pocahontas second, Bracelet third and George Wapple fourth.

The next was the second heat of the trot. No pools were sold on first choice. Artist was made the second choice in pools. Don Thomas took the lead, followed by Ed and Artist, who kept at a respectful distance behind and tried very hard for second honors. At the start Hazel Kirke broke, but did some good work and came in in good time. Don won in 2:31. Ed second, Artist third, Hazel fourth and Ha-Ha fifth.

The 1-year old colt race for the Ayres stake of $150 entrance added, with D. E. Knight's Spring Box, Polk Coats' Allie Wilkes and F. E. Griffith's Avalanche as entries, dovetailed the second and third heats of the 2:35 race. No pools were sold on this contest. It created great sport, as the little fellows behaved in a manner that was very humorous. Polk Coats' colt took the lead and passed the half in 2:07, Avalanche a good second, Spring Box a quarter of a mile behind. Time, 4:10. Allie Wilkes took $97 50, Avalanche $55 25, Spring Box $41 75. This race was for colts sired by Alpheus.

The second heat of the pacing contest was the most interesting, as the best time was made. No pools were sold as it was generally conceded Almont was a sure winner and no one wanted a second choice. On the start the favorite followed the turn from the pole and kept in the lead. Pocahontas and Bracelet made strong efforts for second place. The latter led Pocahontas after passing the quarter and came down the stretch a good second. Almont's time was 2:22.

The last heat of the trot was the third one, which followed the second of the pace. Don Thomas was conceded a winner and no betting was indulged in. Don took the lead from the start, then came Ed and Artist, and behind came Hazel and Ha-Ha, both trotting for most of the first half as though they were in spans. Ed passed Artist when near the half, and kept several lengths in the lead of him, but could not reach the winner, who passed under the wire in 2:26. Ed came second and took third money, Ha-Ha third and second money, Hazel fourth and fourth money. Artist being given last place for running under the wire.

After this the crowd began to get ready to go as it was certain that Almont would win. The contest was for second place. Pocahontas had it until the quarter was passed when Bracelet did well and crept up behind Almont who did not seem disturbed by what was going on behind him and kept up a steady pace. When nearing the wire he broke but fortunately recovered his feet before Bracelet could catch him and passed in 2:27. The money was awarded in the order in which they came.

August 31st was the best day at the Fair grounds in point of attendance that has been known there of late years. The grand stand was completely crowded with ladies. The ground floor was one waving mass of humanity, and on the inside around the judges' stand were over 200 buggies containing from two to a half a dozen occupants each. Altogether it was estimated that 2,500 people were out there. That is better than the attendance of any day last year. None of this vast assemblage had cause to regret their presence there, as the events were of a more interesting character than the most sanguine of the admirers of horseflesh had anticipated would take place. The liberal applause bestowed upon all the contests was an evidence that none were disappointed.

The first race of the day was the 2:40 class, trotting, for a purse of $300, with the following entries: J. W. Dowell's Lobengrin, R. H. Walton's Argent, O. Lawrence's Maxwell, J. B. McDonald's Mill Boy, A. L. Hinds' Cricket, and J. R. Hodson's Dude. Lobengrin sold favorite in the pools at $10; Argent, $6; Maxwell, $6, and field $3. A fair start was made for the first heat. Argent took the lead, Lobengrin second, Cricket and Maxwell third and fourth. Mill Boy and Dude were so far behind that distancing was inevitable. At the quarter Argent was still in the lead, Lobengrin a good second. He kept the position throughout the race, though on the upturn he made a spurt and evened up. It looked as though he would take the heat when on the stretch, but broke and allowed Argent to go in. He was less than a length behind. Cricket and Maxwell came in a good second and third. Time, 2:32.

The pools for the second heat sold: Argent, $8, Lobengrin, $8, field, $7. A fine start was made. Cricket took the lead, Argent second, Lobengrin having broken soon after the start, came third, and Maxwell fourth. In this order they passed the quarter. In this order they also passed the half, though Lobengrin was closing the gap. On the up turn Cricket, Almont and Lobengrin trotted even. The latter, however, forged ahead, and came down the last quarter without a break, Almont being only a length behind, Cricket third, Maxwell a poor fourth.

For third heat pools went up to $20 on Lobengrin, $10 and $7 for the field. A good start was made. Almont took the lead, Lobengrin second, Cricket third and Maxwell again away behind. Argent broke twice between the quarter and half and letting Lobengrin and Cricket pass him. These two trotted on the up turn very evenly and it was not until near the stretch that the favorite took the lead. He kept it up without a break to the finish. Argent broke and ran. He came in second but that place was given to Cricket on account of the running. Argent third, Maxwell a poor fourth.

For the fourth heat the pools sold liberally at Lobengrin $10 to $4 for the field. A good start was made at the third score. Argent took the lead and kept it up until he passed the quarter, Lobengrin, Cricket and Maxwell coming close behind him in the order named. Argent broke and Lobengrin forged ahead, the order of passing the half being Lobengrin, Argent, Cricket and Maxwell. On the up turn Argent closed the gap between him and Lobengrin, and Maxwell went ahead of Cricket. On the stretch Lobengrin broke and Argent came in an easy winner. Lobengrin recovering in time for the second place, Maxwell third, Cricket a poor fourth. Time, 2:37.

The pools for the fifth, and what proved to be the last heat, sold Argent $10, Lobengrin $7, and field $2. It took much scoring to get a start. Argent took the lead but broke at the first turn, and Lobengrin went to the lead, leaving such a gap as was almost impossible for any of them to close. At the quarter Lobengrin passed in .39, Maxwell second, Argent third and Cricket a poor fourth. Argent passed Maxwell at the half mile, but notwithstanding his great strides was unable to overtake Lobengrin, who was winner of the heat and race in 2:36, Argent second and second money, Maxwell third and third money. Cricket distanced. The purse was divided as follows: $150, $75 and $45.

Argent went lame before the last heat and his performance considering this, was wonderful.

R. H. Walton, owner of Argent, entered an informal protest against the payment of the first money to Lobengrin, claiming that he has made a better record than 2:40. This was denied by the owner, but the matter will be considered by the Board of Directors.

The next event of the day was a running race, mile dash, for a purse of $200, divided as follows: $100, $50, $30 and $20. The starters were Heenan, Menlo, Perigrene, Adonis and Minnie R. In the pools Perigrene sold favorite at $20; Minnie R. $10, field $5. At these figures many pools were Sheephead Bay.

September fourth was an ideal one for racing. The temperature and track were alike perfect, and the sport exciting. For the betting fraternity, however, the day was anything but good. Not one of the six events was won by the favorite. Two to 1 shots, an 8 to 1 chance and three others at the respective odds of 5, 4 and 3 to 1 testifying to the slaughter of the knowing ones.

For the California stables the day was a good one, the Pacific Slope securing both the stake events. Haggin's two-year-old filly Sonoma won the Belle's stakes and Senator Hearst's great filly Gorgo the Siren stakes. The latter is probably the best bred filly in America, and the style in which she beat Yum Yum to day stamps her a worthy daughter of the great racehorse Isonomy and the Hermit mare Flirt. Gorgo had done such good work during the last few days as to cause many people to back her even against such a fast filly as Yum Yum. With six of the entries scratched there were only four starters for the Siren Stakes, Haggin's Yum Yum, Hearst's Gorgo, Lukela d' Peg Woffington and Gebhardt's Lilyship. In the ring the betting was 100 to 60 on Yum Yum, 3 to 1 against Gorgo, 12 to 1 against Peg Woffington and 50 to 1 against Lilyship. A deal of money went on Gorgo and her price shortened at the post to 2 to 1.

The start for the race was the worst Caldwell has made so far this meeting. Gorgo was a length in front of Lilyship, and Peg Woffington, with the favorite, Yum Yum, at least four lengths behind all. Winchell, had he been prudent, would then have made up his ground slowly with Yum Yum, but he whisked her up to the others in the run to the turn. On the back-stretch the four were bunched, Gorgo leading half a length. On the lower turn, however, Gorgo and Yum Yum, drew away from the other two, the former nearly a length ahead. Coming around the bend for home Gorgo seemed to hold Yum Yum safe, and in the stretch Gorgo drew away and won by two lengths from Yum Yum, in the fast time of 1:55 3-5. Peg Woffington was a fair third and Lilyship was beaten off. The winner was but little distressed by her fast race, and in the paddock later on she was surrounded by an admiring crowd. All connected with the stable won, and Fred Littlefield, her jockey, received some handsome doncours for his good work.

HAGGIN'S SONOMA IN FRONT.

The Belle stakes brought out ten starters and Withers Chemise was a warm favorite, with Haggin's Sonoma for second choice. The latter had not run since the Saratoga meeting, and there were doubts as to whether she would stay the distance, but all such surmises proved unfounded.

The race was run over the straight course and Sonoma, Minnie Psalmor and Kerens with Chemise close up made the running for half a mile. At the main track, however, Sonoma was taken to the front by Winchell, and denying the challenges of the Lioness and Miss Cody, she won cleverly by two lengths in 1:17 2-5. The betting was 5 to 1 against the winner.

A big upset began the day by Bradsfords besting Little Minch at seven furlongs. The latter was ridden by Covington, who is hardly strong enough to do justice to the horse, and Bradford, who was at 8 to 1 in the betting beat him half a length in the rapid time of 1:27 2-5, well up to the record. Lottie Wall was a close third. King Crab did not get away well.

A big field of fourteen faced the starter for the second race. Boaz was a strong favorite, and would have won but for being pocketed in the last furlong through Hamilton's stupidity. Unique won after a close fight with Little Minnie, and Boaz was a close third. Unique was a twenty-to-one chance, and after the race was bought in by his owner for $5000 advance.

An equally big surprise followed in the fourth race—the Flight Stakes. Cotton's two-year-old colt, by Billet, out of Juanita, best the favorites, Grisette and Grimsdi, in the fast time of 1:28 1-5 for seven furlongs. The winner had only eighty pounds up, and was a twenty-to-one shot in the books and forty-to-one in the mutuels; Freeman rode him and also Unique.

The last race on grass witnessed the over-throw of another hot favorite. Inspector B. led for nearly a mile, when Osmbyes and Tattle headed him, and the latter won by half a length after a desperate tussle. Tattler was a four-to-one in the betting.

Coney Island.

NEW YORK, Sept. 3.—The Futurity stakes of the Coney Island Jockey Club, the first of the great Produce stakes, were captured this afternoon by Proctor Knott, the Kentucky gelding for whom Lucky Baldwin offered $30,000 before the race, which was $41,675 to the winner. Sam Bryant, who owned the gelding, refused the offer as he had previously refused the offer of $40,000 made by August Belmont. As the result proved, he could afford it; but the gelding had a hard time to win the race, for he only best Haggin's Salvador by a scant half length, and Gslen, "the Chicago wonder," who was third, by a length and a half. These three horses were the only horses ever in the race. Galen jumped away in front of the field of fourteen when Starter Calledwell sent the nags away to as good a start as was ever seen on a race-track. Proctor Knott and Salvador caught him at the end of half a mile, and a hot fight ensued to the finish, Proctor Knott and Salvador fouling each other in the stretch. Hsmlton, who rode Haggin's colt, claimed a foul, but it was not allowed, because one was as much to blame as the other, and so California was beat out of the richest racing prize of the year.

The race was over the new straight-away course, which, not being quite in condition, accounts for the slow time made, 1:15.1-5.

There was a tremendous crowd at the track and about $2,000,000 was bet there during the afternoon.

Baldwin's Laredo, a hot favorite for the opening dash at three-quarters of a mile, was beaten by both Britannie and Sam Harper Jr., after a hot fight in the stretch. Baldwin lost $5,000 on the race. Haggin ran third in the sixth race with Daniella to Strideway and Volunteer, the latter of Fred Gebhardt's string being the favorite.

These were the only Californians which ran, except Hearst's Philander, who finished eleventh in the Futurity stakes, never being among the leaders.

First race, three-quarters of a mile, Britannio won, Sam Harper Jr. second, Laredo third. Time, 1:14 4-5.

Second race, the Great Fall stakes (selling), one and an eighth miles, Frank Ward won, Bordelaise second, Lela May third. Time, 1:56.

Third race (for Twin City horses), one and a quarter miles, Egmont won, Badge second, Lelex third. Time, 2:08.

Fourth race, the Futurity stakes, three-quarters of a mile, Proctor Knott won, Salvador second, Galen third. Time, 1:15 1-5.

Fifth race, one mile, Nisgars won, Pssha second, Ksleidoscope third. Time, 1:43 2-5.

Sixth race (on the turf), three-quarters of a mile, Stride-away won, Volunteer second, Dsnelli third. Time, 1:16 1-5.

Helens, Mont., August 23d—The races to-day resulted as follows:

First race, Oro Fino stakes, trotting for 4-year-olds, $50 each—Ben Cole was the only horse that started. He went around the track in 2:42 and saved his stake money. Procastination, Deputy, Governor, Gregory, John A., Don L., Hsmlin, Hsivsths, Hyde and Almost were drawn.

Second race, running, three furlongs—Babb's Bogus (Echo, Or.) won, Leduc's Red Elm (Salt Lake) second, Morehouse's Daniel B. (Butte) third; time, 0:35 3-4.

Third race, running, handicaps, six furlongs—Babb's Roly Boly (Echo, Or.) won, Morehouse's Ida Glenn (Butte) second, Sutton & DeCamp's sorrel John (Idaho) third; time 1:11 1-4.
D. R. Wells' John Hall, W. H. Babb's Bogus, Coombs' Mart Wilder, Stafford's Eddie R., Baker's Vice Regent and Oregon were strung out in a line, some of them just getting inside the distance flag.

Fourth race, running, one and a quarter miles—Morehouse's Nevada (Butte) won, Baker's Vice Regent (Helena) second, Babb's Diavolo (Echo, Or.) third; Matlock Bros.' Repetta (Pendleton, Or.) fourth; time, 2:14 3-4.

Aug. 24th—To-day was the best of the races, the trotting event being especially exciting and interesting. Five heats were contested without settling the question of superiority, and postponement was necessary until to-morrow. The betting was on an enormous scale, even for Helens, and the people here are noted for their recklessness in laying wagers in the pools. The men who played the mutuels in 2:38 trotting race and guessed the lucky horse made big winnings, in the proportion of $125 for $5 in three of the heats. Probably $100,000 changed hands during the day. Bishop Hero would have won the 2:38 trotting race in the fifth heat, but for an unfortunate break when he was within fifteen feet of the wire, his driver touching him with the whip when he was closely pressed by Fantasia and I. J. S., being a nose ahead of the former and a half a length in advance of the latter. He went off his feet when he was almost under the wire. The summary was as follows:

Same day—Trotting, 2:28 class. Purse, $500.

Nevada and Keepsake were drawn in the second heat.

August 25.—As predicted, Fantasia won the unfinished 2:38 trotting race this morning at the fair grounds, in the seventh heat. During three of the five heats trotted yesterday afternoon she had not gained a place. In the fourth heat she came in third, and in the fifth defeated Junio and Hero, after each had won two heats. The wise men predicted that she would win this morning, and she did in two straight heats, Hero scoring second in the sixth and third in the seventh, Junio third and second respectively. I. J. S. and D. K. W. were drawn. The time for the sixth and seventh heats were 2:30 and 2:30 1-4. All the heats were made in about the same time, the range being from 2:27 3-4 to 2:30 1-4. Fantasia was favorite in the pools to-day, but everybody wanted to back her, and the wagers were not so heavy as on yesterday. The other events were as follows:

Second race, special running, 600 yards, purse $200—John Coomb's Ocheeko Bill won, John Canton's sorrel John second, Stafford's Eddie R. third, Geo. White's Cariboo Chief, Alex. Werks' Glensto O.; time, 0:32 3-4. Baker's Blue Boy was drawn.

Third race, running, five furlongs, purse $300—Morehouse's Daniel B. won, Babb's Bogus second, George White's Green Prentiss third, Babb's Roly Boly, Fisher's T. L. Daniel B. made the remarkable time of 1:03 3-4. Green Prentiss is the horse that killed Fish Blevins the other day. Daniel B. was the favorite.

Fourth race, trotting, free for all, purse $1,500.
Lot Slocum..... 1 3 1 1
Conde..... 2 1 2 2
Little Joe..... 4 4 4 3
Charles Hilton..... 3 2 3 dis
Ranchero..... 5 5 dis

Time, 2:26 3-4, 2:24 1-2, 2:21, 2:24.
Lot Slocum was the favorite. The time in the third heat is the fastest ever made in Montana. Lee Shaner's Kate Ewing, Mrs. Daly's Senator, and Arnold's John F. were drawn.

Fifth race, trotting, Juvenile stakes, for 3-year-olds bred and raised in any of the territories or Oregon, $50 each, $200 added; $300 more if 2:40 is beaten. There were nineteen nominations, but only three started:

Kirkendall's Lady Maxim..... 1 1
Jeffries' Ilton..... 2 2
Platt & McCombs' Minute Man..... 2 2

Time, 2:36 1-2, 2:38 3-4.
Sixth race, running, one and a half miles, handicaps, purse $500—Baker's Vice Regent won, Bybee's Oregon second, Whitmore's Bros.' Laura D. third, Wells' John Hall, Morehouse's Ida Glenn; time, 2:43.

Antipodean Notes.

Hon. Thomas P. Merry, Commissioner to the Melbourne Exposition, sends to us the following interesting notes from Melbourne, under date of July 24th:

WILD FOWL.

This cold and rainy weather is favorable only for duck shooting, and I have twice been out with a borrowed breech-loader, having left my own gun at home in Oregon. The wild fowl shooting here is very good, but the ducks are entirely different from what we have in Western America. The teal is blue-winged and larger than our widgeon. The wood duck is as big as our mallard, and the mountain duck as long as our brant. There are no mallards, springtails, gadwalls or canvassbacks. The only ducks I see here like ours is the spoonbill. The blushing here is colored like the cinnamon duck of California, and as large as the mallard, while the black duck is a beautiful buff color on the head and neck. The plovers are wholly unlike those of the American continent, and there are no wild geese whatever. The black swans are often seen in the lagoons, and I barely missed getting a good wipe at one of them last Friday.

THE RACING EVENTS

So far this season have been carried on principally in the interests of the bookmakers, although one of my fellow-commissioners "got in his work down at the Elstermick track (there are seven race courses within twelve miles of Melbourne) a week ago Saturday." He knew the owner of a horse that was entered in a selling race, and also in a handicaps, named St. Albert. In the opening race the old favorite Stanley, who lost his form last year, was a six to one shot, and he laid a pound on him. The winnings of this he played on St. Albert at two to one, and that gave him twelve pounds more. This he reinvested on the same horse at eight to one in the handicap, and pulled out £144 for his day's work, while I won five pounds on an old roan horse called Curiosity, in a hurdle race, which was all that I touched. All the best horses in Australia are now in Sydney, where the Randwick meeting is the first event of the season. We do not have anything big here until the Cusfield cup is run for next October. They run more horses here than they do in the United States, that is to say the tracks are wider and the fields larger. If a horse is deemed in good condition he is often run twice in one day. Stanley was a great old horse that blew Saturday at Elstermick, and my fellow-commissioner set up the champagne at Scott's on our return to town. Speaking of the Melbourne Cup, there is a great deal of doubt as to the relative merits of Abercorn and Anstralian Peer in that race. With 119 pounds on each, Abercorn is deemed the better horse for a long journey, but he is a long-backed fellow and not particularly adapted for what we would call a "pacer" in Oregon. Old Malna and Dunlop are both entered, but I doubt if either of them gets a place.

HIDALGO.

Mr. Coker of Beetly, Norfolk, England, has just sold twenty-one Norfolk trotting stallions to a breeder in Illinois, and they were dispatched to American last week. The price for the lot was nearly $300,000.

Tom Wonder, the white pacing stallion, by old Tom Cr. w. der, dam by Saratoga, son of Hiattoga, died recently at Aurora, N. Y. He was foaled in 1848, and was the sire of John W. Conley, 2:24; Modesty, 2:26 1-4, and two others in the 30 list. He was also sire of Lizzie Wonder, pacer 2:29 3-4. All of his 2:30 performers were bay. Lizzie Wonder, the pacer, takes after the old horse in color.

sold. A good start was made with Minnie R. slightly in the lead, Peregrine second, Menlo third, Adonis fourth. In this order they continued until on the up turn, when the favorite crept up and took the lead by a neck, which he kept to the wire, finishing in 1:44; Minnie R. second, Menlo third, Adonis fourth. All the riders used the lash with the exception of the winner, who was never touched.

The next event was the 2:50 class, trotting, for a purse of $300, divided as follows: $150, $75, $45 and $30. The following were the entries: Sunflower, Blockade, Gossippee, Fedora, Balkan, Fred L. and Belle C. The pools sold Sunflower $20, Gossippee $10, Balkan $7, field $5. At the start in the first heat Sunflower took the lead, Balkan second, Gossippee third, Blockade and Fred L. trailing. In this order they went around the course, the two rear horses closing up the gap at the up turn and making a very pretty finish. Sunflower came first, Balkan a good second, Gossippee third, a dead heat between Blockade and Fred L. for fourth place, Belle C. and Fedora distanced. Preceding the second heat pools on Sunflower sold something in advance of those previously sold. This heat was a test of the speed of the horses. The start was a fair one. Sunflower led, Balkan and Fred L. close behind. Gossippee lost his feet at the start and the spectators thought that there was little show for him as he was in the rear. He climbed up on the back stretch and on the turn was even with Sunflower and Balkan. Here he passed them and became a sure winner as Sunflower was doing her best and an accident occurred to Balkan. He wavered soon after passing the three-quarter pole and fell on his right side, giving notice to his driver, A. L. Hinds, by showing symptoms of his inability to continue. The fall of the horse precipitated Mr. Hinds to the track, but he was uninjured. A large crowd gathered and the horse was picked up, after the harness had been cut from him. Mr. Hinds afterwards said that he thought the horse acted queer after passing the half. The injury to the horse, if any, could not be determined last night, though he walked to his stable all right.

Gossippee won in 2:32, Sunflower a good second, Blockade third, Fred L. fourth, and Balkan declared distanced.

Gossippee's stock in the pool-box was in the ascendancy after the first heat, and he sold favorite. The start for the third heat found Gossippee lagging at the first turn, but he went up and was even with Sunflower at the quarter, passed her at the half, but broke and lost ground on the up turn. He recovered, however, and came down the stretch in the lead, though Sunflower was forcing him. Blockade came third and Fred L. fourth.

Darkness and dust prevailed to such extent at the close of this heat that the judges decided to postpone the contest until 12:30 p. m. next day.

The races of the final day were very interesting to the 1,500 people who attended, but the number of dollars received at the gate was not quite so many as would cause pleasant feeling to prevail in the minds and pockets of the managers of the Fair.

There were some interested pool buyers who tried to make matters appear as though the judges were showing favoritism in the race between Menlo and J. M. R., but some indisputable evidence was brought before them showing collusion and they declared all pools off, though the purses were awarded to them as they came in the heats. When this decision was announced a cry was sent up by some parties. One man was ordered off the track for insolence.

Only one accident occurred during the week, and that was yesterday. Michael Kern, of Sutter county, turned his wagon around and locked wheels with James Bryden's carriage. Mr. Kern's horse broke the double-trees loose and dragged him over the dash board. He was in a semi-unconscious state for a while, but under good treatment was all right in an hour.

The unfinished trot of yesterday for the 2:50 class, in which Gossippee, Sunflower, Blockade and Fred L. remained, was called promptly at 12 o'clock. Gossippee sold favorite. He took the lead at the start, and maintained it to the finish. He broke near the stand, but passed under on a trot, winning in 2:31, Sunflower a good second, Blockade third, Fred L. distanced for running. The purse was divided as the horses came in, Gossippee having taken two heats on the previous day.

The next race was running, mile and repeat, for a purse of $300, with the following entries: M. Biggs Jr.'s Heenan, J. F. Holland's Mettie Moak, M. McCrimmon's Menlo, W. M. Murray's J. M. R. Pools sold very lightly, J. M. R. being the favorite. Menlo took the lead and kept it. J. M. R. was in the rear until on the back stretch, when he crept up to second place, which he kept to the wire, his rider using the whip to catch first place. Heenan and Mettie Moak were distanced.

For the second dash Menlo was in the pools at $25, J. M. R. $15. At the start J. M. R. went slightly to the lead, and kept it until on the up turn, when they evened up and came down the stretch heads together. They passed under the wire even. The heat was declared dead. Time 1:45.

Some objection was raised to the rider of J. M. R. before the start for the third dash. At one time it was decided to change, but after considering the matter the original rider was retained. J. M. R. took the lead and kept it, as before, until entering the stretch, when Menlo forged ahead and came in winner by over a length. Time, 1:48.

The judge reserved their decision until later in the afternoon, it appearing, so it was rumored, that the handling of J. M. R. was a little queer, as his previous performances have been better.

The next event was the 2:30 trotting class, for a purse of $400, divided as follows: $200, $100, $60 and $40. The following were the entries: Eva W., Jim L., Hazel Kirk, Alphens and Eros. The first heat resulted in Hazel Kirk leading until on the up turn, when she broke, and Jim L., Eva W. and Alphens passed her. A finish was made with Jim L. first, Eva W. second, Alphens third, Hazel Kirk fourth and Eros fifth. Time, 2:30. Jim L. sold favorite at $10, Eva W. second at $5 and the field $3. After the first heat Eros was allowed to be withdrawn.

The second heat was the best throughout and the prettiest of any of the week at the finish. At the start Eva W. led by a length. The four trotted very evenly the entire course. When on the stretch, Hazel forged ahead and came in ahead of Alphens about a length, Jim L. third and Eva W. fourth. Time, 2:30.

The pools for the third heat sold Jim L. favorite, Hazel second, and the others in the field, for small amounts. Hazel Kirk took the lead, closely followed by Eva W. and Jim L. Hazel kept the lead by a neck until down the stretch, when she broke, being passed by Jim L., who came first in 2:30, Hazel a good second, Eva third and Alphens fourth.

Pools for the fourth heat sold very rarely as no one seemed to want to buy them. Jim L. was considered by the knowing ones to be the best of the travelers.

Jim I. took the lead and held it from the start. Eva W.

and Hazel broke. The former held second place by running. Alphens was third, but was passed by Hazel on the stretch. Jim L. came first and took first money, Alphens second and third money, Hazel third and second money, Eva fourth for running. The time was 2:29.

The special trot for a purse of $100 between the two year old colts, Celeste and Marquoit, owned by W. H. McManus and W. H. Viogott, dovetailed the heats of the foregoing race. No pools were sold. It was easily won by Celeste in two heats, in 2:59 and 2:57.

The final event of the day and week was the mixed trotting and pacing race for a purse of $300, for which the following entries were made: Johnny Skelton and George Waple pacers, and Maxwell and Belle C. trotters.

At the start Skelton got a good lead, which he kept to the finish, Waple second, though Maxwell pushed him on the up turn for the place. They came in in that order, Belle C. being distanced. Time, 2:33.

The sale of pools stopped here and Auctioneer Sprague and assistants quit.

Waple took the lead at the start and kept it until after passing the half, when Maxwell went ahead and kept there to the finish. Time, 2:41. Waple a good second and Skelton third.

For the third heat Waple took the lead, but was evened at the quarter by Skelton, Maxwell being a poor third. At the half Skelton went ahead and finished an easy winner in 2:34, Waple second, Maxwell a good third.

The fourth and last heat was easily won by Skelton, who kept the lead from beginning to end. Waple came second and Maxwell a poor third. Time 2:43. Skelton got first money, Maxwell second and Waple third.

Judge Haworth thanked the horsemen and the spectators for their attendance and bid them adieu.

Races and Racers.

(The Sporting World.)

The Monmouth Park meeting is over and it ended as brilliantly as it began. The weather was lovely, bright and sunny, yet a brisk breeze was blowing, which seemed to invigorate while it tempered the heat. The track was in excellent condition; there was no awkward contretemps to mar the enjoyment of the day. The racing was excellent, both in quantity and quality, and altogether a more perfect close to a race meeting could hardly have been wished for. During the two months' meeting people managed to get pretty well acquainted, and at the track there were many friendly leave takings from officials and race track employees and others, and on the trains from railway hands. One particularly pleasant feature during the Monmouth Park meeting was the special car reserved for newspaper men. It was of great benefit, as it enabled the men to complete their routine work before they reached the city, and it must be said that the men in charge could not do too much to facilitate the work of the press men or to contribute anything possible for their comfort.

There was but one thing to mar the full enjoyment of the day, and that was the news that McLaughlin's connection with the Dwyer stable had ceased. The severance of a jockey's engagement to a stable under ordinary circumstances is a matter of but passing interest. In this case, however, the occurrence derives importance from the fact that the growth of McLaughlin as a jockey and that of the Dwyer dynasty on the turf have been synchronous. Without the horses that the Dwyers gave him to ride, McLaughlin never would have had the chance to achieve the reputation which rapidly helped him to make himself the premier jockey of America. Without his skill as a rider, both in races and at exercise, and his faithful devotion to their interests, the Dwyers would hardly have achieved that prominent success which has made their career on the turf the marvel of the decade. The separation of the two parties, therefore, deserves to be regarded as a turf event of more than ordinary importance.

There has been no quarrel between employers and employee, though it has been known for some time that grave dissatisfaction has existed with McLaughlin. What the cause was is neither here nor there. It is of a private nature. Suffice it to say that the parties agreed to disagree. Mr. M. T. Dwyer, who was at the track yesterday, had nothing to say, and McLaughlin was likewise mute. All that was uttered by the parties was to speak in the highest terms of each other. But the severance is a sad one, and it is to be regretted that the circumstances which necessitated it were of such a nature that no other course was open.

For the present McLaughlin will act as public jockey, and of course he will not want for opportunities of getting remunerative mounts; and although at present he appears to be decidedly out of form, he will soon get into it. On account of his reticent and reserved manner he never was what might be called a popular man, but his sterling qualities as a rider, and his vast experience in the saddle should continue to make his services in as much demand, after he breaks through the spell which at present seems to enchain him, as they were when he had the prestige of the Dwyer stable to back him.

But to the racing. One marked feature was the singular success of the Baldwin stable, which won no less than three of the eight races, finished second in another, third in a fifth and unplaced in but one. A series of victories like these are rare indeed nowadays, and remind one of the days of the late Mr. George L. Lorillard, or later yet of the palmy days of the Dwyer stable. The victories demonstrate, of course, that the horses that have been at Saratoga will again be dangerous factors in all races that are to occur during the ensuing meetings at the Brooklyn and Sheepshead Bay tracks. There seems to be something in the air and in the water of the Springs which adds a second or more to a horse's speed.

At the same time there was something in the performances of Mr. Baldwin's horses yesterday that aroused no end of unpleasant comment, and that was the running of Grisette. On Saturday, at Saratoga, this filly was badly beaten by such animals as Wary, Belle D'Or and Oaraman in a mile and a furlong race, won in the slow time of 1:58. Yesterday she comes out and beats such good ones as Eurus, Aurelia and others in the hollowest kind of a style at a mile won easily by a length and a half in 1:43. It is, of course, not to be supposed that a man of Mr. Baldwin's immense wealth would stoop to stopping his horses. There is no incentive to such action. Hence I suppose Grisette's change of form must be attributed to the in and out running now so common, and which is explained by the amount of racing horses have to do nowadays.

For the opening event, a dash of three-quarters of a mile, Fitzroy was the favorite, but there was a very strong tip out on Flageoletta. Then, too, it was whispered about that Laredo was a cinch, and as a deal of money went in on him, he was driven to the short price of four to one. Umpire had a strong following on account of his previous good performances, but the rest were practically friendless. Mary T., followed by Fred B., Fitzroy and Laredo well up, made the running till well into the stretch, when Fitzroy took the lead and looked all over a winner. In the last furlong, however, Barnes brought up Laredo with a magnificent rush, and, nailing Fitzroy on the post, won cleverly by a head. Fred B. was third, two lengths behind, and at his neck came Flageoletta. The latter was very slow to get in motion, but showed a remarkable turn of speed at the end.

Fresno had done some extraordinarily good work and his stable thought that he would win to a certainty. Of the Withers pair the stable thought that they had a certainty in the Dawdle colt, who had worked considerable better than the Faverdale colt. Beside, he had the best of the weights, and the Faverdale colt had not been doing so well as he might. Mr. Galway was very sweet on his charming filly Stephanie, and Utility, Kasson and Fides also had considerable public and stable support. The McCarthys, father and son of course, thought that they had a rare good chance with Sorrento, and as they had McLaughlin up thought they had little less than a certainty.

The race resulted in an excellent contest. The Lioness was first away, followed by the Faverdale colt, Stephanie and Utility. Garrison, however, at once shot Fresno through next the rails, so that in the first few strides he showed in front. Then, however, he took him back and brought up the rear. Utility, lapped to the head by Fides and closely attended by Kasson, made the running till into the stretch, when the Faverdale colt joined them. When straightened out Fresno and Sorrento and Stephanie also moved up, and up to the furlong pole the race was anybody's. In coming through Fresno interfered with Sorrento, and McLaughlin, on the latter, retaliated by bumping against Fresno. Thus aided, the Faverdale colt came through, and pinning Fresno against the rails, won handsily by a length and a half. Stephanie came very fast at the end and Fresno barely beat her a head.

Garrison rode Fresno very injudiciously, and the colt would undoubtedly have won had he been handled with more judgment. Fitzpatrick rode the Faverdale colt with all the old time dash, firmness and decision which made him famous. The Dawdle colt showed no speed. Kasson seems to be of no account as a race horse. Stephanie, however, will bear a lot of watching.

Raceland and Los Angeles were practically even favorites for the Jersey Handicap but there was the strongest kind of a tip out about Larchmont, who was backed by a talented division from 10 to 1 down to 5 and 6 to 1. Badge of course had a strong following. George Oyster and King Idle made all the running till nearing the head of the stretch, when Los Angeles, Badge and Larchmont moved up, while Raceland, who had been trailing, came up very fast. When straightened out Badge, Los Angeles and Raceland drew away and a beautiful race ensued. Los Angeles, superbly ridden by Murphy, won cleverly by a neck. Had Badge been as well ridden as Los Angeles, he would have won. It was all in the jockeyship. Raceland finished at Badge's quarters.

Aurelia was the favorite for a mile and a furlong handicap, with Eurus a strong second choice. So liberally was Grisette supported, however, that she closed on almost even terms with them. Salisbury set the pace for nearly three-quarters of a mile, when he had enough. Grisette then took up the running, followed by Aurelia and Eurus, but Grisette always had the race in hand and won easily by a length and a half from Eurus. Aurelia was pulled up at the end and Specialty beat her a head for the place.

A Mule Race.

Just after the war there was to be a mule race with gentlemen riders, at the old Metairie, near New Orleans, and the excitement ran high, the several riders backing themselves heavily. One slick young gentleman resolved to make a "kitty." He wrote up to Kentucky and Tennessee, giving his correspondents "carte blanche" to buy him a "fast" mule, one that had thoroughbred blood if possible. In a few weeks one of his agents struck what he thought was the animal wanted, and on his representation the mule was shipped here. On being tried, the mule, whose dam was a thoroughbred mare, actually showed a mile in 1:56, and our young friend started in on his "killing." Going to his friends one by one he "gathered them in," until he stood to win $25,000 on his mount. The day of the race came, and the society people, who do not appreciate a race between the best horses in the country, turned out by thousands to see the "battle of the mules." On the track the fun before the race was furious. One of the gentlemen "jocks" was rigged up in all the panoply of silk and gilt braid, and from the top of his patent leather top hoota dangled heavy gold tassels, clinking as he strode proudly along in front of the ladies' stand.

One noted character of the day, I think his name was Gravea, put up his glasses as this specimen of the gilt-edged aristocracy came along, the "observed of all observers," and said to his friend, "Jim, bet you a hundred that chap will fall off his mule." He of the tassels overheard the remark as he was passing, and stepping up to Graves, snapped out, "What did you say, air? Mr. Gravea quietly observed, "I wanted to bet $100 that you would fall off." The elegantly-attired youth stared at him and, cornered, said, "I'll take your bet, air," and he did. They went to the post, the mules bucking, kicking andumping their backs in the endeavor to dislodge their riders, all the circus taking place in front of the stand and the assembled thousands, most of whom were already convulsed with laughter. Suddenly a roar from the massed crowd announced something unusual, and sure enough there was. The starter catching them in motion, had started them and after going about fifty yards, the mule on which he of the tassels was mounted, began to round his hack viciously, and stop and buck. Suddenly, with a snort, a quick "hump" and jerk he shot rider, saddle, girth and head-gear over his head, the rider being deposited squarely on the track, sitting astride of his saddle, accoutrements, etc., amid the yells and laughter of 10,000 people.

Mr. Graves, who had bet that he would go off, made his way up to his friend and said: "I knew it, Jim; I knew it. He was too darned pretty to be a good jockey." Meanwhile the other mules raced on, and the Kentucky thoroughbred importation won by a hundred yards, doing the mile in 2 min 1 sec.

If one may judge by English reports of English field trials, judges there are more disposed to arbitrary rulings than those of other countries. Whether the fact, if it be a fact, is due to social considerations, to more rigid construction of rules, or to whim, does not clearly appear. In more democratic France, and in perfectly democratic America, the judge, owner and handler meet on common ground, the only law being that fair behavior and self respect shall control all. Possibly the better acquaintance resulting from such informality makes men more forbearing, and more likely to impute many seeming faults in dogs to errors in their trainers. True it is that American judges more generally ascertain the actual relative merit of dogs than those of other lands.

The National Horse of America.

By Leslie M. MacLeod, in Patent Office Report for 1887.

In essaying to write of the national American horse, in order to the better establish an understanding between the reader and the writer, it is essential to outline the ground to be covered, the phases of the subject to be touched upon, and the extent to which each can be considered. In attempting to deal, in the space of a few pages, with a subject that could only be adequately and comprehensively discussed in a large volume, we must first choose certain divisions of the subject to which our attention will be directed, for it is patent that we cannot here discuss so large a topic in all its aspects. Then, when we have determined our divisions, we must again prescribe further limits of detail. With these remarks at the outset, the reader will understand why I shall not attempt to treat any single point with fullness or minuteness, but shall rather discuss each division of the subject in its leading features alone, and with that degree of generalization necessarily involved in considering a large subject in small compass. And I must explain, too, by way of preface, that I write for the general reader, not for the professional breeder, to whom probably all I shall say will prove familiar.

The division that is the simplest will best suit the purpose. The subject will then be divided and considered something in this order: (1) Definition. (2) Origin and history. (3) Principles of breeding, characteristics, value and uses of the distinctively American horse.

The thoroughbred race-horse may with propriety be called the national horse of Great Britain. There he has reached his highest development, and if the race-horses of other countries have excelled, it has been through liberal draughts of English blood. In like manner, but in greater degree, the trotting-horse is the national horse of America. He is distinctively and peculiarly an American production. The evolution of the trotting breed has been but an incident in the development of the Republic. In no other land has the trotter been generally bred; in no other land has he been brought to high development as a breed, nor in any other land has he been accepted and utilized as specially and superiorly adapted to the every-day uses of the people. It is true that Russia has her Orloff trotter: that writers speak of "Norfolk trotters" in England a century ago, and that in France, Austria and Australia native horses race at the trotting gait. Though vastly superior to any trotter of foreign origin—or perhaps it would be more correct to call him the only trotter of foreign origin—the Orloff does not hold the place in the affairs of the Russian people held by the American trotting-bred horse in the affairs of the American people. He is not generally bred and used. As to the "Norfolk trotters" of England, the more that is learned of them the less certain can we be that it is at all correct to regard them as a breed of trotters. Should we array all that is known of these horses we could only show that some of them had speed at the trot far superior to that of the ordinary English horse, and proving this we have not by any means proven that they were a trotting breed, but rather have established that they might have been suitable raw material from which, by selection and development through a series of generations, to evolve a trotting breed. As to the "native trotters" of Europe and the "native trotters of Australia, they must be regarded in discussing breeds as yet in too embryotic a state to be seriously considered.

The fact, then, that the fast trotting-horse is distinctively an American production; that of all our breeds of horses the trotting-horse is the only one that we can claim as peculiarly American; that he fills with the American people a range of uses that no other breed or variety can fill, and that he is bred in America to an extent unapproached by other breeds, are ample justification for the public acceptance—and for my definition—of the trotting-bred horse as the national horse of America.

I will defer comment upon his excellence in special capacities until we have done with the historical division of our subject; but I wish here to explain that when I define and treat the trotting-horse as the national horse I do so considering him not chiefly as a turf-horse—a racing animal—but regarding him in his higher capacity as the special horse of the people. Still, in tracing his history, in estimating his capacities and in weighing the relative merits of the different strains of blood that enter into this composite breed we must deal in a very great measure with his turf history. The horse best adapted to the uses of the American farmer and the average American citizen who uses horses at all, is the one that, with other essentials, combines quick, far-reaching, well balanced action with the endurance to sustain speed at high rates and long distances. These are, too, the qualities primarily required in a horse for racing purposes, and thus the blood best for the trotting-turf is the best blood from which to breed the horse on the road, the park and the boulevard—the horse for the single driving equipage, for the family phaeton or for double harness. Qualities required for these eminently proper purposes are produced in the highest degree by the best trotting-blood. We can only determine what the best trotting-blood is by the measure of turf tests and turf history, and though these qualities may be, and we know are, oftentimes shamefully perverted upon the track, they are none the less essential and none the less to be desired in the horse we are discussing. The fact that high and excellent capacities are perverted to ignoble uses renders them none the less to be admired, valued and striven for. Further on I propose to say a word as to the benefits of proper racing. Here I only wish to impress upon the reader, who may have no interest in the American trotter in a turf sense, the fact that the value of the light-harness horse rests in a large degree upon the purity and quality of his blood, and that the worth of his blood can only be determined by what it has accomplished under the turf test. Hence the occasion for considering turf history.

To every one accustomed to horses the differences of the various gaits are familiar, but to fix them clearly in the minds is a first necessity in studying the subject of breeding horses in which value depends on speed at a certain gait. The walk, the trot or the pace and the gallop are gaits common to all breeds. The pace, or amble, is a gait kindred to the trot and is a faster gait than the trot. The order of movement in the trot is left fore foot, right hind foot, right fore foot, left hind foot. Thus the left fore and right hind foot move in unison, striking the ground together; then in turn right fore foot and left hind foot complete the revolution, and therefore the trot is properly called the "diagonal gait." The pacer, like the trotter, moves two feet in the same direction simultaneously, then alternates with the other two, but in place of the fore leg and the hind leg of opposite sides, he moves in unison the fore and hind leg of one side, then the fore and hind leg of the other side. Thus we call the pace "the lateral gait." The difference of the gaits is not great; the mechanism is practically the same. The fact that the same animals pace and trot fast, that pacing parents beget trotting progeny, and vice versa; and that both gaits seem natural to the same animal demonstrates that they are but variations of one gait, occupying in the economy of action a place between the walk and the gallop. The more closely one studies the relation of these variations of gait the less surprising to him will appear the part which pacing-blood has played in establishing a breed of trotters. The fast gallop, or run, is an entirely different gait; each leg acts, as it were, independently. To begin the revolution the horse makes his bound with the left fore foot, the last to leave the ground; then for a moment he is entirely in the air, with his four feet rather bunched, and when he strikes the ground again it is first with his right hind foot; then a moment more and he is poised on the left fore foot, as at the beginning of the revolution. It will be seen that this gait is wholly and radically different from the pace and trot; that the order of action, and necessarily the mental organization governing the method of locomotion and use of the limbs, are different. Hence, no one horse is, or can be, possessed of great speed at the gallop, and also great speed at the trot or pace. To possess great speed of either one of these two orders he must inherit speed of that order.

As we are indebted to England principally for the nucleus of our breed of trotters, it will be of interest to note very briefly such trans-atlantic horse history as has a bearing upon the subject.

The origin of the Orloff, though his blood has not a part in our American breed, is of interest; that being the fastest of foreign trotting breeds. In 1772, Count Alexis Orloff, a commander in the Russian fleet, obtained from a Turkish pasha a large white Arab or Barb horse called Smetanka. From a Danish mare Smetanka got Polkan; and from a Dutch mare Polkan got Bars, the founder of the Orloff trotters. It will be noted that Bars was two removes from the Oriental horse and carried one-quarter of his blood. The fact has been commented upon that Andrew Jackson, the founder of the Clay family of trotters, was similarly bred; that is, he was two removes from the imported Barb, Grand Bashaw, and, like Bars, out of a mare of unnamed blood. Count Orloff, it appears, bred the Bars blood upon itself, and a writer, speaking with the apparent assurance of one who knows, tells us that "the race became a distinct type in about thirty years, and since that period all attempts to improve the breed by fresh blood, whether Arab, English, French or Dutch have failed." This can readily be believed, for in our own horse history we find its corroboration and analogy. Count Orloff died in 1808, but his stud was kept intact until 1845, when it was broken up, the Russian Imperial Government becoming the owner of the greater part. The blood and performances of these horses have been carefully recorded. The highest rate of speed known to have been attained by an Orloff was in trotting three versts in five minutes. A verst being 1:166 $\frac{2}{3}$ yards, it will be seen that the performance was at the rate of a mile in about 2:31 $\frac{1}{2}$. Though some specimens of the Orloff trotter were brought to the United States, meeting trotting blood superior to their own, they naturally failed to leave their mark on our breed.

The only reputed trotters mentioned by English writers were certain horses located chiefly in the county of Norfolk. John Lawrence, the earliest writer who mentions them, and a most entertaining one, declares that "the renowned Blank may be looked upon as the father of trotters, since from his son, Shales, have proceeded the best and greatest number of horses of that qualification." Blank was a son of the Godolphin Arabian whose romantic and mysterious career we are told touched at one time the degradation of hauling a cart in the streets of Paris, though at last he achieved fame as a mighty sire of English race-horses. As will be seen later on, however, Shales was probably by Blaze and not by Blank. One of the most famous of this tribe was Marshland Shales, a noted trotter that sold for over 3,000 guineas at auction in 1812, when ten years old. In writing of these horses a quaint old writer describes Marshland Shales as "the best in Mother England." Records of their speed are indefinite and uncertain, but it is said that a mare named Phenomena trotted in July, 1800, seventeen miles in fifty-six minutes, and in the same month repeated the performance in fifty-three minutes. If this be true, this mare was the superior of any American trotter, not of her day alone, but for many years after her day. When we remember that this was at the rate of twenty miles in sixty-two and one-third minutes, and that it was not until 1849 that Trustee, in America, covered twenty miles in 59:35 $\frac{1}{2}$, the conclusion is forced upon us that the English had the material from which to build and evolve a great breed of trotters. That they have nothing equal to Phenomena in these days is certain, and the cause of this retrogression is probably that the trotting instinct and action in the horses of the olden time has been submerged by repeated infusions of running blood, just as the ancient English pacer disappeared before the tides of Oriental blood upon which the English thoroughbred is founded. The chief, and indeed only interest, attaching to the Norfolk trotter is in the fact that it is practically certain that Imported Bellfounder, the sire of the dam of Rysdyk's Hambletonian, the greatest of all American trotting progenitors, was one of this tribe. This horse was imported from England in 1822, and was a powerful animal, with gigantic quarters, showy trotting action, and kindly disposition. Hambletonian bore much resemblance to him in form and disposition.

The foreign horse that played the most important part in originating the American trotting breed, and that figures in the ancestry of our greatest sires and performers was Imported Messenger. Ever since trotting speed first began to be considered a mark of merit in the American horse, ever since trotting blood was talked of, the blood of this horse, Messenger, has been unanimously considered the chief foundation stone on which the greatest trotting families have been built. Just as the English race-horse horse was founded on Oriental blood, and in years of selection and development for a special purpose was bred to a point of excellence unknown to the oriental, so the most unpretentious trotting-blood of to-day is superior to what the direct blood of Messenger was. It is with writers on horse-breeding a very common but very erroneous thing to inculcate the idea that because some family of horses originated in a famous ancestor he was necessarily superior to his descendants of the present day. They forget that in forming a breed we rise superior to as we go away from the beginning. A stream meandering from a mountain spring may be the source of a great river; but, if we follow that stream we find it joined by tributary after tributary until the aggregated whole is a mighty volume, compared with which the source is insignificant. So the speed-transmitting power of Messenger, if it could be now drawn upon directly, would be a weak and sluggish element in the swift and intense speed currents of to-day. Still none the less did it play its part as an original source.

Messenger was a grey horse, foaled in 1780, bred by John Pratt, of New Market, England, and according to the English Stud-Book, was got by Mambrino, out of a daughter of Turf, Mambrino, was by Engineer, son of Sampson, by Blaze, by Childers (Flying Childers), son of the Darley Arabian, a horse imported to England from the Levant, in the reign of Queen Anne. Turf, the reputed sire of the dam of Messenger, was by Matchem, son of Cade, by the Godolphin Arabian.

Here two points present themselves for consideration, perhaps we should say, speculation:

First, Mr. J. H. Wallace, founder and compiler of the American Trotting Register, than whom no man has worked more indefatigably in the interest of the American horse, than whom no one has accomplished more, and than whom none is a better authority, has quite clearly demonstrated that Messenger was not a strictly thoroughbred horse. Engineer, the sire of Mambrino, sire of Messenger, was not thoroughbred, and under the technics of breeding, this of itself puts Messenger outside the pale of race-horses of untainted blood. Then the evidence that his dam was a daughter of Turf is wholly unsatisfactory, and in short, even if all stated in the Stud-Book is admitted, still under no rule, English or American, could Messenger be ranked as thoroughbred. It may be said he was practically thoroughbred, but when we reflect that he did that in founding a trotting-breed which no thoroughbred horse ever did, we are almost irresistibly forced to the conclusion that in the streams of unknown and uncertain blood pouring into his inheritance, some subtle influence was carried that favored the trotting-gait. Indeed, this is not speculation, but certainty; for in Pick's Turf Register we find this striking and positive statement concerning Mambrino, the sire of Messenger: "Mambrino was likewise sire of a great many excellent hunters and strong, useful road-horses. And it has been said that from his blood the breed of horses for the coach was brought nearly to perfection."

Another point, speculative rather than certain: I have already given John Lawrence's statement that Blank "may be looked upon as the father of (English) trotters, since from his son Shales have proceeded the best and greatest number of horses of that qualification." But in this history Lawrence admits that the statement that Shales was by Blank is merely tradition. In the introduction of Vol. I. of the English Hackney Stud-Book, Henry F. Euren, a most candid and entertaining writer, pretty satisfactorily demonstrated that Shales was a son of Blaze, the sire of Sampson, that got Engineer, sire of Mambrino, the sire of Messenger; and if, as is very probable, Bellfounder, the sire of the dam of Rysdyk's Hambletonian, was a descendant of Shales, there was a remote consanguinity between the male and female lines of Hambletonian's inheritance. Euren tabulates the pedigree of Blaze, and remarks: "There would appear to be a large portion of English blood in the dam of Blaze, though no one can say what was its character, whether running, trotting or ambling." And commenting further, he reasons:

The fact that in the seventh generation from Blaze, on each side, the reunion of the blood in Rysdyk's Hambletonian, the sire of so many fast American trotting horses, should have proved to have been of the most impressive character, would appear to warrant the conclusion that there was a strong latent trotting tendency in the ancestors on one, if not on both sides of Blaze.

I do not attribute much more importance to the influence of remote crosses, except in one sense—the historical importance of that influence as a starting point, from which it, meeting kindred and strengthening crosses, through successive generations, rises at each remove, stronger, better and infinitely superior to its origin.

Messenger was imported to Philadelphia in 1788; was kept in Pennsylvania and New Jersey for the first six years of his life in American, and was variously kept on Long Island, in Dutchess, Westchester and Orange counties, New York, and in New Jersey until his death, near Oyster Bay, Long Island, in 1808. As to what degree of trotting action Messenger possessed we have no evidence; but this much is certain, that he left progeny noted for their speed and endurance on the road, and when in these descendants this road-gait was developed and intensified by use, and they were mated with a view to producing progeny superior in this special qualification to themselves, each generation naturally reached a higher plane of excellence than its predecessors. "It was," says Mr. Wallace, "the crowning glory of his twenty years' service in this country that he left a race of driving-horses of unapproachable excellence, and as he inherited this quality from his sire, so he imparted it to his sons and they in turn to theirs, until we have to-day from this stock the fleetest and stoutest trotters in the world." And herein lies the importance of Messenger, and to this extent only: He furnished sterling "raw material" from which to mold a trotting-breed; and the breeder of the high-class American horse of to-day can regard Messenger blood much as the jeweler who works a triumph in gold may be supposed to regard the rough nugget.

Though in the second and third generations we find many descendants of Messenger noted as trotters in their time and figuring frequently in the trotting genealogies of our day, it is incompatible with the purposes and extent of this article to consider any but the chief lines, those upon which the place in history of Messenger's blood as a source of the greatest trotting families chiefly depend. These three sons—chief sources—we will consider in the inverse order of their importance: Winthrop Messenger, Bishop's Hambletonian, Mambrino.

Winthrop Messenger was taken to Maine in 1816, and was the founder of that sterling race frequently spoken of as Maine Messengers. He was a large, coarse horse, and was, I judge, very little appreciated in his time. Among the best descendants was his son, Witherell Messenger, sire of Belle of Portland, 2:26. A daughter of Witherell Messenger mated with a son of his, produced the famous Belle Strickland, 2:26. Six other daughters figure in the records as the dams of trotters with records faster than 2:30. Fanny Pullen, daughter of Winthrop Messenger, was a great trotter in her time, and to Imported Trustee she produced the famous Trustee that trotted, in 1848, twenty miles in 59:35 $\frac{1}{2}$. He was the first horse to trot twenty miles within the hour; to this day only six have done it, and it is earnestly to be desired by every decent horseman that no horse will ever again be subjected to this cruel exaction. A course parallel to that which produced Belle Strickland, brought State of Maine, a horse of some merit. He was got by a son of Winthrop Messenger out of a daughter of Winthrop Messenger. Through numerous other channels much of the best horse stock of Maine trace to Winthrop Messenger.

Bishop's Hambletonian, originally called Hamiltonian, was a bay horse, foaled 1804, bred by General Coles at Dosoris, Long Island, and was by Imported Messenger out of Pheasant, by Imported Shark. He was a race-horse quite nearly first-class, especially at long distances, being successful at four miles. He was the best of all Messenger's progeny as a race-horse, if we except Miller's Damsel, the dam of American Eclipse. As a sire of trotters and trotting-progenitors he won distinction. One of the most gifted of early turf writers, who wrote with singular severity of this horse, conceded that "he got some excellent roadsters, good trotters," but probably in so speaking of the race-horse, the writer meant to be anything but complimentary.

Among the progeny of Bishop's Hambletonian the most distinguished on the trotting turf were the famous Whalebone and another early trotter of less note, Sir Peter. In 1830 and 1831 the former ranked with the best of his day as a long distance trotter, and has to his credit a performance of thirty-two miles in 1:58 05. Daughters of Bishop's Hambletonian produced Paul Fry and Topgallant, both being by other sons of Messenger, and they were the first trotters of their time. The latter trotted three miles in 8:11 in 1829. The most noted progenitors of trotters 1-ft by Bishop's Hambletonian were his sons Harris' Hambletonian and Judson's Hambletonian. The former sired Green Mountain Maid, 2:28½; Lady Shannon, 2:28½; Hero, pacing record 2:20½, and others of less note. A son of his sired Joker, 2:22½, and six of his daughters have produced trotters. Maj. Edsall, the sire of Robert McGregor, 2:17½, was out of a daughter of Harris' Hambletonian, as were also Cuyler, Stillson and other sires of note yet living. Judson's Hambletonian was less distinguished than Harris', but his blood enters into several lines, the most prominent being through his son Audrus' Hambletonian, the sire of the trotting mare Princess, that, after meeting the best campaigners of her day from the Pacific to the Atlantic, made still more firm her rank in the records as the dam of Happy Medium, one of the greatest trotting sires the world has yet produced.

An illustration of how quickly a horse will perform what he has been taught to do is given in the following paragraph: When the Colorado troops went down to Missouri to meet old Pap Price's army in time of the late war, Captain W. H. Pierce, of Denver, rode a strapping big gray horse, a thoroughbred, a son of Little Arthur, that had been educated as a hurdle-jumper. At the battle of Westport, when the engagement became terrific and close, an order was given the Colorado troops to charge and silence a battery that was doing much mischief to the Union troops. Pierce at the head of his command gave the order "forward" and made a dash at the guns. The fire was so hot the command fell back. But not so with the great thoroughbred and his rider. The horse evidently mistook the guns that were belching forth fire and shot for monster hordes, and away he went for them, clearing them at a bound, landing himself and rider unscratched in the enemy's camp.—Denver Field and Farm.

The Coney Island Jockey Club has been making many improvements at Sheepshead Bay track since their spring meeting closed. All the stairways leading from the lower to the upper tier of the grandstand have been removed and will be put up outside the building proper. A lot of valuable space for seeing the races will thus be gained. The approaches from the outer gate to the stand have been laid in brick, an improvement on the old plank walks. The new stand back of the betting ring has been enlarged to double its former size. An entirely new departure has been taken in the facilities provided for judging a finish. The old judge's and timers' stands have been taken down and a new double-decked structure is now being erected, light and pretty, but at the same time very substantial. It is to be somewhat on the plan of that in use at Cedarhurst, though of course much more solid. The lower tier will be for the judges, while the timers will occupy the upper ones. Hence, in future it will be no longer possible for people to go over to the timers after a close finish and see whether the judges were right in placing the horses. The whole structure will be surmounted by a huge time dial, the time on which will be worked by some mechanism so as to show the time of every quarter, and the public at large will thus have the same means of judging the speed of the horses in a race as the possessors of timing watches. This idea is a valuable one, and is modeled after one of the very admirable features in vogue on Australian race-courses.

Horse Notes.

Eight Arab mares at a recent sale in London realized $2,550, and the same number of horses $2,450. The average was $312.50.

The advantage of owning good horses is as much in being able to sell at any time as it is in getting good prices when you do sell. You can always find buyers for good horses.

Notwithstanding the fact that Buffalo, at the recent circuit meeting, paid to owners of horses $10,000 more than the gate receipts, she cleared over $12,000.

John Splan wants to have drivers licensed. Some of those at present behind pags, he says he wouldn't allow to drive him from the hotel to the depot.

The difference between going without and going with a running mate is well exemplified in You Bet's case. He can pace a mile in single harness in about 2:25, but with a runner to pull the weight he can make 2:05½ feel decidedly uncomfortable.

The number of horses now on the Turf that run in cowardly fashion is very large, in all likelihood comparatively much larger than formerly. I was asking Tom Cannon the other day for his experience of the matter, and also for an explanation, and he suggests a very simple and probable cause. There is much more racing than there was formerly, horses run oftener, they are consequently tried oftener, and the result is that they get sick of racing. They know, in most cases, what a finish means—very likely a dig with the spur if it is a close thing, at the lightest two or three smart cuts with the whip—the old butcher boy flogging jockey is not common in England, though he is nearly the rule in France—and almost invariably a more or less desperate and distressing effort. Who can doubt many of them know also that, if they do not get too near to the head of affairs, but take it quietly and stay with the ruck, the finish will be much easier; very likely the jockey will only ride them with his hands, at any rate if he takes up his whip and there is no response, in many cases he will give it up as a bad job? Horses, as a rule, know so much about racing that they are apt to decline to race.—RAPIER, in London News.

I cut the following from Temple Bar some time ago, but forgot it. It is old, of course, but so curious as to be well worth the space it occupies. "Achilles (the swift footed) allows the tortoise 100 yards start and runs 10 yards while the tortoise runs 1 yard. Now, when Achilles has run 100 yards the tortoise has run 10 yards, and is therefore still that distance ahead. When Achilles has run these 10 yards the tortoise has run 1 yard. When Achilles has run the 1 yard, the tortoise has run 1-10 of a yard. And when Achilles has run the 1-10 of a yard the tortoise has run 1-100th. It is only necessary to continue the same process of reasoning to prove that Achilles can never overtake the tortoise. A much better paradox, though somewhat of the same kind, runs as follows:—"A man who owes 1s. proceeds to pay it at the rate of 6d. the first day, 3d. the next day, 1½d. the next, ¾d. the next, and so on—paying each day half the amount he paid the day before. Supposing him to be furnished with counters of small value, so as to be able readily to pay fractions of 1d. how long would it take him to pay the 1s.?" The answer is that he would never pay it. It is true that he will pay the 11½d. in four days. But the remaining ¾d. he can never pay. This paradox varies from the preceding in one important particular, and deserves to be called a better paradox for this reason, that we know that Achilles, in spite of all reasoning, will certainly overtake the tortoise. But it is mathematically demonstrated that the debtor, under such circumstances, can never pay his 1s., even though he should be endowed, like Tithonus, with the gift of immortality."—RAPIER.

Haggin's Sale.

NEW YORK, September 3d.—A large number of Haggin's horses were sold at Sheepshead Bay to-day prior to the races. A large crowd was in attendance, and the prices obtained were on the whole fair. The details are as follows: Monsoon, two-year-old bay colt, by imported Kyrle Daly—Mura, to H. Lewis for $3,800; So So, one-year-old chestnut gelding, by Longfield—Sozodont, to O. H. Stebbins for $3,250; Falcon, three-year-old black colt, by Falsotto—Mollie Wood, to Edward Garrison for $3,100; Bohemian, three-year-old bay colt, by Ten Broeck—Oleander, to J. Dahlman for $2,250; Ten Doy, four-year-old bay gelding, by Regent—Miss Ella, to McMahon & Co. for $2,000; Trade Mark, two-year-old chestnut colt by imported Kyrle Daly—Trade Dollar, to Walter Olney for $1,875; Dynamite, four-year-old chestnut colt by Joe Hooker—Chestnut Bell, to O. Cornelsen for $650; Don Carlos, three-year-old chestnut colt by Prince Charley—Anna Bush, to W. Oliver for $325; Gilmer, three-year-old chestnut gelding by Kyrle Daly—Cinderella, to A. Thompson for $200; Gray Dawn, three-year-old gray colt by Billet—Mary Clark, to C. Boyle for $875; Longitude, three-year-old bay colt by Longfellow—Indemnity, to J. Cooke for $100; Persian, three-year-old bay colt by Virgil—Persia, to C. McEmery for $900; Plumas, three-year-old bay colt by Kyrle Daly—Annie Lawrie, to Mr. Brackett for $150; Vengeance, three-year-old brown gelding by Virgil—Regan, to T. Hitchcock for $450; Wagram, three-year-old brown colt by Virgil—Crownlet, to Mr. McCarty for $500; Balsac, two-year-old bay colt by Onondaga—Bliss, to Mr. Chearts for $600; Examiner, two-year-old bay colt by Enquirer—Rabel, to W. Mnir for $125; Floronzo, two-year-old chestnut colt by Raydon or Florence, to S. W. Steet for $300; Furioso, two-year-old chestnut colt by Fonso—Lagrotina, to Mr. Bray for $150; Laramie, two-year-old bay colt by Luke Blackburn—Hettie B, for $1,250; Macao, two-year-old bay colt by King Ban—Macaroon, to Dr. O'Conner for $150; Mojave, two-year-old bay colt by Pat Molloy—Queen Maud, to Mr. Bray for $150; Uintah, two-year-old bay colt by Kyrle Daly—Nana, to P. J. Carroll for $600; Wallsatch, two-year-old bay colt by Longfellow—Sue Lynne, to B. McClelland for $375. The three-year-old Mirabeau and the two-year-old Isis were not sold. The total for the twenty-four horses sold is $23,275.

State Fair Handicap Weights.

The weights in the Lakne stake, two and one-quarter miles, to be run at the State Fair, on Monday, Sept. 10th, are as follows:

	Entitled Weight.	Handicap.
Laura Gardner, ch m, 4	115	116
Dave Douglas, b g, 6	118	110
Leon, b c, 3	108	106
Hermes, b h, 5	120	105
Cannie Scot, ch c, 3	104	102
Index, bl g, 6	118	100
Carmen, ch f, 3	101	96
Moses B., ch b, 3	104	90
Ledor, br g, 4	115	90

H. L. and Frank D. Stont have received an offer of $5,000 for their yearling colt Dubuque from J. M. Scribbling of Virginia, Ill. Dubuque is by Nutwood 2:18½, dam Nora Wilkes by George Wilkes 2:22, second dam Nora Lee by Woodford Mambrino 2:21½, third dam Young Portia (dam of Voltaire 2:20½), by Mambrino Chief, fourth dam Portia by the pacer Roebuck.

At Grass Valley, Aug. 29th, the judges declared off all pools ($1,900 in the box) because it was decided that four drivers and one owner had made a pool and bet on Raymond. The drivers and owner were fined $40 each. Two horses, Barbara and Temple, were from one stable and were in the same interest.

SEDRO, No. 3168, H. H. B.

This week we give a cut of the winning sweepstakes bull, Sedro, No. 3168, H. H. B. The sweepstakes was open for Ayrshires, Jerseys, Alderneys, Holsteins and Devons, and was won by Sedro, who certainly is as true a type of the Holstein-Friesian as can be found in the East, where the owner tained him when a calf. He is large yet active, well proportioned, finely marked, and with that rich yellow and orange skin beneath the hair that denotes the deep and rich milking qualities of his family. His sire was an imported Herder, No. 2331, H. H. B., and his dam, Antje Laan, 4237, H. H. B., was also bred in North Holland, where she has a record of sixty-four and one-half (64½) pounds of milk per day as a three-year-old, and gave fifty-six (56) pounds of milk as a two-year-old.

Sedro is the property of Mr. Frank H. Burke, of Menlo Park, and will be disposed of at auction, together with a number of his calves at the State Fair at Reno, Nevada, on September 22, 1883.

CATTLE.

Sale of H. C. Judson's Thoroughbreds.

On Thursday, September 27th, during the fair at San Jose, it is Mr. Judson's purpose to dispose of his yearlings and several older animals. This gentleman's axiom has been, "to get winners, breed winners to winners." It is his intention to retire from the turf, and dispose of his goldings from time to time at auction; they are the get of Wildidle and John A. The winners of Wildidle's produce have been numerous, notably Jim Douglass. John A. is a son of the great Monday, and the mares are of the highest type. The list of animals to be sold is as follows: No. 1. Gerster, bay mare, foaled February 20, 1883, by Wildidle, dam Lizzie by Rifleman. Gerster is full sister to Nettie Brown, dam of May D. and Ella Doane. Through her sire's dam she has the Lexington-Glencoe cross, with an additional Glencoe strain through her grandsire on the maternal side. No. 2. Bay filly, March 29, 1884, by Wildidle, dam Dutchess by Antelope. No. 3. Brown filly, January 18, 1886, by Wildidle, dam Monday filly by Monday. We have here the Australian-Lexington-Glencoe combined with the Belmont and imp. Langford crosses. No. 4. Chestnut colt, January 10, 1887, by John A., dam Ella Doane by Wildidle. No. 5. Chestnut colt, February 23, 1887, by John A., dam Lottie J. by Wildidle. No. 6. By John A., January 12, 1887, dam May D. by Wildidle. No. 7. Bay colt, April 18, 1887, by Wildidle, dam Lizzie Brown by Rifleman. No. 8. Bay filly, February 18, 1887, by Wildidle, dam Monday filly by Monday. No. 9. Bay filly, January 13, 1887, by Wildidle, dam Dutchess by Antelope.

Messrs. Killip, through whose courtesy we have obtained the above list, will conduct the sale. It will afford a good opportunity to those seeking California bred horses. A better one seldom occurs, and after September 27th it will be "too late" to regret having neglected it.

Oakland Show.

Premium Awards.

The following is a complete list of the awards which were made on Friday afternoon of last week:

HORSES.

Class 1—Thoroughbred. Stallions, 3 years and over, Thomas G. Jones' Three Cheers, first premium; H. J. Thornton's Mariner, second premium. Two years old, H. J. Thornton's Joe Hoge (no competition) 50 per cent, under rule 35. Mares, 3 years old and over, H. J. Thornton's Narcola, first premium; B. C. Holly's Nancy, second premium.

Best bull calf under 1 year, Bement's Express, first premium. Best cow 3 years and over, Bement's Highland Mary, first premium, and his Sybilla second. Best cow 2 years and over, George Bement's Ethelberta, first premium. Best year old cows, Bement's Faxonina, first premium; Bement's Highland Beauty, second.

Class 6—Jerseys—Best bull, 3 years or over, Thomas Ward's Billy Rakston, first premium; Ward's Maude Olaf, second. Two and a half year old bulls—Ward's Silver King, first premium. Best cow 3 years and over, Ward's Mignon, first premium; Thomas Ward's Lady Maude, second. Best 2 year old cows—Ward's Oak Queen, first prize; Ward's Lady Wickham, second. Best year old cows—Ward's Anita, first prize. Best heifer calf—Thomas Ward's Violet, first premium.

Class 7—Holsteins—Best bull, 3 years and over—J. H. White's Oro Blanco, first premium; F. H. Burke's Sedro, second premium. Best bulls, 2 years old—F. H. Burke's El Cuervo Netherland, first premium; J. H. White's Huachuca, second premium. Best 1 year old bulls—F. H. Burke's King of Menlo, first premium; J. H. White's Laredo, second. Best bull calf under 1 year—J. H. White's Lorenzo; first premium. Best 3 year old cow—J. H. White's Winfridala, first premium; J. H. White's Sylpha, second premium. Best 2 year old cow—J. H. White's Lasquite, first premium; J. H. White's Etchelah, second premium. Best 1 year old cow—J. H. White's Minnie Wayward, first premium. Best heifer calf under 1 one year—J. H. White's Chapola, first premium.

Class 8—Graded cows—Thomas Bonner's Bopeep, first premium. Sweepstakes, class 1—Best bull, C. Younger's Third Kirklevington, first premium; second best bull, Wilfred Page's Mngwump; best cow, C. Younger's Oxford Rose; second best cow, W. Page's Maitea.

Class 2—Best bull, F. H. Burke's Pedro; second best bull, J. H. White's Oro Blanco; best cow, J. H. White's Annimie; second best cow, F. H. Burke's Sylphia.

HERDS, ETC.

First premium—W. Page's Durhams; second premium, same; third premium, Thomas Ward's Jersey herd; fourth premium, F. H. Burke's Holsteins; fifth premium, George Bement's Ayrshire herd.

SHEEP.

Class 10—Best Cotswold ram, C. Younger's Just Right, first premium; best ewes, C. Younger's five Cotswold ewes, first premium.

POULTRY.

Best display of poultry—Thomas Ward; second premium, F. H. Burke.

The Coming Fair at Santa Clara.

The Directors of the Santa Clara Valley Agricultural Association met Saturday, Aug. 24th, pursuant to adjournment, at the office of Montgomery, Rea & Co.

There were present President Topham, Directors Sargent, Seale, Boyd and Secretary Bragg.

President Topham announced the following committees:

On Cattle—Wm. Quinn, Geo. Polhemus.
On Horses—Jas. Boyd, Jas. Sargent, H. W. Seale.
On Poultry, Swine and Sheep—J. W. Rea, Jas. Boyd, H. H. Main.

On Gate—Alex. Gordon, Chas. Weber.

On Pavilion—S. W. Rucker, Ed Younger, Chas. Webr.

The question of constructing an exercise track for running horses, just inside the racing track, was discussed, and the matter was left to the discretion of Director Boyd. The construction of this track would necessitate the setting back of the Judges' stand some thirty feet from its present position.

Secretary Bragg brought up the oft-mooted question of providing better accommodations for reporters and timers. He suggested that this could be done by building a sort of veranda to the judges' stand lower floor, for their exclusive use, and devoting the quarters heretofore used by them to the use of the owners of competing horses. The idea was generally approved, but no action was taken.

Spaying in Arizona.

In a recent letter to the editor of Hoof and Horn, C. M. Montgomery, one of the most expert cattle spayers in the West, gives the following interesting facts concerning his reasons for resorting to the practice and the advantages which accrue from it:

"I have been spaying my cows and heifers this spring and summer with the most flattering results. I have been spaying them as fast as they could be conveniently gathered. The youngest to the oldest have been operated upon with the loss of but one during the summer. I have been raising cattle in Yavapai county for six years, and as the range is getting a little short and cattle are increasing, I have come to the conclusion that it is better to have a little more money and not so many cattle. Stock cattle are so low there is nothing in selling them, so I have resorted to spaying and hope through that agency to bring them up from their present rate of $14 per head to a prime article of at least $25 value. By spaying your cows and heifers there is another object worth considering and it is this: If your range will only support 500 head of cattle and you brand 200 calves a year, there are apt to be 100 heifers, then by spaying the older she cattle and placing them on the market, you prune your herd and save the range for good future grazing. Such a course once inaugurated and consistently lived up to is sure to keep a goodly amount of money always in the pockets of Arizona rangemen, an ever-abundant grazing area, and harmony in the camps of those who seek at every turn a remedy in anything but that of spaying. During the few years I have been engaged in running cattle and seeing and meeting men who, in their mind were just on the brink of a financial crisis from following the ancient mode of 'increase and multiply,' I do not wonder at the dissatisfaction so freely expressed to-day by many of our stockmen, when a low per capita spaying tax would turn their herd away from such a disaster."

How to Tell the Age of Cattle.

A heifer has no rings on her horns until she is two years of age, and one is added each year thereafter. You can therefore tell the age of a cow with tolerable accuracy by counting the rings on her horns and adding two to the number. The bull has no rings, as a rule, until he is five years old, so to tell his age, after that period, add five to the number of rings. The better way to tell the age is by the teeth, which is of course the only way with polled cattle. What are called the milk teeth gradually disappear in front. At the end of three years the second pair of permanent teeth are well grown, at four years the third pair, and at five the fourth and last pair have appeared, and at this time the central pair are of full size. At seven years a dark line caused by the wearing of the teeth appears on all of them, and on the central pair a circular mark. At eight years this circular mark appears on all of them, and at nine years the central pair begins to shrink. At ten the second pair begins to shrink, and the third at eleven. After this period the age can only be determined by the degree of shrinkage generally. At fifteen the teeth are nearly all gone.—Farming World, (Edinburg.)

Pure bred Devon cattle have become very popular in Australia. They have proved their ability to stand the heat better than any other breed of English cattle; they also bear being driven long journeys with less amount of fatigue than Short-horns or Herefords. They are deserving of consideration at the hands of breeders of high grade cattle on this Coast, and we would like to hear from those who have experience in handling them.

Sainfoin.

Among the new and interesting forage plants which have occupied the attention of the Department of Agriculture, Washington, we particularly wish to reproduce some of their conclusions with regard to sainfoin or esparset, botanically known as onobrychis sativa. It has given promise of great value for cultivation on dry hills and mountain slopes.

This plant belongs to the leguminous order. Esparset is the German name—sainfoin is the name used in France and England. It seldom exceeds 1½ feet in height, with a weak stem, rather long, pinnate leaves, and flowers of a pink color in a loose spike, 2 to 4 inches in length, raised on a long, naked peduncle or stalk. The flowers are succeeded by short, single-seeded pods, which are strongly reticulated or marked by raised lines and depressed pits. It is a native of Central and Southern Europe and Western Asia, and in Europe has long been cultivated. From experiments made by the Duke of Bedford, in England, we learn that it was first introduced to English farmers as a plant for cultivation from Flanders and France, where it has long been in cultivation. It was found to be less productive than the broad-leaved clovers, but on chalky and gravelly soils there was abundant proof of the superiority of sainfoin. It produces but little herbage the first year, but improves in quantity for several years.

Mr. Marlin J. Sutton, in a recent work on "Permanent and Temporary Pasture," says that sainfoin has been cultivated in England for over two hundred years. He says that it is essentially a food for sheep, and in pasturing the sheep do it no injury. It is also useful for horses, but produces nothing like the quantity of green fodder that can be obtained from the lucerne patch. When sown alone, Mr. Sutton says that sainfoin is liable to decrease and become overrun with weeds. He recommends its use as a predominant constituent in a mixture of grasses and clovers. He says that combined with strong growing grasses there is less risk, and the grasses keep down the weeds. In a green state it is quite free from the danger of blowing cattle (Hoven), and when made into hay is an admirable and nutritious food. But it requires great care in drying when made into hay.

A French writer says that sainfoin cannot accommodate itself to damp soil, and even dreads soil which, although dry, rests upon a wet subsoil. It delights in dry soil, somewhat gravelly, and, and above all, calcareous. It flourishes upon the declivities of hills where water cannot remain, and in light soil, where its powerful root can readily penetrate. It prefers open, sunny places with a southern or eastern exposure.

A recent bulletin of the Iowa Agricultural College gives the result of some experiments with this plant, which are very satisfactory. Observations there made indicate that it stands early freezing quite as well as Kentucky blue grass. It produces at the rate of three tons of dry hay to the acre.

TAKING CATTLE EAST.—Beef cattle from the Owyhee country, in Idaho, are being sold for shipment to Chicago. J. W. Sharp, of Jordan Valley, informs the Silver City Avalanche that a good many stock cattle are being sold to Nebraska men at $12.50 per head.

Col. J. D. Gillette, the Cattle King of Illinois, and one of the first exporters of fine beef cattle to England, died at Mackinaw, Michigan, Aug. 25th. He was worth $2,000,000.

Seven hundred high class Shropshire sheep were shipped to America by the Steamer Oxenholme from Liverpool recently for Hon. John Dryden of Canada, and Messrs. Thompson and Williams of Indiana. The shipment which is by far the largest and best which has ever left our shores, says the London Live Stock Journal, comprised 150 rams, 150 show ewes, 400 to 500 choice breeding ewes and a few show wethers and lambs selected from the most celebrated breeders of the day, the show rams and ewes being taken principally for exhibition purposes. The Shropshire is gaining great popularity in the West and proving itself a most excellent mutton sheep.

One hundred years ago the following was written, it will bear repetition to-day: "Economy in all things is as commendable in the manager as it is beneficial and desirable to the employer, and on a farm it shows itself in nothing more evidently or more essentially, than in not suffering the provender to be wasted, but, on the contrary, in taking care that every atom of it be used to the best advantage, and likewise in not permitting the plows, harness and other implements of husbandry and the grass belonging to them to be necessarily exposed, trodden under foot, run over by carts and abused in other respects." That farmer's name was George Washington.

Many of the ranchmen of Texas are improving upon the old style of cutting out dry cows for market promiscuously and leaving cows with calves to run upon the range. Ranchmen are now selling the calves belonging to old cows, says the Las Vegas Stock Grower, disposing of them early in the season so as to permit the cow to fatten for later markets. One herd of cows and calves are on the way to Cherokee Strip, so as to get a short run to market, and the cows will be ranged until fall. Another cattle company has sold 2,000 calves to a Nebraska feeder, and will drive cows and calves to the shipping point, and after the calves are delivered the cows will be returned to the range.

As all reliable details with regard to feed for stock are valuable, we give the following extract from the Sonoma Democrat. J. H. Fowler has presented this office with a sample of timothy grain, grown on his ranch in Mendocino county, which is worthy of attention of those who consider themselves skilled in agriculture. The heads will average twelve inches in length, some even exceeding that phenomenal growth by two inches. Those who come from some of the timothy growing sections in the East, where timothy heads two or three inches in length are considered maximum growth, can better appreciate this enormous growth. And yet it has even been said by some practical book-keeper farmer that timothy could not be successfully grown in this country.

Stock farming must be the foundation of all long continued and successful farming. Any other system is one of slow exhaustion and ultimate sterility. Ignore the sheep, the dog and the cow, and the land will inevitably grow poor. One hog, kept to the age of one year, if furnished with suitable material, will convert a cartload per month into a fertilizer which will produce a good crop of corn. Two loads per year multiplied by the number of hogs usually kept by our farmers would make sufficient fertilizing substance to grow the corn used by them; or, in other words, the hog would pay in manure its keeping. In this way we can afford to make pork at low prices; but in no other way can it be done without loss to the farmer.

The State Fair.

As the paper goes to press on Friday there are only reports of the opening day, though from these it will be seen that the initiatory has been more than usually auspicious. The improvements at the park receive unqualified commendations, and from present indications the fair of 1888 will excel the best of its predecessors. To those who have attended the past exhibitions this is saying a good deal, though with the present management it could not well be otherwise. The growth of California has been of a marvellous character for the past few years, agriculture and kindred pursuits keeping pace with the general development.

The State Fair has been a grand educator. That and the district fairs have done more to advance the interests of California than a majority of people imagine, and it is safe to assert that for every dollar expended one hundred or more have been returned. Improved stock, improved systems of husbandry, improved implements of all kinds are the result, and all of these fall far short of the benefit which have followed mental improvement, set folks to thinking, and the first battle of life is already won. Object lessons are the most potent aid in acquiring knowledge, and the pictures which are traced on the canvas of the fairs are forcible monitors. The teachings are easily understood, and the comprehension must be dull, indeed, which does not understand; the faculty sluggish which does not turn them to good account.

To induce attendance pleasures must be added, and the person who does not enjoy the stirring scenes at the park, or fails to relish the quieter pleasures of the pavilion is an object of pity, out of place in this bright and sunshiny world. Their proper habitat where flowers never bloom, where birds are voiceless, where streams never sparkle, and where black clouds continually veil the blue sky.

The State Fair Races.

A short report of the opening days' races at the State Fair in another column shows that it was an exciting day to those who follow the fortunes of favorites. This is evident, as outsiders won two of the three contests, and those the most important events of the day. That the extreme heat was a serious hindrance to the horses is evident, being, in all probability, the cause of the downfall of Albert S. Redwood had an easy job in the Occident stakes, Valentine's victory was a surprise all around, and though the defeat of Gold Leaf is ascribed to the many races she has paced since the opening at Los Angeles fair, her victress, Yolo Maid, showed that she possesses a great flight of speed, and join to that the other qualities of a racehorse.

The Stanford Stake, 1888.

The Stanford Stake, for foals of 1885, will be trotted on Friday, October 26th, on the Bay District Track. The last payment of $100 each is due, and must be paid to N. T. Smith, Treasurer, Fourth and Townsend Streets, S. F., Wednesday, the 26th of September. The following made third payment, and are eligible:

Jos. Cairn Simpson, Oakland, on bay colt Anteus by Anteo, sis dam Avola by Alhambra.

Jos. Cairn Simpson, on gray colt Anteo by Anteo, sis dam Queen by A. W. Richmond.

William Corbitt, San Mateo, on brown colt by Guy Wilkes, dam Sable by The Moor, and chestnut filly by Guy Wilkes, dam Huntress.

Palo Alto on bay colt by Electioneer, dam Mamie C. by imp. Hercules, and black filly Georgiana by Ansel, dam Gleucora by Mohawk Chief.

L. J. Rose, Los Angeles, on brown filly Nehushta by Stamboul, her dam Neluska by Sultan.

N. T. SMITH, Treasurer Stanford Stake.

Jos. CAIRN SIMPSON, Secretary.

Golden Gate Fair.

The 1888 exhibition of the Golden Gate Association can be classed as the most successful in many respects of any which has been held. While the stock display was not what it would have been had exhibitors known that the fair would be held in Oakland in time to perfect their arrangements, it could not be called a poor showing as some very good horses and cattle were on the ground. The "speed programme," however, was in the main very satisfactory, and about the only thing the judges could be adversely critical for was a lack of proper security in the 2:28 class. This was the only race which presented features palpably suspicious, in fact, suspicions were demonstrated to be positive facts, and the mere change of drivers when the race had progressed so far as to be virtually settled did not meet the exigencies of the case. At first we were inclined to the belief that there was a "combine" all through, and taking the evidence which the heats presented, the only conclusion is that every driver was interested in having Rosie Mc win. Rosie Mc laid up the first heat which Fallis won, Franklin gaining the second after an apparent struggle with Rosie Mc, though she held the first place in the betting. The third heat she took the lead holding all the way with Franklin, Bonanza, Fallis in the order written several lengths marking the space between each. The time so far was Fallis 2:26½, Franklin 2:23½, Rosie Mc 2:26½. The fourth heat would have been a "screaming farce" had there been nothing at stake, excepting curiosity to learn what the outcome would be. Ever so far in the lead was Rosie Mc at the half in 1:14½, and though she made a break on the turn there was a still longer gap at the three-quarters, with Franklin in the rear of all. On came the mare slowing down as she reached the wire which she passed in 2:31, the second horse marking 2:34. This was Fallis so that his driver could not claim that he was saving his horse while another was pushing the favorite in the pools.

That a change of drivers would be made after that exhibition was evident, and in all probability the judges would have so ordered had there been no complaints. Where they erred was in permitting the heat to count. Some blamed them for not declaring the pools off, but that course would not have been justified after the race was ended. Had the heat been declared void it would have given the substituted drivers an opportunity to get the "hang" of the horses, and those who had supported them some chance. As it was the fifth heat was trotted in 2:23½, Fallis only beaten a few feet, so few that his time could not be a quarter of a second slower. There were certainly good reasons for inflicting the severe penalty which the law provides, and many were amazed that no further notice was taken of such a palpable fraud. This was our view at the time, after listening to an explanation from a man who has been driving trotters ever since our sojourn in California, it is a gratification that extreme measures were not taken. This was that after Fallis had won the heat contrary to the expectations of owner and adviser, the main thing to do was to manage that he should not lose the benefit. To effect this due care must be observed, and no chances taken, the avoidance of risk being accomplished to let the others fight from that time out. Singular as the advice may appear, it was unquestionably offered in good faith, and accepted without a thought of wrong. We have not the least doubt of the sincerity of both men, our knowledge of the man who gave the advice leading us to believe in his honesty and candor, and it hardly seems possible that an owner of a stallion, so highly valued, would pursue a course which would degrade horse and owner. But if such excuses are accepted, should such apologies prevail, it is manifest that if trotting-sports retain a place in the affection of the public, something must be done to provide against errors of judgment which appear to be fraud, as well as against downright rascality.

Were the law imperative that every heat must be fought for, that every time the signal is given to start, each driver shall do his utmost to win the heat there would be an end to all such race as that which raised the clamor. That Franklin was not the horse he showed himself to be at Los Angeles and Petaluma was probably true, though a heat in 2:23½ and one outside of 2:35 is hard to reconcile. Still it could be claimed that as Fallis was in a better position to make a fight with the mare, he had the right to avail himself of the same privilege. Rosie Mc was granted in the first heat and "lay up." There was another race which awakened harsh comments entirely owing to this pernicious custom. This was when Tempest, Alcazar, Thapsin and Gus Wilkes came together.

Alcazar could not do anything, and Thapsin was contented to let Gus Wilkes push Tempest for the first and second heats. The driver of Thapsin thought this was his surest way of winning the race, but when the best that Gus could do in the first heat was to crowd her to 2:26½ it should have been accepted as a token that if she were beaten a faster pace must be set. The result of the third heat when Thapsin made her trot in 2:21½ proved that no matter how it was managed she would have won, still, the spectators would have been better pleased and Thapsin obtained second money in place of third.

We understand that the system of starting running horses introduced by C. S. Crittenden and inaugurated at the Golden Gate, is to be given a further test at Sacramento. We have a great deal of confidence in its merits, and feel that there is a reasonable assurance that it will be found a decided improvement on all the methods heretofore in vogue. With a strip of white webbing in place of the driving reins used in the trials here, the handling will be easier and the vibration of a white band attract the attention of the horses in a greater degree than when a darker material is used. It may be claimed that with larger fields of horses those in the rear will press the front rank on to the webbing, but this was not the case when the mile race with eleven starters was run. That was the very worst place, or rather if it proved effective in that place it could scarcely fail at other points. In the midst of the densest part of the crowd, pressing against the fences on either side of the track, noise and tumult on every hand, the trial was anything but light. The men who hold the web should be drilled to concert of action, and when the starter gives the signal both ends will drop without the least danger of entanglement. That there was a chance for horses to become entangled is the only forcible argument advanced against its use, and there is so little chance for that to happen that it does not figure. Should it come out of the ordeal at Sacramento as well as it has in Oakland, the objections will be pretty well answered.

Gaining Ground.

Now that a man of the standing in the profession of training trotters as Budd Doble is awarded has used tips and with the success which followed putting them on Jack, at Rochester, it is an assured fact that farther trials will be granted. The charge here has been that horses could not trot as fast when shod with tips as with full shoes, and this was so generally admitted that only a few had faith enough to give them a trial. Owners who were impressed favorably with their value met with such opposition from trainers and smiths that they were forced to forego their convictions. The success of Jack will be apt to encourage others, and we are so well grounded in the faith, so confident that this system of shoeing has advantages over all others, that every fair trial will add to its popularity, that all we desire is to see the test made.

A late number of the National Stockman reproduced cuts from Tips and Toeweights, and in the accompanying article recommends the use of tips. While giving preference to the "shouldered" tip, such as we have described, those which are "feathered" are mentioned with a approval. Feathering is the beating of the rear portion to an edge, and though a much easier method of putting on the tip, has serious drawbacks. It may be that from having originated the shouldered tip we give more credit to that, and are inclined to magnify the drawbacks which accompany the old plan of making and setting tips, though from the first we felt that the greatest danger lay in a wrong use of the abbreviated shoe. With the tip made in the form of a wedge the smith will prepare the foot in the same way he would for a full shoe, whereas if that was the form to be set the foot should be cut on two angles. Thus, were a tip to be used which was a quarter of an inch thick at the toe and brought to an edge at its posterior part, the foot should be pared to the level it should present, to bring the foot into a proper position, leaving horn enough to give room for the second cutting. When that was done a mark should be made where the back part of the tip came, then mark a depth of a quarter of an inch, and cut away the horn between the two points. This would give the same bearing as before the second cutting was performed. But admitting that this had been done with exactness, and there are still drawbacks. There is not metal enough at what may be termed the heel, to admit of proper nailing, and as that is worn away a portion of the foot is exposed which was covered, and not in the same situation to stand the wear as that part which has never been protected. But a greater danger exists in not getting the proper bearing, and the chances are strongly in favor of the smith nailing on the tip so as to elevate the toe more than should be.

With the shouldered tip, that is, one which is nearly of the same thickness at toe and heel, while more care and nicer workmanship is required, there are none of the dangers which follow the other. Say that the tip is one-quarter of an inch at the toe, it should be within a shade of it when designed for the forefoot of the fast trotter. The smith lays the tip on the foot and marks where the heels come. When the full depth of the tip has to be sunk a small saw is a handy tool to cut to the depth required. In many cases there is a greater depth of cutting than the thickness of the tip, and the back of the foot is not touched until the tip has been set.

The cutting away of the horn must be carefully done, and requires a degree of expertness to manage it quickly, and if the smith has not had experience sufficient to give expertness, time must be taken to give a uniform seating for the tip and the angle desired when the job is completed. With the end of the tip cut to an angle, in place of being square across, as is shown in the cut copied by The Stockman, the difficulty of setting is slightly increased, although this is well repaid by additional security. The leveled end is for the purpose of the horn aiding the nails in keeping the tip in place, this being accomplished by the inside point being the longest. When the seating is finished the tip is held in place by the projecting horn and only requires being pressed against the shoulders while the nails are driven. Not until then is the heel touched, when it is an easy job to remove the superfluous horn. With some horses there is an excess of growth over wear so that when the tips have been worn a month the cutting process can be used to advantage.

Being so much interested in the proper shape and setting of tips, we will be pleased to have the National Stockman give its readers the reasons for our preference of shouldered tips. The cuts and accompanying explanation should enable any competent shoeing smith to make and set them in a proper manner. If they do the work as it should be, the same remuneration that is paid for full shoeing should be cheerfully given. The saving will come in immunity from ailments of the feet and limbs, which are the rule and not the exception in horses which are shod with full shoes.

The National, Junior and Primary Stakes.

We have received from Captain N. T. Smith the following list of those who have made second payments in the above stakes. As Captain Smith's letter was written on the 4th, Monday last, and letters postmarked September 1st will be valid, there may be others to add. Not in the National, however, as those who made the first payment, besides what are given, are known to have "gone wrong." Rexford was lost in the Palo Alto fire, Palo Alto is thrown out of training on account of a bad leg, Dawn was "fired and blistered" some weeks back, and Jim Mulvanna was sent home from Sacramento, having developed a tendency to trot only when he saw fit to do so. We understand that he showed plenty of speed, but his unreliability was such that it was not likely to be overcome in time to trot him in the stake. The five remaining insure a good race provided there are no mishaps, and four of them are all right so far. Stamboul has trotted two races, Woodnut three, and Guy Wilkes one, up to the time of writing, and have several other engagements. Director is entered at Stockton and Napa, and during the Golden Gate Fair he was "worked an easy mile" in 2:20½, the last quarter of it in 33½ seconds. Antevolo was doing as well as we could ask, until a little over two weeks ago, when the leg which troubled him last year, "filled," and he showed a slight lameness. We ascribed it to working him on a heavy track, and trust that he will "round to" in time. There are reasonable hopes that such will be the case, and we felt that it would not do to forego the chance, so long as it could be secured for $300. He has been jogged daily since the injury, and the swelling is subsiding.

Had there been good fortune in place of the bad luck it is safe to assert that eight of the nine nominations would have made the second payment. It will scarcely do to ascribe the withdrawal of Mulvanna to bad luck. From the information obtained from Wilbur Smith, who had him in training, he was capable of trotting fast, and would trot fast if permitted to have his own way, but that was entirely incompatible with the requirements of a race. As his stable companion, Brown Jug, had some of the same notions it is more than likely that the trouble came from errors in their early education. Two wondrously fast horses, it is a great pity that their speed can not be made of service.

The second payments are as follows:

William Corbitt, San Mateo, Guy Wilkes, by George Wilkes—Lady Bunker.

J. J. Rose, Rosemeade, Stamboul, by Sultan—Fleetwing. Jos. Cairn, Simpson, Oakland, Antevolo, by Electioneer—Columbine.

B. C. Holly, Vallejo, Woodnut, by Nutwood—Addie.

Pleasanton Stock Farm, Pleasanton, Director, by Dictator—Dolly.

The Junior Stallion Stake closed on the second of June with twelve nominations, and of these seven have made second payment. This is a good showing, as Palo Alto had four named, so that it was altogether probable at first that only one would be kept in. The list which Captain Smith sent is as follows:

A. McFadyen, Santa Rosa, Redwood by Anteeo—Lou Medium,

Jas. P. Kerr, San Francisco, Memo by Sidney—Flirt.

A. L. Hinds, Oakland, Balkan by Mambrino Wilkes—Fanny Fern.

Pleasanton Stock Farm Co., Pleasanton, Direct by Director—Echora.

Palo Alto, Menlo Park, Wild Boy by General Benton—Wildflower.

L. U. Shippee, Stockton, Moses S. by Hawthorne—by McCracken's Black Hawk.

H. H. Helman, Visalia, Strathway by Steinway—Countess.

A. C. Dietz, Oakland, Ringwood by Sidney.

At all events, the Junior is nearly certain to prove one of the great three-year-old races of the year. Direct and Redwood have already won races in good time, and, so far as our knowledge extends, all the others are worthy of keeping them company.

The Primary Stallion Stake, which is the title chosen for the two-year-olds to battle under, had nine nominations, five from Palo Alto. At the time of writing, Monday last, Captain Smith had only heard from Palo Alto and L. U. Shippee. John P. Sweeney of Carson, and L. M. Morse of Lodi, having nominations which are very likely to stay in. Palo Alto selects Leon by Electioneer, his dam Lina R. by Don Victor; and as Captain Smith had left Mr. Shippee's letter at home, he could not remember whether Kilrain by Hawthorne, or Motion by Electioneer, was to be the standard-bearer for Stockton.

"By the Lakeside."

At times when there is scant room for the horse matter we grudge the space allotted to other departments, but when Petronella favors our readers with her sketches it would be doubly interesting equine pictures which would lead to curtailment. A genuine angler is sure to be an admirer of nature, and ever since the days of good old Izaak a majority of them have the happy knack of reproducing the beauties they have witnessed. "Webber Lake and its Trout" was the last sketch from Petronella, published August 18th, and we are sure that those who read it will agree with us that few, very few of the male disciples of the gentle art can equal it, and this week the gem under the above title will rank with the best of the verses of "Cypress Jr." or any of the piscatorial poets. In selecting the author of the "Hermit Trout" for comparison we are prompted by the remembrance of the pleasure the pensal gave us so many years ago, and though poetry is not so highly appreciated now as in the days when life was a poem, "By the Lakeside" was vastly enjoyed.

Photographing Finishes.

Instantaneous photography was tried at Brooklyn and the following is the account given by the Sporting World.

It will not do to depend on an observer to touch the spring, the leading horse being the only true method. A thread stretched across the track was the means employed at Palo Alto, and there is no doubt that a difference of an inch would have been plainly pictured in the experiments conducted there. For all the exactness which the camera will unquestionably present, unless the plates can be prepared so as to show the positions while the riders are weighing in, it will not be as satisfactory as a "trained judge, above suspicion, and in a position where he can tell to a nicety."

The Brooklyn Club, which is always progressive, yesterday permitted some experiments to be made of instantaneous photographing finishes. A camera was placed on the judges' stand and the operator succeeded in developing a very interesting negative of the finish for the first race when the horses were wide apart. The third race, however, resulted in a dead heat between Yum Yum and Kingston. Then everybody became curious to see whether the camera would make it a dead heat. The operator, however, became flustered and caught the horses before they passed the post, when Yum Yum was slightly in front. The picture was very much blurred, as the figures of the two horses blended and of course formed a blackness. To-day Col. Simmons, the presiding judge, will try his hand at pressing the spring of the camera at the exact moment when in his estimation the horses pass the post.

It will be interesting to watch the progress of these experiments, though it is difficult to see of what practical use they are. Theoretically there is no such thing as a dead heat of two horses passing the line exactly—I use the word in the mathematical sense—together, but even instantaneous photography is unable to show hairbreadth differences. Hence, in practice, there will always be dead heats. There is another objection to its application, that it takes too long to develop a negative when a quick decision is wanted. This, however, can be overcome in time. But, after all, the worst objection is of what use is it. The presiding judge has eventually to decide what horse won at a close finish, and so the photographic process simply substitutes a roundabout for the present direct way. Give us a trained judge, a man whose judgment, sight and nerve have been skilled and steered by experience, and whose character is above reproach and his decision will satisfy any betting man, whether it will stand microscopic examination or not.

Palo Alto Catalogue.

The Palo Alto Catalogue for 1888 is received, but not in sufficient time to write such a notice as its importance merits. Two hundred and fourteen mares in the trotting stud, twenty-five in the thoroughbred paddocks, and when to these are added the stallions and youngsters, an octavo volume of nearly 300 pages is crowded to its full capacity. In order to do anything like justice to such an immense establishment, commensurate space will be necessary.

The Bay District Association has added to its list of races a 2:22 class, purse $600, for Friday October 26th. Entries close September 28th.

CORRESPONDENCE.

The Petaluma Pools Again.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—In your issue of September 1st, Wilfred Page, a member of the private corporation who run the Petaluma Fair under the name of the State organization, District No. 4, for the purpose of securing the appropriation, rushes into print in defense of his allies, Whitehead & Co. Mr. Page, always reckless in his statements, makes a wide divergence from the truth in this instance. It is not a fact that Killip & Co. bid for the pool-selling at the Sonoma and Marin Fair this year. They desired to do so, and to that end interviewed Mr. J. H. White, the President, in San Francisco. Mr. White expressed his personal wish that Killip & Co. should do the business, but stated he had been absent from the city and was not posted as to details. He advised that W. E. Cox, Secretary, be written, asking when meeting would be held. This was done, with the statement that K. & Co. desired to bid, and wished to know when bids would be considered. To this letter no answer was returned, and no explanation of this discourtesy has been received to this date. We have been informed, however, that at the conclusion of the Fair of 1887, representatives of Messrs. Whitehead & Co. appeared before the Boards at Santa Rosa and Petaluma and extracted quasi premises of the business for this year. Mr. Bailbache, President at Santa Rosa, in a kindly note, informed us that such was the case, so far as his society was concerned.

The public can judge from this how far Mr. Page's rash statements are borne out by the truth. KILLIP & Co.

ED. BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—Mr. E. A. DeCamps' comments on Manzanita's lameness at Los Angeles, though based on the version of two eye-witnesses, are wide off the mark. Instead of being driven too close to the damp track and bailing up, she had no such opportunity. The track was dry and hard, and was only watered twice a week up to date of meeting, and then so lightly that she could not have bailed up if she had followed the water-cart. The immediate cause of her mishap was stepping into a ditch dug for the water-pipe, which any "one-eyed" witness might have seen was dangerous, and which I had vainly requested to have filled up. With all deference to the speed of the track, horses, climate and people, so completely aired and to which I fully subscribe, the combination would be still harder to beat if it was added a little consideration for other people in the shape of a few dollars spent in water to render the track fit to work valuable horses on with safety that came there from a distance to await the coming on of the meeting. Even the perfect climate of Los Angeles left to itself can not be relied on to furnish a safe track, though it has the reputation of accomplishing most anything that is asked of it. If nature had been assisted a little more liberally I cannot keep thinking that some of us would have had reason to feel happier. Yours respectfully.

Exhibits at the State Fair.

Sacramento has donned her holiday attire, every incoming train leaves its crowds of expectant visitors. Business appears to be exceptionally brisk; partly caused by the efforts of her citizens to get over all the work possible before holiday time, and chiefly and happily because of a decided progress in the growth and commercial prosperity, which is markedly observable.

The 35th Annual Fair of the State Agricultural Society commenced on Monday. Nearly all the stalls at the park are occupied; but few remain for those who come to-day.

Mr. George Bement just arrives as we write. His cattle are hungry, dusty and scarcely recognizable, and the cry is, "Still they come."

Without exception this promises to be the most successful fair ever held under the auspices of the society.

Most of the space has been taken in the large and beautiful pavilion, and it already bears evidence of the expenditure of much taste, skill and money. Charming decorated, its appearance is much enhanced by the excellent showing made by those exhibitors who have completed their stands. Weinstock & Lubin have succeeded in dressing a bevy of waxen ladies in the most tasteful costumes of the day. They stand behind the counter, before the counter and in various other positions. Their natural and life-like appearance was the cause of considerable praise from a never-ending group of visitors last evening. A group of miners in the old store is equally successful.

The carriage exhibit of a local manufacturer, Mr. A. Meister, is for excellence and finish in workmanship, and beauty and lightness of design, equal to any Californian or Eastern display which I have seen.

Huntington & Hopkins have erected a most graceful and substantial bridge with tower, in the center of the pavilion, immediately beside the band stand. It is the first and handsomest object which greets the eye of the entering visitor.

Agricultural machinery is not forgotten; finely manufactured and well displayed, it could hold its own anywhere.

The county exhibits are not yet in place. Placer is showing up the best so far.

The First Artillery Band has been engaged, and plays nightly. They will play at the park on Thursday and following afternoons.

At the park the old judges' stand has been torn down and a new one erected. The old structure was three stories in height; the present has been built on a concrete foundation. It is two stories high, elegantly proportioned and of a good design. It has been so arranged that the judges will stand six feet nearer the ground than previously. The gateman will be signalled by electric bell when it is time to open the gate. Electric communication has also been made with the musicians' stand.

The floor of the grand stand has been raised four feet, and the whole structure has been set on a foundation of brick laid in concrete, the piers being iron capped. Chairs to the number of 550 have been substituted for the old benches, and the entire stand has received a good coat of paint.

On the east side of the park much ground has been added by purchase, doubling the room formerly available for swine and poultry. Along the walls, 88 new stalls have been erected for horses and cattle.

A new tank of 20,000 gallons capacity has been placed under and in front of the grand stand. The tank is now well supplied with water, which is available in four different places. To avoid dust in the vicinity of the grand stand, tan-bark has been sprinkled, and also on the quarter-stretch.

I had but a short time to run over the stock. All of those exhibited at the Oakland Fair are to be seen here. They are looking well, and will have good scores on the prize list. The Page Brothers' Shorthorns have improved much in appearance, the housing and extra care has had wonderful effect in so short a time. Mr. Younger's 3rd Kirklevington was having his clothes brushed, he certainly is a credit to his owner. Mr. Burke's bull Sedro and his other cattle look well prepared for their trip to Reno and we anticipate a heavy purse will be his portion as a result of his sale.

Mr. J. McCracken shows a very nice lot of Herefords. His two-year-old bull Prince 31777, bred by G. W. Milliken, Ohio, sire Leotard, dam Alice, is a well-proportioned, solid and well-colored animal. So is his yearling Howard, 31772, bred by Milliken Bros. of St. Paul, sire Fairboy. The cows Mabel and Alice 2nd, and the bull calf, sire Cyrus 25236, dam Grace, are all good animals. Mr. McCracken comes from Placerville, and shows five calves with their five mothers, he has the makings of a large and nice collection, but wishes to sell.

H. S. Sargent of Stockton, shows his bull Watchman and a beautiful calf Aloha S, sire Michel Angelo, the latter was sold for $12,500 when six weeks old. I purpose to give the full pedigree of this calf and shall embody it in a paper on Jerseys, which constitute Mr. Sargent's exhibit; his cows are excellent, and unfortunately one beautiful animal is five days too old for allowing him to enter them for the young herd prize.

Senator Johnson also exhibits Jerseys. One year ago this enterprising gentleman purchased the Major Beck herd, and he has entered enthusiastically into the breeding of this favorite line of cattle. His bull, Jersey Duke No. 18, sire Monarch, dam imported Duchess, is a thoroughly good specimen, as is also Union, 351, sire Jersey Duke, dam Matilda Lotz.

Two yearling bulls by Jersey Duke and Roderick Dhn respectively, are very promising animals and are beautifully marked.

His collection of cows is admirable, Griselda and Griselda 2d, May Blossom and Beauty 2d with their calves Duchess and Doyles. I had the pleasure of meeting the owners of the above animals, but was unfortunate in being unable to obtain an interview with Senator Stanford's representative who had charge of as fine a bunch of Holsteins as can be anywhere seen. I hope to have a meeting with Judge Bridgford and Mr. Peterson of Placer County. Their Shorthorn exhibit is of sterling merit, and before going to press it is to be hoped that a continuation of this letter may reach the office of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN. The horses and other stock will require a volume for themselves.

Death of Henry W. Seale.

We regret to announce the sudden death of this gentleman from a stroke of apoplexy, while sitting on the piazza of the Capital Hotel, in Sacramento, on Thursday night last. He lived but a few moments after the stroke came, and died without uttering a word. Mr. Seale arrived in this State in 1847, and early engaged as a contractor in various building enterprises from which he amassed a large fortune. His love for the horse early led him to engage in breeding trotters at his ranch at Mayfield, Santa Clara county, through which he was perhaps best known to our readers.

RULES AND REGULATIONS.

National Trotting Association Rules to govern Trotting and Pacing Races. California State Agricultural Society rules to govern Running Races. Entrance fee 10 per cent of purse; to accompany nominations. In all Trotting and Pacing Races the purse is to be divided into three monies, six-tenths, three-tenths, and one-tenth. Running Races in two monies, seven-tenths and three-tenths. In all of the above races, five or more paid up entries required to fill, and three or more horses to start but the Board reserves the right to hold the entries and start the races with a less number, and deduct a proportionate amount of the purse or stake. The Board reserves the right to trot or run heats of any two races, alternately, or to call a special race between heats; also to change the day and hour of any race if deemed necessary. For a walk-over, a horse is only entitled to its own entrance fee and one-half of the entrance received from the other entries of said race. A horse winning a race is entitled to first money only, except when distancing the field, then the first and third monies. Non starters must be declared out the day previous to the race they are engaged in, before 6 P. M. or be required to start.

All entries for a race to close with the President or Secretary, at Willow, September 20, 1888, at 10 o'clock P. M.

The Board of Directors will have charge of the track and grounds during the week of races, and will see that the rules are strictly enforced, and purses and stakes will be paid when the judges have rendered their decision, and before leaving the stand. Speed programmes and entry blanks will be furnished upon application to the Secretary. Races to start at 1 o'clock P. M. sharp.

The State Fair.

The racing programme of the California State Fair opened at Sacramento on Thursday last. The city is unusually full of people, and the weather exceedingly hot.

The first race was the Occident stakes, for which there were but two starters, Redwood, by Anteco, and Sol Wilkes, by Gny Wilkes. Both horses were quite lame. Following is the summary:

State Fair, Sacramento, September 6th, 1888—Occident stakes; cash to the winner, $1,095 and cup.

A. McFadyen's b s Redwood, by Anteco.....Donathan 2 1 1 1
S. Solomon's b s Sol Wilkes, by Gny Wilkes.....Brandow 1 2 2 1
Time—2:47, 2:39½, 2:36½, 2:40½.

The next race was for the 2:23 class, and resulted in heavy betting at big odds—Alfred S. selling for $50 against $6 for the field of Valentine, Thapsin and Gns Wilkes. Alfred S. won the first and second heats, when pool-selling stopped. In the third heat Valentine won, when the pools showed $40 for Alfred S. and $10 for the field. The fourth heat was stubbornly contested, but Valentine won by half a length, Alfred S. tiring and quitting badly. The last heat was an exciting one, Valentine breaking so badly at the quarter that his chance for the heat looked slim. Alfred S. took the lead but was collared and passed by Wilkes, who led to the half. On the turn Alfred S. quit and fell behind Thapsin. Valentine was, however, fast closing the gap, created by his breaking, and at the head of the stretch had succeeded in reaching Wilkes and Thapsin—from here he came very fast, winning by five lengths. Gns Wilkes took second and third money, Thapsin fifth money, while Alfred S. was distanced. Summary:

2:23 class for a purse of $1,200.
J. H. Kelly's b g Valentine, Jones driver.....4 4 1 1 1
E. H. Miller Jr.'s b g Thapsin, Smith driver.....2 2 4 4 3
Mr. Ayer's b s Gns Wilkes, Dustin driver.....3 3 3 3 2
H. W. Seale's b g Alfred S., McManus driver.....1 1 2 2 4
Time—2:22, 2:21½, 2:24½, 2:21, 2:25½.

The chief interest of the day was in the pacing race for the 2:30 class. Goldleaf was a great favorite, selling for $25, Yolo Maid (her first appearance) at $10, and the field of five—Cricket, San Diego, Ned Winslow, Elwood and Little Doc—bringing $13. Goldsmith was in the sulky behind the new-comer, Yolo Maid. He went off in the lead with Goldleaf,

Pedigreed Foxterrier Pups

FOR SALE.

By Sly Mixture (winner of numerous prizes) out of Beatrice (Champion Bachelors—Arrow). None better bred. Best house or farm dogs. Price, $30 each.

Stud Foxterrier, REGENT JOCK, (REGENT VOX-BLENTON, Saffron), very handsome and game. Price, $10. J. B. MARTIN, 1157 Folsom St., S. F.

and it was soon seen that she could outfoot the latter, and that the others could, also. The greatest applause greeted Yolo Maid when she passed under the wire the winner of the heat in 2:19.

The second heat was an easy win also for Yolo Maid, as she won as she pleased in 2:23½. Before the start for this heat Yolo Maid sold for $100, field $32 and Gold Leaf $13.

The third heat was a wonderful exhibition of Gold Leaf's ability to stand punishment of the most severe kind. Never till the head of the stretch would she yield the lead to Yolo Maid, who had been lapped on her from the wire, but from here the Maid outfooted her, and came on and won the heat, race and first money in the fast time of 2:21½. Gold Leaf third, San Diego second money and Ned Winslow fourth money. Time, 2:21½.

SUMMARY.

Pacing—2:30 class; for a purse of $600.
C. R. Hopkins' b m Yolo Maid by Alex. Button.....Goldsmith 1 1 1
H. C. Atherton's b g San Diego.....Welsh 2 2 3

H. Meeks' b m Cricket.....Dustin 6 5 6
F. Seguin's b g Little Doc.....Seguin 7 7 7
Time, 2:19, 2:23½, 2:21½.

The winner, Yolo Maid, is the property of C. R. Hoppin, and is a half-sister to Rosie Mc, being by the same horse Alex. Button, out of a mare by Dietz St. Clair. Her performance was wonderful, notwithstanding the fact that it has been beaten, and is the third time in an actual race that the world's record (2:22½) has been beaten in three weeks by California three-year-olds, and while Gold Leaf holds the record (2:18), it is undisputed that in her first heat Yolo Maid could have knocked at least a second off it, as she actually jogged home in 2:19.

At Willows, Colusa County, beginning October 9th, four days racing will be held. Purses aggregating $1,900 are offered, and with the exception of the 2:45 class, the events are free for all. Entrance fee is ten per cent. of purse. Willows is the pleasant and energetic town on the west side of the Sacramento Valley, and possesses the finest course north of the capital city. The people are enterprising, public-spirited and hospitable, and all who attend can rest assured they will be royally treated. The entries close September 20th.

TRAP.

Santa Clara Knights of the Trigger.

The Santa Clara "Knights of the Trigger" held their first practice shoot at "Milliken's Corners," on Sunday last. The shooting was at Blue Rocks and Peoria Blackbirds, 18 yards rise, thrown from three traps with set screws to throw uniformly at three angles and 16 feet high at 40 yards.

There was a strong wind blowing straight across the traps which made the shooting hard, but the Knights did their very best and made a splendid score.

Next Sunday they will try their hand at live pigeons, and some time next month they will give a live bird tournament, open to all, for cash and special prizes. Appended are the scores:

James Enright, Scott gun.....	8
J. Portal, C. Homrich gun.....	8
S. Milliken, Jr., C. Homrich gun.....	7
W. Lillick, L. C. Smith gun.....	7
J. D. Enright, W. W. Greener gun.....	7

R. Butler, Greener gun.....	6
Jos. Wolf, Parker gun.....	6
S. Milliken, Sr., C. Homrich gun.....	6
Messrs. Postal and Jas. Enright divided.

SECOND MATCH.

Freeze out, $1 entrance. At Peoria Black Birds.
J. Portal	1	1	1	1	1	Butler	0
Milliken	1	1	0			Gibson	0
Joe Enright	1	1	1	1	0	J. D. Enright	1 1 0
Stone	0					Jackson	0
Lillick	1	0				G. Milliken	0

Portal took the pot. There were four other freeze outs which were divided by Portal, Milliken and Enright.

It will be seen that the best shooting was done with the Chris. Homrich gun, several members now using them in preference to others, as they are close hard shooters. Every bird struck was pulverized into dust.

Blue Rock Club.

The final meeting of the club for the season of 1888 was held on Saturday last at Bird's Point. The club missed its August meeting, and it was decided to shoot a score to stand in the record as of August. The prizes of the season were awarded as follows:

First prize, a gold watch charm medal, presented by the club, S. I. Kellogg, 90; second prize, a repeating rifle, presented by the club, A. F. Adams, 82; third prize, a split-bamboo fishing rod, presented by W. J. Golcher, W. J. Fox, 79; fourth prize, a dogskin hunting coat, presented by H. A. Tubbs, W. J. Golcher, 74; fifth prize, a leather gun cover, presented by C. D. Laing, and sixth prize, portrait of "California Belle and Puppies," presented by J. B. Maynard, a tie between H. Gould and F. Putzman, 73 each. Mr. Gould having left the ground the tie remained undecided. Seventh prize, a pair of leather hunting boots, presented by the club, J. B. Maynard, 72; eighth prize, a silk umbrella, presented by C. P. Harris, H. A. Tubbs, 71; ninth prize, a sole-leather cartridge case, presented by W. J. Fox, — Cadman, 70; tenth and eleventh prizes, 250 cartridges, presented by the secretary, and a prize, not named, presented by Colonel Sam Beaver, were tied for by Johnson and W. E. Mayhew with 60 each. This last tie will be determined by drawing lots.

August scores, at 20 single blue rocks, Chamberlin rules:

The Massachusetts rifle team, chosen from the militia of the State to compete for the Interstate and Hilton trophy matches at the coming Creedmoor meeting, will have five Springfield men on it, Lieut. Brunstead, I. R. P., Corp. M. W. Bull, Pvt. F. R. Bull, Pvt. T. T. Cartwright, Pvt. L. T. Farnsworth. The team consists of twelve men and two substitutes; the distance shot is 200, 500 and 600 yards.

Some fine off-hand shooting is being done at 200 yards with military rifles the past week. M. W. Bull made 33, T. O. Talbot 32, Jaa. Russell 33, E. T. Stephens 33, I. Kimball 32. The boys are practicing a good deal for coming matches. Russell is a seventeen-year-old boy, in fact he is not old enough to join the State military, and this was his third attempt with a military rifle. His score last week was 26, 28, and last week 29, 31, 33, out of a possible 35.

Riverside Sportsman's Club.

The regular meeting on Friday last was the best yet held. The club has twenty-five members, good grounds, well fitted up, and it bids fair to become a very prominent organization. Much credit is due to Mr. A. K. Holt of the Riverside Horticulturist, for the success attending his efforts to establish an interest in trap shooting at Riverside. The scores were:

In its sporting notes the Portland Mercury is always wag-gish, whether the notes come crisp from Tom Merry, or the staff. Its latest perpetration is upon the unfortunate team of Portlanders which represented the city at the Walla Walla tournament. After the tournament the guests were invited to shoot game near Wauhatch, and the paper gives these scores, as made by the distinguished trap shots named.

President Close—Two bee martins, three robins, one lark (potted) and a tame chicken.

Davis—Two killdeer, three doves, three blackbirds (one previously wounded by a small boy with a rock) and a water-fowl (sucker).

Moore—One curlew (caught on the sail), one robin (shot at the same time by Evans and Albright, but allowed Moore because he found him), and a coyote (challenged for hounds, and as a wounded animal answering the description of Moore's coyote was found in the evening at the hut of old Cut-Mouth John and proved to be the Indian's dog. It is Moore than probable that the hunter will be allowed to score.)

Dodge—Two meadow larks, one curlew (potted), two robins and a king-fisher.

Evans only got one chance—a jack snipe—but from force of habit he stopped to exclaim "ready—pull," and his bird was killed by a tramp with a rock.

Brooks—Two prairie birds (challenged for tame chickens and lost), two canary birds, two bull frogs (caught on the jump), and a jackass rabbit.

Bingham—Two tame chickens and a farm dog (brought in attached to the seat of his pants).

Springfield Notes.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—Riflemen are busy now, there being competitions for the company teams at 200 yards and competition for places on the team to represent the State at the coming Creedmoor meeting. Some of the shooting done has been remarkably fine at 500 yards. The following have made full scores of 50: F. R. Bull, L. T. Farnsworth, F. B. Wilson, F. G. Southmayd 49, J. A. Sterling and W. E. Hosmer 48, S. S. Brunstead 47, T. T. Cartwright and W. M. Farrow 46 each, and several of 45 at 600. T. T. Cartwright 47, W. M. Farrow 46, are the best made at 200. M. W. Bull made 33 and 34; F. B. Wilson 32, 32, 31, 32; F. G. Southmayd 32, 31, being the best made.

The bicyclists of this city are anticipating the coming meet at Buffalo, a good number of whom will take it in. Howard P. Merrill, of this city, formerly of the Tribune, Los Angeles, will be referee at Buffalo, and will give universal satisfaction, as he is one of the best cycle editors in the country, and gets there every time. Mr. Merrill is sporting editor of the Springfield Daily Union.

The Bay State Fair, which is held here in September, promises to be a grand success. Among other attractions will be exhibited some of the fastest trotters in the country.

Smith & Wesson, the revolver makers, are turning out 300 revolvers a day, and are away behind their orders. The firm employs from 400 to 500 hands.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS., August 29th.

American Shooting Association.

An aggregation of the powder, shot, gun and shell manufacturing companies of America has recently been formed, some of the avowed objects of which, as set forth in the report of the committee on organization, are "to bring into it all the gun clubs of this country, as well as the individual sportsmen; to make record of the clubs, and their individual membership; to furnish blanks for their monthly shoots, and by a series of matches—a plan of which will be submitted—will result at an early date in a proper classification of all shooters, and we conclude that for every expert shot; properly classified and taken from contests with the amateur shooter, a thousand amateurs will fill their places, and compete in friendly rivalry with each other."

The Association appears to be similar to the "Trusts" which control other branches of trade, and will, if generally supported, exercise autocratic power over the out-pnt and prices of all, the paraphernalia of the sportsman. It doubtless might exercise an influence for good, and it is to be hoped that something of the spirit of the sportsman as distinguished from that of the mere tradesman will direct it.

A Grand Deer Hunt.

One of the prominent sportsmen of San Francisco received a note from Bakersfield on Wednesday last which he permits us to publish. It is a characteristic of the writer, and all of that ilk in Kern. He says:

FRIEND SCHREIBER:—Messrs. H. L. Borgwardt, D. M. Pyle, C. E. Lechner and myself have just had a bottle of wine or two over the proposed trip to Fort Tejon; all of the parties named will be with us on the outing. Everything is fixed for the trip. We shall meet you and your friends at the train that reaches here next Sunday morning; we will stop at my ranch that night, until about two o'clock Monday morning, then we will "arise and depart" for our destination. Our idea in this is to get across the plains before the hot weather strikes us. It takes about six hours to go from the ranch to the Fort. A cook will precede us to our destination—he will leave town Saturday, so as to have everything fixed for us when we get to the Fort. Now, the only thing you have to provide for is your shooting outfit; we will have everything else ready for the trip arranged here. Let us know at once how many are coming with you, as we must fix for rigs for the crowd. If we don't get any deer we shall have a "bully time." With kind regards from us all,

W. E. HOUGHTON.

THE KENNEL.

Pacific Kennel Club.

The P. K. C. met at Parlor B, Palace Hotel, on Wednesday evening last. President Ramon E. Wilson in the chair. Messrs. Wm. Schreiber, W. S. Kittle, Thos. O'Keeffe, John M. Adams, S. F. Moffitt, Jas. E. Watson, D. Patton, H. R. Brown, A. Hoepfner and H. H. Briggs were present. The minutes of the preceding meeting were read by Secretary Watson and approved. The chief item of interest in the minutes was the resignation of Col. Stuart Taylor as president. The resignation was accepted with regret, and complimentary resolutions were passed eulogizing the retiring president for earnestness and zeal in behalf of the club. As treasurer, Mr. Watson reported that after paying bills to the amount of over $400, there was a balance of $63 24 in the treasury. The application of Mr. Clarence A. Haight for membership was acted upon favorably, and he was elected to membership. The next order of business being the annual election of officers, the following gentlemen named were elected to serve for the ensuing year: President, Ramon E. Wilson, of San Francisco; First Vice President, J. Martin Barney, of Dutch Flat; Second Vice President, H. H. Briggs; Third Vice President, H. T. Payne, of Los Angeles; Fourth Vice President, W. S. Kittle, of San Francisco; Fifth Vice President, S. O. Gregory, of Alma; Secretary and Treasurer, Jas. E. Watson, of 516 Sacramento street, San Francisco; Executive Committee, John M. Adams, Wm. Schreiber, H. R. Brown, C. A. Haight, H. W. M. Sandbach, T. J. O'Keeffe, F. C. Zimmerman. After the election the President, Mr. Wilson, thanked the club for a re-election, and in doing so canvassed the progress of the club from its organization. He said he estimated the honor the more highly because of the astonishing advancement made by the club, for its essential excellence, and because it, while promising largely, had in everything much more than kept faith with fanciers and the public. He congratulated the club upon the recognition it had gained, upon the enterprise of its members who had at great pains and expenditure introduced dogs of various breeds and of superior quality. In travelling about the State he had been able to note the increase of interest in dogs among those who had always regarded fanciers with commiseration. Most of the increased interest was traceable to the efforts of the Pacific Kennel Club. He anticipated even more distinguished success for the future shows of the club, and said he hoped the members would manifest interest in the preliminary arrangements and relieve the officers of part of the vast amount of drudgery necessarily incident to giving a bench show. Mr. T. S. Moffitt, a member of the club, stated that he was also a member of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, and in behalf of the latter organization he moved the appointment of a committee from the Kennel Club to confer with a similar committee from the Prevention Society with a view to placing the control and administration of the Public Pound of San Francisco in the hands of the Prevention of Cruelty Society. Mr. O'Keeffe supported the scheme of the Prevention Society. The committee was ordered, and Messrs. H. H. Briggs and Thos. J. O'Keeffe were appointed such committeemen. It was ordered that Secretary Watson notify the society that the Committee had been appointed and request a conference. A communication from the North Pacific Coast Railroad was read, withdrawing the special rate heretofore given to hunters. The club then adjourned to meet again on the first Wednesday in October.

Quoting a recent note from this paper about the bird sense shown by the California Kennel's Sweetheart in heading a covey of quails after taking scent, the Louden Shooting Times pungently remarks:

"Quite so. But here, at a K. C. trial, in the words of the Immortal Bard, that dog would have been 'chucked out,' for leaving her point. So much for sense in men and in dogs."

Mr. J. B. Martin, the leading breeder of fox terriers of the State, offers in the advertising columns some puppies two months old of as good breeding as can be procured in the world. He also advertises Regent Jock, a very handsome and game dog in the stud.

Mr. E. Leaveley is offering a select draft from his kennel of English setters and Cocker Spaniels. The dogs are on show at Central Park, this city, and such as are not taken at private sale will be auctioned at 2 o'clock, p. m. to-day. Among the setters are Ben, winner of second prize at the P. K. C. show, DiVernon and other good lookers. The Cockers are excellent.

The words of Editor Clement will start a train of thought in the mind of each reader who shoots over dogs, and attends field trials. The treatment which English judges would in his opinion give trial dogs under such circumstances, they would receive at the hands of many American judges, and indeed at the hands of a large proportion of sportsmen. But not at the hands of those who appreciate the wonderful niceties of dog-sense and the extraordinary displays of the faculty of ratiocination which are afforded at every field trial. It is practically impossible to formulate rules which shall guide judges under all conditions. Much must be left to the discretion of the men on whom the onerous duty of judging falls, and for that reason only close observers, trained to watch dogs and accustomed to form opinions quickly and accurately should be chosen to sit in judgement. Even when such men are selected it sometimes is proven that they entirely misinterpret bits of work which should be readily understood. Those of the local fraternity who attended the field trials of the Pacific Coast Club held at Point Reyes in 1885, will recall the anxiety of one competitor to have exact definitions given him by all of the judges, of all phrases in the rules. That competitor was presumably a man of more than average intelligence, being a teacher and classically educated. His queries were almost innumerable and the patience of the judges was sorely taxed. When the actual trial began, it was easy to see that the queriest either had no adequate conception of the meaning of the rules, or was a trickster. The simplest mandates were absurdly construed by him, and the work both of his own and competing dogs so misstated as to make the heats in which he participated almost farcical. The man talked glibly enough about breaking and handling, but he used words without knowing what they meant. It is possible that others in a degree are like him. Nothing can be more certain than that such a manifestation of practical knowledge as that which elicited the sarcastic squib from our versatile English co-laborer, is deserving of credit rather than demerit. Not that we consider a blinker of worth. No canine crime is so detestable as blinking. But there are blinkers and blinkers falsely so called. In the latter category we class those superlatively good dogs which can detect the faintest scent of running birds, and which, by appropriate counter-maneuvers, can check them and bring them fitly to the gun.

A Judge of Horses.

A city hall official who has owned a bay horse for the last seven years has been talking of buying another to match him, and the other day some of the boys went up to the barn and brought his equine down and hitched him in front of the building, and then had the owner come out and look at him.

"That beast," he said, as he looked into his mouth, "is all of 20 years old. I also notice that he is spavined and weak in the back."

"Oh, you are mistaken, sir," replied the seller. "I warrant him as sound as a dollar."

"Don't attempt to jockey me!" said the owner, "I wouldn't give you $75 for him. Talk about a match! Why, he's three shades lighter, 200 pounds heavier, and looks like an old cow beside my horse! You'd better make a dicker with some expressman."—Detroit Free Press.

The glanders is prevailing among the horses of Los Angeles County, and many animals have to be killed. There has been an inspector appointed whose duty it is to see that all affected horses are shot.

By the Lakeside.

[For the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN.]

Lowly bend the golden lilies with each breath of summer wind, Gaily dance the cresied ripples breaking lightly on the sand;
In the glowing western heavens by a wreath of cloud-forms spanned,
Sinks the sun, and roseate splendors bathe the rugged mountain land.
Fair day is dying,
Her glories lying,
In waste upon the upland mead.
Velled night breathes slowly,
Her message holy,
To tender hours that quickly speed.

On the lake, faint sounds of laughter tell where anglers ply their sport,
Sudden swirls the purple water in response to sportive trout,
Dainty insects, wondrous tinted, fluttering in a heedless rout,
Fall swift prey to foes keen-sighted, gliding noiselessly about.
Ah! life, what sadness,
With all thy gladness,
Is pressed upon the throbbing heart!
A moment's pleasure,
Then grief's full measure,
So insect like, man plays his part.

Swaying pines chant Nature's vesper, and the deep-toned solemn strains Mingle with the far off clangor of the herd's uncertain bells;
From a nook with cypress crimsoned, love's fond music softly wells,
And a winsome maiden listens while a youth his story tells.
Oh, chord of sweetness,
Oh, rare completeness,
God-given to the human soul!
Earth's magic singing,
Its far course winging,
In melodies that ceaseless roll.

Deeper fall the twilight shadows, wakes the bat to cruel quest,
Nearer floats the anglers' laughter, sinks the ripple's buoyant crest,
Hushed the pines stand, hushed and darkling as by care oppressed,
Far above a pale star watches mindful of a world at rest.
Brain cease thy weaving,
Heart end thy grieving,
Breathe the lasting peace from earth and sky.
Spirit immortal,
Stand at the portal
Of truth as the wistful hours die.

San Francisco, Sept. 1st.

—PETRONELLA.

The article printed elsewhere about salmon fishing cannot be read without regret that Pacific Coast streams do not afford that noblest of sports. Some fish may be taken by using bait, preferably salmon roe, and at times on the Columbia, Puget Sound and along the Northern coast fair takes are made using the trolling spoon. Salmon are very abundant in all the larger coast streams, and all conditions seem most favorable for sport with the fly, but the fish will not rise. We should be glad to receive from our Oregon, Washington Territory and Victorian readers some notes about their salmon fishing.

Salmon Fishing.

A room of the Fifth Avenue Hotel in New York City, littered with piles of "duffle" and crowded with leathern receptacles of a dozen shapes and sizes, recently indicated that "Bardwell Slote" alias Billy Florence, was about to make his annual descent upon his oftentime hosts of the Restigouche Salmon Club. Louis N. Mergangee in the New York Mail and Express, describes his preparations as follows:

But there were some unusual additions to the ordinary traveller's list of encumbrances. In the centre of the contents of a trunk, safe from the jars of journeying, were stowed a collection of drinking flasks so remarkable that he who wets his bait from their contents can scarcely fail to lure the wildest fish that swims. One of solid gold, richly engraved, had on it the informally jolly inscription, "To Billy from A. E.", but the insignia above those lines of the Prince of Wales showed that the gift was from Albert Edward, heir to the throne of England. Alongside a similar vessel of gold and crystal bore simply the legend, "F. W. to W. F.", but Arthur Frederick Wellesley, Duke of Wellington, thought it rare fun in this instance to drop his first initial and use only the letters which also indicate the name of the American comedian, whose companionship he so highly prized. A richly ornamented flask with an elaborate monogram composed of the letters "B. F." was a reminder of the humor of the English comedian Toole; the "B. F.", of course, standing for "Billy" Florence. One dampness dispeller intended probably for only large fish and with a capacity of two quarts, was of heavy solid silver. Richly carved casti grew along its edges. On one side a fine portrait of ex-Gov. Shepherd was embossed, and on the other an equally deft hand had raised a picture of his silver mining property in Mexico. This was from the man who, ten years ago, was anathematized in the District of Columbia, but in whose honor the city of Washington, whose "distances" he made "magnificent," is now ready to raise a monument. The flask was one of forty like unto it, and the only one undelivered bears the name of Roscoe Conkling. There were a score more of bibulous receptacles nestling in Florence's trunk, and the most richly engraved of the lot represented on one of its silver faces the much loved actor in the act of landing a monster trout. The inscription upon it told that it was a remainder from Capt. William M. Conner of Florence's 55th birthday two summers ago.

But treated more tenderly than all beside were a large Malloch reel, made by the famous English maker, a Forrest rod, fashioned at Kelso, in Scotland. Thus armed for the piscatorial fray, Mr. Florence started forth toward Canada, where he was to be as he is annually, the guest of the Restigouche Salmon Club. He returned the other day in the very height of the season, ruddier than when he departed and displaying for the first time in his heretofore beardless carer a moustache and goatee both gray and trimly cut. But exhibited far more proudly than these was the record of his catch. The ordinary fisherman knows nothing of the care and formality with which such a document is guarded. In all the great salmon fishing clubs the figures of each sportsman's achievements are prepared as religiously as though his life depended on the result, and are then printed according to a form which custom has designated. These form a patent of nobility for each knight of the rod and reel. Mr. Florence has just received copies from the printer's bands of the tale his line told this year. The original is in the books of the Restigouche Salmon Club. It does not equal his highest record, for he is credited with the capture of a salmon weighing forty-two pounds. But it is a story that he need not be ashamed of, and as told in the appended form it will interest the professional disciple of Izask Walton and amaze the amateur.

LIST OF SALMON KILLED BY MR FLORENCE ON THE RESTIGOUCHE RIVER, 1888.

Date.	No.	Remarks.
June 23	126	Fished 4 1/2 hours.
June 24	11	Fished 3 hours.
June 26	110	Fished 6 hours.
June 28	117	Fished 6 hours.
June 30	117	Fished 1 1/2 hours.
July 1	210	Fished 1 1/2 hours.
July 2	210 1/2	Fished 5 hours.
July 3	111	Fished 2 hours.
July 4	422	Fished 5 hours.
July 5	927	Fished 5 hours. Rained nearly all the time. Thermometer 50 deg. at 5 A. M. Never reached 60 deg. during the day.
July 6	517	Fished 5 hours.
July 7	1627	Fished 5 1/2 hours. Rained in the morning. Water clearer than on any previous day. Thermometer 55 deg. at 6 A. M., 62 deg. at noon. The larger fish looked as though they should be heavier, and many were not weighed until five or six hours after they were killed.
July 8	1421	Fished 5 hours. Dull and clouded in morning. Caught most six or seven miles from our camp. Wind northwest; thermometer 60 deg. at 7 A. M.
July 10	7122	Fished 5 1/2 hours. Great number of fish. "Silver Doctor" fly most productive. Water very peaty color in the afternoon. Mosquitoes and flies very troublesome.
July 11	311	Fished 1 1/2 hours. Water very dark.
July 12	193	Fished 1 1/2 hours.
July 14	1138	Fished 1 1/2 hours.
July 15	1273	11 grills, 1 sal., 13 lbs. Fished 1 1/2 hours.
July 16	316	3 grills. Fished 1 1/2 hours.

Total number of fish, 99.

Total number of pounds, 1,328.

Actual time spent in fishing, 65 1/2 hours.

Salmon killing is beyond compare the highest sport of the American fisherman. President Cleveland will not have achieved the full measure of human greatness until he has cast a fly in a search for salmonidae of whom Pliny wrote 1,800 years ago: "It passes all other sea fishes whatsoever." To tell where it can be found on this continent is to name almost every river in Canada from the Straits of Belle Isle to the Jacques Cartier above Quebec. Within the land of the free, Maine alone furnishes salmon fishing, its best rivers in that respect being the Penobscot, St. Croix and Dennys. In the last century the fish swarmed in every river on the American coast as far south as Connecticut. But a stream once depleted of them remains forever barren, unless restocked by man, which requires much long and persevering effort. Nature has implanted in the salmon an instinct to breed in the river where it was itself bred and in no other. When an artificial barrier closes the ascent of a stream the fish will still return until they die. Of course, even in such a case the spawn is planted, but it is necessarily cast in localities unsuited to its development, and consequently perishes, and the river speedily becomes barren. This impulse to return to its birthplace is so strong in the salmon that it will make almost incredible leaps up falls and fishways to regain its place of spawning. A striking illustration of this is in Mr. Florence's possession in shape of an instantaneous photograph of a salmon leaping a falls of the St. Croix river sixteen feet high.

The fly fishermen who dexterously worked a salmon-rod have increased ten-fold in this country in the last ten years. A large majority of them are among the gentlemen sportsmen of New York and Boston. The record for "casting" belongs to New York. It was made in Central Park in October, 1884, by Mr. H. W. Hawes. He used an eighteen-foot split bamboo rod. His cast was 131 feet. The English record is 136 feet, but it was made under circumstances that still leave Mr. Hawes's throw the most remarkable.

The rivalry among salmon fishermen has become so great that stream privileges have largely increased in value. For individuals the cost varies, according to the desirability of the locality, from $1 a day to $25 a week for each rod. The creation, however, of salmon fishing clubs has narrowed the field for individual sportsmen and is rapidly enhancing the price of privileges. At the present time nearly every river discharging into the St. Lawrence, into the Saguenay and into Bay Chaleur has a club bearing its name. Certainly the most famous of these is the Restigouche Salmon Club, whose members are entirely Americans and mostly New Yorkers. An idea of its expense can be gained from the remark made to me by John G. Hecksher, the most thorough all-round sportsman of America, that where he fished every summer on the Restigouche it cost him $800 before he wet a line.

This club was incorporated by the Legislature of Quebec in 1880, the petitioners being nine New Yorkers: Locke W. Winchester, Francis C. Lawrence, Oliver K. King, Charles L. Tiffany, Marvelle W. Cooper, Charles F. Fearing, Roland Redmond, Robert C. Livingston and John L. Cadwalader. Their stated desire was "to promote the health and recreation of its members by the pursuit of fishing and hunting," and for that purpose they had acquired a tract of land on the Restigouche and Matapedia rivers, in the province of Quebec and built a club house at Matapedia. They bought and leased property at various points along these rivers for a distance of fifty miles. The capital stock of the organization was fixed at $40,000, divided into forty shares of $1,000 each, but those membership shares are now valued at $8,000 each. In addition to the purchase of at least one share of stock, each member is required to pay an entrance fee of $200. The original forty members comprised the following well-known gentlemen, most of whom are popularly classed as millionaires: Chester A. Arthur, who at the time of his death was president of the club; Francis Bartlett, the distinguished lawyer; Cornelius Bliss, the banker; William L. Breese, of the New York Stock Exchange; M. Bayard Brown, a well-known Union Club man; John L. Calwalader, Julius Catlin, Jr., Marvelle W. Cooper, Wirt Dexter, the Chicago lawyer; Frederick S. G. O'Hanterville, William E. Dodge, Robert G. Dun, Nathaniel Fairbank, president of the Chicago Club; Charles F. Fearing, well-known in the Union Club; Robert Golet, the banker; Walter S. Gurnee, Jr., George Watson Hall, Francis L. Higginson, Gilbert E. Jones, John I. Kane, Oliver K. King, Francis C. Lawrence, Johnston Livingston, Robert C. Livingston, of the National Express; James C. McAndrews, A. Lawrence Mason, Harry I. Nicholas, Fessenden N. Otis, William Hall Penfold, James W. Parichot, George E. Pollock, whose home is in Pittsfield, Mass., but who spends most of his time in New York; Philip Schuyler, Frank Thomson, first vice-president of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company; Charles L. Tiffany, the famous jeweller; William K. Vanderbilt, who needs no description; J. Hart Welch, Locke W. Winchester and Daniel J. Worden, a son of Commodore Worden, who sank the Merrimac with the Monitor.

Members of the club are permitted to install their families in the well-equipped house it owns and under stated restrictions to invite guests. Some of the best catches recorded in the club's books have been made by women, notable achievements with the rod have been accomplished by Mrs. Mason and Mrs. Worden. President Arthur generally had Roscoe Conkling as his guest. The latter's initial effort with a salmon fly was made under Mr. Florence's supervision and with one of his rods. When the Senator drew his breath after having seen the gaff plunged into the gills of a magnificent fish which the comedian sportsman had brought alongside of the boat after half an hour's battle, he said: "Mr. Florence, wouldn't the fish have a greater chance for life if the gaff wasn't used?"

"Certainly," was the reply, "But without its use you would lose many of them."

"Even so," said the Senator. "A fish which can make such a brave fight should be given a fairer opportunity for victory. If I should be fortunate enough to hook one I don't wish the gaff used at all."

Even at that disadvantage Conkling captured six fine salmon that day and in each instance he drowned the fish before landing it. As a matter of course he lost most of those he hooked, but when such accidents occurred he appeared to exult in the fish's victory and never betrayed the least disappointment at its escape.

But the most enthusiastic and most welcome guest the club ever has is William J. Florence. No fisherman has a keener zest for the sport than he. Concerning a salmon fishing trip with the Duke of Beaufort, when Edward Sothorn and Sir John Rae Reid were also of the party. I find this mention in Florence's scrapbook written by a friendly hand: "The chef of the party on this occasion was put to his wit's ends to serve up salmon so as to cause it to taste like anything but salmon. The entries of salmon a la Beaufort, a la Dundreary, a la Florence, a la Rae Reid succeed each other with startling rapidity, though each possesses a varying flavor, with just the faintest suspicion of the presence of the lordly fish. Lord Dundreary being of the party, the chaff between Florence and Sothorn is as bright as a Jablaskoff candle, commencing at tub time and ending only in the wee sma' hours. What champagne flows in the veins while living this out-of-the-world life! The Duke laughs when he thinks of the starched old peers seated on the crimson moreen seats in the House of Lords, deliberating upon some unsavory bill sent up from the unruly Commons, or listening to the epasmodic grumblings of Lord Granville or Lord Derby. Sir John Rae Reid laughs when he thinks of his 'pale' who are 'swelling' the season, riding in the Row, on their knees to Sarah Bernhardt, or imagining themselves free the air in doing psitt deniers at the Star and Garter at Richmond. Sothorn laughs when he thinks of Irving playing Hamlet in the morning and Claude Melnotte at night. Florence laughs as he explains to Bardwell Slote, 'We are having a h. o. t.' or when he apostrophizes the luckless salmon which he has just admirably struck, by 'don't try any g. g. on me, o. m.' But this good time comes to an end. Mr. Florence cannot keep his humor for his friends or his skill for the salmon, but must needs come back to the hard work of the stage once more to make us laugh or make us cry."

And what he did that season he has done this and promises to do for many seasons to come, luring the luckless salmon and capturing delighted auditors.

CONDITIONS.

All trotting and pacing races best three in five, except as otherwise specified.

National Association Rules to govern trotting, and Rules of the State Agricultural Society to govern running, except as herein stated.
The Board reserves the right to trot or run heats of any two races alternately, or to call a special race between heats; also to change the day and hour of any race if deemed necessary.

For a walk-over in any race a horse is only entitled to its own entrance fee and one-half of the entrance received from the other paid up entries of said race, and to no added money.

A horse winning a race entitled to first money only, except when distancing this field, then to first and third moneys.

The winner of the mile and repeat, free purse, for all ages, of the State Fair programme for 1888, starting in races No. 8, will be required to carry five pounds extra.

Unless otherwise ordered by the Board, no horse is qualified to be entered in any District race that has not been owned in the District (6) months prior to the day of the race, and any entry by any person of any disqualified horse shall be held liable for the entrance fee contracted, without any right to compete for a purse, and shall be held liable to penalties prescribed by the National Trotting Association and Running Rules of the State Agricultural Society.

All colts properly entered in District stakes, if sold, reentered to start in such races.
If it is the opinion of the Judges, before starting a race, that it cannot be finished on the closing day of the Fair, it may be declared off or continued, at the option of the Judges.

In all races noted above, six or more paid up entries required to fill and three or more horses to start; but the Board reserves the right to hold entries and start a race with a less number and deduct a proportionate amount of the purse; provided, however, that the Board hereby reserves the right to declare any race off when there are less than three (3) to start.

Trotting and racing colts to be named with all entries and used in all heats.

Races commence each day at 1 o'clock p. m. sharp.
Stables, hay and straw free to competitors.

Entries close August 1, 1888, with the Secretary.

FIXED EVENTS FOR 1889-90.

OPEN TO THE WORLD.

The Last Payment Due at Six O'clock P. M. the Day Before the Race.

The San Joaquin Valley
AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY.

DISTRICT NO. 2, CAL.

Offer the following rich running events for 1889 and 1890, entries to close August 1st, 1888, for colts now classed as yearlings, (with one exception, No. 3, for colts now classed as two-year-olds for this time only to permit of a valuable three-year-old stake for 1889).

FOR 1889.

1.—THE PAVILION STAKES.—A sweepstakes for two-year-olds (foals of 1887) to be run at the Stockton Fair of 1889; $50 each half forfeit, or only $10 if declared on or before January 1st; or $15 by May 1st, 1889. Declarations void unless accompanied by the money, with $30 added, of which $75 to second; third to save stake. Winner of any stake race of the value of $1,000 to carry five pounds extra; of any other event three pounds extra; two or more five pounds. Maidens allowed five pounds. Five-eighths of a mile.

2.—THE YOSEMITE STAKES.—A sweepstakes for two-year-olds (foals of 1887) to be run at the Stockton Fair of 1889; $75 each, half forfeit or only $1 if declared on or before January 1st; $15 by May 1st, or $25 August 1st, 1889. Declarations void unless accompanied by the money; with $350 added, of which $100 to second; third to save stake. Winner of the annual stakes at Sacramento to carry seven pounds extra, winner of any other stakes to carry three pounds; of two or more seven pounds. Maidens allowed five pounds. Three-quarters of a mile.

3.—THE BIG TREE STAKES.—(To close in two-year-old form this time only.) A sweepstakes for three-year-olds to be run at the Stockton Fair in 1889; $100 each half forfeit or only $10 if declared January 1st; $15 May 1st, or $25 August 1st, 1889. Declarations void unless accompanied by the money; with $400 added, of which $125 to second; third to save stake. Winner of any three-year-old stake race of the value of $1,000 to carry five pounds extra; of two three-year-old events of any value ten pounds. Maidens allowed seven pounds. One mile.

FOR 1890.

No. 4.—THE BIG TREE STAKES.—A sweepstakes for three-year-olds (foals of 1887) to be run at the Stockton Fair in 1890. (Conditions same as No. 3, except as to year.)

No. 5.—THE SARGENT STAKES.—A sweepstakes for three-year-olds (foals of 1887) to be run at the Stockton Fair in 1890; $100 each, of which $10 must accompany the nomination, $10 payable January 1st, 1890; $10 payable January 1st, 1890; $20 payable May 1st, 1890. The remaining $50 to be paid by 6 o'clock the day preceding the race. Payments not made as they become due forfeit money paid in, and declares entry out; $500 added, of which $150 to second, third to save stake. Winner of the Breeder's Stake at Sacramento to carry five pounds extra; of the President Stakes, seven pounds; of any other three-year-old event three pounds. Maidens allowed seven pounds. One mile and a half.

N. B.—Conditions of this association for 1888 to govern except as specified herein.

$500 Reserved for Special Races.

CONDITIONS.

All trotting and pacing races best 3 in 5, to harness, unless otherwise specified. Six to enter and three to start, but the board reserve the right to hold a less number than six to fill, by the withdrawal of a proportionate amount of the purse. Entrance, ten per cent, on amount of purse, to accompany nomination. Any horse distancing the field will only be entitled to first money.

American Association Rules to govern all trotting, pacing and running races, but the board reserve the right to trot heats of any two classes alternately, or to trot a special race between heats; also to change the day or hour of any race if deemed necessary.

A horse making a walk over shall be entitled to only one half of entrance money paid in. When less than required number of starters appear, they may contest for entrance money paid in, to be divided as follows: 60% to first 33% to second.

In all entries not declared off by 6 p. m. of the day preceding the race shall be required to start.

When there is more than one entry by one person, or in one interest, the particular horse they are to start must be named by six p. m. of this day preceding the race.

If in the opinion of the judges any race cannot be finished on the closing day of the meeting it may be continued or declared off at the option of the judges.

Non-starters in running races will be held for entrance under Rule 36.

Racing colors to be named on entries.

In trotting races the drivers shall be required wear caps of distinct colors, which must be named their entries.

These last two rules will be strictly enforced.

All races to be called at 2 p. m. sharp.

Entries to all the above races to close with the Secretary at 11 P. M. Saturday, Sept. 15, 1888.

All entries for exhibits must be made prior to September 25th. It would be better in order to get good accommodations for stock to notify the Secretary as early as possible the number of head and kind you intend to exhibit, so we can arrange for them. Although we have a hundred boxstalls on the ground, we find it necessary to build more, on account of advice from parties intending to make exhibits. Send for catalogue.

CONDITIONS.

All Trotting and Pacing Races to be mile heats: three in five, to be entered; five or more to enter; three or more to start. Entrance fee, 10 per cent. of Purse, and must accompany the nomination.

All Harness Races will be governed by the rules of the American Trotting Association. All Running Races, four or more to enter, two or more to start will be governed by the American Racing Rules.

For a walk-over in any race a horse is only entitled to its own entrance fee and one-half of the entrance received from the other paid-up entries to said race, and to no added money.

Any horse distancing the field, or any part thereof, is entitled to first money only.

In Trotting and Pacing Races, all purses to be divided into four moneys, as follows: First horse, 50 per cent.; second horse, 25 per cent.; third horse, 15 per cent.; fourth horse, 10 per cent.

All Running Races into three moneys: 60, 30 and 10 per cent.

The right is claimed by the Association to change the order of any of these events, should it be to its convenience and for the best interests of the contestants, but no change will be made in cases where an injustice would be done to any of the parties who have made entries.

Heats in each day's races may be trotted, paced or run alternately.

ENTRIES.

In all cases entries must be enclosed in a sealed envelope, addressed to the Secretary, stating age, name, color and sex of horse, name of sire and dam, when known, and name of owner, rider or driver.

Time of closing entries, August 21st and September 11th, 1888.

REMARKS AND CONDITIONS.

All trotting and pacing races are the best three in five, except the two-year-old, unless otherwise specified. Five to enter, and three to start. But the Board reserves the right to hold a less number than five to fill, by the withdrawal of a proportionate amount of the purse. Entrance fee, 10 per cent on purse, to accompany nomination. Trotting and pacing purses divided at the rate of 50 per cent to first horse, 25 per cent to second, 15 per cent to third, and 10 per cent to fourth.

The National Association Rules to govern trotting; but the Board reserves the right to trot heats of any two classes alternately, if necessary, to finish any day's racing, or to trot a special race between heats. A horse making a walk-over shall be entitled only to the entrance money paid in. When less than the required number of starters appear, they may contest for the entrance money, to be divided as follows: 60% to the first, and 30% to the second.

In all the foregoing stakes the declarations are void, unless accompanied by the money.

Please observe that in the above stakes declarations are permitted for a small forfeit.

In all races entries not declared out by 6 p. m. of the day preceding the race shall be required to start.

Where there is more than one entry by one person, or in case of interest, the particular horse they are to start must be named by 6 p. m. of the day preceding the race. No added money paid for a walk-over.

Rules of the State Agricultural Society to govern running races, except when conditions are named otherwise.

Non-starters in running races will be held for entrance, under Rule 3.

Racing colors to be named in entries.

In trotting races drivers will be required to wear caps of distinct colors, which must be named in their entries.

Entry blanks and racing rules will be furnished upon application to the Secretary. Entries in all, except otherwise stated, to close with the Secretary, Wednesday, August 1, 1888.

A Demonstration of the Shooting Qualities of the "L. C. Smith" Gun.

At the Cleveland Cartridge Co.'s tournament, held at Cleveland, O., from September 13 to 16 inclusive the "Smith" gun won first money in every class. It also won nearly two-thirds of the entire amount ($3,000) of cash prizes, and championship trophy for the best average in the 90 class. In the 90-class it won the 1st, 2nd and 4th moneys; in the 80-class it took the 1st, 3rd, 4th and 5th; in the 70 class it took 1st and 2nd, with the 1st and 6th in the 60-class, making a total winning nearly four times greater than any other gun, of either foreign or home manufacture.

We think this a most excellent showing, as there was seven different makes of guns used by the nineteen contestants in the ninety class.

The Grand Stallion Stake at Sacramento.

There were two grand surprises previous to that of Saturday last, and in the whole history of trotting it would be difficult to find a parallel. When Stamboul beat Arab at Los Angeles in 2:15, 2:17, 2:16, there was a thrill from San Diego to Siskiyou, and people who had any fancy for trotters were so much surprised that they could talk of nothing else. It was thought to settle the question of supremacy, and the stallion races at Oakland and Sacramento were considered already settled. Also the National. Unless some accident befell Stamboul, the talk was that he would make a clean sweep all through. The second surprise came when Guy Wilkes disposed of the champion, although there was an element of luck in the victory, as it was argued that had Stamboul not made the break soon after the start for the first heat was given he would surely have won, and this was too logical to be gainsayed. The third surprise was the greatest of all. Woodnut did not show to be within several seconds of either the others at Oakland, though there were a great many who thought that Holly had taken greater pains not to play his best trumps at that stage of the game than to win, and these sharp fellows will be doubly convinced of the correctness of their views now. There is scarcely a doubt that the Los Angeles track was the fastest of the three the day that Stamboul and Arab met, though inasmuch as Arab was driven two heats between those of the stallion race in 2:16, 2:16, the course at Sacramento could not have been far behind.

Every race has been a good one; from the same standpoint excellent, as the falling off in the fourth and fifth heats at Oakland could be attributed to a lack of condition rather than to failure of stamina on the part of the contestants. This is further established by the time of the Sacramento race. It was to be expected that five heats such as were trotted at Oakland would better the condition of all engaged, provided the strain did not leave its mark in a wrong direction, and that subsequent work would be beneficial, and the following account proves this to be the case:

When the call was made for the starting there was a marked excitement. Fans had been busily at work in the big assemblage and their vibrating kept time to the music of the band. But when the horses came on the track there was such a desire to get a good look at the famous steeds that the fervor of the air was for a time forgotten, and each received an ovation as they passed in front of the stands. Pool selling was very lively. Thousands of dollars went into the box in a few minutes, and the backers of each were exceedingly eager to invest their cash. Guy Wilkes had settled into a pronounced favorite, bringing $200, Stamboul $160, Woodnut $65.

In the lottery for positions Woodnut got the pole, Stamboul second, and Guy Wilkes outside. On the fourth score they got the word, all going fast. Just as the bell tapped Woodnut broke and slightly interfered with Stamboul, who broke, and in turn drove Guy out, and he also broke, so at the first corner all three were in the air. Guy was the first to recover and Woodnut the next, while Stamboul made a tangled break, similar to the one he made in the first heat at Oakland, and Guy reached the quarter first, in 0:34, four lengths in the lead of Woodnut and ten ahead of Stamboul.

Up the backstretch Guy went fast, and reached the half in 1:10, having increased his lead on both the others around the turn. Woodnut moved up a little, and Goldsmith took Guy back on reaching the three-quarter pole in 1:47, and eased him all the way down the straight, coming home without making an effort, Woodnut four lengths back and Stamboul jogging in just inside the short distance. Time, 2:22.

Still hotter was the betting. A fight almost which should get the favorite, doubly so now at securing a first heat with so little exertion. If the backers of Guy were anxious to secure as many of the cards as their means would sanction, the supporters of Stamboul were also eager and to $200 on Guy they responded with $130, while there were some quiet speculators ready to venture $45 on Woodnut. Neither of the contestants looked a whit the worse for the heat and the drivers were not at all dismayed so far as could be told from their appearance, Goldsmith had the inveterate cigar between his teeth and when he drove past the stand the first time it was at an angle which implied satisfaction with the outlook. Holly had a twinkle in his eye, and Walter's visage though giving token of anxiety was not the least downcast. After a couple of scores Goldsmith's cigar dropped to a lower angle, and as Woodnut came rattling along, the weed, though of the best brand, was discarded. Eight fruitless attempts; the ninth the word was given to a good start and the pace was rapid from the first.

At the quarter, 33 seconds, Stamboul, who had trotted very fast on the outside, led Wilkes by a length, he the same in front of Woodnut. Here Stamboul broke but settled quickly, and half way up the stretch he broke again, and was passed by Woodnut. At the half, 1:07, Wilkes, who had been moving lively, led Woodnut by four lengths. Around the upper turn it was a procession, with Stamboul last. Turning into the stretch, Stamboul and Woodnut began to close on the leader, and at the rate of speed he was coming it looked as though Stamboul would win, but the gap was too much for him to close. Not so with Woodnut, however, who kept coming, and challenged the leader at the drawgate and after a very fine and exciting finish, which raised the spectators to a high pitch of enthusiasm, won the heat by a neck from Guy Wilkes, Stamboul third. Time, 2:16.

There were renewed rounds of applause when the time was put on the blackboard, first and second given with only a quarter of a second between them. It proved that Woodnut had been contented to accept second place in the first heat, and when the cheering had subsided so that the voice of the auctioneer could be distinguished, the rates were Guy Wilkes $200, Woodnut $110, Stamboul $45. When "Go" rang out from the judge's stand there was a slight difference, so slight that it was hard to tell that either had the advantage.

At the commencement of the curve Woodnut broke, and Guy showed half a length in the front. Around the turn Stamboul and Wilkes went lapped, but at the quarter, in 0:35, Guy led by half a length. Up the backstretch it was a beautiful sight. Guy was just ahead of Woodnut, while on the other side was Stamboul.

At the half, in 1:07, Stamboul was level with Wilkes, and Woodnut close up. On the turn Guy again showed to the front, while Holly seemed to be taking Woodnut back. At the three-quarters, in 1:43, Woodnut had closed up the four lengths lost, and on the turn all three turned into the stretch together. At the seven-eighths pole Stamboul was beaten, and the struggle was left to Woodnut and Wilkes, and a grand struggle it proved. At the short distance it looked like Wilkes' heat, barring an accident; but in the last twenty yards, as in the previous heat, Woodnut came up with a wonderful burst of speed and collared him at the wire, making a dead heat, Stamboul a close third. Time, 2:17.

Talk of Kentucky cheers when a "blue grass" horse beats a noted competitor from some other race-horse region; tell of the hurrahs of the dwellers on the Dou when they rush into battle, the thousands which joined in the acclaim as the horses came locked to the winning score would have to be increased to increase the volume of sound. It rolled from beneath the over-hanging eaves of the stand in a mighty torrent, and was met by the tumult from the dense mass below, uniting in a tidal wave or rather a cyclone of cheers.

Notwithstanding Woodnut had shown manifest superiority in the very last strides of the two preceding heats, the supporters of Guy still clung to his chances, the rate being $200 on him, $150 on Woodnut, while Stamboul's stock appreciated till it reached $65.

Several scores were necessary, as all three drivers were trying hard to get the best of it, if only by a nose. When the bell tapped it was to as good a send-off as could be had. At the eighth pole Woodnut made a revolution, but was in the lead at the quarter (0:35) by half a length from Guy, with Stamboul three lengths back.

Up the backstretch to the three-eighths pole the two leaders were head and head, but at this point Guy seemed to out-trot Woodnut, as he made several bounds in the air and fell back at the half, which was trotted by Guy in 1:49, three lengths ahead, Stamboul either unable to get up, or again laying up the heat. On the upper turn Guy Wilkes had opened a gap of four lengths on Woodnut and apparently had the heat well in hand, but Holly was only pursuing his facties of the previous heats, and began to close at the three-quarter, and about the draw-gate again collared Wilkes, and, after a hard driving finish in which the whip played a lively tune on both horses, won the heat by a head amid the manifold yells of the delighted assemblage and the shout and buyers. Stamboul was a close third. Time, 2:19.

With two heats to his credit, not to mention the dead heat it could scarcely be otherwise than that Woodnut should be the favorite. The horse had shown qualities of the highest class; his driver had demonstrated as clearly as could be that he possessed all the qualities of a number one reinsman. The prices were Woodnut $150, Guy $55 and Stamboul $6.

The fifth heat kept up the excitement to the last moment. They were sent off at the first score, Guy a head or short neck in the lead; this he did not retain and Stamboul was the contending horse with Woodnut at the quarter in :34, a length in the lead. Stamboul made a bad break, however, and at the half, 1:10, Woodnut led Guy three lengths, Stamboul out of the race. Guy closed a part of the gap in coming around the turn and he was close enough so that Holly could "carry him out" before coming into the stretch. Another grand struggle home, another game to Woodnut, which gave him the long rubber as shown by the Racing and Trotting at the State Fair.

While a majority of the races at the State Fair have proved to be of the best description, some of them can fairly be classed as exciting in the highest degree. Although on the opening day the Occident only brought out two starters, the 2:23 made amends, as the favorite Alfred S. met with defeat when least expected, and not only was beaten but left behind the flag in the finishing heat. This may be attributed to the serious illness which overtook him at Stockton last year, or rather a return of the malady. The 2:30 pacing brought out another great three-year-old to the credit of California, three of them winners in faster time than has been shown by the class heretofore, and the fourth evidently capable of beating any other record excepting the Pacific Coast mark. The first day was given last week, the second was a racing day, and as will be seen by the following account was a good beginning on the "legitimate," although the favorites made a clean sweep.

The first race was the Introduction stakes for two-year-olds, a dash of three-quarters of a mile. There were seven starters in the pools as follows: Don Jose $70, Reward $18, field $10. After several attempts at a fair start Lady Helen led off, followed by Duke Spencer, with the favorite in the bunch close behind. As they swung into the stretch Don Jose cut loose from the crowd and soon had the leaders in trouble and both driving hard. He came away easily and won in a gallop, Lady Helen second and Duke Spencer third. Time, 1:17.

The second race on the card was the California breeders' stake for the three-year-olds, one mile and a quarter. Only three appeared, Peel selling for $100, Snowdrop for $16, and Carmen $10. At the first attempt they got away, and on passing the stand the first time Peel was two lengths in the lead of Snowdrop, with Carmen several lengths back. The race from here needs no further description, more than to say the favorite increased his lead at will, and was ten lengths ahead of Snowdrop on the upper turn, when Courtney took a pull and finished easy two lengths ahead of Snowdrop. Time, 2:12½.

The next on the programme was the Capitol Stakes, three-year-olds and over, one mile and an eighth. In the pools the talent, with rare, good judgment, selected Brutus and Extract at even money, $100 each, while the field went begging at $35.

For ten minutes the horses were paraded in Indian file, with their jockeys in colors, up in front of the grand stand, and this new rule of the directors met with general approbation. It gave all an opportunity to learn their colors before the race. A beautiful start was given, and on reaching the stand for the first time Notidle led Duke Spencer, with the others well up, and all under a heavy pull. They ran bunched around the turn, with these two still leading. Up the backstretch both Extract and Brutus moved into better positions, and both looked like winners as they came into the stretch. About midway in the straight, Brutus was seen coming fast on the inside and mowing the field down like grass, until at the drawgate he was running easily a length in the lead, Extract came fast. She was on the outside, and was hardly seen in the crowd until the last few yards, when she came with a terrific rush, and, catching Slocum, the jockey on Brutus, napping, snatched the race by a nose at the very wire. Notidle was third. Time, 1:58½.

The last race on the card was the free for all for a purse of $250, heats of a mile, and brought out four starters that were held as follows in the pools: Canny Scot $40 to $22.50 before the first heat. This start proved a great failure for the starter, and he was greeted with groans and hisses by the entire grand-stand as he sent them off, with Sid and Ledor standing still, and the other two, Canny Scot and Dave Douglas, running six lengths away. Canny Scot at once took the lead and won the heat as he pleased. Dave Douglas second, and Sid and Ledor distanced. Time, 1:45½.

Canny Scot now sold for $50 against $8 for Douglas. Douglas led the way to the quarter, when Scot moved up, and after a brush on the backstretch was first to the half-mile pole. Around the upper turn Douglas again made play for the lead, and the sight as they ran was like one horse to the head of the stretch. Down the straight Canny outfooted Dave and resched the wire first by a length, winning the heat and race. Time, 1:44½.

The third day was looked for with great interest in all parts of the State. Those who had the means and leisure to gratify their fondness for trotting sport resolved to witness the contests which were on the bill, and the great army compelled to stay at home anxiously awaited the reports, the first papers to contain them being seized with an eagerness which showed the anxiety felt. There was an immense crowd at the park, larger even than the most sanguine anticipated, and that they were well repaid, though the air was somewhat overheated, the accounts of the races will show. The first trotting race was a two-year-old stake, and four good youngsters put in an appearance. Two great fillies, none too high praise to award, Vesolia and Margaret S.; and though Dame Fortune frowned on the handsome filly from Los Angeles in this race, she is well entitled to the rank. Fortune is not far behind, and Kilrain has shown so well at home as to raise hopes that his time would come. Previous to the trotting match a race was run between Peregrine and Lida Ferguson, which was handily won by the colt of double paternity.

The first race was a match for $500 a side between Peregrine and Lydia Ferguson, three-eighths of a mile. The betting before the start was $50 on Peregrine against $16 for Lydia, and although this was big odds against a mare of such reputation for short races the backers of Peregrine proved correct in their judgment, as the horse took the lead by a length soon after the flag fell and was never headed, although Lydia closed with him at the head of the stretch, but was in trouble, her rider using every effort to urge her. The horse, however, shook her off on the straight, and won by two lengths. Time, 1:01½.

The two-year-old trot was disastrous to the favorite. Before the start for the first heat Vesolia brought $100 in the pools, Margaret S. $85, Fortuna and Kilrain coupled $16. The scoring was tedious, which without doubt had an effect to rattle the favorite, and when the bell tapped to a fair send-off, unfortunately the clang had not stopped before Vesolia made a tangled break and fell ten lengths behind to the turn, where she made another and then a double break, and Margaret S. reached the quarter first, two lengths ahead of Fortuna and ten ahead of Kilrain, with the favorite Vesolia a distance out. Up the back stretch Donathan worked Fortuna up closer to Margaret S., while Kilrain was fast falling a distance behind, while Vesolia, acting very badly, was clearly and hopelessly out.

Margaret S. came on still in the lead of Fortuna and reached the wire first in time to have the flag drop in the faces of both Vesolia and Kilrain, who had both run nearly half a mile in the vain hope of saving their distance. Time, 2:31½.

Second Heat—Pools now sold, Margaret S. $45 and Fortuna $4. Considerable delay was had in getting the horses to appear and the judges, Messrs. Larne, Gamble and Singlery, imposed a fine of $10 each on McDowell and Donathan. This had its effect on Margaret S. and she answered the call, but Fortuna still failed to materialize and was fined $10 more and given the alternative of appearing in two and a half minutes or getting fined $25 for each subsequent length of time he failed. On the second trial they got away and Margaret at once took the lead, reaching the half in 1:14½. From here Fortuna made a brush, but broke at the three-quarter pole and fell back ten lengths, Margaret S. coming home leisurely, winning the heat and race, Fortuna second. Time, 2:31.

Sport enough for one afternoon surely, though still more was to come, and still another favorite destined to be slaughtered. This was the 2:30 class, and five of the entries appeared at the call of the judges. These were Franklin, Rosie Mc, Victor, Ha Ha and Bonanza. Franklin was the favorite in the pools, notwithstanding Rosie beat him at Oakland, and this was corroborative of the suspicions which that race engendered. Even after the first heat, which Rosie won in the good time of 2:20½, and which only requires a reference to the summary to understand, Franklin brought $60 to $40 on the mare, the field $18. The second heat was more interesting.

It was a very good start, and the mare soon took a slight lead. At the quarter it was very close between Rosie and Franklin. The others strung out behind. Half way up the stretch Franklin broke, and at the half the mare led Franklin by five lengths. Around the upper turn Victor was coming up fast and began to look dangerous, but the mare had some left and won the heat easily, Victor second, Franklin third and Ha Ha last. Time, 2:23½.

[Rosie Mc now became an immense favorite, bringing $200 against $21 for the field. This heat proved a surprise to the talent. Sent away at the first attempt, Victor broke soon after leaving the score, but settled quickly. Rosie Mc also broke now, and Victor was first at the quarter by a length from Franklin. Up the backstretch it was a procession, Victor leading by two lengths at the half. Around the upper turn Franklin closed up, and at the three-quarters it was close. Victor broke soon after heading into the stretch, but came again, and, carrying Franklin to a break at the drawgate, won the heat by five lengths, Franklin second, Goldsmith saying Rosie Mc, when he found he could not win the heat, third, and Ha Ha fourth. Time, 2:23½.

During the scoring for the fourth heat, the drivers persisted in coming up in opposition to the directions of the judges, and causing many false starts, until Judge LaRue fined Goldsmith and Donathan $10 each. This proved effective, and the second attempt after the infliction of the fines, they were sent to a fair start with Ha Ha, who persisted in not coming up, left at the wire. Franklin rushed off with the lead, but was fastened onto by Rosie Mc at the quarter pole, and as he broke just before reaching the half she took the lead, and trotting easily, came on home, winning the heat, race and first money by four lengths from Franklin, who got third money. Victor was third and got second money. Ha Ha was distanced. Time, 2:25.

This concluded the sports for the first week of the fair, and there little else was heard than encomiums of the grand trotting of the last day. Big losers joined in approbatory remarks, and when reviewing the stallion race, placed their misfortune to where they rightly belonged, viz., underating the speed of Woodnut. Old men who had never missed a State Fair from the time it was organized to the present year, endorsed the views of the more enthusiastic youngsters in calling it the very best race ever witnessed, and visitors who have seen all the prominent contests of the East for the past twenty years, gave this the preference over all the stallion races in being by long odds at the head of the heap. If the owner of Guy Wilkes shares in the opinion of the warriors who Froissart delineated, he will thank Holly for giving him so good a battle, but human nature, especially that which controls the feelings regarding favorite trotters, has degenerated and a winning fight better appreciated.

The Sunday enjoyments which usually prevail at Sacramento during the State Fair were slighted somewhat. Altogether too hot for a drive to Riverside until the sun had dropped behind the summits of the Coast Mountains, and as the moon was in its infancy the superior attraction which Luna sheds were not available. A cool place was the grand desideratum, and cooling drinks an absolute necessity.

Monday was the second racing day, and those who grumbled over the sport of the afternoon could only be incited by losses which were larger than the pleasure returned. The sun glowed with rather too much fervor, and the air heated to a glowing red, did its part in sweating bled and quadruped, nevertheless, by far the largest attendance ever witnessed on a Monday of fair week was present. Estimates ran as high as twelve thousand, and none of the expert estimators placed it lower than ten thousand. The first race on the card was the Premium Stake, so named after a fast mare which won it a few years ago. It is a sort of a compromise between short stock and those with extended genealogies, though the blue-bloods have had the best of it as a rule.

High betting. The highest of the high rollers appear to prefer these short dashes for an investment, and this was not an exception. When "sold out" the rank was Peregrine $100, Sleepy Dick $48, Extract $48, Daisy D. $23, Idaleue Cotton $20, Edelweiss $24, Al Farron $20, Applause $16, Notidle $12, Welcome $8. Too cumbersome, however, too many tickets to write, too much time wasted, so that the regular business settled at the course to $60 on Peregrine, Sleepy Dick $38, Extract $20, all the others massed in the field $50.

With so large a field it was to be expected that some trouble would be had in getting a good start, Al Farron going so far as to jump over the inside fence with all the vim of a veteran steeple-chaser, but when the flags fell it was to a very fair start. Difficult to say which had the best of it, impossible in the jumble of horses and colors to place the leaders as they dashed along the backstretch and swept around the turn. Coming home it was seen that Daisy D. had an advantage, and this she maintained to the wire, though not far behind came Notidle second and Applause third.

The short end had gained the first game and those which had backed Daisy D. for a place made a clear profit of $27.50 for $5 invested. This stimulated betting in the next race, the California Annual Stake for foals of 1896, one mile, had three starters, Picnic, Don Jose and Almont. Don Jose was a large favorite in the pools, bringing $200 to $65 for Almont and $50 for Picnic. And heaps of coin and bundles of notes went into the pro tempore bank, the pool box.

The horses had a good send off. Almont led to the quarter, Don Jose a length behind and a length in the rear of Picnic. At the three-eighths pole Don Jose began to crawl up and soon took second place from Picnic. At the three-quarters Don Jose came alongside of Almont, but the Three Cheer colt was too speedy for the Joe Hooker and he won by a length in the fast time of 1:42½, Don Jose second, Picnic third.

Jubilant the short enders, gloomy the faces of those who pin their faith on favorites, and some of the biggest losers were fain to use higher stimulants to raise their spirits, and whatever it was the effects were visible in the plunge to get even on the La Rue. Not so pronounced a favorite as Don Jose, yet Laura Gardner had the call, backers apparently losing sight of the hard races ran since the opening of the Los Angeles Fair. Canny Scott pressed her for pride of place and that he should have been awarded still stronger support was not only justified by the outcome, but prognosticated by his race at the Spring Meeting, and recovery of form as shown in the race of Friday.

Six more placed in charge of the starter and sold in the pools as follows: Laura Gardner $70, Canny Scott $65, the field of Dave Douglas, Leon, Hermes and Index $100. This was a beautiful race. On the fall of the flag to a splendid start the horses ran to the stand the first time, with Leon first, followed by Hermes, Laura Gardner, Index, Canny Scott and Douglas, in the order named. The positions were changed at different posts, with the exception of Leon, who still led at the end of the mile and a quarter, with Gardner second, and close up, Index third, Hermes fourth, Canny Scott fifth and Dave Douglas last. Leon held the lead to the mile and three-quarters post, where he was challenged for the lead by Laura Gardner, and the two lapped around the turn and into the stretch. Then Index moved up, Canny Scott bettered his position, and coming very fast, was soon in the lead, came away and won as he pleased by two lengths, amid the loud yells and cheers of the short-end buyers, who again won big money with little risk. Index was second, Laura Gardner third, Hermes fourth, Leon fifth and Dave Douglas sixth. Time, 4:02.

Fusilade's Last cut out the running and led to the half-mile post, closely followed by Elwood under a strong pull, with Oro next and the others well bunched. Tuesday was one of the trotting days which rarely occur, that being three races with "probable winners" nearly beyond the range of probability taking place in the ranks which are made up of certainties, and without a "broken heat" to relieve the monotony.

Despite the thermometer nearly 102 in the shade, ever so much hotter in the ann, and the poor prospect for anything like contests there was a good attendance.

The first race was a stake for 3-year-olds, and the always victorious Grandee was the favorite at $50, to $10 on Direct, and $3 on Balkan and Moaes S. coupled. Direct was manifestly out of order and all that is necessary is to give the placing and times as follows:

The 2:30 was just as great a moral certainty for Maggie E. as the others had been for Grandee and Woodnut. Pools sold on second place and for that Whipple was the favorite at $20, Ross S. and Perihelion bringing $6 each. The first heat—Maggie E. at once took the lead, followed by Whipple, with Ross third and Perihelion last. These positions were maintained from start to finish, Maggie jogging home an easy winner of the heat. Time, 2:26½. In the second heat, on the third attempt they got the word, and on the turn Whipple assumed the lead, with Perihelion second and Maggie third, about ten lengths back. Whipple held the lead to the head of the stretch, where Maggie began to close up, and down the stretch she came away and won as she pleased, Whipple second, Perihelion third, Ross fourth. Time, 2:23. In the last heat Maggie E. at once opened a big gap, and in trying to close it, Whipple made a stand-still break and fell a distance out. Down the stretch, however, Donathan slowed the mare up and allowed him to save both his distance, second money and the place bets. Perihelion was second and Ross S. last. Time, 2:30.

The weather on Wednesday was a great improvement on that of former days. It may have been that the time-honored clerk who is popularly supposed to apportion hot and cold, wet and dry accordingly, as he wills, has a fondness for racing, and led him to favor the third day of the gallopers. None the less grateful were the recipients—those with trotting inclinations, hoping that the same courtesy would be extended to the harness division when their innings were called.

Four races to be decided and, as will be learned from the report, capital races they proved to be. Speculation was brisk on all of them, in some the betting was heavy.

The first was the Sunny Slope Stake, a dash of five-eighths of a mile, for two-year-old fillies. The horses that had started and not won first or second place in any race this year were allowed five pounds.

The starters were Bessie Shannon, Picnic and Libertifibbit, of Shippee's stables; Palo Alto's Faustine and Appleby's Futurity, by John A. Although Haggin had three horses in the nominations none of them started. In the pools, Shippee's stable was the choice at $50, Faustine selling nearly even and the field at $13. The betting was very lively, and the auctioneers were kept busy until the very moment the word was given.

Bessie Shannon cut the pace to the three-quarters, with Futurity second. At the seven-eighths the horses were well bunched, but at this point the Palo Alto filly left the crowd, and Picnic followed after. Down the stretch it was impossible to tell which of the two was ahead, and the crowd cheered the game efforts of the plucky colts. About 100 yards from the wire Faustine pulled away and won by a short length, after a very fine finish, Picnic second, and Bessie Shannon third. Time, 1:02½.

The "big bettors" usually fancy favorites. In fact the amount of money to be put on is what gives the premier-ship. Therefore this class were ready to throw in their winnings at a lively rate when they had settled that McGregor should hold the position.

The Shafter Stakes, a dash of 1¼ miles, for three-year-olds, was the second event of the programme. The horses that had won in races this year carried five pounds extra.

There were nine nominations. A rush was made for the poolbox before the race, and excited bidding sent Palo Alto's MacGregor colt up to $120, to $75 for Haggin's Extract, and $30 for the field, in which were the Los Angeles Stable's Del, William Booth's Ledor and Nabeau, and Mrs. Wolfskill's Joe Hooker colt Heliotrope.

Ledor behaved badly, and persisted in taking the bit in his teeth and having things his own way, so that a dozen attempts were made before the horses got away. When, finally, starter Crittenden dropped the flag, all the horses had an even chance. Ledor led at the start, and began at once to gratify his propensity for running, as shown so unpleasantly before the start. Haggin's colt kept close to him, and at the quarter the handsome MacGregor bay swept past both of them. Brutus never lost this advantage, and won easily from Heliotrope, Extract third, and the others not placed. Time, 2:11.

So far backing the favorite had been a profitable investment, and when Peregrine was installed as dux in his class there was a rush to secure him at nearly twice as much as all the others brought. His victory over Lida Ferguson in fast time for the distance, five furlongs, was an augury that the added furlong would not stop him. Still, there were many who felt confident that Notidle would make a good return, and stood by her with confidence.

The race is called the Del Paso Stakes, for all ages; three-year-olds to carry 100 pounds, four years 110, five years and upward 112; three-quarters of a mile.

There were twelve nominations, but only five starters—Porter Ashe's Elwood, Jack Brady, Peregrine, Blue Bonnet and Notidle. The betting was very heavy, with Peregrine the favorite at $70 to $35 for Notidle and $13 for the field.

There was a good start. Notidle pushed ahead and held the lead to the half, and was there overtaken by the favorite, Elwood only a length behind. It was a pretty race to the seven-eighths, where Peregrine, by sheer force of superior speed, passed Notidle. This seemed to discourage her and she slackened her speed, giving the heat to Peregrine, Notidle second, Elwood third. Time 1:15.

It was the belief of everybody that Peregrine's advantage of ten pounds in weight insured him the race, and before the second heat he sold for $50 to $12 for the field, and his backers did not stake more on him only because they had no time before the second heat was called. The talent went in heavily on the favorite, and when they could get no more bets in the poolbox they went about bantering for wagers among the crowd.

It was nearly half an hour before Crittenden could bring the horses up for a square start. When at last he succeeded Notidle went forward like a shot, Blue Bonnet and Jack Brady worked together close to her heels. Elwood was a good third, and the favorite dismayed his friends by lagging along to open lengths behind, but the fine little gelding was only resting, for at the half he had overhauled all but Notidle and got within one length of her. That was all he could do, however, for, although he struggled gallantly and ran true as a line, Notidle beat him in; Peregrine second. Time 1:15½.

For the third heat only Notidle and Peregrine could start, the other horses being excluded under the rules. The talent saw their mistake in pinning their faith to Peregrine, and there was a rush to buy Notidle, and $75 was offered for her to $55 for Peregrine.

On the start the latter took a short lead, followed close by Notidle, but at the half Notidle had closed the gap, and then for a quarter of a mile it was a splendid contest, the horses running so evenly that no one could see a shade's difference in their noses. On the turn the three-year old gave up, and Notidle found it easy to win in 1:16 by half a dozen lengths, which the vigorous use of the whip did not help Peregrine to reduce. This heat finished the finest running race of the fair thus far, and Notidle received warm plaudits for her famous victory.

Two for the favorites, and one for the second choice was the ruling for the day so far, and now the turn of the field was to come. Such a big enclosure, however, that seven of the nine starters were within its bounds, though the two not included were held worth more than the success.

The last race was a free purse. Horses that have started and not won at this meeting allowed ten pounds, while winners, carrying rule weights, were required to carry five pounds extra.

Out of seventeen nominations nine started. Edelweiss, Ashe's Idalene Cotton, Haidee, J. M. R., Fusillade's Last, Wild Oats, Oro, Al Farrow and Nerva. Idalene Cotton brought $40 in the pools against $60 for the field and $32 for Al Farrow. At the first quarter Edelweiss was ahead, with Idalene Cotton second. There have been so many grand events in connection with the State Fair, that the repetition of the adjectives may appear tiresome, but to pass over the grand weather of Thursday would be an omission not justifiable from any point of view. The "heated spell broke," and if it had run short a couple of weeks ago there would have been delight at the misfortune. The attendance was good and the track in fine condition. The first race was more than suspicious, and the following account came by wire on Thursday afternoon.

In the first race, a special free purse, seven-eighths of a mile and repeat, there were three entries. Kildare was a strong favorite, but was pulled to Blue Bonnet, who took the lead and was never headed, with Kildare a length back, and his mouth wide open and his head nearly pulled off. Oro was third. Time, 1:30½. The judges very justly dismounted Cook, the rider of Kildare, and put up Hitchcock. The pools now sold Kildare $30, Blue Bonnet $12, and Oro $8.

In the second heat Kildare went off at once in the lead and was never headed, and under Hitchcock's riding won the heat easily from Blue Bonnet by two lengths, Oro third. Time, 1:30.

Blue Bonnet made a runaway heat and took the lead after the first 100 yards, and finished an easy winner of the heat and race by two lengths. Time, 1:32½.

This kind of racing does the society no good and should be abolished, for it was evident from the start to the finish that there was a "nigger in the fence" somewhere.

The 2:25 brought out eight very good horses, but the somewhat sensational stallion Victor, so far outranked the other that the greatest interest was centered in him. Not alone from his speed. His owner and driver, Mr. G. A. Doherty, has a theatrical leaning and his costume one not often seen on a race-track.

Costume, rig and the race was a rehearsal of that described by Mr. Killip in the Chico adventure, and when he appeared on the track he was received with a round of cheers almost as voluminous in sound as when Mordant won.

In the pools Victor brought $120, Don Thomas $60, and he the field $40. A good send-off was had on the fourth trial and Don Thomas was first to the quarter, two lengths ahead of Victor, with the others in a bunch. These positions were unchanged until the head of the stretch, when Victor took the lead with all the ease imaginable and won the heat by five lengths from Don Thomas, amid the wildest excitement and yelling. The others finished as per summary. Time, 2:25½.

The second and third heats were taken by Victor with the greatest ease, distancing Artist in the seconds and Haha in the third heat, and the band playing "One More River to Cross." Time, 2:22½—2:24½.

SUMMARY.

2:25 class, for a purse of $1,000; mile heats, 3 in 5.

Time, 2:25½, 2:22½, 2:24½.

The four-year-old trot was the next race on the programme, and was for the four-year-old trotting stakes. The only nominations to appear were Dubec and Moses S., and the race proved an easy one for Dubec, as he won in three straight heats. Time, 2:28½, 2:29½, 2:34½.

SUMMARY.

Four-year-old trotting stake; mile heats, 3 heat in 5.

L. J. Rose's b g Dubec by Sutton, 1	1	1

Time, 2:28½, 2:29½, 2:34½.

The free-for-all pace was called so late in the afternoon that only two heats could be paced. The first was won by San Diego in 2:24, and the second by Almont Patchen in the same time, when it was postponed until Friday at noon. Almont Patchen a big favorite bringing $50 to $24 on all the others.

Spokane Falls Fair and Racing.

SPOKANE FALLS, W. T., Sept. 3.—This is opening day of the second annual fair of the Washington and Idaho Agricultural and Race Association. The grounds are in fine condition. Many improvements have been made since last year. The main pavilion and implement halls are well filled.

FIRST DAY.

Running, for 3-year-olds, $50 each, $250 added; ¼ mile dash.

Broadchurch, 1	1
Arthur H, 2	2
Pat Curran, 3	3

Time, 1:18.

Trotting, for 3-year-olds, mile heats, two in three, purse $300.

Itton, 1	1
S. D. Stephens, 3	3

Best time—2:35.

SECOND DAY.

Strange as it may seem the following is all we received of the second day's racing:

Trotting, 2:23 class, purse $500.

Carrie Belle, 2	1	1	*	*
Contractor, 1	1	1	*	*
Col. Bradshaw, 3	2	2	1	1
Leona, dis
Gold Foil, dis

Time—2:26—2:27½—2:24½—1:29—2:29½.

THIRD DAY.

Contractor, owned by Charles Fickett of California, won the seventh heat and race in the unfinished 2:23 class, defeating Col. Bradshaw and Carrie Belle, the Montana favorites. The liveliest interest centered in this event, as there were several thousand dollars in the pools, besides hundreds of bets on the outside.

Roly Poly, a local flyer, captured the special half-mile and repeat against two scrub racers.

Fickett's trotter, D. K. W., won the third race and purse of $300 in three straight heats.

Repetta won the mile and repeat; best time, 1:45.

SPOKANE FALLS (Wash.), Sept. 7.—In the race of the 2:35 class to-day Juno, owned by A. Gonzales of San Francisco, won, Fantasie second and Bradshaw third. Time, 2:25½. The betting was 45 to 6 on Fantasie. The three-quarter dash was won by Rondo, Tom Lamer second. The race was declared off because Rondo's jockey struck Lamer with a whip in the face.

SALE OF TROTTER STOCK.—Mr. S. E. Larabee of Deer Lodge, Montana, has recently sold at private sale the following fine horses from his Willow Run Stables:

To Mr. Pickett, Los Angeles—bay filly, foaled 1887, sired by Fieldmont, dam Eugenie by Commodore Belmont, etc.

To a party at Helena—bay gelding sired by Maxim, dam by Heywood, son of Blackwood.

To W. H. Raymond, Virginia City—bay mare sired by Harrison Chief, dam by Kimbrough's Abdallah.

To Miss Knapp—bay gelding sired by Herod, 2:24½, dam by Superior, 2d dam the dam of Ranchero, 2:23½.

To Thos. S. Smith—bay three-year-old stallion sired by Fieldmont, dam Vincie, by Nindex, son of Blood's Blackhawk; 2d dam by Capt. Fay, son of Berthune; 3d dam by Gano.

Bay mare sired by Harrison Chief, dam a pacer; colt at side by Frank Morgan.

Bay mare sired by Tom Sawyer, dam Vixie, by Moore's Highlander.

Bay mare sired by Fieldmont, dam the Penman's mare.—New Northwest.

Appleby & Johnson's stable of horses were auctioned off at the Coney Island on Saturday, September 8th. Tristan, three years old, brought $3,900; Vardeo, two years old, $2,000; Stockton, four years old, $1,700; Bravo, two years old, $1,700; Diadem, four years old, $1,200; Neva, three years old, $1,200; Miracle, three years old, $1,100. Fourteen other colts and fillies were sold.—Bee, Sept. 10.

Smuggler's Daughter, 2:24½, by Smuggler, 2:15½, dam Molly D. (dam of Abbott), by Mambrino Chief, and foal at foot, by Warbler, has been purchased by W. H. Wilson, Cynthiana, Ky. Smuggler's Daughter was bred back to Warbler.

Before the races at Gravesend, August 29, Col. S. D. Bruce sold a number of William Jennings' horses. The highest price brought was $7,000, which Mr. R. W. Walden paid for the yearling bay colt by Warwick out of Lorilla. Dunboyne was purchased by Matt Jordan of Baltimore, the price paid being $4,500.

The Futurity and Futurity Day.

The following interesting account of the "work" which preceded the greatest two-year-old race ever run, is cut from The Sporting World, and will be relished by all who have the handling of race horses. In the first place it gives an idea of what the Futurity colts showed before the grand trial, and in the second, an example of what Eastern trainers consider proper exercise, so short a time previous to an important race. The communication was dated September 2d, the day before the race, so that the history gives the last turning of the keys to bring the string to concert pitch. As the account of the Futurity published last week was the meager report of the wires the mail version is given:

Now for the Futurity horses. Proctor Knott still holds his position of leading favorite in most people's minds, to which on public form he is fully entitled, but the chances of each of the candidates were so fully analyzed in a previous issue that it would be superfluous to enter into those same details again. His owners continue to be confident of the result, as the colt is in the best of health and condition, and has had a special preparation for the race. Since he is so thoroughly wound up it has not been necessary to do anything extraordinary with him. He worked six furlongs yesterday in the heavy going, but not very fast, and this morning after having been warmed up, Bryant sent him half a mile in 50½ seconds. If he is beaten to-morrow it will not be from want of condition, and his chance must appear to be most rosy. Salvator will be Mr. Haggin's best, and a sturdy, genuine candidate he is. On Friday morning Byrnes sent him a rasping gallop of six furlongs, which most watches stopped on at 1:14½. The time of the separate quarters was 24, 25½ and 25. He must have had his full weight up and finished strong and well, with a little bit to spare apparently. This morning he was restricted to nice, steady work, and he will find a far better animal than he was in the Junior Champion Stakes, which was his first appearance in public. In that race he had a shin sore, but this has almost entirely left him now, so it will take Proctor Knott all his time to beat him again. Ransom is quite likely to start in the same interests, and he was thoroughly ridden out in his yesterday's work.

There is probably no speedier animal on the track to-day than Galen, and his immediate connections think they will carry off this rich prize. Before leaving Chicago he moved three-quarters of a mile with 125 pounds up in 1:14, but the Chicago track is about the fastest in the country, so some allowance must be made for that. The question is whether he has the stamina to keep up his speed for the entire distance he will be asked to travel, when there is no doubt that the race will be run from end to end.

Yesterday in the heavy going he covered three-quarters of a mile in 1:20 without exerting himself. This morning he was only breezed, but he came through the stretch like a whirlwind. Men who held watches on him were almost afraid to own up to the time their watches stopped at in the colt's phenomenally fast quarter of a mile spin. They, however, soon found that a similar feeling affected everybody, which induced them to compare notes with the result that it was the general impression that Galen only took 22½ seconds to cover that distance. The last furlong was run much faster than the first one, and it seems almost incredible, but 10 seconds was allowed to be the time. This and his previous work before leaving home will cause many a dollar to be piled on him, and if he can only stay, how can they beat him? He ran second to Monsoon in a five furlong race, with fifteen others behind him, the first time he started, and the next time he ran he won the Quickstep Stakes, one-half mile, with 110 pounds, in a common canter in 48 seconds. Monsoon is one of Mr. Haggin's lot to be sold to-morrow morning at Sheepshead Bay by Mr. Easton, and the man who buys him ought certainly to try and win this stake.

Major Thomas is at Sheepshead Bay looking after Lady Pulsifer. The filly is an own sister to that good race horse Punster, and she did sufficiently well in private to induce her owner to bring her all the way from Kentucky to run. Opinions of her merits vary considerably. Some people say she is a slashing fine mare, while others are of the opinion that she will not be found good enough. She worked yesterday in 1:19.

Auricoma will have a very strong following on account of her consistent running and from the fact that it is known that she is the best of Mr. Withers' strong team of two-year-olds. She and the Faverdale colt did capital work yesterday. The filly had a lot of weight up and finished in 1:16½, which under ordinary circumstances would not be considered extraordinary time. She, however, ran the first half mile in 48½ seconds, but on coming into the homestretch the bit pinched her mouth and caused her to swerve badly, and thus the Faverdale colt beat her at the finish. Up to the point where she swerved, her jockey was pulling her to the Faverdale colt all the way. This morning she worked fast and she went a quarter of a mile round the turn in 24½ seconds. She was probably worked in this way to see if she was likely to run out again. She is certain to finish in the first flight and ought to get a place.

Eric worked with Khaftan this morning and beat him, but the time made, 1:18½, taking into consideration his other running, would hardly make him good enough.

Princess Bowling, a very speedy filly, does not please the horse watchers in her work. It seems to be the general impression that her back is not right, judging from her style of going, and no animal with an "if" about it will be good enough, so she may be passed over.

We all know what kind of an animal Tipstaff is since he ran yesterday. Under the circumstances he did nothing to speak of this morning, and will find the company a little too good for him. The Belle would have run, and run well, too, if she had not picked up a nail some time ago when she was just getting into shape. The Lioness will represent the Melbourne Stable if they have a starter. Her work since she has been here has not been good enough to impress one very strongly with her chances, and a better one might be found in Once Again.

Philander was very well thought of this spring, and may be found at the post, but he may be passed over. Mr. Hendrie has a good looker in King Idler, and he worked a quarter of a mile this morning in 25 seconds. With such well tried cattle among the lot it will be hardly safe to stand a colt of which so little is known. None of the Dwyers' numerous lot are good enough, and very little is known of Girondes. Kasson is not likely to start, although he is doing well and has shown some really good form. Limbo ran yesterday, which is the best guide to his form, and having run behind the Dawdle colt does not entitle him to much serious consideration. Liberty is well thought of by his connection, but is not down as a likely runner. Mr. Sam Brown will only have one starter—viz., Senorita. She will, barring accidents, do much better than she did at Brooklyn, where she was badly interfered with. Without a doubt she is a cracking good filly, and will be certain to run well up. Seymour is quite likely to run, but he can only have an outside chance. Mr. Belmont's selected one will be Forest King, who has never run like a stayer. Hopes are however, entertained of his running pretty well. He worked well yesterday, doing the three-quarters of a mile in 1:16½.

This about covers the likely starters, and there is not much reason to change the opinion I formed when writing about this race a few days ago. It is a bold thing to predict the downfall of Proctor Knott, who, some people thought, could have run the Junior Champion Race in 1:13 or less had he been pushed. Nobody could have failed to be impressed with the wonderful form he showed that day, and he has only to run as well again to win. His tight squeeze with Seymour at Saratoga makes it appear that he was not so good that day as he was at Monmouth, which, perhaps, was owing to a partial let up. Salvator is improving every day and meets Proctor Knott on better terms than he did last time, and the two things taken into consideration may cause the previous form to be reversed. Salvator will, in my opinion, win. The fight for a place will probably be between Proctor Knott, Auricoma and Galen, and a desperate one it will be. Proctor Knott is supposed to have a soft spot if he is collared. The question arises, is there anything fast enough to collar him? Looking at the phenomenal speed that Galen has shown, he should certainly be able to hang on to Proctor Knott for at least half a mile, and that may settle the great Knott if he is inclined to cut it, but then again it would be doubtful policy on the part of the Galen people to send such a fast colt, who has the reputation of not being an extra good stayer, to the front in the early part of the race, unless Proctor Knott is the only one they are afraid of, and they imagine that would be the only way to beat him. Probably Proctor Knott will get second.

It should be added that nearly all of the Futurity horses worked on the new course this morning. It was in excellent shape and the time made to-day will no doubt be very fast.

BLUE RUIN.

The Race.

A great deal of interest was taken in looking over the animals that were saddled in the paddock, and it was unfortunate for the public that not one of the youngsters was put to rights there. Would it not pay the club to insist that every horse that starts in a race should be saddled in the paddock? Fifty cents per head is charged for everybody who enters the paddock, but the thing has almost developed into a farce, because the majority of the horses are saddled at their stables.

The prevailing idea in most people's minds was to get a look at Proctor Knott, and when he made his appearance on the track the keenest criticism was brought to bear upon him. Nobody could find fault with his condition, looks or action. He went around the track like a trained hunter, taking no notice of anything, and it escaped the lips of many people what development he showed. Sam Bryant has excelled himself in the training of this colt, and our readers have been informed lately that Proctor Knott's condition was faultless.

The doubt as to his gameness has now been dispelled, although his swerving on to Salvator cannot be taken as a sign of great courage. Sam Bryant remained perfectly confident of the result up till the fall of the flag, and made all his friends back the son of Luke Blackburn.

Salvator was very much admired in his canter, as far as looks were concerned, because one glance at him must convince anybody who knows anything at all about horses, that he is a race-horse without a possibility of a doubt. In his canter he went a little bit short, probably the effect of his shin soreness some time ago. His condition was perfect in other respects, and even better things may be expected of him later on if he is not overdone.

Mr. Haggin and the stable connections were very sweet on Salvator.

Senorita did her preliminary work in clothing, which did not give one much chance of judging of her condition, but when she was stripped there was nothing left to be desired. Her chances were held in high esteem by the stable, and she will do to follow in the future, although she is not a good beginner.

Eric did not start with great hopes of winning, but Mr. P. Lorillard, Jr., thought he would like to stand his chance. The colt was clean and hard, but probably would be better if he carried more flesh. With Hayward up he was nibbled at by some who otherwise would not have backed him, and, all things considered, he ran a good race. His preliminary work did not impress people very much, because he is a slovenly mover, in his slow paces being a regular loafer. The public had a good chance to look at him before the race because he was saddled in the paddock, where Mr. Grey, the part owner of Galen, was surrounded by a clique who wanted to hear his summing up on the race after all they have heard of Galen's phenomenal speed. Mr. Grey said the only doubt in his mind was whether Galen could stay the six furlongs, and in this he was right. The first impression formed of Galen is that he is an animal built in wonderful speed lines, and with a beautifully arched back peculiarly adapted to carrying weight. Mr. Grey had him wound up to the top notch, and it was a treat to see his beautiful action in the preliminary canter.

One of the best, if not the best, trained horses in the whole field was Tipstaff. His coat was as bright as a star, his eyes full of fire; the muscles stood out in lumpa on him, and had evidently taken the place of adipose tissue through the most judicious amount of work. Mr. Morris may fairly lay claim to the prize for condition, but the individual animal was lacking, and great hopes of success could not be entertained by his owner.

The Lioness struck observers as a raking, speedy looking filly. A buzz of applause greeted Auricoma as she went by. The filly seemed to be trained to the hour, and gave every indication of being in the best of health. The dainty and disdainful way in which she traveled, suggesting the highest breeding, could not fail to capture the fancy of anybody who saw it, and another soft spot was left in people's hearts when they saw how nicely she is turned. All these favorable characteristics have their effect, and from the fact that it was known that Auricoma was better than the Faverdale colt, her chances were thought well of.

Disappointment with Lady Pulsifer was the general verdict when Major Thomas' full sister to Punster went round the turn by the paddock. The filly looked light, somewhat dry in her coat, and altogether an animal not calculated to win in that state, but possessing one of the best characteristics of a race-horse, viz., good action.

Philander did his preliminary work in clothing, and when he was stripped it could be seen that he was short of work.

Little or no attention was paid to the movements of Forest King and Limbo, but Princess Bowling struck all the critics as being remarkably well built for speed.

Great as was the crowd that filled the immense betting ring upon Snburhan day, it was far exceeded yesterday, which may be termed Futurity day. In anticipation of the multitude which would be anxious to wager their money upon the great race, the club having arranged the difficulty with the pencilers, eighty-four bookmakers had applied for stands. To make room for this number, all the new mutual boxes which had been put up on Saturday were taken down, and only three straight and three place boxes were open. Besides, the railings which separated the cashiers' windows of the mutuals pools, facing the betting ring, were knocked down, and about noon Frank Clark, the superintendent, assisted by several men, was seen welding the hatchet on the posts and making the chips fly. Soon everything was in readiness, and the stands quickly mounted by the eager bookmakers. All the old familiar faces that had been missed upon the opening day were in their places. The junior member of the late firm of Appleby & Johnson, under the modest sign of D. C. Johnson, was among the number. The head of the firm conducted business under the name of Appleby & Co.

The programme throughout was one calculated to make good betting, and as the time for the event of the day drew near the excitement grew intense. The great throng, its enthusiasm aroused by what had gone before, was thoroughly worked up, and when the bookmakers began to put up the odds against the Futurity starters, like the calm before the storm, a silent murmur of expectation went through the vast assemblage, but as soon as the odds were announced the crowd surged and swelled around each of the eighty-four stands, and every one had all they could do to take in the money pushed into their hands by the eager multitude.

The market ruled remarkably strong throughout. Proctor Knott opened a favorite at 8 to 5, with Auricoma next at 4 to 1, Salvator at 8 to 1, Galen 10 to 1, and from 12 and 15 to 100 to 1 against the others. Notwithstanding, the money came in in volumes on Proctor Knott, the price remained steady throughout, and closed with most of the bookmakers at 6 to 5, though 7 to 5 could be obtained at the end, with 10 to 7 for the place. Place betting against him opened at 5 to 4 on.

Auricoma at first went back to 5, but the consistent support which the representative of the all black received from the public and some of the talent forced the price up again, and it closed at 4 and 3 to 1, with even money and 6 to 5 for the place.

Salvator, the crack of the Haggin Stable, was well backed, a strong stable commission being placed on him. He opened third favorite at 8 and 3, but the money came in so fast at these figures that the price was soon marked down to 6 and 2 and 7 to 5. Among some of the largest bookmakers he ruled at 5 at the close.

The next in demand was Galen, the recent western arrival. There was a strong tip on this colt in the ring, and he was well backed, especially for the place. He opened at 12 and with 4 to 1 for the place; the price closed at an average of 8, with 2½ for the place.

While all the others were more or less supported, Senorita, Tipstaff, Lady Pulsifer and Princess Bowling being most fancied, they were not backed appreciably to affect their opening price, which remained about the same to the close.

The knowalls or touts were in their element, and they aqueezed their way through the dense throng, imparting their good things to the willing ears of the holiday bettors anxious to get on.

It was amusing also to watch the "short" element gunning for the long shot, and as soon as a fancy price against any of the outsiders was seen they worried their way through the crowd and forced the venturesome bookmaker to cut down his price. Among the number who indulged in this sport was Sol Lichtenstein of Appleby & Co., who marked up 80 to 1 against Forest King, but the money came in so fast at this price that the sponge was quickly applied. Davy Johnson was not behind hand at this game. Philander was the one chosen by him, against which he laid 100 to 1, but several pools were made up among the crowd to take the odds, and his book was soon full at this price.

A good business was also done in the auctions upon this race, all the pools were quickly sold, averaging between $400 and $500 each, with Proctor Knott first choice at about $150, Auricoma, Salvator and Galen sold out, the others selling as the field.

It is difficult to estimate the amount of money bet on this race in the ring, but, taking into consideration the books, mutuals and auctions, half a million dollars is within the limit, and what is remarkable is the steady price maintained throughout. The bookmakers manfully withstood the onslaught of the backers and kept up the prices to the end. This is the story of the betting during the day on almost every race.

For the opening race at three-quarters the betting opened light, both the bookmakers and backers at first seeming to hold back. Laredo was quoted a favorite at 8 to 5, but the price soon lengthened and went up to 3, closing at 2. Sam Harper Jr. and Leo H. were well supported in this race, Sam Harper Jr. being almost an even favorite with Laredo. Leo H. attracting public support from the fact of his being ridden by Byrnes. A good price was laid against the others, Britannic opening at 8 and closing at 6.

The Great Fall Selling Stakes was a lively betting event. Inspector B. was at first quoted the favorite, but the crowd followed the money. A good commission was sent in the ring by the Chicago Stable on Lela May, and she ruled an even favorite with Inspector B. to the close at 4 to 1. Roi D'Or, Housatonic and Frank Ward were also well backed, especially the latter, but it was done quietly—in fact they were all backed.

Egmont was the strong favorite of the day, but though the money came into the ring in volumes he only receded a half point, and closed at the opening price—5 to 4 on. Badge was so well backed, however, that he kept Egmont's price up. He opened and closed at 2½, with 2 to 1 on for the place. Lelex and Larchmont averaged at 5 and 8.

The field for the fifth race was reduced to five. Niagara ruled a strong favorite, opening at money on, but closing at even money. Pasha and Kalcobah were good second choices, and were backed down to 4 to 1. Kaleidoscope had some following, but My Own was practically friendless.

In the closing race of the day the choice fluctuated between Volunteer and Strideaway, ruling most of the time at 7 to 5, but finally Volunteer was made the favorite at 6 to 5 and even money, while Strideaway closed at 8 to 5. These two carried the bulk of the money, with Daniella and Strathspey most fancied of the others.

The story of the betting ring tells the progress of racing and the vast interest created by a stake like the Futurity. There was a larger number of bookmakers—eighty-four in all—than were ever before on a race track in this country, and the immense multitude that filled the betting ring gave these gentlemen all they could do. The auction pool pavilion was also crowded, and the pools on the different races rapidly sold. Judging from the volume of business transacted and the rapidity with which it was conducted, over $1,200,000 must have been wagered on the different races yesterday.

The result of the day's business in the mutuels is as follows: In the first race 1,050 straight tickets were sold, 146 being on the winner, and 2,545 place tickets, 333 on Britannic and 595 on Sam Harper Jr.; 1,093 straight tickets were sold in the second race, 84 being on the winner. There were 2,156 place tickets, of which 178 were on Frank Ward and 127 on Bordelaise. In the third race 1,403 straight tickets were sold, of which 797 were on the winner, there were 1,982 place tickets, 792 on Egmont and 512 on Badge. For the Futurity 2,456 straight tickets were sold, 962 being on the winner, and 3,354 place tickets, of which 788 were on Proctor Knott and 373 on Salvator. Eleven hundred and sixty-four straight tickets were sold on the fifth race, of which 606 were on the winner. There were 1,945 place tickets, 890 being on Niagara and 373 on Pasha. For the last race 1,174 straight tickets were sold, 371 being on the winner, and 1,785 place tickets, 580 being on Strideaway and 735 on Volunteer. The total number of tickets sold amounted to 22,107, aggregating in value $110,535.

Pools: Laredo $50, Sam Harper Jr. $35, Britannic and Leo H. $20 each, the field $45.

Betting: 9 to 5 against Laredo, 13 to 5 Sam Harper Jr., 6 to 1 Leo H., 8 to 1 Britannic, 12 to 1 Bess, 15 to 1 Rowland, 25 to 1 Red Light, 40 to 1 each Harry Russell and Queen of Trumps, 60 to 1 Tourmaline.

Place: 10 to 9 on Laredo, 5 to 4 Sam Harper Jr., 2 to 1 each Leo H. and Britannic, 5 to 1 each Bess and Rowland, 7 to 1 Red Light, 12 to 1 Queen of Trumps, 15 to 1 Harry Russell, 25 to 1 Tourmaline. Mutuels paid $34.15, place $16.15, Sam Harper Jr. $11.25.

The lot were well bunched when the flag fell, and the start was made without delay. Sam Harper was first away, closely attended by Tourmaline, Bess and Laredo. When the lot got well into their stride Leo H. showed in front, with Tourmaline, Sam Harper and Laredo at her head. Bess came next. They ran without change to the head of the stretch, where Leo H. and Tourmaline dropped back and Britannic came through. Sam Harper began to make his run. The two last named fought out the contest through the stretch, but Britannic managed to stay in front to the end and he won by a length, with Sam Harper Jr. second, three parts of a length in front of Laredo. Rowland was close up. Red Light lost ground at the start, and at the head of the stretch he was pulled to the extreme outside.

Second Race—The Great Fall Selling Stakes; for all ages; a sweepstakes of $50 each, half forfeit, with $1,250 added, of which $250 the second, the third to receive $100 out of the stakes; the winner to be sold at auction for $5,000, unless entered to be sold for less, when the selling price shall be stated through the entry box at the usual hour for the closing of entries on the day preceding the race; if to be sold for $1,000 to be allowed 5 pounds; if for $3,000 to be allowed 10 pounds; one pound allowed for each $100 less down to $1,000, which shall be the minimum selling price; beaten horses not liable to be claimed. One mile and a furlong.

Pools: Inspector B. $16, Roi D'Or $13, Lela May $12, the field $35.

Betting: 4 to 1 against Inspector B., 9 to 2 Lela May, 5 to 1 Roi D'Or, 6 to 1 Letretia, 3 to 1 each Housatonic and Bordelaise, 10 to 1 each Brown Duke and Frank Ward, 20 to 1 Austrienne, 30 to 1 each Petulance and Little Jim, 50 to 1 each Elyton and O'Fallon.

Place: 7 to 5 against Inspector B., 8 to 5 each Lela May and Roi D'Or, 2 to 1 Letretia, 3 to 1 each Frank Ward, Housatonic, Bordelaise and Brown Duke, 10 to 1 Austrienne, 12 to 1 each Petulance and Little Jim, 20 to 1 each Elyton and O'Fallon. Mutuels paid $61.80, place $30.25, Bordelaise $39.40.

Bordelaise was the first away, followed by Roi D'Or, Little Jim and Housatonic. Bordelaise, under the stoutest pull, made the running a length and a half in advance of Petulance and Roi D'Or, who were on even terms. Inspector B. and Letretia came next. They ran without change in these positions along the backstretch and around the far turn. As they made the bend for the run home Bordelaise still held the advantage, with Inspector B. and Frank Ward her closest attendants, but a furlong from home Frank Ward, next the rail, overhauled Bordelaise, and, as the latter was poorly handled, Frank Ward beat her out by a neck, Bordelaise second, three lengths from Lela May. The winner was bought in for $2,205.

Third Race—For Twin City horses; a sweepstake of $50 each, h f, with $1,250 added, of which $250 to the second, the third to receive $100 out of the stakes; the winner of the Twin City or any race of the value of $3,000 since Aug. 24, if handicapped for the Twin City at 115 pounds or over, to carry a penalty of 5 pounds, if at less of 12 pounds; the second, if so handicapped at 115 pounds or over, to carry a penalty of 3 pounds, if at less of 7 pounds; other horses to be eligible to start as originally weighted for the Twin City, irrespective of their having been declared or as to subsequent winnings; entries to be made by the usual hour on Saturday, Sept. 1. One mile and a quarter.

Pools—Egmont $25, Badge $18, field $13. Betting—10 to 7 on Egmont, 5 to 2 against Lelex, 3 to 1 Badge, 8 to 1 Larchmont. Place—Egmont harred, 5 to 3 on Badge, 7 to 5 against Lelex, 8 to 1 Larchmont. Mutuels paid $8.35, place $6.80, Badge $7.80.

Egmont was first away at the fall of the flag, with Lelex second and Badge third. Barnes at once sent Larchmont to the front and set the pace, with Badge second, a length behind. Lelex came next on the outside, while Egmont trailed. Along the back stretch Badge joined Larchmont, and the two raced side by side, about two lengths from Lelex and Egmont, who were together. After making the last turn Egmont moved up without an effort, and, taking the lead at the end, won easily by a length, with Badge second, half a dozen lengths from Lelex. Larchmont was two lengths further back.

Fourth race—The Futurity, a sweepstakes for two-year-olds, foals of 1886, by subscription of $25 each for mares covered in 1885, and $50 each for the produce of such mares unless struck out by July 15, 1887, in which case the only liability shall be $25 for the subscription of the mare; starters to pay $250 additional; the Coney Island Jockey Club to add $10,000; the second to receive $2,000 of the added money and 30 per cent of the starting money; the third $1,000 of the added money and 20 per cent of the starting money; colts to carry 115 pounds; fillies and geldings 112 pounds; winners when carrying standard weight for age, at the course where the race was run, of $3,000, 3 pounds, of two of such races of $3,000, or of one such race of $5,000, 5 pounds extra; mares may be entered by persons not their owner, the owner having the prior right; if a mare entered in this stake drops her foal before January 1, or if she has a dead or more than one foal, or is barren, the entry of such mare is void, and if the entrance money has been paid it will be returned; by filing prior to July 15, 1887, with the Coney Island Jockey Club an accepted transfer of the produce with its engagement for the Futurity Stakes, the original subscriber will be released from any liability as to the engagement of the produce of $50 each, leaving the purchaser liable for the same unless duly struck out; the produce of mares or stallions which have not produced a winner prior to Jan. 1, 1886, allowed 3 pounds; of both, 5 pounds; the produce to be entitled to such allowance at time of starting whether claimed or not in the entry of the mare; maidens allowed 7 pounds, which allowance shall not be cumulative; 752 entries, of which 217 were void, 144 declared July 15, 1887, at $25 each, 37 at $75 each, and 354 eligible. Three-quarters of a mile.

Pools—Proctor Knott $70, Auricoma $35, Salvator $15, Eric $10, field $45. Betting—6 to 5 against Proctor Knott, 4 to 1 Auricoma, 6 to 1 Salvator, 10 to 1 Galen, 20 to 1 each Senorita and Lady Pulsifer, 30 to 1 each Philander, Princess Bowling and Eric, 40 to 1 Tipstaff, 50 to 1 each Forest King, Limbo and The Lioness, 100 to 1 Village Maid. Place—10 to 7 on Proctor Knott, 5 to 4 Auricoma, 5 to 2 each against Salvator and Galen, 8 to 1 each Senorita and Lady Pulsifer, 10 to 1 Princess Bowling, 12 to 1 each Limbo, Tipstaff and Eric, 15 to 1 each Forest King and Philander, 20 to 1 each The Lioness and Village Maid. Mutuels paid $12.10, place $11.40, Salvator $18.55.

The horses went directly to the starting post without parade or other ceremony. As many of the youngsters were saddled about the betting enclosure to the north of the stand, they did not pass before the inspectors. Some went to the post mounted, while the jockeys of others walked at their side. Although the contestants disappeared at the end of the new chute one by one, some time was consumed before the signal was given for them to take up their positions. The assistant starter called them to their places in the following order: Forest King, Princess Bowling, The Lioness, Auricoma, Philander, Eric, Senorita, Lady Pulsifer, Salvator, Tipstaff, Proctor Knott, Village Maid, Galen and Limbo. Everything being in readiness for the start, Mr. Caldwell took up his position in his box. Before an effort was made to get them away he delivered the jockeys a useful lecture. When the first breakaway was made Proctor Knott jumped off something in front of the others, but he was quickly pulled up. A second time the lot moved away, but there were one or two staggering behind, while Forest King appeared to have a trifle advantage of his companions. At the third attempt the lot broke away with all well up and on the line. They were spread completely across the track, and not a single horse was favored with any advantage. In fact it was as near a perfect start as could be made, and down went Mr. Caldwell's flag and off flew the fourteen candidates for the great Futurity stakes of the year. The order in which the youngsters broke the even line as they moved off on their journey was: Forest King first, closely followed by Tipstaff, Auricoma, Proctor Knott and Salvator. The others were in a bunch and had not Village Maid been slow to get into her stride, no daylight could have been seen between the entire bunch for some distance. When they got settled in the stride, Turner at once set to work on Galen, and like a flash he drew away from his competitors and quickly opened up a gap. So fast did Galen move that at the end of the first quarter of a mile he showed a clear lead of two lengths. He was running on almost the extreme outside of the track while Proctor Knott held second place nearly in the center of the course. Almost on even terms with the latter but spread across the track were Salvator, Auricoma and Tipstaff. Just at this point Limbo made a wild rush from the rear bunch and jostled against Senorita, nearly throwing the latter on her knees. Village Maid was still trailing and losing ground. Galen gained another length in the next furlong, but then he began to hang fire, and it became evident that he had shot his bolt. Gradually the field closed on him and at the three-quarters post, which was the end of the first half mile, Galen had lost a length. Two lengths was his lead at this point, while Salvator showed second, with Proctor Knott close by his side and only half a length behind. Senorita, Auricoma and Tipstaff were close up, while the others were falling back at every stride. Of the front division Galen and Salvator were the only ones being urged to do their utmost. After the bend was made and the field straightened out for the run home the jockeys began to get in their work. Whips were flying on every side, and all were under punishment excepting Proctor Knott. Galen dropped back beaten more than a furlong from the end, and Salvator and Proctor Knott quickly joined issue. Lady Pulsifer and Senorita came next, but it was evident that they could not overhaul the leaders. Salvator held a trifle the advantage at the end of the last furlong, but when called on Proctor Knott gradually forged ahead inch by inch, and in the last half dozen strides he drew out and won by a trifle more than a neck. Salvator was used up at the end, but he managed to hold second place, and Hamilton landed him nearly two lengths in front of Galen. Senorita was about two lengths further back, with Lady Pulsifer next, close by the inner rail. The others were spread out, but there was not much daylight between them, excepting Village Maid, who virtually cantered home last. The first quarter was run in 24 1/5 seconds, the half in 48 1/2 seconds, and the three-quarters in 1:15 1/5.

After the race Hamilton lodged a complaint of foul riding against Barnes, but the judges failed to allow the protest.

Better Than a Gold Mine.

Proctor Knott, the hero of yesterday, was foaled on April 12, 1886, at the celebrated breeding establishment Belle Meade, Tenn., and at the annual auction of the Belle Meade yearlings, fell to the bid of his present part proprietor, Mr. Sam Bryant. His breeding is essentially typical of his Belle Meade origin, and both on sire and dam's side he is full of blood which is deservedly held in the highest esteem by those who study the intricacies of blood and crosses, and for the benefit of readers it is here produced in tabulated form:

"At the time of the colt's sale there was evidently, however, a something which did not please the cognoscenti, for he was knocked down at the comparatively low price of $450, and Mr. Bryant from that day has never failed to know what a fortunate bargain he had secured. So far as being thoroughly well cared for and looked after went, the colt could not have fallen into better hands to be developed, and the effects of it all made itself painfully manifest to the thirteen other high class competitors that entered the lists against him yesterday.

Starting from the time he first sported silk his record commences with the West Side Stakes at Nashville, where, with odds of 4 to 1 against him, he cantered away from a field of seven, accomplishing the five furlongs in 1:03 1/4. A fortnight afterwards, in another five furlongs dash—the Alexander Stakes at Louisville—he won even more easily from six others on a very heavy track in 1:04 1/4. The following week, at the same place, he first tasted defeat, starting favorite and finishing fourth in the rear of The Lioness, Champagne Charlie and Outbound. At Latonia the succeeding week he was the public fancy in a field of fifteen for the Harold Stake despite his giving away nine pounds to everything in the races, but he was not even in the first five and had evidently been having rather more racing than suited his hook. June 8th again found him knocking at the door for the Sensation Stakes at Latonia, for which the outsider, Kasson, in receipt of 13 pounds, beat him out a length in 1:16, and from that out commenced his victorious career to which he was no doubt assisted by a judicious three weeks' rest. At Chicago, June 29th, he won the chief two-year-old event, the Kenwood Stakes, from a field of eleven, which included Bookmaker, Monsoon, Heron and Once Again, and in doing so convinced Mr. Bryant and his partner, Mr. Scroggin, that they had a colt good enough to bring East and fulfill his engagements. Monmouth Park was the scene of his debut and so lightly were the colt's Western performances esteemed that few outside of his own people had the temerity to invest upon his chance for the Junior Champion even at 10 to 1. All the eastern oracks were assembled, so of what use to trouble about this little known westerner. Proctor Knott now put out his strength and gave his detractors a taste of what he could do, for few who saw the race can forget the consummate ease with which he spreadeagled this field of first class youngsters in 1:14 flat.

Then everyone at once appreciated what a grand young one he was, and how symmetrically and powerfully he was built, but not liking to give in to him altogether he was declared a coward, and it was said that he had only to be tackled and raced at to shut up like a jackknife. Whether the same can be said after yesterday's episode remains to be seen.

From Monmouth Proctor Knott was sent to Saratoga to enter along in front of three others for the Equity Stake, and from Saratoga to Sheepshead Bay, where he is next board of as winner of the first great Futurity. Though as yet only two years of age, he has been successful in piling up what would appear to many a snug fortune. His winnings, reckoning as follows, are:

West Side Stakes, Nashville.....$ 840
Alexander Stakes, Louisville.....1,500
Kenwood Stakes, Chicago.....2,790
Junior Champion Stakes, Monmouth Park.....20,935
Equity Stakes, Saratoga.....1,095
Futurity Stakes.....41,670

To give a description of the appearance of Proctor Knott is a hard task just at the present time, when there are so many who have successfully landed their winnings over him, and who believe firmly in the adage of "Handsome is as handsome does." But much as it would please to say he is perfection, it must be admitted that he is not. To give a quick and graphic description of him, he is a plain horse with a lot of good points, but he lacks the neat molding and pretty turning which go to make a typical thoroughbred. He is a mealy colored chestnut, with a near fore and hind pastern white and a broad blaze face which would distinguish him in any crowd, and made him the most noticeable of all in the race yesterday as he came sailing up the Futurity track direct for the stand. He runs in blinkers, which, perhaps, make his head appear to small advantage, but when divested of them his head is yet a trifle homely, owing partly to a very coarse jaw and partly, perhaps, to the blaze, which is very broad. His neck is long, and runs back into deep and sloping shoulders. He is deep through the heart, and his ribs are well arched, giving him every indication of a good constitution. His hips are ragged enough to hang your hat upon, and his hind legs very straight. His feet are big and good. No—he is by no manner of means handsome, and yet he is a wonderfully taking horse, remarkably furnished for his age, and having all the appearance of an old horse despite his tender years. His future engagements as given in Goodwin's stake entries may not be entirely complete, as some of the western tracks are still short sighted enough not to lend their encouragement to that firm, but those in their books read as follows: The Clark Stakes and the Kentucky Derby at Louisville, the Lorillard and Stevens Stakes at Monmouth Park, and the Two Thousand Sweepstakes at Newville. All of these are for 1889.

The National Horse of America.

By Leslie M. MacLeod, In Patent Office Report for 1887.

Coming to Mambrino, in a trotting sense the greatest son of Messenger, we reach the keystone of our subject, for from his loins came two lines, the greatest in all trotting history. One son of Mambrino gave us the sterling Mambrino Chief family of trotters; another got Rysdyk's Hambletonian, far and away the greatest of all trotting progenitors. The latter founded a trotting family with which none can compare, and to which none can approach, and his blood has, it is truly said, "raised the trotting-horse of America to the highest point of excellence." Mambrino Paymaster, son of Mambrino, sired Mambrino Chief, the founder of the Mambrino Chief family; and Abdallah, son of Mambrino, sired Rysdyk's Hambletonian. To show the descent of these two heads of the chief trotting families, to demonstrate their closeness in blood, and to trace them in the direct line to their common source the following tabulation, or "genealogical tree" will suffice:

It will be seen that while Mambrino Chief traced directly in one line through his sire, Mambrino Paymaster, and his sire, Mambrino, to Messenger, Hambletonian was in a somewhat remote degree inbred to Messenger; besides the line through Abdallah and his sire, Mambrino, he traces to the head of the "tree" through his dam, the Kent Mare, whose dam as One Eye, daughter of Bishop's Hambletonian, son of Messenger. The dams of Mambrino Chief and Abdallah were mares of unknown blood, and the possible influence of those unknown mares in giving her sons the trotting force they had should not be ignored. But these are merely historical considerations, not matters for practical consideration for the breeder to-day.

Mambrino was a bay horse foaled 1806, bred by Lewis Morris, Westchester County, N. Y., and was by Messenger, out of a daughter of imported Sour Krout. He never raced, and was so little valued that history loses trace of him for part of his career. He died in Dutchess County on or about 1831. He was a large, coarse leggy horse, with well-defined trotting-action.

His son Abdallah was bred by John Treadwell, Salisbury, Long Island, and was foaled in 1823 by Amsonia, trotting-mare of unknown blood. He was an unattractive rat-tailed horse, of vicious temper, and was little valued at any time. So lightly was he thought of in Orange County, so a writer states, that he wintered one year within sight of the spot where his son Hambletonian afterward lived in honor, with no better shelter than the leeward side of a haystack. Finally cast off, he was given to a Long Island farmer, who sold him to a fisherman for $35. The fisherman tried to harness him, but age had not subdued his ungovernable spirit, and he rebelled with such violence that he was turned out and died of neglect and famine on the sandy beaches of Long Island. This was in November, 1854. He had trotted a mile in 3:10, it is stated, as a four-year-old, and considering that he never was broken, that this was his natural gait, it must be conceded he has some gift of speed.

Abdallah, as we have seen, got Rysdyk's Hambletonian out of the Charles Kent mare, by imported Bellfounder, a reputed Norfolk trotter, and the Kent mare's dam was One Eye, by Bishop's Hambletonian, Son of Messenger. Besides this greatest of trotting progenitors, Abdallah got three trotters with records of 2:30 or better; many of his daughters produced trotters and sires and of trotters, and others of his sons contributed in minor degrees to trotting-lines.

Hambletonian was foaled in 1849, and was that year bought, with his dam, by William M. Rysdyk, of Chester, Orange County, N. Y., who owned him until he died. He was a bay horse of excellent structure, but very plain, the large head and Roman face especially rendered him objectionable to the eye of the lover of form. Mr. Rysdyk never was anxious to show the speed of his horse, but that he possessed fair trotting capacity abundant evidence from many witnesses demonstrates. As a three-year-old he trotted in public in 2:48, and, considering the time and circumstances, it marked him as a great natural trotter. This world-famous progenitor died March 27, 1876.

It calls for a large book of records to tell in detail what the Hambletonian family has accomplished on the turf. I shall only be able to give an idea of its triumphs in general terms and numbers. Forty of the sons and daughters of Rysdyk's Hambletonian family have made trotting-records ranging from 2:17½ to 2:30. One hundred and three sons of Rysdyk's Hambletonian have sired 494 trotters with records ranging from 2:03½ to 2:30. Thirty-nine daughters of Hambletonian have produced forty-five trotters with records of 2:30 or better. His greatest sons are Alexander's Abdallah, Aberdeen Dictator, Edward Everett, Electioneer, George Wilkes, Happy Medium, Harold, Jay Gould, Masterlode, Messenger Duroc, Middletown, Sentinel, Trathmore, Sweepstakes and Volunteer. These are not only great sires, but most of them the head of great sub families. To follow the several lines downward through successive generations with any degree of fullness would be wearisome to the reader not specially interested in speed production, and would involve an array of statistical tables not within the scope of this article. In general terms, however, it may be stated that the Hambletonian subfamily founded by Alexander's Abdallah, Electioneer, George Wilkes, Happy Medium, Harold and Volunteer are the most highly esteemed, because the most productive. Alexander's Abdallah got Goldsmith Maid, 2:13, the greatest of campaigning mares, and he got Belmont, one of the greatest trotting-sires of any age, and Belmont, little less noted, he having produced Nutwood, 2:18½, and Wedgewood, 2:19, both renowned on the turf and in the stud. George Wilkes was a king of the turf in his day, and to-day holds a higher rank as a trotting-progenitor than any other horses living or dead, if we except Hambletonian himself. He is the sire of more turf performers than any other horse, and his sons evince the same speed-producing power. The other sons of Hambletonian just named are in varying degrees less famous, but they are all esteemed equine kings.

Mambrino Chief, the head of the family that ranks next to that of Hambletonian, was foaled in Dutchess County, N. Y., in 1844, and was got by Mambrino Paymaster, son of Mambrino, from a mare whose blood lines are lost in the "mists of the west." She produced also Goliah and the Livingston horse, trotters of respectable capacity, and whatever her blood may have been she added to that of Mambrino Paymaster a quickening and fructifying element. Mambrino Chief was a fast trotter. "He was never in the hands of a trainer, yet he could trot in 2:32, and doubtless in the hands of a trainer could show 2:20 far more easily than many of the great trotters of our own day." Mambrino Chief got six trotters that made records of 2:30 or better, the most renowned being the famous Lady Thorn, 2:18½; twenty-three of his sons sired seventy-five trotters, and fifteen of his daughters produced nineteen trotters. His best sons were Woodford Mambrino, 2:21½, Clark Chief and Mambrino Patchen, brother to Lady Thorn. The blood of Mambrino Chief, like that of the Clays, American Stars, and, it may be said, all other trotting branches, has reached its greatest triumphs when blended with that of Hambletonian and his sons and daughters.

The Champions, a sterling line of less note, are also descendant from Mambrino, son of Messenger.

The Clay family of trotters was founded by Andrew Jackson, a trotter of high class in his day. He was a son of Young Bashaw, son of Grand Bashaw, s Barb imported from Tripoli in 1820. Young Bashaw's dam was by the race-horse First Consul, and his granddam was by Messenger. The dam of Andrew Jackson was a mare of unknown blood that, it is said, both trotted and paced. Andrew Jackson was foaled 1827 at Salem, N. Y., and died at Knightstown, Pa., in 1843. His most noted sons, as trotting-sires, were Henry Clay and Long Island Black Hawk, and some of his get were creditable performers. From Henry Clay we have the line of sires known through several generations by the name of Cassius M. Clay, and two other sons of Henry Clay, besides the original Cassius M. Clay, are known as sires of trotters. Cassius M. Clay, 1st, got George M. Patchen, the most famous horse of the Clay line and founder of a valuable family.

Other noted sires of the Clay line are Cassius M. Clay, 2d; his son American Clay; Harry Clay, son of Cassius M. Clay, 2d; The Moor, and his son Sultan, etc. The dam of old Henry Clay was a Surrey, a Canadian trotting-mare of unknown blood. The whole Clay family has been charged with a lack of stamina, a charge unduly pressed and exaggerated, and some theorists imagine they find an explanation in the blood of Surrey. Be this as it may, Clay blood as an auxiliary to Hambletonian strains has produced the grandest results.

Long Island Black Hawk was a trotter and a sire of trotters of some merit. The best line from him is through the great Iowa horse, Green's Bashaw, grandson of Long Island Black Hawk. The dam of Green's Bashaw was a half-sister to Rysdyk's Hambletonian, she being out of the Charles Kent mare by Bellfounder.

The next noted family of trotters, the Black Hawks, frequently called Morgans, properly originated in Vermont Black Hawk, a horse whose breeding has never been satisfactorily established, and is still seriously questioned. The generally accepted version is that he was got by Sherman Morgan, son of Justin Morgan, a pony-built horse of unknown blood, from whose loins came an excellent class of road-horses. The descendants of Justin Morgan had the showy, trappy gait, conformation and other characteristics that find their counterpart in certain Canadian families, and after duly weighing all the facts presented as to his history, I think the most reasonable conclusion is that he was of Canadian descent. It is of little importance, however, as his family (excepting the Black Hawk line, if that line really does belong to it), the Morgan family proper hold no rank as a trotting-race, albeit they were good, stylish, useful horses for the road and every-day uses, without the qualities essential to prominence on the turf.

Vermont Black Hawk, the true progenitor of the so-called Morgan family of trotters, was foaled in 1833, near Durham, N. H., and, as I have said, is represented to be by Sherman Morgan, out of a mare from New Brunswick, Canada. Whatever his dam may have been, and the version just given is of unquestionable authenticity, she undoubtedly played the major part in giving to Black Hawk the degree of trotting capacity—mediocre, it is true—which he possessed. He was able to trot close to 2:40, and his reputed sire, if witnesses speak truly, "could not trot fast enough to go to mill." From Black Hawk comes the Ethan Allen family, the General Knox family, and other less prominent lines. This trotting line reaches its highest plane in the family of Daniel Lambert, son of Ethan Allen. Daniel Lambert must be ranked little inferior as a producer of speed to any horse that ever lived. He is still alive, though over thirty years of age, and has the distinction, since the death of Happy Medium, of having to his credit more trotters with records of 2:30 or better than any horse now living. His family has undoubtedly suffered through injudicious crosses. Had his blood been better reinforced with the Hambletonian strain, supplying certain essentials which in itself is lacking, grander results would have been produced. It is important to note that Daniel Lambert's dam was a daughter of Abdallah, the sire of Rysdyk's Hambletonian, and from this fact, coupled with the knowledge that he is infinitely a better horse than his sire, and moreover far better than any horse of his family, the reader can draw his own conclusion as to what influence his dam exerted in making him what he is.

The other broken and scattered groups descended from Black Hawk need not be noticed in detail, all being of minor importance.

Now I have briefly outlined the origin of the four chief trotting families—the Hambletonians, the Mambrino Chiefs, the Clays, and the Black Hawks. Of course I have left innumerable minor lines untouched, but I can not well complete a sketch of the principal elements entering into the trotting blood of to-day without touching upon the groups of families of pacing origin. In attempting to set aside and classify the families of pacing origin by themselves one can but approximately draw the line of demarcation for it can not positively be asserted just to what extent pacing blood is intermixed in the foundation lines of trotting blood. We can not assert positively that Hambletonian and Mambrino Chief did not carry pacing blood, for might it not have been carried in the one case through the unknown dam of Mambrino Chief, in the other through the unknown dam of Abdallah? I do not say it is probable; I only point the possibility. That the Clay family had a pacing strain is pretty generally admitted; that the Black Hawk family carried the blood of the Canadian horse is strongly probable; so that in grouping the chief families of pacing origin together, I can not say that none other than these had pacing strains, but can say that the trotting strains now to be considered certainly proceeded from known pacing foundations.

It is useless to discuss the origin of the pacing gait, for even as horses trotted and as horses galloped, so trotters paced at a period "whereof the memory of man runneth not to the contrary." On the frieze of the Parthenon at Athens the hand of the sculptor left time-defying evidence that the pacer was known in Greece when she was at the zenith of her glory, four hundred years before the Christian era. The bronze horses of St. Marks in Venice were cast (probably about the beginning of the Christian era) in the pacing attitude. During the Roman regime in Britain we are told the ambulatoria was "perhaps the universal and traveling pace of the Romans. Fitz Stephen, a monk of Canterbury, writing in the twelfth century, tells us that at Smithfield, then a suburb of London, on Fridays "shows were held of well-bred horses exposed for sale," and he adds that it was "pleasant to see the nags, with their smooth and shiny coats, smoothly ambling along." In 1558, Master Blundeville, one of the early English writers on the horse, said: "Some men have a breed of great horses, mete for the warre and to serve in the field, others breed ambling horses of a mean stature, for the journey and to travel by the way. Some agsine, a race of swift runners to run for wagers," etc. In the reign of Charles II a great impetus was given to racing, and continual importations of eastern blood flowed into England. The race-horse was forming as a breed, and took the first place in the affections of Englishmen. Before the overwhelming tides of desert blood the pacer gradually became extinct in England, until John Lawrence tells us, in 1809, that "the people have lost all remembrance of the amble." Indeed, it is the popular belief, wholly untenable, however, that the pacer never was known to exist in England. At the time of the founding of the American colonies the pacer was at least popular, if not esteemed patrician as in the early days; and as the horse-stock of the colonies came chiefly from England, I think it is beyond question that in these importations came the ancestors of the American and Canadian pacer. The horses of Rhode Island, known as "Narragansett pacers," attained wide celebrity in the seventeenth century, and the pacer was the race-horse of the Rhode Islanders and Virginians of the olden times. They were one of the great staple products of Rhode Island at that day, and were largely exported. But in time, as the colonies grew in wealth, the pacer was scattered and crowded out by larger, better horses, a race more acceptably suiting the requirements of the people.

The names of the families of pacing origin most frequently encountered in the choice blood-lines of our modern trotters are the Pilots, the Blue Bulls, the Columbuses, the Hiattogs, the Copperbottoms, etc.

The originator of the Pilot family was a black pacing horse that, according to tradition, and tradition only, came from Canada, and was probably foaled about 1826. He is famous as the sire of Pilot Jr., a grey horse of much merit as a trotter and sire of trotters. The blood of his dam is unknown. He evinced the rare power to get trotters out of running mares, and two of his fastest and best were out of mares so bred. Though he sired nine trotters with records ranging from 2:24 to 2:30, and although some of his sons, notably Baysard and Tattler, have proved successful sires, it is through the triumphs of his daughters as brood-mares that he is most esteemed. Thirteen of these have produced twenty-six trotters with records of 2:30 or better, and among the produce of Pilot Jr. mares are the two fastest trotters yet produced—Mand S., 2:08½, and Jay-Eye-See, 2:10.

The marvelous pacing horse Blue Bull is the phenomenon of trotting-horse history. "A plebeian of the plebeians," got by a horse on whom the atrocious name the family bears, was bestowed as a mark of opprobrium, a cripple with not a line of distinguished blood to lend him worth, from the uses of an ignominious office he rose in his day, by sheer force of merit, to the front rank of trotting-sires. That remarkable horse was foaled in Switzerland County, Ind., in 1854, and died at Rushville, that State in 1880. He was wonderfully fast at the pacing gait, and even after being crippled could show great flights of speed. For several recent years he has figured as the sire of more trotters than any horse that ever lived, and it was only during 1887 that that honor passed from him to George Wilkes. Fifty-two of his get have records ranging from 2:17½ to 2:30. At present, while we can rank Blue Bull as a very great sire of speed, I am not very sanguine that the future will rank him a great progenitor. His own lack of breeding, and the lack of breeding in mares to which he was bred are against the chances of his tribe taking high rank as a family. Still, taking the individual himself (although I regard him as a phenomenal transmitter of speed rather than as a great progenitor of trotters and sires of trotters), it must be conceded that in some respects he was the most remarkable horse of his time. In estimating the rank of Blue Bull as a sire, in his favor it must be remembered that by his own merit he forced himself, under the most untoward circumstances and in spite of prejudice, out of the very depths of obscurity into the front rank of trotting-sires. Rich lineage did not attract to him fleet and pure-blooded matrons. He made his reputation in an out-of-the-way country town, and he got speed with unsurpassed uniformity upon the coldest of "cold" blood. Only two or three of his performers are out of mares of any degree of good breeding, and under such circumstances he transmitted speed so well that for a time he had more trotters to his credit than any horse that ever lived. To say this of Blue Bull is full justice, and only that.

Of the other pacing families mentioned, the Columbuses are of Canadian origin. The original Columbus came from a town in the province of Quebec, "30 or 40 miles below Montreal." From this same mysterious region came St. Lawrence, another Canadian trotting-sire, and to the blood of that district is traced lines in many of our famous trotters. I should like to know the truth as to the original stock of that part of the province of Quebec. That there were there long ago horses of the true trotting gait and instinct is undeniable.

The Hiattoga family traces to early Virginia pacing ancestry. The first noted horse of the line was taken to Fairfield County, Ohio, about 1840, is known as Rice's Hiattoga, and from him the trotting-family of this name is descended. The Copperbottoms, a noted pacing family that figure in many trotting pedigrees, were, like the Columbuses and probably the Pilots, it is believed, of Canadian origin. The original was according to the Trotting Register, taken from Canada to Kentucky in 1812.

Another Canadian family that may or may not have been of kindred blood to those just named, but a family far superior to any other of Canadian origin, is that bearing the name of Royal George. The founder of this line was Tippoo, a horse whose blood is unknown. I quite recently attempted to learn something further about this horse, but like many who have already investigated, I could ascertain little that is new. His son, Black Warrior, got Royal George, and from this line a really good trotting family has been produced.

A tribe that has held a foremost place in turf history as a cross for Hambletonian blood was that of American Star, a horse that flourished previous to and in the early part of the career of Rysdyk's Hambletonian. The pedigree of this horse is extremely doubtful, but he was a totter of some merit. From great numbers of his daughters bred to Hambletonian a goodly number of trotters came, but the family lacked the capacity to transmit speed potently from generation to generation, and its only standing as a trotting line rests upon what Hambletonian accomplished upon its daughters.

Other sources and minor branches of trotting families there are innumerable, but I have touched upon the chief fountains from which came the currents blended in the trotting breed of to-day. Now, after a brief paragraph or two on the subject of the progress in speed made by the trotter, the historical part of my sketch will close, and we conclude with remarks upon the principles on which the trotter is intelligently bred, his general usefulness, and cognate aspects of the subject.

The first recorded trotting performance in America was that of Yankee, at Harlem, N. Y., July 6, 1806. The time was 2:59, but the track was not a full mile. At Philadelphia, August, 1810, a "Boston horse" trotted a mile to harness in 2:43, but the next best performance I find in 1818, and then the time is only 3:00. To estimate the progress in speed made by the trotter in consequence of his being bred for his special purpose we must approximate his extreme speed at the beginning of the founding of the breed. If we take for granted that Yankee could trot a mile in 3:00 in 1806, in contrast with the 2:03½ of Maud S. in 1885, we have a difference of 0:51½ in seventy-nine years. But it would be erroneous to conclude that the extreme speed capacity of the trotter of to-day is over 0:50 to the mile faster than that of the trotter of eighty years ago. Improved tracks, appliances and methods have accomplished much. If we could approximate just how much of the improvement in speed is due to the improved tracks, appliances and methods we could then give to improved blood its share of credit. Guarding, then, against the error of giving all the honor to superiority of blood, let us note step by step the improvement in the extreme speed of the trotter.

From the performances above noted I think it fair to approximate the extreme speed of the trotter previous to 1820 at 2:50 to the mile, in harness. From that date recorded performances are plentiful, and furnish us a safe guide. In 1826 Topgallant went three miles in 8:11 and this sustained speed at the rate of 2:43½ is certainly better than a mile in 2:40. In 1834 the black gelding Edwin Forrest went a mile under the saddle in 2:31½; in 1839 Drover paced in 2:28. In 1844 Lady Suffolk trotted under saddle in 2:26½; in the same year Unknown paced to wagon in 2:23. In the next decade Flora Temple trotted in 2:19½, and in the same decade the marvelous pacing mare Pocahontas went the mile to wagon in 2:17½. The stars of the following decade were Dexter, 2:17½, and Lady Thorn 2:18½. In the next period Goldsmith Maid, 2:14; Hopeful, 2:14½; Rarus, 2:13½, and Lula, 2:14½, represented the limits of trotting-speed. St. Julian trotted in 2:12½ in 1879, but reached his limit, 2:11½, the following year. In 1884, Jay-Eye-See astonished the world by trotting the mile in 2:10, but the next year Maud S., by trotting in 2:08½, set a mark of speed in harness not since approached. The pacer Johnston, by doing the same task in 2:06½, demonstrated that the lateral gait is still the fastest.

But we have been dealing in the performances of phenomenal animals. I will now, by taking the average of the five fastest performances for each decade since 1820, show what may fairly be called the extreme speed of the trotting-horse and his gradual gain in speed since the beginning of fast trotting:

AVERAGE EXTREME SPEED.

1820 to 1830.....	2:42
1830 to 1840.....	2:54
1840 to 1850.....	2:28½
1850 to 1860.....	2:26
1860 to 1870.....	2:16½
1870 to 1880.....	2:14
1880 to 1887.....	2:11½

The question as to what rate of speed the trotter will ultimately attain has been much discussed, and some have assumed to fix the limit. This is the merest speculation. A consensus of public opinion of horsemen in 1860 would have fixed the limit of the trotter's speed at Flora Temple's mark. When Ethan Allen, harnessed with a runner, went a mile in 2:15, men thought it would never be equaled, and the popular opinion certainly was that no horse could do it alone. Only a little over twenty years ago it was timidly that Hiram Woodruff ventured the forecast that Dexter would beat Flora Temple's record; but to-day a gap of eleven seconds is open between Flora Temple's record and that of Maud S., and upwards of one hundred and forty horses have surpassed Flora's performances. In view of the fact that the trotting breed is yet in its infancy, and that the average of extreme trotting speed is steadily advancing toward two minutes, I think it rather absurd that men assume to fix a limit and a time when progress will suddenly cease.

At the outset I explained why I should deal pretty fully with the turf history of the trotter, while still considering him chiefly as a horse whose great value consists not wholly in turf uses, but rather in his adaptability to serve the requirements of the American people. The greater a road or park horse's natural speed is, the greater his value, and it is value we breed for after all. Whatever may be the views of the reader as to the other influences of the trotting-track, he must admit that it has been the chief agency in bringing the American light-harness horse to a point of excellence unrivalled and unapproached by any other breed. The love of the turf is deeply rooted in America as well as in England, and I think this devotion to "the sport of kings" is greatly due to an eminently proper feeling that the improvement of the higher kinds of horses depends mainly upon turf tests. "It is certain," says an old English writer, "that horse-racing was the means of converting the old lumbering horse of this country into the elegant, graceful and pre-eminently fleet animal of the present century." This applies as well to our beautiful trotting-bred horse of to-day. The true horseman deprecates everything that tends to degrade the turf more sincerely and deeply than do the Pharisees, who ignorantly rail against the horse and the test instead of against the men who practice abuses. Excessive betting, and indeed gambling, are undeniably practiced on the turf, but men bet on all affairs of doubtful issue as well. Shall we therefore silence the public voiceless wagers be made on what the verdict of the hallo-box may be? It is absurd to demand that an honorable public amusement, serving as well the production in higher form and value of a great staple of our commerce be abandoned because unworthy men participate therein. Prime essentials of horses in their highest form are speed and endurance, and how can their speed and endurance be adequately tested except by putting them in contest? The farmer who breeds a beef cow, or the coarser varieties of horses for more menial service than between the carriage shafts, contests for premiums with his neighbor at the county fair. Shall his brother who breeds for the speed that is essential to his chosen horse be tabooed for likewise seeking the honor of a premium in his class—a certificate of the triumph of his endeavor to produce an animal of special excellence? But argument on this point is superfluous, for every person of intelligence recognizes the use, and indeed the absolute necessity of the track test. Without it our high type of fleet and beautiful horses of great price would degenerate into a sluggish, lumbering, spiritless tribe of little worth.

The value of the trotting-bred horse has been constantly on the increase, until now the breeding business is a vast interest to which unlimited capital is devoted. That the trotter should be in America a more valued breed than his brother aristocrat, the thoroughbred, is natural. If the thoroughbred race-horse fails to develop the speed, stamina and disposition necessary to success on the turf, he is almost worthless. He is a good racing machine or he is nothing. But on the other hand the trotter, even if he lacks the capacities essential to success on the turf; is still, if bred wisely, valuable. For the family carriage, for the park, for the road, for the farm, his versatile gifts make him profitable, even though he fails on the turf. When I speak, therefore, of the trotter the reader will remember that I refer not always to a racing animal, but to a light harness horse, that is only produced in the best form when trotting bred.

Very seldom has a better test of the relative value of trotting and running (or thoroughbred) horses been offered than in October, 1886, when two great breeding studs, one of thoroughbred, the other of trotting horses, were dispersed under the hammer. At Louisville, Ky., the late John C. McFerran had founded and established the Glenview Stud, which rose to the front rank of "nurseries of trotters." At Jobstown, N. J., Mr. Pierre Lorillard's Rancocas Stud of thoroughbreds, the choicest of the land, is situated. Dispersal sales were held of these famous collections within a few days of each other, and the following averages were realized:

RANCOCAS THOROUGHBREDS.

Average for stallions.....	$6,890 00
Average for brood-mares.....	1,422 27

Grand average for stallions and brood-mares$1,721 62

GLENVIEW TROTTERS.

Average for stallions.....	$12,780 00
Average for brood-mares.....	1,678 00

Grand average for stallions and brood-mares$2,238 75

These prices, it must be remembered, represent the values, as determined by the public in 1886, of the most fashionable blood, and of course either of trotters or thoroughbreds only those bred in lines of blood renowned on the turf would realize prices approximating these.

The very first question confronting the practical man contemplating a profitable business in horse-breeding is: "What is the most profitable horse to breed?" I think the most profitable horse for any man to breed is the one he understands the best. But to the breeder that is not an expert in any particular branch, beyond doubt the most profitable class of horses are those salable for roadsters, for city and general driving. This is the horse that most eminently fits the title "light harness horse." He should be large, say about sixteen hands high, with substance, fair speed, good disposition and beauty. The horse to possess all these qualities combined in one valued whole is produced from trotting blood. If we are not breeding especially for speed we need not of course particularly select the most fashionable blood. In almost any trotting-bred animal sufficient speed for the purpose will be found. The selection should be directed chiefly to securing size, style, docility, form and quality. Still, it is well not to forget that the rule is, the better the blood the better the horse, and the better the pedigree the more money your horse will bring in the market. To breed this class of horses does not call for large expenditures. In almost every county in the land can be found some trotting-bred stallion of good size and individuality available at a moderate fee. Mares suitable to produce the horse we are discussing can be secured at prices not above their intrinsic value; if he breeds a sound, handsome trotting-bred mare to a stallion of equal qualifications there is hardly a possibility that, intelligently managed, the transaction will not result profitably to the average American farmer. Though the time may come when ultra-fashionable trotting blood will not sell for the seemingly fabulous prices of to-day, there is not the slightest doubt that a fine-blooded driving horse of size and beauty will always sell at a price making his production profitable. To the general farmer and small breeder, then, I would say, breed the horse that is the surest always to bring a paying price, for then you reduce the risk of loss to the minimum; then the profit is most sure, depending upon the intrinsic worth of the animal rather than upon the shifting fashion in blood, or the uncertain chances of distinction on the turf. You are breeding for business, not for sport. Select a sire of sufficient size and solid, good color, with trotting action of a high order, well-bred, handsome, and stylish in the family carriage; fast enough for the road; strong enough for all purposes of the farm; with the right, kindly disposition for all purposes of a family horse, and with nerve and speed enough for all the purposes of the gentleman driver. Now, get a mare approximating this standard, and you are in a position to breed the most valuable, the most useful, and the most profitable horse that exists. He will draw the plow, or haul a load to market, or perform any task better, infinitely better, than a heavy, sluggish animal. Then put him in the family carriage and he will challenge the admiration of all who see him floating along in the pride of his beauty. There is satisfaction, enjoyment and profit in this horse, for he is elegant, beautiful, and useful in all places. Such horses are always in demand and always salable at a remunerative price in keeping with the form, size, style, speed, and breeding of the individual. Beauty, size and style are the first consideration in breeding this peerless carriage horse. No matter what the speed or pedigree of a stallion may be, if he has not good size and substance, and does not carry himself magnificently and stylishly, he will not do to breed the ideal carriage horse from. Breeders who can afford to breed for speed alone may patronize fast but undersized stallions, but a small breeder can not afford to do it; and, indeed, I doubt if any one can afford to do it. If a small horse is a phenomenal trotter he is worth something; if his speed is only that of an average horse he is a "losing speculation."

See that you get size ranging from 15:3 to 16:2 hands and weighs from 1,100 to 1,250 pounds. The most profitable horse is within these bounds. The favorite color is solid bay with black points, and lofty carriage and elastic gait are essential. The conformation of the highest type of the trotter is the best, with clean limbs, fine coat, and the general characteristics of good breeding.

It is strange, yet true, that some misguided, but very estimable, people look upon speed (and necessarily good breeding) as undesirable in a horse. If a horse can do anything else well, does it not add to his value to have the ability to draw the carriage fast? One to sell for road purposes for $500 to $1,000 must have a fair degree of speed, and to have a fair degree of speed he must have a fair degree of breeding. So that, while being careful to secure first the size, style and beauty, the better bred your horse is, the more pure trotting-blood you get in him, the better. This may be accepted as an important truth in regard to breeding this grand type of horse. After the requisite size and style is secured, the better the trotting-blood the greater the value of the horse. But while having due regard to speed, size and beauty must be first aims, and they should not be sacrificed to any other consideration. Other things being equal, the fastest and best-bred carriage horse is, of course, the most valuable, so that the wise breeder will seek, while keeping up the physical standard, to strengthen the trotting-inheritance and improve the blood. It is still always well to remember that the men who make money breeding trotters are they who aim first and constantly to breed trotters, and he who would succeed in breeding carriage and park horses will aim first and constantly to breed carriage and park horses. Have a purpose in breeding, and breed true to that purpose.

Breed a mare that approaches your ideal of what the horse you seek to produce should be to a stallion the nearest to that ideal. Breed to a horse of size, substance and beauty, whose progeny demonstrate that he gets size, substance and beauty uniformly, and that they are characteristic of his blood. Breed to a horse that is above the suspicion of unsoundness in any particular. Breed to a horse of good seton and good speed, whose colts are pure and positive in their gait, and breed to the horse that with all these qualities combines a strong trotting inheritance, and you cannot fail to produce horses that will command remunerative prices for the park and the road and be a source of pleasure and profit in whatever sphere they are used.

Although it has often resulted profitable, I do not conceive it to be wise or judicious for the ordinary farmer or small breeder to embark in the business of producing horses purely for turf purposes. But if he aims to produce a turf horse, and still, in accordance with the courses advocate above, protects himself by so selecting breeding stock that the offspring will, whether with speed sufficient for the turf or not, still pay more than the cost of the production, he is certainly not increasing the risks any, and certainly is increasing the chances of very large profits. This involves grading up to the most fashionable trotting blood, while preserving great excellence of structure, which should be an aim with every breeder, great or small, pursued with an energy and enterprise shaped to his circumstances.

To produce a horse with the especial capacity of turf fitness calls for a knowledge of the principles of breeding, an acquaintance with blood lines and their characteristics, and a familiarity with the qualifications necessary in turf horses, their production and development, which few men have the opportunity of acquiring. Breeding for trotting speed is a special, and it may be said professional, line of animal production, and unless a breeder be a very close student of the subject, with a thorough mastery of the records and of all theories and practice of breeding, it will be wise for him to leave the production of horses, the profit in which depends on their fitness for the turf, to those whose special business it is, and who are specially equipped for it. The fortunes of the turf are, at best, uncertain.

Every breeder of domestic animals should feel an obligation to himself to master the cardinal principles underlying reproduction of desired qualifications in stock, and in conclusion a brief resume of these central principles seems in order. I do not propose to deal minutely with the complexities of the subject or to discuss theories, unless a plain statement of certain principles of natural law may be seen to combat or support certain theories of breeding. He who would arrive at sound conclusions on this or any subject should dismiss prejudices and preconceived opinions and follow the truth, no matter to where it leads.

Perhaps the most direct declaration of the true principles of scientific breeding is to say that they are comprised wholly in the law of heredity, and that just so far as any theory agrees with this universal law it is right; but at the point where any theory conflicts with a known principle of heredity, there does it leave the realm of reason and truth, and rest itself in error. Horses, as well as men, are what they inherit, or rather, I should say, the creatures of inherited characteristics and instincts. In the blood of every being is represented the distinctive qualities of both its parents, and through them his four grand-parents, eight great-grand-parents, and so on until, if we go back five generations, we find that he has a line of inheritance to thirty-two distinct sources. In this being the characteristics of one ancestor may dominate; in his full brother the peculiarities of another in the line of inheritance may rule. And so if we investigate we find that every peculiarity, every virtue, every vice, every talent, every weakness noticeable in the living subject of to-day had its counterpart in some degree, if not in the immediate parents, in some ancestor more or less remote. This truth we express in the oft-quoted maxim: Like produces like or the likeness of some ancestor.

It is, then, patent to the mind that the more diverse the inherited capacities of the parents are the less certainly can we foretell what special qualities will be most conspicuous in the offspring. If one special characteristic was noticeable in the parents, the grand parents and the great-grand parents the offspring is infinitely more certain to have that special characteristic in a highly developed form than if some of the ancestors were remarkable for an antagonistic characteristic. It is by the light of this law which gives uniform results in exact proportion to the strength and harmony of the inheritance that we must be guided in breeding, and if we are to succeed this truth must be the foundation on which we build.

Scientific breeding consists in throwing the strength of all the inherited tendencies into one channel, concentrating all the ruling forces on one objective point, and thus aiming at a certain result. If the purpose be to get a draft-horse, it then behooves us to mate a sire and dam of draft-blood that have themselves shown their capability at a draft-horse's work. If we want a running-horse, reason tells us to go to a running-bred stallion with a running-bred mare, and both the stallion and the mare should be animals that have demonstrated their ability to run fast. If either had a trotting-bred sire or dam or a trotting-bred grand-sire or granddam, our chances of getting a phenomenal runner are much diminished, for then the inheritance is not unbroken—it is divided. And the same reason that tells us to get a draft-horse or a running-horse does not desert us in breeding the trotters. We should couple a sire or dam of trotting-inheritance and that are themselves trotters, and we must judge of the merits of the prospective colt according to the trotting-merits of sire and dam the grand-sire and granddam, and so on backward, our chances being in proportion to the strength and unity of the inheritance. If we find trotting and trotting-hred ancestors for four or five generations backward, we can expect success in a measure corresponding to the trotting merits of these ancestors, and especially the immediate ones, and the nearer we find a blood-line broken by the influx of current calculated to neutralize the trotting instinct, the greater is the danger of our colt developing tendencies averse to the steady fast trot.

All the varying types of animals of the same species are descendants of common ancestors. The clumsy, lumbering cart-horse and the fleet and beautiful racer have come to us from a common source. The difference from the original type, or rather the evolution of many types from one, are the result to effect which many and complex causes were contributive. The same variety of animals subjected to different environments, conditions, and uses will through time so change in characteristics that the unthinking would question that they sprang from a common parentage.

A radical divergence from an original type can be effected and, indeed, a variety created, we might say, by developing a special acquired characteristic by exercise and use, and by breeding for the perpetuation and reproduction of that special characteristic. When racing began in England horses were trained and used for the race and then selected to breed for their racing capacity. Thus through a long series of generations the English evolved from the coarse native stock and the Arab a horse essentially different from either, and vastly superior to either in the special use for which the variety is bred—the capacity to race at the gallop. The evolution of the trotting-breed, yet in its infancy, proceeds on the same principle.

The offspring of the first pair in which a special habit was developed would, as a rule, excel at that habit more readily than either of the parents. But as reversion to more or less remote ancestors is a principle in inheritance, the offspring of this pair might inherit strongly the characteristics of their grandparents, in which the special habit for which the breeder is striving has not been acquired. Hence, early after grafting a quality in the blood the transmission of that quality is very uncertain. The chances of reversion to grandparents are much less than to parents; to great-grandparents much less than to grandparents, and so on. The risk of reproducing an undesirable quality of an ancestor is lessened as we breed away from that ancestor. On the other hand, by developing an acquired habit in every generation, and selecting and mating parents possessing the habit or qualification in the highest degree, we gradually fix it as a matter of inheritance and instinct, and in each generation, as we proceed, the certainty of success in reproducing the desired qualification becomes greater and the risk of failure less. If, then, every ancestor for all near (say five or six) generations were trotters, our chances of producing a trotter are very great, but if some of the ancestors were not trotters or trotting bred a reversion to them is possible. The danger of failure to produce the quality we desire increases just in proportion to the number and contiguity of the ancestors not possessing that quality in the inheritance. "Hereditry transmits with certainty only what becomes a fixed characteristic in the race."

The influence of selection in breeding can hardly be overrated, and the breeder who is wise will never forget that the dam is at least as important as the sire. "Selection," says Youatt, "enables the agriculturist not only to modify the character of his stock, but to change it altogether. It is the magician's wand by means of which he may summon into life whatever form and mold he pleases." Darwin, in his Origin of Species, says cogently: "We cannot suppose that all the breed were suddenly produced as perfect and as useful as we now see them; indeed, in many cases we know that this has not been their history. The key is man's power of accumulative selection; nature gives successive variations; man adds them up in certain directions useful to him. In this sense he may be said to have made himself useful breeds." How important, then, it is to make our selections accumulative; to at every cross accumulate an additional inheritance of the quality we seek to reproduce.

That acquired habits or capacities are strengthened by development and use is undeniable, and equally undeniable is it that by disuse acquired habits and capacities are lost. Darwin declares that "as modifications arise from and are increased by use or habit and are diminished or lost by disuse, so I do not doubt it has been the instincts." A very striking exemplification of the truth of this proposition is furnished in the history of American horse breeding. The case is so directly to the point and so interesting, that I here transcribe the account as published years ago:

In Abbeville District, S. C., in the last century, Mr. Richard A. Rapley was a large breeder of thoroughbred horses. He was an Englishman, and brought over a number of the most fashionably-bred stallions and mares that could be found in Great Britain. His taste and fancy led him to prefer the race-horse for all purposes of life on his estate, but he never trained or raced any of them. Believing in blood as he did, he had a great herd of pure-bred animals that had never seen a race-course. He kept up his fancy for many years and through several generations of horses. At last the attention of racing men was called to this elegant stud of pure-bred animals, and numbers of them were selected and tried, but with all their purity of lineage and superior elegance of form, they were found not to be race-horses. The inheritance of speed had been neglected till it was lost for want of use of it.

To sum up, the following propositions may be accepted without qualification as principles that govern the transmission and reproduction of special qualities in all the animal world: (1) Acquired habits and instincts are transmissible and become hereditary. Therefore (2) habits of action may be created and established by training and use, and these habits become an hereditary instinct in the descendants of the animals in which they were established. (3) This hereditary instinct is increased, intensified and strengthened by development, and is therefore transmitted by developed animals in an increased and intensified degree. (4) On the other hand, by non-development and disuse the instinct becomes weakened, and finally, in a series of generations, is lost.

I need not point the application of these principles in the business of breeding trotters. Their essence is, breed the trotter from parents that are trotters individually and trotters in inheritance.

Many superficial writers on the horse, trotter and runner, treat him simply as a machine, and forget that he has a mental organization. That the disposition to trot fast and the disposition to run fast are just as much hereditary instincts as is the disposition of the pointer-dog to point, no intelligent, thinking man will deny. I do not for a moment under-rate the duty to be performed by the physical organization, but just as the muscles governing the fingers, the wrist and the arm of the writer obey his will in tracing the letters of a word, so do the muscles of a horse controlling the use of his limbs obey his will. Hence speed of any certain order is primarily a mental quality—an instinct. The physical structure is the machine, the will the motive power, and each is a mutual necessity. The trotting horse that can trot the fastest and the farthest is the one that has the strongest trotting instinct combined with the most perfect physical organization. While without the physical ability, the instinct will not enable the horse to perform, neither will the most perfect form and structure make a trotter without the instinct to trot. The idea, then, that an animal of a certain form, with no trotting inheritance, is desirable to breed from, for trotting speed is clearly fallacious, and he who advances it must forget the supremacy of the mental over the physical organization.

Notwithstanding this, it is no less the duty of the hour to breed for high form and speed. I think in the constant striving after speed alone, the essentials of form, size and finish are being grievously overlooked. They may perhaps be overlooked without ruinous consequences to the breeder of turf horses, but he who would breed for the more solid purposes of every-day use and to meet an every-day market, cannot overlook them and succeed.

I have not set down these fundamental principles of breeding with the purpose of touching any but the great central truths with which no successful breeder can be unfamiliar. I have in this article merely sought to mark, by tracing his history and pointing his fitness for the every-day uses of the American people, the place the trotting-bred horse holds in the equine world and the claims he has on the regard of the people of the nation. I am convinced that the American horse is the best type of the equine race, the most practical and the most valued. His importance to our commerce, the wide range of uses he serves so well, and his peculiar excellence and beauty in the places which no other type can fill, are reasons sufficient that the American light-harness horse and the intelligent methods of his production should hold a foremost place in the business of the agricultural classes of the nation.

A Great Day at Hartford.

As will be learned from the following account, the day when the $10,000 purse was decided at Hartford, deserves a high place in the records. Three races, which it took fifteen heats to decide twelve of them on that afternoon:

HARTFORD, Conn., Sept. 5.—Over ten thousand people were present at Charter Oak Park to witness the great $10,000 race. The weather was fine and the track very fast. The unfinished race, of which three heats had been trotted, Protection winning two and Gean Smith the third, was also completed. Gean Smith, to the surprise of the backers, captured the fourth heat in 2:18½. Protection won the next heat and race in 2:19½.

The first regular event of the day was the 2:33 class trot. Cleon was the favorite, selling at $70, field $40.

When the horses got off for the first heat, Elda B dashed to the front. Cleon came on again, but could not go by Elda B, who won by two lengths in 2:22.

In the second heat Cleon at once went to the front, although B. B. Custer tried very hard to collar him. Cleon went out and went under the wire winning easily. Elda B. just got inside the flag. In the third heat Mabel S. came up to the front and beat Cleon in. The fourth heat was taken by B. B. Custer, which split the race all up and the hotshots began to hedge, which made the betting very brisk. Cleon, however, was game and took the next two heats and race.

Although great faith had been put in Guy for the $10,000 race, and a great deal of money had been placed on him, he was shot out in the first heat, to the intense chagrin of his backers. In the pools Guy sold for $200, White Stocking $150, T. T. S. $110, Thornless $65, Spofford $50, Kit Curry $40 Pilot Knox $10.

As usual Guy acted badly in scoring and it took quite some time to get the field off. The word was finally given to a good start, but Guy broke badly and did not strike a trot and was distanced, as was Pilot Knox, in 2:18½. Spofford, Kit Curry and T. T. S. fought all the way down the stretch, but Spofford won by a head from T. T. S.

They started very evenly in the second heat. Kit Curry went to the front at the quarter and opened up quite a good deal of daylight. Then White Stockings had a try at her, but broke, then Kit Curry won the heat by nearly two lengths. Time, 2:19½.

In the third heat Kit Curry seemed to have everything her own way, but Spofford collared her in the homestretch and won by a head in 2:19½. Spofford then went on and won the fourth heat and race in 2:18½.

The 2:27 class race was postponed until to-morrow. Darkness won the first heat in 2:22½. For Friday a special race has been arranged for Guy, who is to try and beat his own record of 2:14½. The free for all race has been declared off. The records were lowered in all three races to-day. Summaries follow:

Billy Wright, an English jockey on Mr. Stokes' ranch near Laramie City, was thrown from his horse while vaulting a hurdle recently, his head coming in contact with a spike which protruded from the hurdle. The spike penetrated about an inch into his temple, and it is presumed that he will die from the effects.

Steamboat Racing.

The following account of a race between the two crack boats of the lower Mississippi, will be read with interest, and there was another of still earlier date which raised great excitement on the upper river. We cannot recall the year, but it must have been in the fifties, and at the time the main business of the stream was done by boats running from Galena to St. Paul. The Nominee was the crack boat and she belonged to the regular packet company, of which Orrin Smith was President. The competing company was managed by Captain Harris, an uncle of Ben E. Harris of San Francisco, who was determined to have a boat which could take the horns from the pilot-house of the Nominee. There was not time to build one, but a fast Ohio River boat was for sale, the ——— Newton. We have forgotten what the pro-nomen was, but the Newton part is certainly correct. When she was brought up the river she stopped at Sabula to "wood." This was done by boats going up the river taking a flat in tow on which the wood was piled, towing it up the river until the wood was transferred, when she was floated back. The Newton went away at such a racing clip that the flatboat was likely to be run under, and the speed had to be slackened until the load was taken from the bow. The amount wagered was reported to be $5,000 a side in the main match, though in every town more or less was ventured.

The Nominee was the greatest favorite, especially in Galena, and a few who saw the flatboat incident went there to get their money on. No one paid much attention to an old stern-wheeler that laid at the Galena levee. She badly needed painting, and presented a strong contrast to the handsome packets, resplendent in white and gold, which were entered for the race. The lines were cast loose at the same time on the Nominee and the Newton, the old stern-wheeler leaving some minutes later. Caleb Cope could be traced on the pilot house in plain letters, and she was a strange craft in that part of the river. This was not an unusual occurrence, so that her departure so soon after the racers awakened no comment; and that she had any connection with the race none dreamed. Slow work turning around the sharp curves of Fever river, and the seven miles which intervened between Galena and the Father of Waters, was as tedious a prelude as the scoring of a large field of trotters, or the starting of a score of two-year-olds. But from the smoke pouring from the chimneys and the bustle in front of the furnaces it was evident that there would be no lack of steam when the time came to use it. The stipulations were that passengers and light freight be taken on at the different landings, and it was not long until the part which the boat with the Quaker name was to play was known. She would run alongside the Newton, take her passengers and freight, land them at their place of destination, receive what was there for the Newton, close the gap and transfer the load. This was not all. Going up she took the wood-boats in tow, relieved them of their wood and placed that on the lower deck of the Newton while she was going at her best. It was a decided "scoop," giving an advantage which would overcome a big difference of speed. If our remembrance be correct, however, a subsequent trial proved the Newton the fastest at an "even hitch."

Since writing the above we learn from Captain Harris that the full name of the boat was the "West Newton."

The greatest steamboat race that was ever run in the world was that which occurred in June, 1870, from New Orleans to St. Louis, between the Robert E. Lee and the Natchez. The latter was built at Cincinnati, was commanded by Captain T. P. Leathers, and in June of the above year made the fastest time on record from New Orleans to St. Louis, 127½ miles, in three days, twenty-one hours and forty-eight minutes. The Robert E. Lee was built at New Albany during the war, and was towed across the river to the Kentucky side to have her name painted on her wheel-house, a matter that was deemed prudent in those exciting times. She was commanded by Captain John W. Cannon, who died at Frankfort, Ky., in 1882.

There was great rivalry between the boats, and when the Natchez made her great run, Captain Cannon determined to beat it. He stripped the Lee for the race—removed all parts of her upper works which were calculated to catch the wind; removed all rigging and outfit that could be dispensed with to lighten her; engaged the steamer Frank Pargoud to precede her a hundred miles up the river to supply coal; arranged with coal-yards to have fuel flats awaiting her in the middle of the river at given points, to be taken in tow under way until the coal could be transferred to the deck of the Lee, and then to be cut loose and float back. He refused all business of every kind, and would receive no passengers. The Natchez returned to New Orleans and received a few hundred tons of freight and a few passengers, and was advertised to leave for St. Louis, June 30th.

In the afternoon the Robert E. Lee backed out from the levee, and five minutes later the Natchez followed her. The whole country watched the race with breathless interest, as it had been extensively advertised by the press, and the telegraph attended its progress along the river at every point. At all the principal cities—Natchez, Vicksburg, Helena and Memphis—people from many miles were present to see the racers pass, and the time of passing was cabled to Europe. When Cairo was reached the race was virtually ended, but the Lee proceeded to St. Louis, arriving there in three days eighteen hours and fourteen minutes from the time she left New Orleans, beating by thirty-three minutes the previous record of the Natchez. The latter steamer had run into a fog and grounded between Memphis and Cairo, which delayed her more than six hours. It is said that 30,000 people crowded the wharf, the windows and the house-tops to welcome the Lee on her arrival at St. Louis. Captain Cannon was tendered a banquet by the business men of the city, and was generally lionized while he remained here.

It was estimated that more than $1,000,000 changed hands on the result of the great race. Many of the bets were withdrawn, however, on the ground that the Lee had been assisted the first hundred miles of the trip by the power of the Frank Pargoud added to her own, and many steamboat men have ever since regarded the Natchez as the faster boat of the two, but think she was outgeneraled in the race by the Lee. There was so much adverse comment afterward by the press that there has been no attempt since to repeat such a performance.—St. Louis Globe Democrat.

CATTLE.

State Fair Stock Notes.

It has seldom fallen to my lot to have attended so profitable a meeting as that of the present Agricultural Society of California. The State Fair should be a strictly representative and educational gathering; each breeder of thoroughbreds should see what his brother breeder is doing; the experience of the many should aid each individual. There are few nowadays who can sit patiently and be outdone by their neighbors; they find it pleasant to be in the front rank—and profitable too. "Getting there" is a favorite expression, and the effort is well exemplified at the present time.

The State Fair has given occasion for nothing except the utmost approval. The showing has all round been above the average. Take into consideration that the fairs of California are not a display of fat cattle as in the British sense, of animals, which are ready as a rule to walk from the show to the shambles. Some of the herds which are now on exhibition have been but just removed from off the grass; the bulls, as in the Page case, having run with the herd. How are we to judge such animals? Here we have another example of American good sense. It is this—the plan of showing sire, dam, calf and sometimes the grand-dam should the opportunity offer. This gentleman's ranch is in Colusa county. He exhibits a very fine three-year-old Durham bull, Counsellor, 73,503; bred by J. F. Scott & Co., Illinois, sired by Commissioner, dam Beauty's 2d Maid by Barrow Bates. This is very fine breeding—he shows it in form, size, color and skin. He has very excellent and "beefy" points. Maytook, a one-year-old bull, and Cavalier, a bull calf, have all the qualities which in time will make up into rarely good animals. The latter's mother is to be seen, and a beauty she is—4th Belle of Antelope, 6 years old by 3d Duke of Manchester 47,993. A full sister to 3d Belle of Antelope, and shows by her form that Mr. Peterson has spared no pains, time or money in his earnest efforts to obtain the best. He shows eight bull calves, all of his own breeding, and two heifer calves, both very promising. His yearling's herd is far above the average, and our standard is a high one. A two-year-old out of 5th Belle of Antelope, sired by Mr. G. W. Hancock's bull, pleased me greatly. I shall endeavor to obtain a record of the Bates' blood in California for readers of this paper.

Those who have had the greatest success in developing finely formed cattle and horses, adopted the principle of closely watching each animal; of pairing them, with a view to increase the finer qualities in the right parts of the animal. Producing a calf, foal or lamb which resembles its mother in having her bad points can only be guarded against by obtaining a sire who has these points in the highest degree of perfection. Should the bad points be in common, what would two or three generations show us?

There is a small showing in the sheep and goat department. What they lack, however, in number is amply set off as regards their quality. F. Bullard has a very good collection of Spanish Merino; so also has J. Roberts, who exhibits Fernando and five of his lambs. J. H. Glide and Andrew Smith show some fine Shropshires, the latter has a number by Royal Duke, out of imported ewes. Mr. T. H. Harland has brought with him a very heavy and lustrous fleeced buck, Gov. Helen, five years old; a number of his progeny are on the ground, and take after him in a marked degree. Julius Weyland presents us with a few of his excellent ewes, two years and over; their wool has made a good growth since shearing time, it is long, silky, fine and heavy.

The Merino's are of a full, smooth and fine fleece. The oiliness of the wool is good. "Why have you those coverings on the poor things?" we asked, as they panted and panted. Because the people would pull out the wool and spoil the fleece. There has been a good growth since shearing time. At the pavilion there is an exhibit of Humboldt county wool, it is of an extra fine texture and oiliness, fibres long and even. This county has always been well adapted to sheep, cattle and horses. The two former, however, seem to have claimed her as their own. The specimens of root crops are excellent also, and the onions equal to any ever displayed. The potatoes are well grown, solid and healthy in appearance, with clean, full-eyed skin. The Humboldt red is a nice-looking and freely-growing potato.

Their fourteen samples of butter are a credit to the county. It is carefully packed in an ice-box, and is worthy of a high reward and careful inspection. Mr. Waldron, when talking over California generally, mentioned that he had received the intelligence from Petaluma that Mr. Wilkins had placed the butter record of the Pacific Coast as high as 12,000,000 pounds. Mr. Wilkins has arrived at this conclusion after a series of careful and elaborate researches.

The Jerseys of W. C. Smith, Florin County, have a good butter and milk record, and are an admirable lot. Martha of Florin 45046, Sire Lawgiver, dam Irene of Strasburg, 2,889. Vene's record for butter is a large one; her dam was Ina, 3d sire Imp. Hector of Plymouth Rock. Martha is a very beautiful yearling heifer, bred by her owner. Irene, her mother, 12 years, is a magnificent specimen of the Jersey. Her family is of the best.

Mr. Smith's bull, King of Yerba Buena, was bred by Mr. Pierce, sire Ada's Perrot by Perrot out of Ada Kate. Imp. 5,637, I. H. B. (24,374 S. H. B.)

His dam is Queen of Yerba Buena, 34,871, by Silver Cloud's son, out of Mon Plaisir of Yerba Buena Ranch, 12,622, Imp.

The calf, sister to Martha, is beautifully formed. I have rarely seen a prettier or more perfect head form or skin. Mr. Smith has on his ranch another sister to Martha, Digo Baker, two years old, whose record is 14 gallons of milk and 13 pounds of butter in 7 days. The bull calf, Black Bart, by Law Giver, dam Dido Baker, is greyish in color, and good all over.

Mr. Colter of Stanislaus shows his bull Earl Mameluke, 7,087. Dropped 1880. Sire Victor of Yerba Buena. The Victor family has a fine butter record, dam Milbrook Pride of Yerba Buena, whose daughter Milbrook Pride 2d, at 2 years old tested very high in seven days milking.

Earl Mameluke was bred by Henry Pierce of the Yerba Buena Ranch. His head, eye, chest and skin are very good, back and loins fair, buttock better, color dark, tail good.

A noted breeder said to me to-day "I am glad some one is seeing the breeders and hearing what they have to say for themselves," it has been a work of love, but should be followed up by an inspection of each gentleman's ranch and herds.

Mr. Bridgeford of Colusa county has a very admirable collection of Durham cattle. His bull Mazurka Dude, Vol. 34, bred by M. Wick, is a splendidly flanked bull, beefy and with excellent length and depth. Color all that could be desired, his head is very good, ribs full, brisket good.

Manunga, by El Medico, 59,730. Dam Merica. Vol. 27, page 749. Eye very bright and full, head, brisket and chest far above the average, body and ribs full and rounded.

Prime beef points all that could be desired, a calf from this cow and a yearling with herself form a beautiful lot. She has a sweepstakes look about her—good milker. Bred by Page brothers, Sonoma county.

Lady Jane, sire Ardria Jackson, 28,418. Dam Lady Oxford. Vol. 16, p. 260. Sire Prince Tom No. 7,150. "Young Mary" blood shown in this cow. Calf one month old. Beautifully finished behind. Head, brisket and chest very good, loins extra good. Bred in Illinois.

Manunga 2nd, sire Catchpenny, dam Manunga. Perfect head, body and ribs very good, color also; in fact, he is all over a very perfect yearling.

Manunga 3d, sire Counsellor, (Mr. Peterson's) as a calf is more promising even than her G. D. Manunga was Mr. Bridgeford deserves encouragement at the hands of his brother breeders.

On the morning of the Stallion race, took a drive around the track. It is very well laid out, and the whitened fence adds greatly to the spectators power of observing a race. The parade took place but a little time after, and was unequalled by any hitherto held in California; as the line of horses and cattle appeared there was nothing heard but exclamations of delight. It was an opportunity too good for the writer to lose. With coat off he set to work and had a fresh examination of the cattle exhibit in "the open." Many of the animals showed up better than when within the small compass of the show yard. If California continues to produce such stock as this there is doubtless a future for the cattle business which her most sanguine friends can scarcely realize. The absence of any unpleasantness, barring the great heat, was a matter for congratulation; the attendance was very small, a base ball match with some Indians drew a much larger one. Breeders must wait and hope for a turn of the tide, and we prophesy a strong one when it comes. In a few years time there will be the greatest herds in America on this coast. Already indications are present that buyers will be plentiful, and stock will receive the care and treatment which alone can improve and sustain the various breeds.

The calves of those cows which have been introduced from the East, seem to have made extraordinary growth, and in one or two years' time any man of moderate means who can afford to make a purchase of a few thoroughbreds, can increase his stock and his means safely and speedily. There is a look of evenness; a look of "meaning business" about the owners and their herds which greatly pleased me; in fact, seldom have I seen a better averaged lot of animals collected in show form in a new country. A meeting of the horses and stock in the centre of the race track and the inspection of these by a number of qualified judges invited from other States for the purpose, would lead to a union among cattle-men, and an interchange of experiences and courtesies which could not fail to be beneficial to the interests of breeders, and to a further spread of practical and useful information.

It was pleasant to meet Mr. Shippee, the president; his cheerful greetings and white umbrella were ubiquitous. "You may call me a crank, but I must have my umbrella!" And no wonder, when Monday touched 105 degrees in the shade.

The most overworked and the heaviest handicapped man on the course was Mr. H. M. LaRue, Jr., a son of Mr. H. M. LaRue, judge of the racing. The small oven-like structure in which this gentleman presided and endeavored to enter the names of stock while conversing with several people, and wipe the drops of perspiration and desperation from his brow, should be an inducement to those in command to provide a cooler place and a small staff of assistants.

The luxuriously living Berkshires of Mr. Andrew Smith almost succumbed to Monday's nor' west wind. Redwood Duke 1336 S., imported winner of fourteen blue ribbons and five sweepstakes, has a fine reputation, and seemed determined to rest upon it, for no persuasion could induce him to leave the position of a groaning, grunting mass of recumbent pigghishness.

Redwood Lass, with her three month's litter of eight, was a bright, active and pleasing family. Redwood Lass II. is a large and very well shaped sow, her weight must be 550 pounds. Mr. Smith shows many good ones, but none so good as this. She is extra good.

Close to the swine come the Durham Shorthorns of Mr. Jacobs. He shows three very fine bull calves. A yearling bull by the Czar promises to make a good record.

The bull Oxford Duke 53,048, calved March 5, 1883, bred by Mr. S. T. Dunlap, Galesburg, Ill. Dam Xylopa by grand-son of Grand Turk, 19,907, has a very nice cow. The bull is Oxford Duke 2d, and is shown by Mr. Jacobs, who also shows a heifer calf by him which is a beauty of some promise. Four heifers by this bull Oxford Duke 2d are very like him and seem to have been bred true to every point he has. The cows Mattie Miller 38th, 39th and 40th are of the same blood and have all good qualities. Another, Rose 17th by Oxford Duke, is a very good representative for Mr. Jacobs to have chosen. The habit of allowing his bull to run with the herd is one which I have found not uncommon. This is wrong. The bull ought to be kept up. Mr. Jacobs' representative informed us that his bull Oxford Duke has been running out with 150 cows. We hope that the condition and appearance of this fine animal will be of a much higher order next year.

Monday was Pioneer Day and there was an attendance of forty-five of the Sacramento veterans. So hale, hearty and interesting a group lent to this day a greatly added interest in the writer's eyes. It is usual for the State Agricultural Society and the Sacramento Pioneers to exchange courtesies on all festive occasions. The directors placed their stand at the service of these gentlemen, and hospitality of a generous character accompanied the act.

Mr. Chiles of Davisville, Yolo county, shows his bull Kirklevington Oxford Count, 36,723, 4 years. Head good, fine shoulders and loins, deeply bodied and well rounded, wants a little more make up behind.

His cow Itallie, 4 years, Vol. 30, p. 488, is a good animal. A calf of his cow Flora 16th is a very promising animal, very well shaped, particularly behind, its sire is 3d Kirklevington Oxford Count. Burnetta 4 years, and her calf are also shown, the latter is very pretty with good color and well modeled form.

Senator Stanford's representative, Mr. Bnell, was constant in his attendance on the very fine herd of Holsteins which is under his care. My last look at the finely formed bull Nadine Vieman was when his black and white skin was having the evening soaping and donching. He appeared to think that his skin could bear it, but experience had taught him to keep his eyes shut. This bull is three years old, by imp. Wiebren, dam bred by Peter Cootes, dam by imported sire and dam. This bull could, and we think should, have been sold at Nevada last fall. A fair price for such an animal would be the means of allowing farmers to gain a knowledge of this valuable and beautiful breed of cattle. There is no prettier sight than a band of Holsteins under the shade of our large American oaks. They are good milkers and can at any time be fitted for the butcher. We cannot have with any animal milk and beef condition together.

Mahomet of Palo Alto is a 2,200 pound bull, 4 years old; well built before; body and ribs good; skin and markings good.

A Feb. calf of last year is worth looking at; and Capeador by Minella Prince out of Jacob Witt's imp. Minella is the representative of an excellent milk stock. This yearling bull we like very much.

Other yearling bulls are Susto by Minella Prince, dam Maggie Alpha 2d; Duke of Palo Alto, Zorra-Selo; promising and well formed.

The cow Pansyne was bred by Jacob Laan, North Holland. Imp. May, 1884; a very fine specimen of the Holstein-Friesian. She has proved herself a good milker, as are many of her blood.

This is the cow which has been entered against Mr. Frank Burke's Kyeless, Sylpha and Ontarrette. I will have a complete report of this contest next week. Mr. Burke's Ontarrette is a two-year-old, and gave 19 lbs, 4 oz. on the first morning of the milking test. These cattle will give a good yield of milk—it is not so rich as that of some other breeds, but if one or more of the family is set apart for special milking purposes there can be no doubt about the owner having a fair quantity and quality of milk. If for beef, feed for beef, and watch your easily fattened and butcher-pleasing animals.

Another 2-year-old, Josie Lyle, 4456, was a magnificent specimen of the milker.

A 2-year-old cow, Ledo, sired by Wiebran Vieman, is worth closely observing; as also are Zarentine, Clarissa and Pietje Piersma—(Heeg Friesland.)

Two calves by Mahomet of Palo Alto are well shaped, and two yearling—Mecox and Zorritta. The latter, sired by Minetta Prince, is a fine specimen of his produce.

In the pavilion, things were quite as lively on evenings in their own way as upon the course during the day. I shall remember two exhibitors of the name of Shaw with much pleasure.

The concert at the Capital Park for Sunday evening was attended by a large number of residents and visitors. I should think that eight thousand people were in attendance and the entertainment provided by Mr. C. A. Neale, conductor of the First Artillery Band, was of even a more excellent order than that which has been rendered nightly and daily with real success.

Silver Medals for Berkshires.

TO BE OFFERED BY THE AMERICAN ASSOCIATION.

In order to encourage the breeding of improved Berkshires in the several States of the Union the American Berkshire Association offers a medal of pure coin silver to the owner of the best recorded Berkshire boar, and a like medal to the owner of the best recorded Berkshire sow bred in any given State and exhibited at the fair of said state in 1888.

All competing animals must be recorded in the American Berkshire Record, and the record of their ownership as filed in this office must agree with the ownership at time of entry for these prizes. The awards must be determined by the authorized committee, judge, or judges of the State Fair where the animals are exhibited. The premiums will be paid on the presentation to this association of the certificate of the Secretary of the fair making the awards, giving the names and record numbers of the winning animals and same also of the competing animals.

A Cow Tournament.

Among the exercises of the recent gala week at the capital of Texas was an exhibition only seen in Spanish-American countries or in the States and Territories that were once part of the Spanish-American domain. This was a tournament by cowboys at lassoing wild cattle. These men ride on horseback into an enclosure where were a number of such beasts, and with the lasso each in turn tried his skill in "roping" an animal. The steer at full speed was to be caught with the lasso, thrown down and tied as if for branding, and the victor was the man who could execute the work in the shortest time.

Twenty cowboys entered for the contest, the winner accomplishing the feat in 47 seconds. The longest time consumed by any of the contestants was 2 minutes 94 seconds. In the course of the exercise two of the cattle were killed outright and three badly hurt. The sport was witnessed by a vast crowd.—New Orleans Picayune.

The first year that a heifer gives milk is very important in determining its after value for the dairy. It will pay to stimulate milk production in heifers, and try to keep it up as long as possible, for the effect of such treatment in future years. A heifer that does not, after good feeding respond in liberal production of milk and butter is presumably not worth keeping as a cow, and should be fattened as soon as possible.

Not every person is capable of teaching a heifer to stand quietly to be milked, says the Live Stock Record. In this education the operator must be steady, calm, strong-minded, and yet delicate in manipulation. No heifer should be milked in an open yard until she has been taught to stand quietly. If she had been handled from the time of a calf, comparatively little nervousness will be displayed. When the heifer finds she will not be hurt very little difficulty will be experienced thereafter.

A correct knowledge of the principles of butter and cheese making could be dispensed in California by having at each State Fair an educational department where butter and cheese makers could be seen at work, and be consulted by our farmers as to their methods. By an act passed by the New York legislature and approved by the governor, the dairy commissioner is directed to employ expert butter and cheese makers, not exceeding five in number, whose duty it shall be, under his directions, to examine and inspect butter and cheese factories and the methods employed therein, and to attend such agricultural fairs, institutes, meetings, and conventions within the State as shall be designated by the commissioner, to impart therat information as to the best methods of making butter and cheese. Five thousand dollars have been appropriated for the purpose. On or before December 15th next the commissioner must report the number of experts employed under the act, together with their compensation and expenses, and must include the whole in his annual report. Another appropriation of $2,500 has been made to the State Dairy association to be expended in holding a number of dairy conferences in parts of the State to illustrate butter and cheese making.

Unjust Accusations.

Some of the San Francisco dailies are accusing the managers of the State Fair with the gambling and other vices which are carried on in Sacramento. It would be equally fair to charge the directory with the extreme heat which prevailed for one week of the exhibition as to hold them accountable for transgressions of the law outside of the park and pavilion. Further than this. The fairs have been so well managed in the past, and with an increase of vigor and general thoroughness this season that it was positively certain a very large concourse would be attracted, larger than ever before. Big crowds are powerful magnets to draw those who desire to make money legally or outside the law, and therefore as the directors got up an exhibition which was sure to bring big crowds, they are to blame. No crowd no gamblers, no fakirs, no thieves, no prostitutes, ergo a fair which was so weak in its conception, so poorly managed, so inferior in every way that few would attend, is the kind to hold. Those of the directors who are citizens of Sacramento may be amenable as citizens, provided it is shown they were in favor of laxity in the enforcement of the law, but to make the whole board the scapegoat to carry the burden of the officers of the law, is too absurd for serious contradiction.

It may be tit-for-tat, as not long ago the Record-Union scored the public of this city for permitting what are virtually prize-fights, to come off without making an effort to suppress them. As the last grand jury gave the case, and the papers which condemn the wrong-doings at Sacramento, give long and full accounts of the "scraps," so that the R-U had some grounds for the attack.

It may be that some of the old residents of Sacramento, with recollections of the lively when gambling houses employed bands of music to attract customers, look at these things with more tolerance than is commendable, that one of the twelve members of the board of directors of the California State Agricultural Society share in this estimate is also "too absurd for belief or comment."

The Fairs to Come—Stockton.

When the announcement is made that the California State Fair of 1888 has come to a conclusion, there will be a dispersion of the clans. Some will start on a march towards the rising sun, others will take a more southerly course, the objective point the busy town which is the metropolis of the San Joaquin Valley. It is not the least surprising that a big delegation should travel in that direction when there are attractions of such potency.
Money makes the mare go, is an adage of such antiquity that its origin is unknown; that it will accelerate the pace of horses, mares and geldings is a truism which does not require antiquarian lore to understand. There are big purses hung up at the San Joaquin Fair. Big sums all around, from the slowest to the fastest classes, and though our information is not from headquarters, we learn that the entries are sufficient to insure fine racing and trotting. There are nineteen purses to be decided in the five days of the fair, and if even a few of them should fail there will be plenty left to fill the afternoons, and were it not for the activity of the president and his coadjutors, it would bother the management to get them in. In order to show the variety, the speed programme is given in this connection.

TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 18, 1888.

1. Running—Pacific Coast—Two-year-old stake; one mile. Closed February 15th, with 7 entries.
2. Trotting—District—Four-year-old stake. Closed February 15th, with 8 entries.
3. Trotting—Pacific Coast 3:00 class. Purse $1,000.

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 19TH.

4. Running—Jim Duffy purse. Free for all. One mile; $400. This purse hereafter to be named for the winner.
5. Trotting—Pacific Coast—2:20 class; $1,200.
6. Trotting—District—Three-year-old stake. Closed February 15th, with 5 entries.
7. Trotting—District—Two-year-old stake; best two in three. Closed February 1st, with 13 entries.

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 20TH.

8. Running—Pacific Coast—Mile and repeat; $500.
9. Trotting—Pacific Coast—2:35 class; $1,000.
10. Trotting—Pacific Coast—Four-year-old stake. Closed February 15th, with eleven entries.
11. Pacing—Pacific Coast—2:27 class; $500.

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 21ST.

12. Running—Pacific Coast—One-half mile and repeat; $350.
13. Trotting—Pacific Coast—Free for all; $1,800.
14. Trotting—Pacific Coast—Three-year-old stake. Closed February 15th, with nine entries.
15. Trotting—Pacific Coast—2:22 class; $1,200.

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 22ND.

16. Running—Pacific Coast—Three-year-old stake. Closed February 15th, with five entries.
17. Trotting—Pacific Coast—Two-year-old stake; best two in three. Closed February 15th, with ten entries.
18. Pacing—Pacific Coast—Free for all; $700.
19. Trotting—Pacific Coast—2:27 class; $1,000.

If that is not a good bill, wherein does it lie? What with the open and district races, the trotting, pacing and running stakes for two, three and four-year-olds, whoever would condemn it must be of an ultra-critical bent of mind. Mr. Salisbury informed us that Director would make his re-debut at Stockton, and should he and the other great guns which have shown so well come together, that one race will justify an attendance for the whole of the week. His last appearance in Stockton was in 1882, at which time he won a hotly contested race of five heats. The following year he made his triumphal march down the circuit, winning over the best horses at Hartford, Albany, Washington, Chicago, Cleveland, Utica, again at Hartford, at Providence, Boston and again at Albany. After his long rest from track work it is likely that his old time speed has been regained, and from what he showed on the Oakland track during the Golden Gate Fair, he has, in all probability, increased in the necessary qualification.

But let us suppose that the various classes as given above will bring together those which have met with varying success, and who could ask for a better layout for five days' sport.

Palo Alto Catalogue, 1888.

A very handsome book is that which has the above title, and is cannot fail to be of great interest to breeders of trotters. A handsome volume of 267 pages, a record of by far the largest breeding establishment for this class of horses in the world. It is evident that great care has been observed in collating the pedigrees, and in this respect it can be said to be as free from errors as it is possible to make a work of this kind. Few errors of any kind, the only ones which are at all serious being that in the record of Anteo, and giving the 1886 record of Elector by Electioneer from Lady Babcock, to Elector by Electioneer from Gilberta. The latter came from bad practice of duplicating names, as the compiler was not likely to know that there were two horses of the same name by Electioneer; the former is a blunder which should never have occurred. In some way the record of Anteo got into the Eastern papers as 2:16½, and time and time again attention was called to it in this paper. In Wallace's Year Book of this year, the time is given correctly under his dam, and also in the Palo Alto Catalogues of 1886 and 1887. This may appear a trivial error to those who are not conversant with the importance of a quarter of a second, but the replacing of 2:16½ by 2:16½ brings Anteo a grade further back in the stallion ranks.

Apart from these there is nothing to give rise to adverse criticising as to the value of the book as a work of reference and as a guide to intending purchasers. But there are features which we do not admire. In previous catalogues the simplicity of the English and American Stud Books was observed, and this elicited favorable comments from the Eastern turf journals. In this volume there is endless repetition pedigrees and records gone over and over again, a bewildering maze of names and figures which can scarcely fail to confuse those who not familiar with the phraseology employed. We have nearly as much aversion to the use of "sired by" as "blooded," when the latter word is used to signify thoroughbred, and this grates on our ear more harshly than any other term used to represent paternity. Equally appropriate to write dam'd for the maternal side, though that is not much worse than "out of" in lieu of from or some other expression not so outré.

Apart from these minor considerations, the catalogue is to be heartily commended. It is a succinct history of the breeding operations at Palo Alto. Some idea of the magnitude of these operations can be obtained from the index which contains 694 names, not one of which that has not claims to good breeding. Every line of fashionable trotting blood has representatives, or it will be better to say every family of any pretensions to trotting capacity can be found in this grand collection.

The Pool Troubles.

We were greatly in hopes that the pool question had been settled, or at least so far towards settlement that parties who favored any firm of pool-sellers would not be subjected to the vindictive malice of those who opposed them. It appears to be otherwise, and lately the warfare has been renewed.

For a number of years people who had a preference for Killip & Co., and supported the firm to the extent of placing business in their hands when it was manifestly to the advantage of the other parties to the contract, have been villified and abused to the full capacity of the men who traduced them. Personal attacks as bitter as malice and mendacity could compass, mean, con-temptibly mean tricks used to prejudice people unacquainted with the true state of affairs, petty persecutions, anything, in fact, to punish those who could not be cajoled or frightened into a course neither manly or honorable.

We are in no sense advocates of Killip & Co., or in the slightest degree antagonistic to other firms engaged in the same business. But we cannot subscribe to the methods which have prevailed in the past and which are likely to obtain in the future.

There can be a fair competition, there can be rivalry even without injurious results, but when it comes to false charges, when the rod of slander and the whip of defaudation are called into requisition, it is neither square strife or honest rivalry. The man who has suffered the most for his adherence to what he honestly believes to be the proper course, has been made the subject of a late charge which had not a particle of truth to found it upon. He was pursued with an animosity, followed with a rancor which would appear incredible to fair-minded men, and from present appearances the warfare of two years ago is to be declared again. We trust not.

Equalize the Weights.

Why should the schedule of weights for race-horses include everything that the horse carries, excepting the whip, while trotters are restricted to what is borne in the sulky? Were it arranged so that a certain specified weight had to be drawn, and that the sulky came in as well as the driver, a fairer scale could be arranged. As the rule stands, no matter how light or heavy the sulky, it must carry 150 pounds, and drivers which are below that figure have to make it up by some kind of "dead weight." Suppose the rule was amended so that 210 pounds was the fixed amount, then a driver of 150 pounds "bodily weight" could use a 60-pound sulky, and a lighter knight of the whip use a heavier vehicle or follow the practice now in vogue. The benefit would be greater to the heavy weights in the profession. Thus a man of 170 pounds could use a 45-pound sulky, and thus get rid of fifteen pounds of his twenty pounds of over-weight.

By fixing the weight at 210 pounds it would, doubtless, give the horses which are now credited with the "best on record" a slight advantage. In all probability Mand S. did not haul 200 pounds when she trotted in 2:08½, and it may be that nearly all of the best on record celebrities are in the same situation. The increase of ten or fifteen pounds is to enable drivers who are overweight to meet the lighter on equal terms.

The claim may be filed that it would give the clerk of the scales unnecessary trouble, but that could be obviated by having the weight stamped on the sulky by the maker accepted unless there were good reasons for doubt of the accuracy.

In any way the weighing-in would be simplified. If a driver is not "bodily weight" he must press the scales at the expiration of every heat, but under the proposed plan, if sulky and bodily weight came up to the standard one, weighing would suffice. Track sulkeys run from forty to sixty pounds. Put it in the power of a heavy driver to meet his competitor under more favorable conditions.

The Fairs to Come—Reno.

It must be born in mind amid the excitement of the State Fair that some are yet in the future which cannot fail to increase the interest. Next week Reno and Stockton will hold their annual festivals, and it is well within bounds to assert that at each of these places superior exhibitions will be given. Superior in every way to previous fairs. Nevada has been making great progress, and her stock of all kinds will compare favorably with that of any section, and agriculture has kept pace with other interests. Lands which were thought to be hopelessly sterile have proved of wonderful fertility when properly cultivated, and the land of sage brush, under the magic of irrigation, becomes as productive as the valleys of the Mississippi or the Wabash. It is a grand stock country, and from its herds and flocks there will be a more certain return, if inferior in value, to that which the "lower levels" have produced to the tune of so many millions. The mountains of silver and ledges of gold-bearing quartz have kept the surface resources in so deep a shadow that a proper realization is of tardy acknowledgement. But slow as has been the awakening to the potency of soil and climate, the admirable adaptation to such a large proportion of the territory, included in the boundaries of the State, for happy homes, the day is not far off when there will be due appreciation.

When so eminently a practical man as Theodore Winters selects that State for his future home, and at the same time with means that would give him the choice of domicile wherever his desires tended; after years of habitation in the most beautiful sections of California, it is palpable that there must be over-balancing attractions. But our readers are now more interested in the fair which will open at Reno next week, than disquisitions on the future of Nevada, and we are pleased to state that from all reports, our former statement that this fair will be far in advance of those of preceding years is amply justified.

The programme is assuredly as comprehensive as can be desired, and though there is a preponderance of racing events, it must be admitted that the "hang tails" are not placed in a more prominent position than their merits deserve. The large number of nominations and entries give promise of "capital sport." More than promise, and it may be called a certainty of exciting contests in every race. While running has the call, it must not be taken for granted that the trotting and pacing will be devoid of interest. So far from that being probable, we have not the least reluctance to enter the prediction that it will be by far the best seen between the crest of the Sierras and the waters of Salt Lake.

That the State Fair of Nevada will well repay a visitor for the trip, no matter how many miles intervene, "goes without saying," and that no one who keeps his speculative inclinations within bounds will regret the attendance we are ready to guarantee.

Fluctuating Championship

Preceding the report of the Grand Stallion Stake at Sacramento there is an allusion to the three great surprises which have set the trotting world agog in the short space of thirty days. We cannot recall anything like it during the many years we have been popularly familiar with trotting affairs. The first was the victory in straight heats of Stamboul over Arab at Los Angeles, and that in time which gave the victor the pride of place over all trotters of Pacific Coast breeding. The second was a double surprise, as Guy Wilkes was thought by the shrewdest experts to have no show over Stamboul. The first heat won by him was a moderate surprise. After losing the second and third, to win the race was astounding. Woodnut's triumphal march at Sacramento was such a genuine surprise that there is no one word in the English language which will symbolize it. Amazingly surprising, an astonishing display of speed thought to be at least two seconds beyond his range—wonderful, incredible, a big handful of synonyms inadequate to conveying the utter amazement of the spectators. That Woodnut is now fairly entitled to the championship of the Pacific Coast cannot be controverted, and until he is defeated or refuses to accept a chance for defeat the crown is rightfully in his possession. Stamboul has beaten Arab, Guy Wilkes has conquered Stamboul, and no matter which way the race of to-day ends, Woodnut must be accorded the title.

Three great stallions, three entire horses which the whole of the East cannot excel. Were Patron in the best possible order and to meet them on any of the tracks of this State he would not be the favorite. Were Phallas resuscitated, placed in the high form which he exhibited when he gained a record of 2:13 $\frac{3}{4}$, he might be the favorite, though our California horses would have hackers.

Three times three for Woodnut, the same for Guy Wilkes, Stamboul too, and nine times nine for the trio which have given such grand surprises.

Mr. Wallaces' Offer.

Elsewhere we copy from Wallace's Monthly a proposition the editor makes to capitalize the Magazine, Trotting Stud Book and Year Book. It is a sensible plan which should meet the commendation and support of men who are interested in breeding trotters. While the property of an individual there is danger of the dispersion of a collection of valuable documents which it would be impossible to replace.

The property is valuable, and from what little knowledge we have the price fixed is reasonable, and likely to appreciate to double the amount in a short time. The plan is feasible, and so clearly stated in the article copied that there is no necessity for extended comments.

Wallace's Register, Year-Book and Monthly.

J. H. WALLACE, IN WALLACE'S MONTHLY.

The labors of many years have brought their rewards. With scarcely a thought of accumulating wealth I find myself in possession of a valuable property. In this property, and especially in its perpetuation, hundreds of men have a direct personal and pecuniary interest. Among all the enterprises in our industrial economies, this one stands by itself. A new breed has been formulated, and, in a measure, called into existence, chiefly, if not wholly, through the agency of the publications of this office. The accretions of wealth resulting from this labor can only be estimated in many millions, and this wealth is distributed from the Atlantic to the Pacific. With an interest so vast, both financially and geographically, we have reached a point, in my judgment, where no one pair of shoulders is broad enough to carry the responsibility; and now, when at peace "with all mankind," I propose to place this whole property in the hands of a joint stock company, to be composed of all the leading and reputable breeders of the country.

The property will be capitalized at one hundred thousand dollars and divided into one thousand shares. Judging by the business of past years, these shares will pay a handsome dividend. There is nothing inflated nor speculative in this capitalization. Every dollar of it is worth one hundred cents. Articles of incorporation will be drawn up and executed in due time, under the laws of this State. The following gentlemen have agreed to act as incorporators and trustees till the regular election of directors:

Gen. B. F. Tracy, Brooklyn, N. Y.
R. S. Veech, St. Matthew's, Ky.
W. R. McKeen, Terre Haute, Ind.
Charles Backman, Stony Ford, N. Y.
Henry C. Jewett, Buffalo, N. Y.
Will B. Powell, Springborn, Pa.
John H. Wallace, New York, N. Y.
N. J. Colman, Commissioner of Agriculture.
L. M. Paige, Hinsdale, Mass.
S. A. Browne, Kalamazoo, Mich.
S. H. Rundle, Daubigny, Conn.
C. F. Emery, Cleveland, Ohio.
Leslie E. Macleod, New York, N. Y.

Besides these gentlemen, many others of equally high character have expressed their approval of the measure and their entire readiness to become members of the association. Indeed, many personal friends among the breeders have not hesitated to raise the question as to the best means of perpetuating the work, and when this plan was suggested every one of them gave it his most hearty concurrence. It is my purpose to distribute all that portion of the stock that will be for sale among the reputable breeders of the whole country, not in large amounts to any, but sufficient to each one to make him feel that he has a direct interest in the property and its profits, aside from his general interest as a contributor of pedigrees. Such a body of men, united in the joint ownership, would most effectually protect the property against the thefts and assumptions of dishonest publishers. But the occasion of all occasions when their united strength would be of the greatest value to the whole breeding interests would occur at the time when I am no longer able to stand at the helm.

The first form in which a joint stock company suggested itself, the Register only was embraced as a possibility for joint ownership, but there seemed to be an insuperable difficulty in attempting to separate the three publications—the Register, the Monthly and the Year-Book. Each one of the three seemed to be a necessity to the others, in its department of the work, to say nothing of the difficulty of keeping the business relations between them separate and correct. After considering the subject carefully and giving due weight to the fact that the Monthly must be left wholly free in its teachings and its criticisms, I concluded that as its views were already well known to all who might come into the organization, its past course might be safely taken as indicating what it would be in the future. Suggestions from friends of the Monthly, whether good or bad and whether accepted or not are always appreciated, but the editor must be left entirely free or he loses all his power. At one time the teachings of the Monthly were not very generally accepted as orthodox, but as the years have passed by those same teachings have come to be accepted as the basis of all truth in the science of breeding the trotter.

The Register and the Year-Book being strictly and wholly technical and statistical, the only element entering into their composition is the search for technical truth. As the law of heredity is coming to be understood, there scarcely remains a shadow of diversity on the great question of how to breed the trotter, and hence there is no vital disagreement in the great field occupied by the Monthly. All opposition has been conquered by the facts, and I can see no reason why an association of breeders should not succeed in publishing a monthly magazine of well-defined character and leave its editors entirely free.

From the first day's work on the first volume of the Trotting Register, I began to realize the need of a channel of communication with the people. Battles followed, and so long as I was dependent upon unwilling publications or hostile ones, it was always uncertain whether the false or the true would prevail in the public mind. Very early in my work, therefore, the Monthly, as it has been and is today, was fully mapped out in all its details, and since the plans of long ago materialized, truth has had at least an equal chance with error; whether in a law, in a theory or in a naked fact. Out of the Register and the Monthly grew the necessity for the Year-Book, and now, with the three together, the whole range of thought and experience in breeding the trotter is covered. In this address to the breeders of the country I will say in conclusion, that as these works are of my own creation, and as they fill the highest place in the needs of the breeders, it is natural that I should wish to perpetuate them, and to this end I ask the active assistance of all interested.—Wallace's Monthly.

VETERINARY.

Conducted by Thos. Bowhill, M. R. C. V. S.

Subscribers to this paper can have advice through this column in all cases of sick or injured horses or cattle by sending an explicit description of the case. Applicants will send their name and address that they may be identified. Questions requiring answers by mail should be accompanied by three dollars, and addressed to Dr. Bowhill, 1523 California St., San Francisco.

The California Veterinary Association.

A meeting of this society was held at the office of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN on Wednesday last. Dr. Maclay, of Petaluma, spoke of a letter which had been received by him from Dr. Carpenter, of Oakland, regarding the formation of a society composed of qualified surgeons only. He considered that those should be admitted to membership who have had experience and can stand a good examination. There is at present a competent Board of Examiners composed of the Executive officers of the society, for the purpose of scrutinizing the character and ability of candidates. Drs. Clinch, Santa Rosa, and Bowhill, San Francisco, were of the same opinion as Dr. Maclay, and said that experienced men would be always valuable men at the society's discussions.

Dr. Maclay called the attention of the Association to his observations on some of the bodies of the affected cattle; it is to be regretted that the Doctor had no opportunity of seeing these animals while alive. The epidemic is now over; it attacked milking cows as a rule, and very suddenly. Death occurred from six to sixteen hours after the attack.

A post mortem examination revealed a congested state of the membranes of the brain. The bodily organs appeared to be intact. In fact there was nothing found which would give a clue to the nature of the poison, whether septic, hotanical or otherwise.

The Doctor gave as his opinion, that the cause was the having half-chewed cornstalks lying about. The hogs chewed the cornstalks, and after obtaining all the nutriment from them, they dropped them on the ground out of their mouths. Instead of the stalks having a plain surface, they now had needle-like projections which had been produced by the pig's teeth. The cattle partook of these masticated stalks, they entered the rumen, or first compartment of the cow's stomach, and remaining there acted as an irritant; in fact the irritation was so great that it produced meningitis through the reflex action of the Pneumogastric nerve.

That the disease was entirely local is to be concluded from the results which have followed the precaution taken by the Doctor. When the corn was stopped and the pigs were taken away, the disease ceased, and has not since appeared. An endeavor to inoculate the poison by cultured germs failed at the hands of Dr. Bowhill, it is doubtful if anything of a septic nature has had to do with the disease.

Dr. Spencer, of San Jose, described a case of anthrax in the horse. It was a very large one and extended from the withers to the croup. He punctured it in twenty places, gas and a dark tarry fluid escaped. The destruction by burning of all animals affected by malignant disease was advocated by Dr. Bowhill and supported by the members present.

Dr. Clinch, of Santa Rosa, spoke on the loco plant and its effect on horses. The obscurity which attends the knowledge of this disease is remarkable. There have been of late, however, some observations recorded. He had made many examinations of affected animals, and considered that the physiological effects of the plant were well marked. The plant causing the affection belongs to the Leguminous family. The oxytropis and astragalus particularly. The animals having partaken of it become heavy, stupid, and in some cases very irritable. The doctor thought that their dilated pupils contracted when he brought them into the sunlight. They will walk against a wall, would go upstairs if allowed. The medulla oblongata becoming implicated by the mechanical pressure of a clot of blood or serious effusion, the doctor gave as a probable cause of some of the symptoms. Pulse on auscultation 26 to 28. Respiration 5 to 6. Their stomachs were full of undigested food, showing a failure of the powers of the animal and its inability to receive any benefit from food in the later stages of the disease. Hence its very emaciated condition. Horses fed on the plant, to the exclusion of other herbage, died. Death was slower when a mixture of food was taken. Sometimes the animal was crazy for ten years.

Dr. Spencer said that oftentimes a horse would even prefer to walk up a bank to remaining on the roadway. There were cases in which the animal fattened and appeared to keep up its condition for a considerable time.

Some business matters then took up the attention of the society, which was afterward adjourned until the next meeting. The society's meetings are held every third month, and their roll membership is increasing.

Accident on a Race Track.

In the third race at the running meeting at Mystic Park, Boston, Sept. 11th, two horses, Sam Keene and Joe Cotton fell, and the other horses ran over them. Keene was killed and Cotton's leg broken. The jockeys were unhurt.—Sacramento Record-Union.

Col. Bruce will sell at the Brooklyn Jockey Club track, September 22d, the entire racing stable of Pierre Lorillard, Jr., including Cambyes, Kaleidoscope, Benedictine and sixteen two-year-olds, including Erie, Hafton, Peril, Fregal and Utility.

Racing at Southern Fairs.

"Be quick and step up, gen'lmen, for here yer are, only ten cents for five rings, and ev'ry stick yer rings yer werry own."

"Now you see it and now you don't see it. Who'll find the slippery pea?"

"Now then, gents, don't get skeered and miss yer chances. Who'll buy the package for five dollars? Yer saw me put a ten in it. Thank ye, sir; please show 'em what they've missed."

A babel, indeed. Such sounds rising high above all others, as their object, money-making, is ever uppermost in men's minds.

An uncompromising plank fence surrounding a sandy patch of ground, a half-mile track full of holes, a gannt edifice purporting to be a grand-stand, some roughly-made loose-boxes and cattle-pens round a portion of the fence, all enveloped in sand and dust—these things constitute the average fair-ground of the south.

To suppose that such an annual celebration indicates a township of much life, or even with the population of many an English village, is a great mistake. Places of six or seven hundred inhabitants, half a dozen stores, and as many bars, rejoice in a fair, but what in the world keeps them going, unless it be the innate love of a Southerner for a "running horse," is past comprehension. At the same time the inhabitants of the district seldom enter a horse, except for a saddle-horse race, and it is left for a few individuals of chronic impetuosity and nomadic habits to bring horses to fill the various races.

As might be expected from the value of the premiums offered—and these seldom run as high as $150—the quality of the horses which compete is not very great. It requires a horse capable of winning a good many of these races to make his expenses; and by the time that an owner has paid the railway fares for his horses, their attendants and himself, his own hotel bill, the boys' wages and feed bill, entries for the races, fodder bill, and the hundred and one items which always crop up, there is no large margin left, even if his luck be good.

The wandering, tree life, however, which it affords tempts more than might be expected to "follow the races," and among them a good many "Britishers." These are mostly young fellows keen on sport, who, though of scanty purse, are anxious to see a horse win a race under their colors, even in so minor a sphere. Some who do it more for the sake of the sport than anything else, and can afford to do so, live fairly comfortably in the hotels, such as they are, but others have recourse to a tent pitched in the fair grounds, or an extemporized shed in the loose box which is appropriated for "saddle and fodder room."

For a young and healthy man who has grown rather tired of the restraints of society drawing rooms, a worse autumn holiday may be imagined than to take two or three good second or third rate race-horses round to these fairs, and to lead for awhile, in the beautiful fall weather of the South an untrammelled out-of-door existence. The society may not be very choice, but it may prove a profitable change. After conversation supported on the slender topics which keep the minds of society people alive, it is a bracing tonic to hear a tough old member of the trotting-horse fraternity descant on the ups and downs of existence, or to hear a man "strapping" a horse for a mere pittance, tell how his horses won sundry races, and what a good time he had over at such and such a place, evidently in the fullest assurance that another turn of Fortune's wheel will place him once more in a position to seek similar amusements.

If a man be not afraid of the proverbial "touching of pitch," much entertainment may be derived from the many who do not know one end of a horse from the other, and yet "follow the races." A mixed lot these are—"fakirs" of all kinds, sellers of the noted soap wrapped up in bills of (very) varying amounts, thimble and pea men, peddlers and hucksters of all kinds, many not above picking a pocket if occasion offer. Not a few have seen better days, of whom some, by no means the most select, are Englishmen of good education.

These people work in gangs. The "boss," often a man of considerable capital, buys the requisite "permits" for them to pursue their more or less rascally callings in the fair grounds and takes a percentage of the money made. Besides this, he keeps a supervising eye on his men, or lends them a helping hand by acting as "bonnet." The position of "bonnet" or "capper" is a very important one to these chevaliers d'industrie—he it is who acts the simple countryman, who guilelessly putting up his cssh, reaps marvelous profits, whereby the unwary are ensnared.

One of the "bosses," an Englishman by birth, was a man of some standing in the city of his adoption and maintained his wife and family in very good style, keeping the nature of his occupation a profound secret from them and his neighbors. His was a particularly smart gaug, by no means too scrupulous, and possessed of deft fingers, ready for anything from picking a pocket to "running a wheel."

Another class, a shade better than these, are the professional gamblers. They pay a large amount for their permit to the authorities and are then allowed to establish their banks in the grounds. At nights they generally run one in the town. Some of them are such shrewd, level-headed men that, if they had chosen to exercise their abilities on an honest calling, they would scarcely have failed to die rich and respected citizens. They vary their regular business by selling pools, etc., but of bookmaking proper there is but little, and as a matter of fact, there never is much outside speculation on the races, and the money value of the premiums is the only thing to be relied upon.

The races at these small fairs are generally "catchweight" affairs, and all power is vested in the judges, though at some of the larger, as at the now abolished meeting at Richmond, Va., some special rules are used; there the races were run under the Maryland Jockey Club Rules. The distances are: Mile heats (two in three), mile scurries or dashes, half-mile heats, and sometimes half-mile scurries. It will be seen that generally the arrangements are primitive and simple. The premiums offered are very small, from fifty to one hundred dollars. The races are, as a rule, run on so villainous a track that no one would care to enter a really valuable horse. Under no circumstances can a half-mile track—and these are almost invariably the distance—be considered quite safe for a horse. The curves are too abrupt, causing danger of a horse falling, even if the track be in perfect order. So on such as these, rough and of such imperfect formation that some quite sharp angles are left, it is no wonder that accidents frequently occur.

Of course no man can afford to take a first-class jockey about with him to such meetings. This and the practice of running at catch-weights keep men on the qui vive to pick up small colored boys, some of whom nature seems to have endowed with a special power of sticking to a horse. The recognized jockey costume is by no means de rigueur, and while most owners have some kind of cap and jacket for the boys, but few take the trouble or go to the expense of fitting them out in the regulation white breeches and top-boots. Some striking toilets are the consequence. A small nigger boy, in racing cap and jacket several sizes too large for him, with a tattered pair of pants, no shoes or stockings, and spurs strapped to his naked heels, is a sight to make a fashionable jockey shudder. These boys, however, have been accustomed to horses since they could toddle, and though utterly ignorant of the niceties of jockeyship, will stay on the back of anything, and after their fashion ride from start to finish.

Some few years ago I started on a tour of some of the Virginia fairs.

My entourage consisted of a trainer, a lad—half groom, half jockey—and a colored boy, three horses and a bull-dog.

The best representative of my stable was a chestnut gelding, Cheroot, six years old. This horse I had picked up by chance, buying him for a hack, but closer acquaintance showed him to be worth training. Not quite thoroughbred, he was a nice, upstanding animal, about 15.3 hands, rather light in bone, but with a great deal of power, hocks well let down, and a very good shoulder. He was capable of doing a mile in very respectable time; and during that season, starting in eleven races he won nine.

My next best representative was Jumping Jimmy, a little brown gelding of just fifteen hands, compactly made, not fast, but able to jump almost anything. The last was Sleepy Sally, the only thoroughbred, but the worst of the lot. She was, by no means a bad one to look at, but a veritable "flat-catcher," for she could not or would not try an inch, except occasionally, when for half a mile she could go with anything.

My bulldog, Jumbo, was a very important factor in our party. The original idea in taking him was as a guard, but, indeed, he served to keep us all amused. Of unprepossessing exterior, white except for a patch over one eye, the other being in a perpetual state of red weakness, he had a most original and trustworthy nature. While quite content to be good friends with every man, woman and child—with a view to stray meals—he was thoroughly determined that no liberties should be taken with my property. Had any stranger tried to make a forcible entrance into the tent in my absence it would have gone hard with him. Jumbo was nearly responsible for the death of one old lady from sheer fright. She apparently was overcome with curiosity as to what kind of an edifice the tent could be, and was irresistibly drawn to put her head inside. Jumbo was peacefully snoring in his usual style on a horse-cloth in the corner, but suddenly waking to a sense of his responsibilities, he made one jump to the door of the tent. He had no further intention of harming her, but the poor old dame emitted one awful yell and fled without daring to look back.

He was a dog of enterprising character, and when off duty, made it his practice to stroll around, making human acquaintances and picking up odd meals; then, having found out and visited everybody worth knowing, he would come back to business with a figure resembling a beer barrel.

I opened my campaign at a small fair, which promised to be and was a "Tom Tiddler's ground" for me, only, unfortunately, the total amount of gold and silver lying about was very small; but of what there was most fell to my share.

I had with me a tent for sleeping purposes. This, if one determines to avoid hotels, is a better plan than sleeping in a loose-box. The latter, till one gets broken to it, is very uncomfortable, the noise of the horses keeping one awake, and in such badly-constructed places as most of these stables are the smell is very unpleasant. In a tent, as long as the weather is fine, one can make one's self very comfortable. Life spent in this way was very pleasant, if not profitable. The programme of a day was much as follows:

With the sun we would get up, and after a rudimentary toilet and the least possible taste of the "crater," to keep out the morning damp, would go over to the stables and see that the horses were fed properly, i. e., had their modicum of oats, about two quarts, and a few mouthfuls of water before their exercise. As the sun was rising, the horses would come out and begin their morning work, while a cigarette or two were consumed to help the appetite. About the regulation work for the horses was to walk for a half-hour, then trot about two miles, and perhaps after cantering a mile they might have a "spin." This, however, varied according to what races they had to run.

Then, while the horses were brought in, rubbed down, had their bandages put on, and were given the rest of their morning feed, we would stroll off to the tent, and after a good "slicing" from a stable bucket and the completion of a rather more elaborate toilet, would tackle the breakfast, which had been meanwhile prepared at the little stove outside the tent. It was not, as a rule, a luxurious meal, but it was wonderful how well even a tough beef-steak will go down when eaten in this al fresco manner.

The remainder of the morning had no particular occupation, but the time passed pleasantly enough in a stroll round the grounds, watching the judging of the cattle and criticising the country visitors, or in a walk about the town. If one chooses to remain about the stables, many absurd remarks might be overheard from the country folks, who kept peeping in at the doors.

Next door to my horses was a trotter of uncertain age and camel-like appearance, who, having probably outlived the triumphs of his younger days, had come South under an altered name to help in keeping the pot a-boiling. This quadruped elicited much admiration, as much to the amusement of his owner as any one else.

"My! Mary Anne, hyar's a rannin' boss. I reckon that boss cost a heap of money." (He might have if he had been bought by the yard.) "Well, now, just look at his clothes." (The aged beast had some bright-colored summer clothing.) Of such remarks there was a lasting fire, as each new-comer looked in.

My faithful Jumbo was also the object of much wonder, and many were the offers I had to match him against sundry canine champions. On the second day of the fair he quieted those who entertained doubts of his prowess, fostered by my rejection of these challenges. A certain "yallar" hound, who prowled about the place, had been the cause of much disquietude to him since his arrival, something in this animal's conduct seeming to create immense wrath in his mind. That morning I was absent, and the object of his dislike came round the corner. With one rush Jumbo bowled him over, and when the dust subsided, a dead hound and a jubilant bull-dog were discovered. After this episode he was treated with the greatest respect, and people preferred to pay court to him from a distance.

Soon after noon would begin our business for the day. Hot work it was for the dogs to race under the scorching sun, and they seemed to feel it more than the human crowd which hustled round the finish of the course. The dust, always abundant, at some places was positively appalling, especially when it was derived from red soil. Then it reduced clothes to a uniform brick-dust color, which under the influence of a shower of rain became permanent. Neither heat nor dust seemed to interfere with the good spirits of the crowd. In fact, the only effect seemed to be the creation of an unlimited thirst, which was manfully tackled.

Varied and wonderful were the vehicles, from a high dog-cart to an humble "steer-cart," this latter a popular conveyance among the "cullud folk"; and not only the vehicles, but their occupants, were miscellaneous. A lumbering, shabby old coach, a relic of the old times, drawn by two gaunt old work-horses, instead of the slashing team of its younger days, would contain a fine old gentleman, shabby indeed, but unmistakably an F. F. V., himself as much as his carriage a monument of past prosperity. A lofty dog-cart, rather the worse for wear among the rough roads, would rattle up with two riotous steeds driven tandem, in reckless fashion, by a young Englishman. It dashes by the tortoise-like steer-cart of old "Uncle Pete," another relic of old times, whose chief regret is that the good times "fore de wah" are gone, even if he be now a free and enlightened voter. The trouble with which he has to grapple is that emancipation and a vote do not feed and clothe him in his old age, as his master would have done. These elements mixed with the wandering tribe of racing men, etc., made a peculiar contrast. The haughty old Southerner side by side with a foxy gambler; a rowdy Britisher cheek-by-jowl with an "old-time nigger," and a small country boy gazing with awe and admiration on a smart Northern yellow stable-lad—all go to help the oddity.

About five o'clock such horses as had had no races would, in the warm weather, be brought out for walking exercise before their evening toilet.

In order to vary the monotony of racing on the flat, several of us formed ourselves into a deputation to interview the judges on the advisability of establishing a hurdle race. After much argument, and by dint of pointing out what an attraction it would prove if a broken neck were the result, they were brought round to our opinion, and to two of us was entrusted the business of procuring hurdles.

No such thing as a "wattle" hurdle was to be found in the neighborhood, so a carpenter was found who proceeded to business by getting some very shabby half-inch plank. He was a man totally impervious to argument, and insisted on making them from his own inherent ideas of what a hurdle should be. When finished they looked more like five-barred gates in delicate health than anything else, and it was obvious then any horse could gallop through them without any danger.

The last day of the fair had been fixed for the "Grand Hurdle Race—gentlemen riders." To make up a good field every horse available, whether he had ever looked over a hurdle or not, was brought to the post, even our friend, the antique trotting-horse. This amiable animal could not be persuaded to execute anything more like a gallop than a species of "double-shuffle." He, nevertheless, proved very useful, for by common consent he was allowed to lead his field the first round, by which prudent manoeuvre each hurdle was demolished in its turn. After this the race resolved itself into a flat race, which a very long man on a fourteen-hand pony won with considerable ease.

The next move we made was farther South, into North Carolina—land of cotton, peanuts and tar; and there we had some very fair sport. The inhabitants seemed to be considerably keener about racing, and got up two or three saddle-horse races. In these they all used very strong curbs, and rawhide whips, and "rode" their horses from post to finish in a way which for a well-trained horse would have been too severe, and with fat, grass-fed beasts was absolutely barbarous. In spite of the proximity of the law-making districts, there was no great amount of the article about the heels of the average native, and this fair was chiefly remarkable for its extreme "froitness" for the gambling and "faking" fraternity. This, combined with the fact that numbers had been largely augmented by some "side show" worthies from a circus which had been broken up, caused a considerable display of pedestrianism; in short, a large number of these gentry were so broken up that they never got home at all that winter.

Here I only had two horses, and had the ill-luck to get Cheroot placed hors de combat for a time by a careless boy, who put on him a saddle with the "tree" broken. This galled his withers badly, and he was some time getting well. An accident also befell Jimmy. I had a bridle which really should not have been about at all, as the reins were rotten, and this was put on him for a race. He was a bit of a puller, and often tried to bolt at the post. During a false start the colored boy on him was tugging at his head when snap went both reins. The boy shot over his tail and landed so flat on his back that the racing-jacket was split from top to bottom. No serious damage was done, and Jimmy was soon caught.

Once more we moved northward into Virginia, to a fair of very recent origin, which had only been founded one year. This, of course, gave it all the charm of novelty to the neighbors, and here a better harvest was reaped by the gamblers and "takirs" than by owners of horses.

The premiums were miserably low, but there was a great deal of "hayseed" about, and the country people proved to be of a guileless nature, willing to "bny soap" at any price. An old farmer, repented very rich, was a perfect godsend; no cautions and warnings sufficed to dissuade him from tasting the joys of all the games with youthful relish. The "ring and stick" people did such a thriving trade that rings went to five cents each.

The weather had now become rather cold, so I sought to get a bed in the hotel. The edifice, such as it was, was entirely occupied by a wandering troupe of Theatians, who, like the rest, were "following the races," and finally I had to be content with a half-share of a bed in a room which contained three beds and six people. Two panes of glass mercifully had been broken, which allowed us some ventilation. The washing apparatus was scanty—one pitcher and a bowl about the size of a sancer—and the pump was a hundred yards down the road! Personally I deferred my ablutions till I could get a stable bucket.

The theatre of the place was a room at the top of the school-house. It was quite small, but, alas! sufficient for the size of the audience which greeted the nomad company each night. Their success on their tour was by no means phenomenal; in fact, they had been obliged to forestall their receipts at this place by borrowing money to make the move. The enterprising man who had lent the necessary cssh was ticket-seller and check-taker for three out of the five nights on which they performed. Their performances were really not so bad as might be imagined, though the absence of the proper amount of scenery led to some rather ridiculous shifts, as for instance the same set having to represent a city drawing-room and a miners' shanty. The small crowd of racing men helped to swell their receipts, for we were all very regular attendants in the absence of other amusements. But, alas! fate was not propitious, and ultimately the company had to walk.

At this fair the trotting element was much ahead in popularity, and the stakes they contended for were more valuable,

This, however, did not render them of a contented mind, for over a question of whether a horse was entitled to compete in the 2:40 class, a tremendous dispute arose between two men. They were old friends, and had slept in the same bed the night before. This did not prevent them from wanting to shoot each other, though ultimately their friends were able to prevent any serious collision.

We were far enough South to be in the region of peanuts, and the stable-boys were, in spite of admonitions continually sneaking over the fence of the fair grounds into a field where a crop had just been cut. A small colored boy whom I had now with my horses, was returning triumphant with a goodly supply when the owner caught him. Then dire was the tribulation! Threats of prison were compounded for a good thrashing, which was efficacious, as the dismal howls testified.

After this meeting the horses were "boxed" for a longer journey, and reached home safely. I had not accumulated a fortune, but had made my expenses and a little to spare, and on the whole I was very well satisfied since I had enjoyed some very fair sport and a pleasant autumn holiday. —Francis Trevelyan in Outing for September.

A Horse With Toothache.

The face of a horse will tell you if he has the toothache; much is denoted by a horse's facial expression and it is deserving of more study than it receives. At times the eye will indicate bounding life and spirit, and at other times depression and languor. Society may twaddle and prate over little hair splittings, while at the door may stand an animal as sensitive, as finely framed and as exquisitely clothed as they, awaiting their pleasure, while suffering with all the patience of a stoic great anguish from a diseased tooth.

Examine a number of horses' mouths, and you will be surprised by the comparison of one horse's grinders with another's. An additional tooth is sometimes anterior to the first molar. This is called the blind or woolf tooth, and by some is looked upon with great anxiety. It is of no known utility, no doubt in the road, and, therefore, it should be extracted. The tooth can produce no harm, save local irritation in its cutting. Some deny this, and claim that the presence of this tooth superinduces blindness, big head, etc. It is nothing but a "remnant" tooth, and can be traced back to the antediluvian horse, when he was no larger than a small dog.

There is no remedy for diseased teeth in horses save extraction, and this should be accomplished immediately by a thoroughly competent operator, as there is considerable danger in performing the operation, both to patient and dentist. Fracture of the jaw, swallowing of the drawn tooth, and quite a number of other accidents have happened the animal during the operation, thereby showing the necessity of skill. —Sportsman (Melbourne, Aus).

The Lease of the Los Angeles Race Track.

W. G. Armstrong, a turfite and horseman of Detroit is anxious to secure a lease of the Agricultural Park of this city. The lease of the present lessees expires on the first of December and there are a number of people who are anxious to become the lessees. This matter will in all probability be decided at the very next meeting of the board of directors of the Sixth District Association. —Los Angeles Tribune.

The National Horse Show takes place at Madison Square Garden, New York, November 5 to 10 next. It is two years since this show was last held, and then it did not give general satisfaction, there being too much aping of things English "you know." This year greater attention is to be devoted to trotters, respectable prizes being offered in fourteen classes. Clydesdales have eight classes devoted to them.

Alex. Wood, a horse trainer at Newmarket, has sent the following suggestion to a London sporting paper as to the more accurate judging of the placed horses in a race:—"He suggests that two judges be engaged facing each other across the course, and, he further adds, none knew better than the late Fred Archer the advantage gained by throwing himself right forward in the saddle at the moment of passing the post, and thus first catching the judge's eye; in fact, I for one believe his colors have been first past the post on many occasions, whilst the horses could not well be divided." —Sportsman, Melbourne, Australia.

Taking the recent victories of Guy, son of Kentucky Prince, the Horseman shows how, for a long time and in the hands of noted trainers, he failed to place a fast mark to his credit, but when Millard Saunders took hold of him, he by different course of training, gave him a well won record of 2:14, and from this as a test, advises all trainers to be gentle, kind, patient and long-suffering with the high spirited horses committed to their care, when they will become willing slaves. "The poet Gray tells us there are village Hampdens and mute inglorious Miltons hurried 'neath the elms in many a churchyard; but, as he added in the application, chill penury repressed their noble rage and froze the genial current of their soul! The Miltons were never discovered and had no opportunities, and so are unknown Goldsmith Maids on many farms, out of sight, waiting some great discoverer like Alden Goldsmith—awaiting some patient handler like Budd Doble—awaiting victory and the crown!"

An ingenious device for controlling excitable horses has recently been invented. It is attached to the brow band of the bridle, and a light but firm cord runs through loops along the reins to the hand piece. In case of fright pull the cord, and instantly the horse is blindfolded. This diverts his attention from the object of fright and puts him into another train of thought. Let go the cord, and the double spring instantly withdraws the blinds from the eyes and rolls them out of sight. The device is not clumsy, and it does not clog in action. Gen. F. J. Herron has tried the controller, and he writes: "I examined this device when Mr. Pearl first made it, and had it tried, and I do not hesitate to say that it is the best contrivance for the purpose ever presented to the public. In fact, I do not know of anything that will take its place or accomplish what it will. That it will work effectively and quickly there is no doubt, and it must come sooner or later into very general use. It is too important an invention to be kept idle, and I hope some enterprising man will secure it, so that the public may have the benefit of it at an early day. There is certainly a sure fortune in this invention for somebody." This we found in several changes, but in place of being a late device was tried more than fifty years ago.

India Rubber Horseshoes.

The proposed substitution of India rubber for metal in the manufacture of horseshoes is based upon various supposed advantages, one of these being that the former enables a horse to go easily over all kinds of roads and rough or slippery ground without slipping. The contrivance brought forward for this purpose is such as to obviate, in one instance, the necessity of using an iron shoe which can be moved momentarily when the horse is shod with an iron shoe. According to this design the shoe consists of an India rubber bottom piece moulded to fit over or around the frog of the hoof, with a ledge or protecting rim rising up the front and around about the level where the nails are clamped the projection having an edge under which a steel band or other appliance can be drawn and nipped tight to retain the rubber shoe. The band is connected by studs, which pass through the heel part of the hoof, this being cut away from the inner side for the purpose, and the stud or studs may work eccentrically to obtain grip or fixing. If the rubber shoe is used with an iron shoe, the frog portion or pad has a front plate and two side wings partially imbedded in it, the projection taking hold under the iron shoe to hold the rubber shoe in place. If the rubber shoe be divided or made thin in the center, a swivel or other bar can be contracted from the rear to reduce the width of the pad so that it enters easily and also expanded so as to fix the rubber shoe in position. —Mechanical News, reprinted in Watsonville Transcript Aug. 30th.

How to Oil Harness.

Take the harness apart wherever it can be unbuckled; give each strap a good wash, using lukewarm water with a little washing soda in it. Scrub well with a scrubbing brush, and be sure that you get all the grease and dirt off. Work well in the hands until soft and pliant, for it is no use to apply oil on dry, horny leather—it will never become soft. After this has been done hang it in a room where it will not dry too rapidly, until about three parts dry. Then apply plentifully on both sides pure cod liver oil—this has more body and lasting quality than any other grease for leather tanned with bark. Besides if you use neatfoot oil, rats and mice will eat your harness, while that treated with cod oil they will not touch. After giving a good coat of this oil, hang up until dry. Then go over them again with the oil, giving them but a light coat of it this time. After that dries in, wipe off with a dry, coarse cloth. For common work harness nothing more is needed, but for carriage harness go over with a sponge and castile soap, and wipe with a dry chamois skin, and you may depend upon it there will be no black to rub off on your hands. —Country Gentleman.

CANOEING.

Oakland Canoe Club.

There were gay doings on the creek last Sunday and Monday, the occasion being the reception tendered the Corinthian Yacht Club by the Canoe Fleet. At noon on Sunday the canoes started in squadron down the creek to welcome their guests. When off Peralta street wharf the yachts were discovered trying to stem the tide off Goat Island; the breeze improving slightly they were soon assembled and coming up the creek, the flagship Spray in the lead. All proceeded together through the drawbridges where the canoes formed line near the club-house while the yachts passed them in procession and then anchored off the south shore. The canoes then gave a very pretty manoeuvring exhibition which was loudly applauded. The afternoon was spent in visiting the yacht and canoe sailing around the basins, and at 6 o'clock all sat down to a banquet in the boat-house. The table was prettily decorated and substantially ballasted. Commodore Blow presided, with Vice-Commodore Harrison at the other end. When the eatables had been disposed of, speeches and songs were in order and nearly every one was called upon for one or the other. Mr. Darneal of the Canoe Club rendered a poem composed by him for the occasion which was highly applauded. An adjournment was then made to the club room where two hours were pleasantly spent in aquatic gossip and social fumigation. On Monday morning after a hearty breakfast, the regatta was opened at 11 o'clock by a tug-of-war between a canoe and a rowboat won by the canoe, then paddling and sailing races, tub and sculling contests, and finally a yacht race won by the Freda. This ended a delightful holiday, and amidst hoarse cheers the yachts proceeded out of the creek on their way home to Point Tiburon.

THE KENNEL.

Dog owners are requested to send for publication the earliest possible notices of whelps, sales, names claimed, presentations and deaths in their kennels, in all instances writing plainly names of sire and dam and of grandparents, colors, dates and breed.

Communications relating to this department should be addressed to BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN.

Whelps.

Mr. Jas. E. Watson's black pointer whelped September 7th, ten, eight dogs (one dog since dead), to owners black pointer, Old Black Joe.

Points of the Bull Dog.

Bull dogs are fast becoming the fancy about San Francisco, but as yet few are to be seen of more than a very low degree of merit. Those who already own such, and those others who may feel like going in for the breed, may with profit study the points of the dog as determined by competent English authorities.

In forming a judgment on any specimen of the breed, the general appearance, which is the first impression the dog makes as a whole, on the eye of the judge should be the first consideration. Next should be noticed its size, shape and make. No point should be so much in excess of the others as to destroy the general symmetry, or make the dog appear deformed, or interfere with the power of motion. His style, gait, carriage, temper and his several points should be considered separately in detail, due allowance being made for the bitch, which is not so grand or so fully developed as the dog. The general appearance of the bull dog, is that of a smooth-coated, thick-set dog, rather low in stature, but broad, powerful and compact. Its head should be very massive, and large in proportion to the dog's size, with an extremely short face; its muzzle blunt, broad and inclined upwards; its body short and well knit; the limbs stout and muscular; its hind quarters should be high and strong, but lighter made in comparison with its heavy made foreparts. The dog conveys an impression of determination, strength and activity.

The skull should be very large—the larger the better—and in circumference should measure (round in front of the ears) at least the height of the dog at the shoulder. The cheeks should be well rounded and extended sideways beyond the eyes. Viewed from the side, the head should appear very high, and very short from its back to the point of the nose. The head may be very broad and square.

The forehead should be flat, neither prominent, rounded, nor over-hanging the face; and the skin upon it and about the head very loose, hanging in large wrinkles. The temples should be very prominent, broad, square and high, with a deep and wide groove between the eyes, which is known as the "stop."

The eyes, seen from the front, should be situated low down in the skull, as far from the ears as possible. Their corners should be in a straight line at right angles with the stop and quite in front of the head. They should be as wide apart as possible, provided their outer corners are within the outline of the cheeks. They should be round in shape, fairly large, neither sunken nor prominent, and in color should be black, showing no white when looking directly forward.

The ears set high in the head, i. e., the front inner edge of each ear, should (as viewed from the front) join the outline of the skull at the top corner of such outline, so as to place them as wide apart as high, and as far from the eyes as possible. In size they should be small and thin, and the shape termed "rose ear" is most correct. The "rose ear" bends inwards at its back, the upper or front edge curving either outward and backward, showing part of the inside fur.

The face, measured from the front of the cheekbone to the nose, should be as short as possible, and its skin should be deeply wrinkled. The muzzle should be short, broad, turned upward, and very deep from the corner of the eye to the corner of the mouth. The nose large, broad, and in color black, deeply set almost between the eyes. The distance from the inner corner of the eye to the extreme tip of nose should not exceed the length from the tip of the nose to the edge of under lip. The nostrils large, wide and with a well defined straight line between them. The chops should be thick, broad, pendant and very deep, hanging completely over the lower jaw at the sides. They should join the under lip in front and cover the teeth, which should not be seen when the mouth is closed. The jaw should project considerably in front of the upper, and well turned up, being broad, massive and square.

The neck should be moderate in length very thick and strong, with plenty of loose wrinkled skin about the throat, forming a dewlap from the lower jaw to the chest.

The chest, wide, round and deep, giving the dog an appearance of a wide chested low-legged dog. The shoulders broad, slanting and deep, very powerful, with plenty of muscle.

The brisket should be capacious, round and deep, from the top of the shoulders to its lowest part, where it joins the chest, and be well let down between the fore legs. It should be large in diameter, and round behind the fore legs, the ribs being well rounded. The belly should be tucked up and not pendulous. The back should be short and strong, broad at the shoulders and narrow at the loins, with a slight fall in the back at the shoulders, whence the spine should rise, forming the roach back. The tail should be short and set low down, much thicker at the root than at the end. It should be round and smooth and devoid of fringe or coarse hair, and the dog should not be able to raise it above the level of the back. Fore legs straight, thick and strong, and should be short in proportion with the hind legs. Elbows should be low and stand well out from the ribs.

The pasterns, short, straight and strong; fore feet should be turned slightly outward, medium size, round and cat-like; hind legs should be fairly large, strong and higher than the fore legs; the coat should be fine in texture, short, close and smooth. The color of the bulldog should be whole or smut, but it is a matter of fancy, and Dudley nosed and black-and-tan bulldogs should be disqualified.

Mr. S. E. Fisher advertises this week some excellent fox-hound puppies for sale. Some are black and tan, and some black, white and tan. They are by Don—Jennie, both good deer dogs.

Elsewhere Mr. W. D. Howe advertises pointer puppies for sale. The youngsters are by Mr. Stewart's handsome and good dog Professor, and out of Mr. Howe's very taking Belle. In breeding they are good, in looks better, and in certainty of possessing strong pointing instinct best. Those desiring pointers will do well to communicate with Mr. Howe.

The California Kennel Club held its monthly meeting on Wednesday evening last at 539 California Street. The field trial committee reported through Mr. A. B. Truman that it had secured the use of some good quail ground in Sonoma County for trial purposes, and recommended the giving of a field trial in the near future. The place chosen is quite free from brush and trees.

The Secretary of the Pacific Kennel Club, Mr. James E. Watson, has established himself on a five acre tract in Berkeley, where he can without stint gratify his predilections for fine dogs and fowls. He has mastiffs, fox-hounds, fox-terriers, black pointers and a clumber spaniel already, with more to come, and also various fancy breeds of chickens. The "squire" aspect of his English character is asserting itself.

Mr. Geo. B. Polhemus writes from his Cerro Alegre Rancho near San Jose, that the pointer puppies out of Mr. Wm. Schreiber's imported Sall, are the finest he ever saw. He says: "The one I have chosen I have named Sallie. She is the greatest pup in the country. I saw her to-day point over twenty times on blackbirds. While we are irrigating they come round thickly and are quite tame. She is a better dog to-day than most well-broken dogs. No man's $500 would tempt me to sell her, as I see in her one that will fill my old dog Bob's place."

Californian fanciers and breeders may note with some interest the transfer of a pointer from San Francisco to Japan noted elsewhere. This city is the nearest and only port from which really first rate setters and pointers can be procured by the sportsmen of that wonderful land of The Mikado. To purchase them in England involves delay and many added dangers in the way of sickness and perils by sea. Dogs sent from California can be carefully prepared and shipped under the care of interested and conscientious steamship officers, to whom personal supervision of them will be a pleasure. Mr. Taniguchi placed his pointer in the immediate care of Mr. Green, clerk of the Oceanic, and in so far as intelligent care can preclude disaster, it is certain that the puppy will reach its home in good condition. A little more enterprise on the part of local breeders might open a good and practically insatiable market to the westward.

On Saturday last Mr. Naosada Taniguchi, resident at Tokio, Japan, took away from this city to his home a white and lemon pointer bitch puppy, whelped on May 14, 1888, by Don-Sall, the latter being the bitch recently imported by Mr. William Schreiber from Glasgow, Scotland. The puppy is well-sized, nicely marked, healthy and very handsome, being particularly clean about the head. In breeding, she is the equal of any pointer. Her sire, Don, being by Garth's Drake out of Jewel by Statter's Major out of Lord Lichfield's Peg. The dam, Sall, is by Brag IV. out of Forest Queen II by Duke II out of Duchess. Tracing the blood lines through the English Kennel Stud Book it is enough to say that throughout the progenitors of Mr. Taniguchi's puppy were of marked goodness in the field, and most of them of great beauty. The growth and development of Mr. Taniguchi's rare pointer will be noted with much interest. Game—quail, woodcock and snipe—is plentiful in Japan, and the owner of the dog is a fine shot and a keen sportsman, as indeed many of his fellow-countrymen seem to be.

Fly-Fishing.

An angler's paradise is this,
Where long-locked willows stooping kiss
The merry water's face.
The very spot to tempt the trout,
Rejoicing in the current's rout,
To feed and sport apace.

The line leaps whirling thro' the air,
And on the ripple settles there
A simulated fly—
A thing of life-like form and hue
That could deceive the fish and you,
How practiced be your eye.

Rare was Apelles' skill, I trow,
When hungry birds would come and peck
His painted grape-filled dish;
More useful far his art who can,
With some well modeled fly, trepan
The quick and cunning fish.

Bul shape you puppets as you may,
They should preserve throughout the play
Motions la'en from the life;
So let the creature drowsing rest,
Then skim upon the water's breast
With changing fancies rife.

Bul see althwart the stream you shine!
A tremor seizes on my line,
Swiftly the reel uncoils;
And as I check its circling flight,
A mighty trout leaps to the light,
And strives to burst its toils.

The buckling line runs out its length,
And only skill offsets the strength
Of anger and despair;
Just as is wooed some coyish maid,
Indifferent now, then half afraid,
Bul won with patient care.

At last the gallant prey gives o'er,
And victor's pride shall heighten more
Its own delightful flavor,
When round the camp-fire's mellow light
I tell the story of the fight,
Warmed by its sizzling savor.

Selby Medal Contest.

The match for the medal presented by the Selby Smelting and Lead Company, representative of the championship of Central California at artificial targets, was shot off on Saturday last at Adams' point. It was open to all residents of the State living north of Kern County, and the expectation was that twenty or thirty experts would meet. At the next contest for the medal, when the cash prizes will be greater, it is probable a larger list of entries will appear. The shooting was good throughout, even though Major Kellogg and Mr. W. J. Fox, two of the best shots at Blue Rocks in the State, did not maintain their positions.

The prizes at stake were the Selby challenge medal, value $100, as first prize, won by H. A. Bassford; second, 30 per cent. of the entrance money; third, 20 per cent. of the entrance money, divided by Major Kellogg and Buckingham; fourth, a magazine rifle, presented by Olsbrough & Golcher, won by W. J. Fox; fifth, a split bamboo fishing rod, given by George W. Shreve, won by E. J. Summerfield; sixth, a pair of Canadian hunting boots, the present of E. T. Allen, won by F. J. Bassford; seventh, a sole leather Victoria gun case, donated by Charles E. Burgans, of Oakland, won by A. L. Donaldson. Only Kellogg and Fox, of the local men, were prepared to take part in the event, while the two Bassfords came from Vacaville, A. L. Donaldson from Fairfield, E. J. Summerfield (late of Michigan) from Crockett, Contra Costa County, and F. H. Buckingham from the Bassfords' stronghold of Vacaville.

While waiting for others who were expected, a pool shoot was indulged, at 15 single Blue Rocks, $2.50 entrance, H. A. Bassford taking first and Summerfield second. Score: H. A. Bassford 11, F. J. Bassford 7, Summerfield 9, Buckingham 8, Kellogg 7.

At 5 pairs Blue Rocks, $2.50 entrance. H. A. Bassford 7, F. J. Bassford 9, Summerfield 7, Buckingham 7, Kellogg 3, Fox 8.

Manufacture of Primers.

All of the operations incident to the production of arms and ammunition are of the utmost interest to sportsmen, and there can be no more absorbing diversion than to study the great plants at New Haven, of the Winchester Company at Hartford, of the Colt's Company, and at Bridgeport of the U. M. C. A hundred marvelously involved applications of machinery may be seen at either, all of which are the inventions of American mechanics. Perhaps as interesting as any are the appliances for making the millions of primers which have practically supplanted the old-time percussion caps of the fathers. Their manufacture is fully described in an exchange which says that the first stage is the rolling out of the sheet metal of which the caps are made. The metal used is of copper or some of its alloys; this is rolled into narrow sheets which, after having been accurately measured so that it shall be of a proper thickness, is passed through a machine, which rapidly cuts the sheet into blanks of the proper size. These are then carried to a machine which draws them out into proper lengths, and in the case of the regular percussion caps, such as the single and double waterproof, splits and corrugates them at the same time. The splitting is done to prevent the cap from flying when struck by the hammer, as would be the case if the cap were left unsplit, while the corrugation is done, partially, to assist in picking up the cap. After the caps are drawn to proper length they are carried to an automatic machine which trims them of exact length; they are then carried to a tumbling barrel or cage. After being rubbed and tumbled over each other for some time they come out with smooth edges, ready to be loaded with their proper quantity of fulminate of mercury, which is placed in the cap in a room where nothing else is done. The caps are placed in an iron plate pierced with holes, in some instances a thousand in number. Each cap is so placed that the charge of fulminate will readily drop into the cap from the charging plate. The proper quantity of fulminate is placed in a plate that has a number of holes bored in its surface, the plate being of proper thickness and the holes of such a size that by placing the plate upon a flat surface and spreading the damp fulminate upon its surface and brushing off the balance, the proper charge is left in the charging plate. This plate is then placed upon the one containing the empty caps, and the charge falls into the caps, which are then placed under a press which puts over the charge of fulminate the water-proofing which protects it from the wet. They are then packed in tin boxes and, after being properly labeled and made into packages, are ready for the market.

The primers for paper and brass shells are made in much the same manner, with the exception that the fulminate is put into them dry in the same way that it is put into the other caps, and then are carried to a press that puts out a piece of tin foil and places it over the charge. The purpose of the foil is the same as the water-proofing, to protect the charge from damp. In the case of the anvil primers, after the foil has been put into the cap, the anvil, which is a piece of brass and corresponds in a measure to the nipple of the muzzle-loading gun, is put into the cap. These anvils are punched out of sheet metal, and are placed in the primers in the same way that the charges are placed in the ordinary caps, namely, the primers are placed in a plate right side up, the anvils are dropped into a plate corresponding to the under one, and the two are placed in a press, where the anvils are pressed into their proper places. These plates are pierced into one thousand holes and these are separated into four divisions of two hundred and fifty each, so that after the anvils have been secured in place the plate has only to be placed over a funnel, under which are placed four boxes to receive the contents of the plate, which is then reversed and the primers fall into the boxes, thus ensuring a full count, and saving time and trouble.

The primers are carefully inspected during every stage of manufacture so as to insure a perfect article. By some manufacturers the primers are accurately sized after manufacture, that every cap may fit snugly the hole in the base of the shell, thus preventing any escape of gas around the primers, a thing which sometimes occurs in shells which have been used a long time or which may have had the primed pocket enlarged by the de-capping tool. This is an occurrence much more common with the Berdan primers than with the more modern primers with a fixed anvil. In the earlier patterns of American brass shells the anvils were formed in the bottom of the primer pocket which was pierced with three holes to allow the flash to ignite the charge, an arrangement that caused some difficulty in the removal of the old primer, and often resulted in the spoiling of the shells, as the sharp instrument used in the extraction of the primers would often pierce it, and in the operation of de-capping the point of the tool would remove the sharp point of the anvil and thus cause miss fires. In order to remove this objection a smaller-sized primer of the same pattern as inroduced, and the hole for ignition was placed in the centre of the primer pocket. This arrangement added to the life of the shell, and in a measure assisted in the increased sale of the metallic shells. Then came the use of a primer of the same pattern used on the paper shells which contained the anvil in the primer, after the pattern of those in use on the English shell, with this advantage—that the anvils were a part of the primer, and thus prevented the loss of the anvil, thereby rendering the shells useless. Then came the shell with a removable anvil, admitting of easy extraction of the old primer and the use of a cap of regular shape, but the breaking of the anvils of this type of shell, and the increased call for reloadable shells for rifle practice caused the invention of the present type of primers with a fixed pointed anvil, which is replaced with every new primer, thus reducing the possibility of miss-fire to a minimum.

The Making of Steel Barrels.

A manufacturer of shot guns describes the operations to which steel is exposed in passing from the ore into the finished state with such accuracy and evident knowledge in the premises that his word may be received as authoritative when he says:

I cannot amuse your readers with particulars of petty twistings, etc., whilst stating how steel is manipulated, because the process is so simple, and, consequently, free from risk of spoiling by having its nature destroyed. I have decided on three qualities of steel according to the gun required, but I have assured myself of the genuine good qualities of each grade. The point as regards steel is to know its tempers, etc., which can only be gained by lengthy experience, and cannot well be explained in black and white.

To commence with, I will take the highest quality of steel for making a best "Three-Bell" barrel. The chief factor is Swedish iron, which is melted from the purest ores obtainable in that country, and made up into bars; and during the whole process of its manufacture till it reaches the bar state, it has no contact whatever with any gaseous fuels, but is entirely treated with charcoal. These bars are then manufactured into steel, the ingredients and other particulars of which, to make it suitable for a shot gun barrel, are embodied in my specification to the manufacturer, who is under bond not to divulge information, or supply such material to any other person. It is rolled and cut off into round bars of eighteen inches each and delivered to my works, a certificate of quality accompanying each consignment.

Immediately on their receipt they are again pickled (having once so been treated by the firm who produce them whilst in the ingot state—when they are also broken and tested for accuracy of temper) for the purpose of removing scale and exposing any imperfections.

I then take the round steel bar and put it into a furnace which is so built that the required heat is speedily obtained; it is then ready for rolling. The mould has no actual contact with the fuel, and, therefore, has no liability to acquire dirt, or dross, nor is its temper susceptible to alteration.

The rolls used for this purpose contain eight sections, each so tapered that they gradually bring the bar down to the form of a gun barrel. The bar is then withdrawn from the furnace and put through the whole of the eight sections, of the rolls, thence taken to a steam hammer and hammered with blows at the rate of 500 per minute in order to intensify the nature of the steel, and at the same time bring it to the shape and size required. Bear well in mind that the whole of this rolling and hammering is done at one heat. (a) From the speed at which this hammer works the steel is prevented from losing much of its heat, in fact, even when it has had sufficient hammering it is not allowed to become suddenly cold but is placed into an iron box and covered with charcoal, made air-tight, and let remain till it has gradually cooled down. It is then taken from the box and put through a straightening machine, which also exerts an enormous pressure on the barrel and straightens it. From this machine on to the setter, who with a hand hammer sets it true. It is then taken to a self-acting drilling machine which drills three at a time; after drilling it is then rough and fine bored and again set straight, a steel mandril is passed through it to test the accuracy of the boring and truth of setting. From thence it is placed in a self-acting turning machine which turns it to a copy. Each barrel passes through three of these machines, which gradually turn it down to the finished size, after which the mandril is removed, and sent down for provisional proof. This concludes the process of producing a barrel of the first grade.

The second, or "Two Bell," grade barrel is made from a material not quite so high a class of Swedish pig, but nevertheless a very good quality, and undergoes the same treatment as does the highest grade.

The third grade barrels, which are manufactured to compete with the cheaper figured irons, are of a mixture of Swedish and best English pigs, and, like the higher qualities, are also made to my own specifications. (The steel for this quality was, until about two years ago, supplied by the firm who manufacture Damascus.)

I receive this quality (or "One Bell") steel in billets of 7x2½ round, which are pickled, etc., in a similar manner to their more costly brethren.

The billet is then taken to a machine and its ends faced true, after which it is placed in an automatic drilling machine which drills two at a time, and a ½ hole is drilled through each. It is then ready for the rolling process. The roller places the mould in the furnace, and, having heated it to a sufficient extent, commences the operation which is known as hollow-rolling. The roller being equipped with a quantity of various sized steel mandrils, takes the mould from the furnace with one which is the same size as the hole which has been drilled in the mould, and passing the mould through the large sections of the before-mentioned rolls, the form and shape of a barrel is partially given. The elongating of the metal under the pressure of the roller results in the gradual expelling of the mandril. Then another and smaller sized mandril is used, and so on till the mould has become de facto a barrel, when it is placed in a charcoal box and treated like the other grades. This process is considerably less expensive than the other two.

Having followed the manipulation of the plain quality thus far, we will go with it to the straightening machine and setter. Being hollow-rolled it is unnecessary to take it to the drilling machine, so it goes straight to the borer, and it is finished off the same as the other qualities.

Messrs. S. E. Fisher, Hermann Heath and Charles Heath, of this city, killed a forked horn near Novato on Sunday last, that weighed 110 pounds.

Many prominent sportsmen from other cities have been in San Francisco during the week past. Mr. I. L. Miller, of Bakersfield, called on Monday morning, and a little later Dr. I. W. Hays, Jr., of Grass Valley, dropped in. Both are leaders in field sports in their respective sections.

An Army Horse's Fate.

The fate of the army horse is generally a sad one. Having taken to a military career he gives up all hopes of enjoying any of the benefits which some of his kindred enjoy who wear away their prime in dragging a truck or dray. These latter often are cared for by considerate masters in return for years of good, reliable service. Not so with the army equine. He can look forward to a few years of luxurious living and fare. But let him become sick or disabled and he is cast adrift in a cruel world, and he ends his days in misery. The gallant, prancing steed that bears the Colonel's manly form around the parade ground may in a month be crawling along some by-way in Tar-Flat, dragging at his heels a decrepit old soap-fat wagon.

As soon as it is discovered that a horse is unfit for duty, a request is sent to the quartermaster to have the animal condemned. A horse does not have to be disabled to be condemned and branded I. C. (inspected and condemned). If he will not stay in the ranks, if he is nervous at the sound of music or the whistling of a shot, he is condemned. Horses get soured in disposition, too, as if they repented of entering the service and wanted to get out of it.

There are instances, preserved as legends in the army, where horses have been rewarded for long and faithful service by being cared for in their old age. A notable case is that of the equine survivor of Custer's fatal battle with the Sioux on the Little Big Horn. The clouds of smoke had passed up the ravine, the last savage whoop had long ceased to re-echo among the hills, and Miles Keogh's horse at evening was the only living thing that moved along the battle-field where the corpses of poor Custer's boys in blue were strewn. Here was the animal discovered lingering over the body of his dead master. Miles Keogh's horse, by a special department order, was sent to West Point, where he was to pass the rest of his days in comfort, and with no harder work to perform than to discover in what part of the lawn the greenest and dewiest grass grew. But such an Elysian existence is not the common fate of the horse that expends his energies in Uncle Sam's service.—N. Y. Letter.

CONDITIONS.

All trotting and pacing races best 3 in 5, to harness, unless otherwise specified. Six to enter and three to start, but the board reserve the right to hold a less number than six to fill, by the withdrawal of a proportionate amount of the purse. Entrance, ten per cent. on amount of purse, to accompany nomination. Any horse distancing the field will only be entitled to first money.

American Association Rules to govern all trotting, pacing and running races, but the board reserve the right to trot heats of any two classes alternately, or to trot a special race between heats; also to change the day or hour of any race if deemed necessary.

A horse making a walk over shall be entitled to only one-half of entrance money paid in. When less than required number of starters appear, they may contest for entrance money paid in, to be divided as follows:

65% to first 33% to second.

In all entries not declared out by 6 p. m. of the day preceding the race shall be required to start.

When there is more than one entry by one person, or in one interest, the particular horse they are to start must be named by six p. m. of the day preceding the race.

If in the opinion of the judges any race cannot be finished on the closing day of the meeting it may be continued or declared off at the option of the judges.

Non-starters in running races will be held for entrance under Rule 36.

Racing colors to be named on entries.

In trotting races the drivers shall be required wear caps of distinct colors, which must be named their entries.

These last two rules will be strictly enforced.

All races to be called at 2 p. m., sharp.

Entries to all the above races to close with the Secretary at 11 P. M. Saturday, Sept. 15, 1888.

All entries for exhibits must be made prior to September 25th. It would be better in order to get good accommodations for stock to notify the Secretary as early as possible the number of head and kind you intend to exhibit, so we can arrange for them. Although we have a hundred boxstalls on the ground, we find it necessary to build more, on account of advice from parties intending to make exhibits. Send for catalogue.

A Demonstration of the Shooting Qualities of the "L. C. Smith" Gun.

At the Cleveland Cartridge Co.'s tournament, held at Cleveland, O., from September 13 to 16 inclusive the "Smith" gun won first money in every class. It also won nearly two-thirds of the entire amount ($24,000) of cash prizes, and championship trophy for the best average in the 90 class. In the 90-class it won the 1st, 2nd and 4th moneys; in the 80-class it took the 1st, 3rd, 4th and 5th; in the 70 class it took 1st and 2nd, with the 1st and 6th in the 60-class, making a total winning nearly four times greater than any other gun, of either foreign or home manufacture.

We think this a most excellent showing, as there was seven different makes of guns used by the nineteen contestants in the ninety class.

Running Races in two moneys, seven-tenths and three-tenths. In all of the above races, five or more paid up entries required to fill, and three or more horses to start, but the Board reserves the right to hold the entries and start the races with a less number, and deduct a proportionate amount of the purse or stake. The Board reserves the right to trot or run heats of any two races, alternately, or to call a special race between heats; also to change the day and hour of any race if deemed necessary. For a walk-over, a horse is only entitled to its own entrance fee and one-half of the entrance received from other entries of said race. A horse winning a race is entitled to first money only, except when distancing the field, then the first and third moneys. Non-starters must be declared out the day previous to the race they are engaged in, before 6 P. M. or be required to start.

All entries for a race to close with the President or Secretary, at Willow, September 20, 1888, at 10 o'clock P. M.

The Board of Directors will have charge of the track and grounds during the week of races, and will see that the rules are strictly enforced, and purses and stakes will be paid when the judges have rendered their decision, and before leaving the stand. Speed programmes and entry blanks will be furnished upon application to the Secretary. Races to start at 1 o'clock P. M. sharp.

A horse winning a race entitled to first money only, except when distancing the field, then to first and third moneys.

The winner of the mile and repeat, free purse, for all ages, of the State Fair programme for 1888, starting in races No. 3, will be required to carry five pounds extra.

Unless otherwise ordered by the Board, no horse is qualified to be entered in any District race that has not been owned in the District six (6) months prior to the day of the race, and any entry by any person of any disqualified horse shall be held liable for the entrance fee contracted, without any right to compete for a purse, and shall be held liable to penalties prescribed by the National Trotting Association and running Rules of the State Agricultural Society.

All colts properly entered in District stakes, 11 sold, are entitled to start in such races.

If it is the opinion of the Judges, before starting a race, that it cannot be finished on the closing day of the Fair, it may be declared off or continued, at the option of the Judges.

In all races noted above, six or more paid up entries required to fill and three or more horses to start; but the Board reserves the right to hold entries and start a race with a less number and deduct a proportionate amount of the purse; provided, however, that the Board hereby reserves the right to declare any race off when there are less than three (3) to start.

Trotting and racing colors to be named with all entries and used in all heats.

Races commence each day at 1 o'clock p. m. sharp. Sables, hay and straw free to competitors.

Entries close August 1, 1888, with the Secretary.

Close of the California State Fair.

Had the weather of Saturday proved propitious, the closing day of the fair would, in all probability, have been the most exciting of any. There were three races programmed, and two of them at least of a character to awaken the highest excitement. These were the free-for-all, with Arab, Stamboul, Lot Slocum and Tempest to start, and the three-year-old pacers, with Adonis, Yolo Maid and Gold Leaf sold in the pools Friday night. As Maggie E. was in the 2:40, the main interest would have been which would get second, though it was on the cards that Maggie E. could be induced to stay out, when the other entries would prove a "guessing lot." Though Arab was a big favorite in the pools sold the night before—and from the loss of form shown by Stamboul, with Tempest hardly up to the speed of the others; it was to be expected that he would rule first in the estimation of the bettors—for all that the case was still a matter of doubt. Stamboul may "round to" at any time, and Lot Slocum was brought from the other side of the mountains with a full knowledge of what he had to contend against. He has scored the fastest mile ever made in Montana, and when in the pink of condition he is liable to be troublesome to the very fastest. The pacing youngsters were "dead certain" to make a lively fight, and heats in the teens all through the probable result. There have been rainy days at the State Fair before, but such a downpouring as that of Friday night and Saturday morning, and that, too, accompanied by the Eastern mixture of loud thunder and sharp lightning is a new experience.

The action of the Directors in declaring the races off was the wisest course to pursue, as a postponement until Monday would have interfered with other engagements.

The sensational horse par excellence of the up-country fairs has been Victor, and a fuller account of his race at Sacramento than was published last week will be in place and that from the Record-Union is copied. The supposition from the pedigree given "by Echo dam by Woodburn," is that he was bred at Rancho del Paso, and that his dam was a sister to Monarch, and should that be correct the second dam was Victress by Belmont, probably the fastest mare of her day in California from 1000 yards to a mile. She was from a mare presented by A. Bmgaman to a friend, and that implies that she was thoroughbred. But at all events there is one "near cross of thoroughbred," and if the surmise be correct, two, and both "racing-bred" if the second dam fails to come up to the standard of thoroughbred. The account will show that he is as far from being "rattleheaded" as the most persistent stickler for "cold blood" could ask.

There is still another feature which is worthy of mention. In the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN of August 18th is a list of mares bred to Victor in 1883, and that shows 63 from March 9th to August 1st, so that if stud service is as inimical to speed as many imagine, the merit is enhanced. Inasmuch as the other great stallion of the State Fair, Woodnut, had 45 in his book, the season extending to July 30th, it cannot be so "awfully" out of the way. As will be learned from the report, Victor trotted the second quarter of the second heat in 33½ seconds, proving conclusively that he has speed enough to make a mark "low down in the teens."

This is what "Pacific Jr." says in the N. Y. Sportsman in his concluding remarks of the Chico race. Altogether too smart is "P. Jr.," as the horse is well known in that section, and trotted in Nevada and California last year.

"It is only a beautiful ringer case that has appeared so frequently on the Eastern tracks, and if the directors retain all winnings until the horse is proved straight, they will keep the money forever. A 2 20 horse does not come out of the woods or grow on apple trees, although suckers believe they do."

Last September he trotted two races in Reno, getting a record of 2:31½, and won two races in Susanville lowering his record to 2:30½. That he was clearly entitled to trot in the classes he was named in was so well known that the directors had no show to retain his winnings.

As Victor is shod with tips (his owner and driver is a blacksmith) that should also have stopped him according to the notions of some of the wise ones.

The trotting purse of $1,000 for the 2:25 class, mile heats, three in five, brought out eight starters in the following order: Allo, Victor, Don Thomas, Ha Ha, John R., Artist, Eva W., and Alpheus. Pools sold, Victor $120, Don Thomas $60, field $40. The appearance of Victor on the track created immense applause. The horse was driven without a check, the sulky was an old and rattling one and the driver was dressed in a dark navy blue suit, a la military cut, and a cap that resembled those of the British grenadiers of the Revolutionary war. The crowd was so large before the start for this race that every foot of space in the grand stand was taken and the marshals had difficulty in keeping the people off the track. It was fun to see Victor score. When his driver would say "whoa" to him he would stop as though he was hit in the head with a club, and would walk back to the score like an old plow-horse. He was always up on a start and the first to turn around when called back. The colors for Victor were orange and blue, but the driver's colors were all blue. When asked where was his orange, he said he had it in his pocket.

After several attempts the horses were started, Allo slightly in the lead. The driver of Don Tomas cut across the track in front of Victor on the first turn. Tomas led to the half in 1:11½, Victor a length behind, the other horses several lengths to the rear. On the homestretch Tomas forced Victor to the outside, but "Hayseed," as the driver of Victor was called, did not seem to care for that; for he pulled away and won the heat with great ease by several lengths, amid the shouts of the multitude, in 2:25½. Don Tomas second, Allo third, and the others several lengths to the rear in the following order: Ha Ha, Eva W., Alpheus, Artist.

After this heat Victor sold $140, Don Tomas $42, field $6.

The second heat on the second attempt Victor led from score to finish, winning handily by a dozen lengths. Don Tomas made a game race, trotting at Victor's wheel to the three-quarter pole when Victor pulled away, winning the heat easily by a dozen lengths in 2:22½. The quarter was made in .36½ the half in 1:10. Eva W. was second and the other horses passed under the wire in the following order: Don Tomas, Allo, Alpheus, Ha Ha and Artist distanced. When Victor returned to the score the driver was greeted with a round of applause and the band struck up "One More River to Cross." The driver, Mr. Doherty, stopped his horse in front of the stand and taking off his oddly huilt cap bowed his acknowledgement to the audience and the band responded with "Chippy, Get Your Hair Cut." The interest taken in this race was even greater than that taken in the great stallion race of Saturday. After this heat Victor sold for $50; field $7.

For the third heat Victor had the worst of the start by two lengths, broke on the turn, caught handily and led at the quarter by two lengths in .35½. Then went to the half in 1:10½ several lengths in advance and came home easy winner by a dozen lengths in 2:24½.

Friday, the 14th, turned out to be the last day of the fair, and to be in keeping with nearly every day which preceded it, was chock full of sport. Still more pleasant the weather notwithstanding there was a downpour, with the unusual concomitant in this part of California of thunder and lightning soon after the horses were called.

There had been a light shower in the forenoon, but not enough to dampen the ardor of the people so that when the hour came for the ladies' tournament, 10 A. M., the stands were crowded. At least 5,000 were in attendance, and they were well repaid, as the equestriennes acquitted themselves admirably. All won hearty plaudits and the judges were hugely puzzled to award the premiums, which after long consultation were distributed as follows:

The judges awarded the first prize of $70 to Miss McGrath; Miss Elliott, second prize of $55; Winnie Clark, third prize of $40; Belle Hewitt, fourth prize, $35; Mrs. Trefrey, fifth prize, $30, and Mrs. Paquin, sixth prize, $25.

The rain had diminished the fast qualities of the track somewhat, and when the horses for the unfinished pacing race were brought out the shower of the morning was supplemented by what could be called a plentiful dispensation of the unwelcome drops. Almost Patchen still held his position of favorite, and though Belmont Boy pressed him closely, leading to the three-quarter pole, when the favorite passed him and won with a fine degree of handiness.

Third and fourth heats paced September 14th.

The racing was now in order and the California Derby was the first on the programme. It is a stake for three-year-olds, of $100 each, $50 forfeit, declaration $10. January 1, 1887, $75, January 1, 1888, $25, May 1, 1888, the distance of 1½ miles. There were 29 nominations, four of which started, viz: Palo Alto's Peel by Monday from Precious, Annie Scott by Leinster from Tibbie Dunbar, Leon by Leinster from Addie A., and Snowdrop by Joe Hooker from Laura Winston. This was a quartet of well bred ones, but the prestige of the Palo Alto stable installed Peel in the first place in the pools and he brought more than all the others. The track was necessarily slow from the rainfall, though safe, and when the flag fell to a good start Leon went to the front and led for nearly a mile, Peel second, Snowdrop third, Annie Scott contented to bring up the rear. Soon after passing the starting point Leon gave up falling back of all the others and Peel came into the stretch with the lead, but not so far in front as to settle the dispute without further argument. The run down the home stretch was exciting. The jockeys were all doing their best, and when the colts went under the wire Peel was half a length in the lead of Snowdrop, Annie Scott close up. Considering the condition of the track the time was fast, 2:38½.

The second race was for the Palo Alto Stakes, handicap, a dash of a mile for two-year-olds, and of the twenty-one nominations seven started. These were The Czar by Norfolk from Marion, Shannon Rose by Shannon from imported Fairy Rose, Duke Spencer by Duke of Norfolk from Lou Spencer, Reward by Jim Brown from Trophy, Futurity by John A. from Ella Drane, Wildoats by Wild Idle from Mary Givens, and Naicho B. by Wanderer from Flower Girl. "Own" brother to the Emperor of Norfolk it was to be expected that the Czar would have the pride of place with the bettors, and better than near relationship was the possession of speed in his own right. But the prevailing influenza got hold of him on two occasions and he had not time to fully recover from its inroads. He sold in the pools for $100, Shannon Rose $70, all the others combined $40. Two-year-olds are generally a source of trouble to the starter, and this was not an exception, though a fair send-off was given, making amends for the loss of time. Shannon Rose bounced off with the lead, and at the quarter there was a short gap between her and Futurity, Wild Oats third. At the half the Czar moved into the first place with apparent ease and rounded the further turn at the head of the procession. Wild Oats came fast down the stretch, faster than the rider of the Czar seemed to realize, and came very near "catching him on the post." A bare nose was all that the favorite won by, and that amid a unison of cheers from hackers of both ends. The time, 1:44. Shannon Rose two lengths behind Wild Oats.

If the backers of the favorite got a scare in the two-year-old race, there was utter demoralization in the Golden Gate stakes for three-year-olds 1½ miles, and of eight nominations three appeared. These were Palo Alto's imported colt Brutus by McGregor from imported Teardrop. Moses B. by Leinster, from Aunt Jane, named by Mr. S. Bryan and Wm. Boots, Nabean by Nathan Coombs from Beauty. Brutus was the biggest kind of a favorite. Those who saw him beaten by Extract ascribed the defeat to the rider, and with better reasons for so awarding it than generally is the case. Those who pin their faith on genealogy and who had an acquaintance with the big guns of the English turf, knew that his sire was one of the very fastest of his day, and his dam running through Scottish Chief, Long Garou and Pantaloon to Phryne, claimed to be the best daughter of Tonchstone were also ready to support Brutus. But $100 on him to $10 on the others proved that there was too much confidence in speed shown and a long line of illustrious ancestry. There was an even start, Nabean making the running, and when a quarter of a mile was finished he had a length the best of Moses B., Brutus taking it easy in the rear. When the horses came to the stand the first time, Moses B. had deprived Nabean of the lead by a few inches, and Brutus had also mended his position being second, though all were so close that there was only a shade of difference between first and last. From that point the race was entirely between Brutus and Moses B., and a grand race it was. Which and which, now one in the lead and then the other, until they came to the straightest run for home. Brutus had the best of it, and the hearts of those who had plunged on him beat easier. They were inflating their lungs for a shout of welcome when it was seen that either Brutus was giving it up or that Moses B. had a reserve for the critical moment. At the one hundred yard post Moses B. had his nose in front and every stride added to his advantage so that when the goal was reached he was hailed the winner by half a length. Hailed is not expressive enough. His victory raised a yell of delight fully as resonant as any of the former surprises had elicited. Time, 3:08½.

The Night Hawk Stake is the event which is popularly supposed to bring out the fastest "milers," and the popular voice is usually correct. Jennie B. ran a mile at Sacramento in 1:42½, and as a fitting memorial a stake was named after her with the proviso that if the time were beaten it should be rechristened with the name of the winner. In 1882 Night Hawk won the stake in 1:42½. That was the fastest record for this coast to date, and though beaten since, it has not been lowered in this race, so that it still retains the name. Inasmuch as the winner of this year wears a title which has been rendered famous by a trotting stallion, had he knocked off the extra three-quarters of a second, people would have been prone to associate it with the trotter, rather anomalous for a racing event. There were twenty-six nominations, nine of which started. All with pretensions to speed, some of them sure enough clippers. There were nine started: Idaleue Cotton, Almont, Daisy D., Al Farrow, Edelweiss, Welcome, Applause, Notidle and Index.

The rating in the pools: Almont $60, Daisy D. $40, Edelweiss $20, the field $35. A great deal of money was posted with slight variations in the rates. Idaleue Cotton was cut down soon after the start, and one of the main supports of the fielders was thrown out. There is little necessity for description, as Almont took the lead at the first furlong mark, and from that to the finish had the race safe. The contest for second place was a good deal closer, second and third choice in the pools running second and third in the race. Edelweiss held the advantage until within a furlong from home, when Daisy D. passed her and was within a length of Almont when the mile was completed. Time, 1:42½.

The concluding race of the day was a purse for non-winners at the meeting with allowance as follows: Horses which had not run second allowed ten pounds, the distance beats of one mile and one-sixteenth. Dave Douglass, Sid, Mart Gibson and Laura Gardner started. In the pools Laura was the favorite at $100 to $25 for Douglass and $20 for the field. Laura took the lead at the start and held it easily through the first heat, winning in 1:51. Sid and Mart Gibson were shut out.

The second heat Laura won very easily. Time, 1:53.

Congressman Scott, of Erie, Pa., during his connection with the turf lost over $150,000. Having trouble with his trainers and finding himself so much out of pocket, the congressman left the turf, it was thought, for good; but it transpires now that he intends very shortly to recapture with his stable, having entered a large number of horses at Monmouth Park for next year. It is thought he will keep a sharp eye on his trainers and riders and do his own betting. The bookmakers will be glad to see Mr. Scott again, for he is a rich man and enters their meat. They like a fellow who can bet $10,000 on a race and lose it. If Mr. Scott does not do better than before, he will lose four wagers out of every five he makes.

Petaluma Pools Again.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN—In explanation of the correspondence that has appeared in your columns from Mr. Wilfred Page and Messrs. Killip & Co., with reference to the pool privileges awarded by the Petaluma Fair, I deem to say:

- 1st. Mr. J. H. White is president of what Messrs. Killip & Co. style our private corporation.
- 2nd. Mr. W. Page is one of the directors thereof.
- 3rd. At a directors' meeting last spring Mr. White reported that Killip & Co. would give — per cent of commissions on all pools sold. Whitehead & Co. duplicated their bid of last year, and at a meeting of the Board held May 5, 1888. On motion of Page seconded by Denman the pool privilege was awarded to Whitehead & Co., they being the highest bidders thereof.

Under date June 13, 1888, I received the following communication:

W. E. Cox, Esq., Petaluma. Dear Sir—In conversation with your president, Mr. J. H. White, last week, we expressed a desire to make a proposition in regard to selling pools at your coming fair. He stated that a business meeting of your directors would shortly be held, and referred us to yourself for particulars. Will you kindly inform us when and in what manner propositions will be received, and oblige,
Yours truly,
KILLIP & Co.

In reply to which I wrote Messrs. Killip & Co. (whether or not they received my communication, I know not), that the privilege had been let to Whitehead & Co.

The bid first above named of — per cent. was verbally made by Mr. Killip to Mr. J. H. White our president, and was by him reported to the Board. Mr. White stated that Mr. Killip explained at the time that he would not bid any percentage unless one on which he was sure to come out ahead of expenses.

Later on Mr. Chase interviewed Mr. White and explained that Mr. Killip was then willing to compete with Whitehead & Co. for the privilege, and hence the letter quoted above in full.

The fact of Messrs. Killip & Co. desiring to come in at a later date with a second bid does not alter the fact that they made a bid in the first instance.

I also know that Whitehead & Co. did not appear in 1887 before our Board of Directors for the purpose named in Killip & Co.'s communication, nor was any promise or quasi promises made to them then, before, or since by our Board.

Guy, with a running accompaniment, was sent a mile between heats to beat his record of 2:15. He failed, his time being 2:16½.

Coney Island

The rain came down in torrents till the fourth race at Sheepshead Bay, when the downpour modified into a drizzle, which was, if anything, worse. Notwithstanding the unfavorable weather the attendance was quite large and the betting very active. The track, of course, was heavy and scratchings were numerous, but the racing notwithstanding was good. Backers did not at all mind the weather, for the unheard of thing happened yesterday. Public form was triumphant and every favorite won. Following is a summary:

FIRST RACE—Purse $1,000; for three-year-olds and upward; entrance $25; two-thirds of the entrance money to go to the second and one-third to the third horse; the winner to be sold at auction for $3,000; horses entered to be sold for $2,500 allowed 3 pounds, for $2,000 7 pounds, for $1,500 14 pounds, then 2 pounds for each $100 less to $1,000. One mile.

No pools sold. Betting—5 to 1 against Satisfaction, 6 to 1 each Queen of Elizabeth and Lucy H, 7 to 1 Jennie McFarland, 8 to 1 each Benedictine and Bo Peep, 10 to 1 each Hilda, Himalaya and Ocean, 25 to 1 each Kedar Khan and Gallatin, 30 to 1 Allentown, 40 to 1 each Delia and Dynamite, Place—2 to 1 each against Queen of Elizabeth, Satisfaction and Lucy H, 5 to 2 Jennie McFarland, 3 to 1 each Bo Peep and Benedictine, 4 to 1 each Hilda, Himalaya and Ocean, 10 to 1 each Kedar Khan, Allentown and Gallatin, 15 to 1 each Delia and Dynamite. Mutuals paid $40.60, place $16.05, Gallatin $11.20.

Dynamite took the track and made the running, followed by Himalaya, Allentown and Hilda, with Ocean and Satisfaction well up still nearing the turn for home, where Satisfaction moved up. When well straightened out Satisfaction came away and won easily by a length and a half, Gallatin second, two lengths before Queen of Elizabeth. There was no bid for the winner.

Second Race—The Gleaners' Stakes, a sweepstakes of $50 each, $15 f. with $1,500 added, of which $350 to the second and $150 to the third; for two-year-olds which have not won $1,000 up to time of entry; winners after closing of stakes (August 15) of $1,500, 3 pounds; of $2,500, 7 pounds extra; non-winners of $750 allowed 7 pounds; maidens, 10 pounds. No pools sold. Betting—5 to 4 on Madstone, 6 to 1 each J A B and Tenny, 8 to 1 each Sluggard and Ogalalla, 10 to 1 Sam Wood, 15 to 1 Gendarme. Place—5 to 2 on Madstone, 2 to 1 each J A B, Tenny and Ogalalla, 3 to 1 each Sluggard and Sam Wood, 5 to 1 Gendarme. Mutuals paid $10.35, place $7.10, Tenny $12.60.

Ogalalla took the track and opened a gap of two lengths, which she retained for the first quarter, Madstone being second, lapped by Tenny and Sluggard. On the far turn Madstone took the lead, and, easily retaining it to the end, won by a length and a half. J. A. B., who had run very unkindly in the first part of the race, was unable to make up the necessary ground. Tenny finished second, a head before J. A. B., who beat Sluggard a head for third place.

Third Race—The Sheepshead Stakes; for three-year-olds; a handicap sweepstakes of $50 each, $15 forfeit, for horses entered by August 15th, or $100 each, $30 forfeit, for those entered by the usual hour for the closing of entries on Saturday, September 8th, with $1,500 added, of which $350 to the second and $150 to the third; weights to be announced Monday, September 10. T. N. Miller's b g Ten Booker, 6, by Ten Broeck—Nellie Booker, 117.
Time, 2:58 1-5.

No auction pools sold. Betting—8 to 5 against Rupert, 4 to 1 Ernest, 6 to 1 Aretino, 7 to 1 Royal Arch, 8 to 1 each Orlando and Pee Weep, 15 to 1 Ten Booker. Place—5 to 3 on Rupert, 8 to 5 against Ernest, 2 to 1 each Royal Arch and Aretino, 3 to 1 each Orlando and Pee Weep, 6 to 1 Ten Booker. Mutuels paid $10.80, place $7.60, Aretino $18.40.

Ernest took the track, opened a gap of three lengths and made the running, followed by Pee Weep, Aretino and Orlando all in a bunch, with Rupert bringing up the rear. Nearing the turn for Aretino took the lead, while Rupert began to work to the fore. When straightened out Rupert closed on Aretino and wearing him down, won easily by two lengths. Aretino second, six before Orlando, the balance all strung out.

Two-Year-Olds of the Year.

"Two-year-old?" No! I don't think there's a good two-year old East this year," said Hardy Durham, speaking with a representative of the Sporting World.

"And that's why you think Proctor Knott had no difficulty in capturing the Futurity?"

"Yes; that's partly it. But I don't mean you to understand that I don't think him a first-class colt. I do; but I don't think he's the best we have, not by any means."

"Can you name a better?"

"Yes, I can. In my opinion I can name one or two better."

"Who are they?"

"Well, to begin with, there's my own filly, the one I train for Mr. Pettit, Princess Bowling. I know she's better."

"If that's so, how is it you didn't win the Futurity with her?"

"Because the filly's all amiss. She went wrong while I had her at Chicago, and she's never been herself since."

"What others are there?"

"Well, there's the Lioness and Once Again. I think they're both better, and I think a great many others west think the same as I do. Still Proctor's a great colt, though I don't think he's such an out and out good colt as many of you seem to think."

"Don't you think he's so good as your old favorite, Raceland, eh?"

"No, sir—not by a long way. I think Raceland was an almighty fast horse when I had him, and I'm a kind of disappointed that he doesn't seem to have done as well as I expected as a three-year-old. I only wish I had another as good or anything like as good as he was."

"Princess Bowling's by Prince Charlie, isn't she?"

"Yes, that's what she's by."

"I suppose, now, you're fond of Prince Charlie?"

"Yes indeed. I only wish the people over the water would send us another as good as he was."

"I fear they're not likely to. Don't suppose we should have got hold of him only for the fact of his making a noise, and that there was lot of people kicked when Col. Mand, who buys for the Royal Stud over there, purchased him on behalf of the Queen. When so much was said against him by every one on account of his roaring propensities I suppose he thought he had better get rid of him."

"Well, it doesn't seem to have affected any of his produce here. I don't think that there are more Prince Charlie roars than any other breed. The climate seems to get rid of all that, and I shouldn't have any hesitation in breeding to another such a roarer as Prince Charlie. I only wish, as I say, they'd send us another as good. He'd be a grand success."

"What about this horse The Lion, which came East with such a flourish of trumpets. Is he of any account?"

"The Lion? I should say not. No account whatever. He's a fraud. Belongs to a nice man and a big man, but if he'd belonged to a little man like me, Hardy Durham, he'd never have been heard of out here; indeed, he'd never have come East, for if he couldn't win in the company he was in out there I know jolly well he couldn't win here."

"Where are you going to winter your horse?"

"Lexington. Some place."

"And where shall you go from here?"

"Go to Lexington. Leave to-morrow morning, and take my horses with me."

"How many have you in your string?"

"Ten; and one I've just sold at the sale here."

Durham, whose horses in training belong to Mr. J. Ullman, with the exception of Mr. Pettit's Princess Bowling, left Sheephead Bay for Lexington yesterday.

Forty-nine stallions have made records of 2:20 or better, the ones to drop into the list this year being Brown, 2:18; Pennant, 2:19; Junemont, Frank Buford, 2:20, and James G., 2:20. And yet to old-timers on the turf it does not seem so long ago since the first stallion to trot in 2:20—Mambrino Gift—performed that feat. It created a great sensation in those days, but now not a season goes by that does not bring out one or more 2:20 stallions. Of those that have made their mark this year Junemont is the best liked by horsemen, although Brown's record is, all things considered, the best, he being but four years old,

The Finish at Brighton.

The racing season of 1888 at Brighton Beach ended the 10th inst. and as two California-bred colts, Flush and King Idle, the following account is copied from the Sporting World.

Though the weather was anything but attractive, the attendance was very large and the betting probably the heaviest of the season. The big bettors practically monopolized the auction pools, and the mutuels were patronized to such an extent that $80,888 were invested in them. One of the features of the day was the running of the Chicago Stable's crack Egmont, who, ridden by McLaughlin, won in a canter from Sam Harper. King Idle was the only other favorite who won, the first four races going to Lemon Blossom, Blue Line, Flush and Ernest respectively.

First Race—Purse $200, of which $50 to second, for two-year-olds, selling allowances. Three-quarters of a mile.

SUMMARY.

W. H. Timmons' b f Lemon Blossom, by Luke Blackburn—Vanilla, $1,500, 107.
J. Downy's b c Gunshot, $1,200, 107.
J. C. Hardy's cb f Allabrene, $1,000, 62.
M. O. Haverly's cb c Los Webster, $1,000, 105.
Blinks & Robertson's b g Teddington, $1,500, 107.
J. Patterson's Dr. Jekyll, $1,500, 107, car. 110.
Time, 1:23.

Pools—Gunshot $55, Lemon Blossom and Los Webster $25 each, field $15. Mutuels, five dollar, paid $21.95, place $8.55, Gunshot $6.95; two dollar $10.10, place $3.75, Gunshot $3.

Allabrene took the track and made the running two lengths in front of Los Webster, Gunshot and Lemon Blossom. They ran as named till into the stretch, when Lemon Blossom gradually worked to the front and won handily by a length. Gunshot second, a length and a half before Allabrene, Los Webster a poor fourth.

Second race—Purse $250, of which $50 to second; selling allowances. One mile and a sixteenth.

B. Morris' b h Blue Line, 5, by Glangarry—Billet Doux, $1,000, 107.

Time—1:54 1/4.

Pools—Adrian $80, Lida L. $50, Relax $45, Macgregor $40, field $125. Mutuels, five dollars, paid $35.55, place $19.90, Richelieu, $43.10; two dollar $18.60, place $6.70, Richelieu $20.65.

Souvenir, Relax and Can't Tell made the running in a close bunch, with Blue Line and Macgregor well up until into the stretch, when Blue Line came away and won easily by three lengths, Richelieu second, a head before Macgregor, Adrian a good fourth.

Third race—Purse $250, of which $50 to second; to carry 20 pounds above the scales. One mile and an eighth.

G. Chapman's b g Flush, 3, by Flood—Kathairon, $500, 115.
J. Young's br h Clay Pate, 6, $500, 128.
E. Devine's b g Harwood, 5, $500, 125.
W. Neuhoff's cb g Bass Viol, 5, $800, 128.
Time—2:01.

Pools—Clay Pate $100, field $54. Mutuels, five dollar, paid $44.25, place $10 45, Clay Pate $2.85.

Bass Viol made the running to the half, two lengths in front of Flush and Clay Pate, Harwood out of it. In the run to the three-quarters Bass Viol quit and the other two drew away. The two ran like a team throughout and Flush won by only a short head, ten lengths in front of Harwood, Bass Viol beaten off.

Fourth Race—Brighton Beach Handicap; purse $550. One mile and a quarter.

W. Lakeland's cb g Ernest, 6, by Enquirer—Jaconet, 107.
Lamasuey Bros.' b g Brown Duke, 5, 114.

R. Bradley's b g King B, a, 102.
Bonlevard Stable's cb g Pilot, a, 100.
F. D. Weir's b g Trux, a, 90.
Time, 2:14 1/4.

Pools—Brown Duke $100, Troy $105, Ernest and Pilot $80 each, field $150. Mutuels, five dollar, paid $64.35, place $23.15, Brown Duke $11.30; two dollar $16.90, place $8.95, Brown Duke $6.30.

Ernest took the track and made the running throughout, two lengths in front of Troy, with Brown Duke third. In the run to the three-quarters Brown Duke took second place but could never get up to Ernest, who won in a canter by ten lengths, Brown Duke second, a head before Troy.

Fifth Race—Purse $550. Seven furlongs.

Chicago Stable's b b Egmont, 5, by Enquirer—Melita, 115.
G. B. Morris' b b Sam Harper Jr., a, 118.
T. N. Miller's b b Harry Russell, 6, 118.
W. H. Timmons' br g Herman, 5, 115.

T. McCaull's cb g Ariel, 5, 115.
J. Musket's b g Icicle, 3, 108, car 114.
Time, 1:31 1/4.

Pools—Egmont $300, Sam Harper Jr., $170, Lafitte $55, field $75. Mutuels, five dollar, paid $7.85, place $6.30, Sam Harper Jr. $6.70, two dollar $3.10, place $2.70, Sam Harper Jr. $2.85.

Egmont, Lafitte, Sam Harper and Herman made the running lead and head till the half, when Egmont and Sam Harper drew away. The two ran head and head till into the stretch, when Egmont drew away and won in a common canter by four lengths, Sam Harper second, ten lengths before Harry Russell.

Sixth Race—Purse $550; for three-year-olds. One mile and an eighth.

G. B. Morris' gr c King Idle by Wildside—Augusta E., 100.
Keyport Stables' cb f Orange Girl, 100.
W. C. Daly's b g Subaltern, 100.
D. A. Honig's br f Leo H., 100.
Time, 2:03.

Pools—King Idle $200, Leo H. $100, field $36. Mutuels, five dollar, paid $7.80, place $7.50, Orange Girl $16.05; two dollar $3.90, place $2.75, Orange Girl $4.55.

Leo H. took the track, but was joined in the first furlong by Orange Girl, and the two ran head and head till the quarter pole, with King Idle well up. In the run to the half Leo H. tired badly and dropped back, while King Idle worked to the front. He and Orange Girl ran close together till nearing the three-quarters, where King Idle drew away, and, increasing his lead the further he went, won in a slow canter by eight lengths, Orange Girl second, fifteen before Subaltern, Leo H. beaten off.

Portland Fall Meeting.

FIRST DAY—SEPTEMBER 12.

The starters for the running race were William Tenant and L. R. Bennett. Both races were judged by Hon. R. Williams, Judge Raleigh Stott and Richard Everding. The timekeepers for both events were S. G. Reed, E. J. Jeffery and L. F. Chemin. Mr. L. L. Hawkins acted as marshal of the day.

The running race was first called—mile and a quarter dash, $240, $120, $40. The starters were: Vice Regent, Rosa Lewis, Coloma, Repetta.

The betting opened at much the same figure as upon the previous evening. In the auction pools Repetta opened and closed the favorite at about 20 to 16 for Coloma and $5 for the field.

Coloma drew the pole with Vice Regent second, Repetta third, Rosa Lewis fourth. Coloma delayed the scoring somewhat, and when the flag finally fell, it found him slightly in the lead, a position from which Vice Regent dislodged him before the stand was reached, Repetta a good third, Rosa Lewis closely following. The quarter pole was reached in 26 1/2, the half in 54 1/2, Vice Regent was falling back to lose the third place eventually to Rosa Lewis, and Repetta had a lead which Coloma was unable to cover, though on the home stretch his rider crossed before both the rear horses and whipped him down the inside of the track. For this cross he forfeited to Rosa Lewis second money, taking third. Repetta made the three-fourths in 1:20, the mile in 1:47 1/2, finishing winner in 2:14 1/2. A claim was later entered by Vice Regent's owner, Mr. Baker, for third place on Coloma's foul, but the purses had already been paid.

Time: quarter 26 1/2, half 54 1/2, three-quarters 1:20, mile 1:47 1/2, mile and a quarter 2:14 1/2.

The 2:25 race trotting was next on the programme. The starters were Carrie Belle, Palatina, Kittie Lynch, Contractor and Fantasia, in the positions indicated. The two first had the worst of the start being sent away when off their feet. Fantasia and Kittie Lynch had rather the best of it. They kept this advantage until the last turn, when Carrie Belle caught and passed Fantasia. Kittie Lynch finished first, Carrie Belle second, Fantasia third and Contractor fourth, Palatina distanced. The time was: The fourth, 37 1/2; the half 1:13 1/2; three-fourths, 1:51; mile, 2:29.

At the auction pools Fantasia a hot favorite, bringing about 25 to 13 for Contractor, 5 for Carrie Belle and 4 for the field.

Second Heat—The only effect of the Kitty's victory was oddly enough, to increase the odds of the favorite in the auction pools. Fantasia selling at first choice for $25, Contractor and Carrie Belle bringing $7 to $10, field $2 to $3. Pools ranged in this proportion a high as $100 for the first choice. Mutuels paid on Fantasia $11.

The horses got off well together, Contractor having a little the worst of it. Kitty was unable to hold the pole farther than to the first quarter, when Fantasia took command and steadily held her place. Contractor was able to pass Kitty when near the upper turn, but unable to out-foot her on the home stretch, so finished third, with Carrie Belle unmolested for fourth place. The fourth was made in 37 1/2, three-fourths in 1:51 1/2, the mile in 2:28 1/2, the fastest heat of the race.

Third Heat—It was Fantasia against the field now, and at odds of $25 to $8, $20 to $5, with field money slow. Mutuels paid on Fantasia, $25.

Fantasia got away in the lead, Contractor second in the air Kitty Lynch and Carrie Belle following. Contractor quickly recovered, and though Kitty was three lengths ahead, he soon reduced the distance and made a beautifully close race for second place, which he gained upon the turn, and came down the homestretch some three lengths ahead of Kitty Lynch and four lengths behind Fantasia, who was an easy winner in 2:29, Carrie Belle nearly escaping the flag, Time for the fourth 38 1/2 the half 1:15; three-fourths, 1:51; the mile 2:29.

Fourth Heat—Beach of Vancouver, was put behind Contractor, and Lindsay, behind Carrie Belle, not from any evidence of hippodroming, but from a wish to give the losers any benefit or satisfaction which the change might give.

There were no takers of Fantasia money at the auction boxes and one lone pool ($5) was divided between the few Fantasia tickets sold in the mutuels.

Contractor scored second finely under his new driver at first, but after being sent back two or three times, went under the wire at the start, off his feet as usual. Kitty Lynch broke also on the first turn, and as before, the interesting feature of the heat was the race for second place between the two. The contest down the home stretch was very close. Contractor beating the mare by a length. Fantasia easily took the lead from the start, and increasing it to half a dozen lengths by the last turn, when she trotted in smoothly in 2:33, Carrie Belle a bad fourth. Time: the quarter 38, the half 1:14, the mile 2:33.

SECOND DAY—SEPTEMBER 13.

The first race on the card for to-day was the three-quarter mile handicap. The starters were John Hall, Bogus, Laura D, Lady Duffy and Ida Glenn. They were off at the first attempt, in the order named, Ida Glenn a length behind the field. John Hall was in the lead until the last turn, having reached the quarter in 24 1/2, and the half in 50 seconds. By the time the turn was reached Ida Glenn had passed both other mares, and raced Bogus past John Hall on the home stretch, Bogus winning in 1:16 1/2.

The Betting—Auction pools. Bogus 20, Laura D. 4, Lady Duffy 2, field 3. Mutuels paid $7.35.

THE SECOND RACE WAS THE 2:40 CLASS.

First Heat—Auction pools. Oneco $45, Harvest $35, Mand Knox $6, field $5.

T. H. Tongue's Van Tromp did not start, owing to lameness. Dick Flaherty drew the pole, then Harvest, Mand Knox, Oleander, Oneco. Several scorings finally sent Oleander off in the lead, Mand Knox second, Harvest third, Dick Flaherty fourth. At the turn Flaherty went to the front, and resched the quarter pole in 37½, followed by Oneco. The half was resched in 1:14, and here Mand Knox relinquished third place to Harvest, who in turn passed Oneco and finished second. Flaherty came under the wire the winner in 2:32½. Mutuels on Dick Flaherty for this heat paid $22.65.

Second heat—The betting veered a little although Flaherty still remained in the field. Oneco brought $25, Harvest $10, Mand Knox $2, the field $4. The favorite broke badly, which delayed the scoring. At last they were off, Dick Flaherty in the lead, followed closely by Harvest and Mand Knox, Oleander fourth, and Oneco last. Mand quickly displaced Harvest, and in this order the heat proceeded to the finish, plenty of daylight being between all but the first two. On the home stretch Mand closed upon Flaherty and made a close finish with him for the first heat. But she broke when just under the wire, and the stallion was again the winner. First quarter 37½, half 1:13½, three-quarters 1:51½, mile 2:30. Mutuels paid on Flaherty $17.80.

Third heat—The backers of Oneco jammed round the pool-box trying to hedge out. Mand Knox appeared a possible winner to some, but most turned to the field. Oneco and Mand Knox were selling at $11 each, against $20 for the field which included Harvest. In this heat Flaherty was an easy winner, Mand being always at least two lengths behind him, after she had passed Harvest out the first turn, where unfortunately she broke, probably losing the heat thereby. They finished in this order: Dick Flaherty first, Mand Knox second, two lengths behind him, and three lengths in front of Oneco and Oleander, while Harvest was seven yards behind the distance flag. The quarter in 37½, the half in 1:15, three-quarters in 1:54, mile 2:34. Mutuels paid on Dick Flaherty $23.

THIRD DAY—SEPTEMBER 14.

The first race for the day was the two-year-old dash, with four starters.

The race—Arthur H. was overweighted eleven pounds by his heavy rider. The first score was a go, Oregon Rose slightly in advance, the others closely bunched. She was soon overhauled, however, by O'Hara, then by Arthur H., and only saved third place from "X" at the finish by half a length. Arthur H. made the most of the home stretch, winning by a neck, with Oregon Rose a length behind.

Time, 0:53½

Betting—Auction pools opened: Tom O'Hara $40, Arthur H. $22, X, $6, Oregon Rose $6. Closed: Arthur H. $40, Tom O'Hara $24, X, $5, Oregon Rose $5. Mutuels paid on Arthur H. $6.70.

First Heat—Auction pools opened: Roly Boly $10, Ida Glenn $5, Kitty Wells $2, Lady Duffy $2, McCullough $3. Closed: Ida Glenn $50, Roly Boly $20, McCullough $8, field $7. Mutuels paid on Kitty Wells $24.35. McCullough's erratic scoring delayed the start, at which Kitty Wells, having the pole, shot ahead and kept the advantage to the finish in the best time of the race. McCullough was a good second at first, but Roly Boly soon overhauled him, and on the home stretch crowded close upon Kitty who won by a head only. Ida Glenn contented herself with gaining third place from McCullough on the home stretch, while Lady Duffy, through drawing second position, was last throughout. Time, 51.

Second Heat—Auction pools: Ida Glenn $25, Roly Boly $13, field $7. Payment withheld on Mutuels pending third heat.

Kitty Wells made her customary quick start, closely pressed by Ida Glenn and Roly Boly. The last quarter was a close brush, Ida Glenn finishing first. The first quarter was made in 25½. The judges declared the heat off, owing to irregularities in the start. Time, 52.

Third heat—Auction pools: Ida Glenn $20, Roly Boly —, field $4. Mutuels paid on Ida Glenn $6. Kitty Wales again had slightly the best of the start, the others closely bunched, headed by Roly Boly. McCullough made quite a spurt at the quarter, but finished last. Ida Glenn forged to the front at the head of the home stretch, followed by Roly Boly; Kitty fell back to fourth place, Ida winning by a neck. Time—52.

Fourth heat—Auction pools, no takers for Glenn money. Mutuels paid $5.25. The blood horse rules sent all but Ida Glenn and Kitty Wells to the stables, Roly Boly with third money. The two mares made a very pretty race, though slow. Ida had the pole and start, and finished first by a short length. The fourth was 0:27. Time—55½.

First Heat—Auction pools: D. K. W. $20, Mand Knox $12, Lady Don $10, field $10. Mutuels paid on Lady Don $21.35. Mand Knox drew the pole, succeeded in order named by D. K. W. Kitty Ham, Susie S., Lady Don. The horses got off together, though Lady Don was on the break and Mand Knox was soon off her feet. Both quickly gathered, and at the quarter pole Mand was two lengths behind Lady Don, and three lengths in advance of D. K. W., the field mares four lengths behind. Mand and D. K. W. both did nobly on the homestretch, but the little mare was too speedy, finishing, in spite of a momentary break near the stand, winner of the fastest heat of the race, Mand losing second place to D. K. W. by a break, Second heat—Auction pools: D. K. W. $15, Lady Don $10, Mand Knox $9, field $2. Mutuels paid on D. K. W. $9.05. The finest score of the meeting, each horse having a slight advantage in reverse order to his position. D. K. W. took the pole from Lady Don before the turn was reached, and Mand Knox was at his side. Just beyond the quarter pole she passed him, while Susie S. for once in the race did some good work and wrested third place from Lady Don. The contest between D. K. W. and Mand Knox was very close along the opposite stretch, while Susie S. fell back in the rear. After the last turn the three leaders were almost abreast and to add to the excitement Kitty Ham made probably the finest spurt of the meeting, passing Lady Don and Mand Knox, and going under the wire a neck behind D. K. W., Mand and Lady Don close behind.

Third Heat—Auction pools: D. K. W. $15, Mand Knox $6, Lady Don $5, field $15. Mutuels paid on D. K. W. $5.25. Mand Knox for the first half, Lady Don and Kitty Ham on the last quarter, pressed the gray horse hard for the heat, Lady Don finishing second by half a length, Kitty a good third, Mand next.

Fourth Heat—Auction pools: D. K. W. $15, Lady Don $2, Mand Knox $1, field $5. Mutuels paid $7.75. It was now or never with the mares, and they went after the gray gelding in good style. Susie S. had the best of the start, but lost it on the turn, D. W. K. being first attended by Mand Knox and Lady Don. Slowly Misner crowded the big mare up even, then ahead, then a full length in advance of D. W. K. At the three-quarters the gray was up even again, and almost up were Lady Don and Susie S. Mand caught the pole around the turn, then Lady Don broke and lost, Mand followed suit and lost the chance of winning; but this was Kitty Ham's chance again, and nobly did she improve it. A neck ahead of D. K. W. she reached the stand, but broke under the wire. Excitement ran high during the delay which attended the judges' decision, but the steady gray got the verdict.

FOURTH DAY—SEPTEMBER 15.

The race meeting at City View Saturday was attended by the largest crowd which ever witnessed races on a Portland track. The judging was for the first time of the meeting severely criticized; which was probably inevitable, considering the doubtfulness of the contested points, and the prejudices of men who have hundreds at stake. Ranchero's only chance for winning the free-for-all was killed in the third heat, by being sent off on a break, and many thought that Whitmore had his money on Repetta, and did not wish his horse ridden by a man who wanted him to win. It is difficult to see, however, how any other decision could rightly have been given, and the odds at which Repetta sold seems evident enough that Coloma could not win.

Ranchero lamed himself in the third heat of the free for all, and it is extremely doubtful if he starts at Salem. He made many friends and proved himself a grand horse. His steady and unflinching work in the fourth and fifth heats establishes ground for the belief that he could have the won in third heat if, instead of breaking at the start, he had taken only the natural advantage which his position at the pole entitled him.

Mr. Jeffries joins the list of unfortunates. Going about on a crutch himself, Lady Don and Conde have lost for him, and yesterday his sulky broke on the only heat which would have done him any good. He can sympathize with Mr. T. H. Tongue, whose three trotters are all lame. This gentleman remarked yesterday that if Fred Hambleton could have started, the free for all heats would have been at least three seconds lower than they were.

The running purse could not get outside of the three lucky stables.

The time made by the two-year-olds in the third event is the best ever made in Oregon, the lowest previous record being Mignonette's, 2:43, in 1886.

Time, 1:48½, 1:46, 1:46½.

First Heat—Auction pools: Repetta $120, Coloma $15, Rosa Lewis $20, Nevada $5. Mutuels paid on Coloma $8.70. The order of position drawn was Repetta, Nevada, Coloma, Rosa Lewis. The first score sent them off well bunched, except Nevada, who was in the rear. Rosa Lewis caught the pole on the first turn, attended by Coloma, who passed her after a close contest on the backstretch. On the last turn Repetta came up past Rosa, close upon Coloma, whom she crowded close to the finish, second by a half length, Nevada getting third place. Nevada's rider was unhorsed in retreating up at the turn, but escaped injury.

Second Heat—Auction pools: Repetta $100, field $20. Mutuels paid on Repetta $5.85. Coloma snuked badly in the scoring, but got away in the lead. Repetta a close second, Rosa Lewis third. On the turn Repetta took the pole by a few swift jumps, but Coloma was close at hand and at once Rosa crowded up, and the three hurried along the backstretch nearly abreast, Nevada a hopeless fourth. Coloma contented himself with third place until the head of the homestretch, when he made it warm for Matlock's mare. He was not speedy enough for her, however, and followed Repetta at the turn by one length, Rosa third, Nevada two lengths later.

Third Heat—Auction pools: $8 Coloma offered against Repetta, $110 refused. Mutuels not sold. It was between Coloma and Repetta now. The favorite had the pole, and kept her lead of one to three lengths throughout.

Second race, free for all trot; $600, $300, $100; three in five, mile heats:

C. B. Jeffries' ch g Conde, 6..... Jeffries 2 4 4 4
Time, 2:25½, 2:25½, 2:26½, 2:29½, 2:31.

First Heat—Auction pools: Hilton $50, Conde $10, Ranchero $7, Contractor $2. Mutuels paid on Ranchero $41.51. Conde drew the pole, next in order Ranchero, Hilton, Contractor. Ranchero got the worst of the start, but took the pole on a bad break of Charles Hilton, Conde second. Both went off their feet a moment later, giving Contractor the lead at the quarter which he maintained along the back stretch, Hilton gaining second, Conde third, Ranchero closing up. At the three-quarters Conde made a spurt, Hilton broke and lost, holding second place with Contractor for a moment, but falling back to fourth on the turn. Ranchero made a great finish down the outside of the stretch, winning by two lengths from Conde, Contractor third.

Second heat—Auction pools opened, Hilton $30, Ranchero $14, field $4; closed, Ranchero $25, Hilton $20, field $3. Mutuels paid on Ranchero $15.15. Contractor got slightly the worst of the start, the others well together. Ranchero had the pole, and increased his advantage. At the quarter he was five lengths in advance. Hilton tried hard to catch him, but could only finish second, Contractor third, Conde nowhere in sight. The axle of his sulky broke upon the three-quarter turn, but neither horse nor rider was injured, the good horse stopping quite still in his tracks. Mr. Jeffries put him in another sulky for the next heat.

Third Heat—Auction pools: Ranchero $100, field $12. Mutuels paid $15.50 on Hilton. Ranchero was sent away off his feet, and before Sawyer could get him down to work Contractor, then Hilton, then Conde had him sadly at a disadvantage. At the quarter Hilton got the pole, and Ranchero was only able to pass Conde, finishing third, a length behind Contractor, who was a good length and more in Hilton's rear.

Fourth Heat—Auction pools: Ranchero $18, field $25. Mutuels paid on Hilton $7.65. Ranchero was lame, having struck his knee on the last heat, and allowed Conde to wrest his third place from him. Contractor pressed the little bay along the back stretch and was almost neck and neck at the three-quarters. Hilton made an easy finish, however, though the outcome was close. Sawyer driving Ranchero, with queer judgment, hard upon Contractor, coming in third.

Fifth Heat—Auction pools: Hilton $20, field $5. Mutuels paid on Hilton $6.50.

Contractor made a brave effort to win the heat, holding first place nearly half way around the track. On the home stretch Ranchero made one more dash for victory, and the three made a pretty finish, Hilton in the lead. The darkness at this time became so great as to obscure the view of the major portion of the course.

Third race, trotting, purse $250, two-year-olds, two in three, mile heats.

W. B. Crowe's Blondie..... J. Misener 1 1
J. S. Hallett's Wallula..... Mosher 2 1
Time, 2:46—2:50.

No betting. The prettiest trot of the meeting; the animals closely matched; Blondie winning the first heat after a sharp struggle, and the second much easier, Misener pulling her in under the wire.

Thus ends the most successful meeting in Portland's history, and one which bids fair to advance the cause of legitimate turf sports in Oregon. Nobody in authority was a party to any kind of jobbing, if such existed at all; purses were promptly paid, and not a dollar of the thousands wagered upon the events but was fairly won and uncompromisingly lost. Taking the mutuels and the auction pools together, there was not much advantage in the clear up between the talent and the outsiders. Thousands in hedging bets went into the box on the big races, and the losses are more evenly divided than the winning.

From a breeder's point of view, the meeting has been very encouraging, showing a perceptible gain in the trotters and runners alike. The meeting has also demonstrated that people are not wholly indifferent either to the beauty of City View park or the charms of the race course, as between 4000 and 5000 witnessed yesterday's events. There ought to be no difficulty in making a successful venture out of good race meetings hereafter, and it is hoped that capital may be found allied with enough enterprise and confidence to take hold of City View in earnest, clear the grounds, make new track and provide adequate transportation.

Stockton Fair.

By our Special Commissioner.]

The twenty-eighth fair and racing season under the auspices of the San Joaquin Valley Agricultural Society, District No. 2, began on Tuesday last, and will continue through the week. The fact that a large proportion of the exhibits had to be brought from Sacramento, where they have been on show at the State Fair, militated against such a complete and satisfactory arrangement either of the industrial or live stock portions of the fair as could have been desired. The pavilion on Tuesday was still in great confusion, and the noise of carpentering, together with paucity of exhibits, kept all but a few enthusiastic sight-seers away. At the race track things were better ordered, but even there a little more energy might have accomplished several desired ends. The fence in front of the grand stand has hitherto stood too near the stand, and it was resolved, for the convenience of bettors and others who fancy being near the pool-boxes, to move it, even though the width of the track was thereby decreased ten feet. The fence was in process of removal during Tuesday afternoon, much to the discomfort of spectators. The stabling and sheds were all put in fit condition in ample time, and the horsemen without exception spoke favorably of Secretary LaRue's attention to details in that line. The track was pronounced first-rate by Mr. Salisbury and other experts—being firm, fast and not hard. The races were announced to begin at 1 o'clock on Tuesday, but at that hour only a sprinkling of people, principally attaches either of the track or betting stand, were scattered about the grand pavilion. A new pavilion has been erected this season, and a more airy and comfortable structure of the kind we do not recall.

It is set at such an angle with the track as to enable all to see every part of a race without leaving their seats, like the grand stand at Washington Park, Chicago. A new Judge's stand also adds to the tout ensemble. A fair criticism upon the fair management is, that in making provision for the comfort and convenience of others they have forgotten to provide adequately for newspaper men, upon whom in a great measure depends the success of fairs. A roomy, sheltered portion of the judge's stand should be fitted with tables and chairs and reserved exclusively for the quill drivers. It would not be asking too much to request in addition that an official statement as to all conditions of each race, starters, owners, colors, breeding, etc., be sent by the clerk of the course to the reporters before each race.

FIRST DAY.

The weather on Tuesday was perfect, the day being cool and a little breezy. The first race was called at 1:45, by which hour the number of spectators had much increased.

The officers of the day were, judges—Dr. Latham, Hon. Chris. Green and Senator B. F. Langford. Timers—Messrs. H. J. Agnew, F. P. Lowell and C. A. Durfee. Clerk—Fred Arnold; all of whom stayed at their posts through the long afternoon without remission.

The first race was a two-year-old stake, running, at one mile, open to the Pacific Coast, which closed with seven entries, of which but one, Mr. L. Shippee's sorrel filly Agnes B., was started. The filly cantered over the course in 2:32, ridden by "Shrimp." A curious thing about Agnes B. was that neither her owner, the clerk, nor anyone else knew her breeding, most opinions being that she was by Glenelg.

SECOND RACE.

The second race was a well contested event, a four-year-old trotting stake, open to the district, in which three of the eight entries appeared. Of the starters Steve Whipple had much the best of condition, the others, Leck and Moses S., being a bit high in flesh.

In the first heat, after much scoring, the horses were tapped from a fairly good score, Leck being two lengths behind, Moses S. having the pole, Leck next and Steve Whipple the outside. Whipple opened a lead to the quarter in 0:37½, and held it to the half in 1:13½, Moses S. then pushing for a place but being squarely out-trotted by Whipple, who went the three-quarters in 1:51½ and won the heat out of hand in 2:27½, Moses S., three lengths, second, Leck shut out. Pools: Steve Whipple $25, field $6.

At the first scoring of the second heat Moses S., a length to the good, led to the quarter in 0:37½, then lapped by Whipple and beaten to the half in 1:14½. At three-quarters, in 1:52½, Moses was four lengths behind, and when Whipple under a pull, jogged under the wire in 2:29. Moses had not bettered his place.

No pools were sold on the heat. For the third heat interest could not be excited, Whipple being so patently the better horse. He led easily, doing the quarter in 0:36½; the half in 1:13; three-quarters in 1:52½, and jogging under the wire in 2:32.

Third race—The third race regularly on the card was for a 3 minute class, but as it did not fill, the directors announced a special purse of $250—trotting, for California Lambert, Ha Ha, Ed. and Ben Ali. The race was most unsatisfactory as Ben Ali was evidently the better horse, but the race was prolonged through five heats without a decision until the famous John Goldsmith got up behind Ben Ali, when that horse took the two succeeding heats right off the reel, as he might have taken the preceding ones if he had had a driver. To charge irregularity without reasonable proofs would be unjust, but it may be said that a dozen or more men familiar with trotting and the horses under mention coincided in thinking that the race in the five earlier heats was not what it should have been. At one time Ben Ali sold choice for $30, field $5. That heat was taken by Ha Ha, and considerable money taken down.

In the first heat Lambert and Ben Ali fought all the way around, doing the quarters in 37½, 1:14, 1:51½ and 2:30½, the former winning by a head. Pools—Ben Ali $80, Ha Ha $6, field $17.50.

The second heat was in better time—36½, 1:12½, 1:52½ and 2:28½. The pools in the third heat sold—Ben Ali $30, field $5. Ben Ali led easily to the quarter in 38. Ed. then crowding into the lead to the half in 1:14½. Along the back stretch Ha Ha and Ed. were sent for the heat, the former having a shade the best of it, and so into the straight, Ha Ha getting the whip sharply and taking the heat in 2:29½. Ben Ali lost his feet in the last 70 yards, but was adjudged second, Ed. being third and California Lambert a bad fourth. The latter was withdrawn for lameness. The fourth was pronounced a dead heat, Ben Ali and Ha Ha finishing together in 2:31.

In the fifth Ed. showed the way to the quarter in 38½, Ben Ali breaking badly from the wire. The latter settled, however, and at the half in 1:14½ had the lead and held it to the third quarter opening a lead of five lengths, Ha Ha apparently being done. Down the stretch Ha Ha recovered, and trotting fast caught Ben Ali and won the heat by a length in 2:48½, Ben Ali not being extended. For the sixth heat John Goldsmith sat behind Ben Ali and drove the horse out regularly, the time at the quarters being 37½, 1:14, 1:52½, and for the mile 2:30½, Ha Ha went into the air on the back stretch and lost ten lengths.

The seventh heat was a repetition of the preceding, Goldsmith driving his horse and winning the heat and race in 2:36.

Fourth race—The last race of the day was for roadsters, gentlemen owners to drive. Eleven of the thirteen entries appeared and the varieties of road carts, together with the unprofessional appearance of the owners, created much amusement. Director R. C. Sargent and G. W. Trahern being the especial marks for the witticisms of the judges and spectators. The driving was creditable and the horses were of more than average merit, even if one interested did remark, as he looked up to the stretch and saw the motley flyers come pounding along at about a 2:40 gait, "Be gob, I see 'em, and they'll be here inside of five minutes." The race was for a cart, presented by the H. C. Shaw, Plough Works.

In the first heat Mr. A. W. Robinson's Bess won, Mr. C. E. Thompson's Sailor, second; Mr. J. S. Danham's Cleo third; Mr. G. W. Sampson's Roscoe Conkling, fourth; Mr. Percy Williams' Dixie, fifth, and the rest along the road. Time, 2:52½. The next heat brought Sailor in first, Bess next, Cleo third; Mr. C. L. Ortman's Prince fourth, and Mr. P. T. Brown's Catherine, fifth. Time, 2:47. Sailor also took the third heat in 2:45, the others placed being, Cleo, Bess, Catherine and Prince, in the order mentioned.

The fourth heat also went to pacing Sailor, in 2:48½.

SECOND DAY.

Wednesday dawned fair and with promise of warmer weather than on Tuesday. The pavilion attracted few persons because the exhibits were not catalogued and arranged. The city was astir at 6 A. M., the visitors evidently desiring to get that for which they had come to town. Fakirs of twenty sorts, each if possible more barefaced than the other offered the rustic capitalist an opportunity to gain largely from a small investment. During the day the "sure thing" men pined, but they harvested large piles of silver in the evening.

The stock parade on Wednesday morning was not full, nor was it creditable to an association which had within its stalls the select exhibits of earlier fairs. In cattle, the prime factor in San Joaquin's prosperity, the showing was weak, and unnecessarily so, for the reason that Stockton and vicinity can exhibit quite as good Jerseys, Herefords and Alderneys as any other portion of the Union, besides showing thoroughbreds and trotters which in development, beauty and record can equal those from any more advertised section. The chief interest as usual centered in the racing, and the main receipts of the society were from the gate, through which the choicest of the culture and beauty of Stockton passed between noon and 1 o'clock. Light colored and evidently light drapery contributed to make elegant equipages noticeable, and if it is written that nowhere in favored California can so much general beauty of classical severity be found, the writing will not be an overestimate. The course was reasonably well occupied by 11 o'clock, the advertised starting time.

The officers elected to perform the tiresome duties of the day were: Judges, Hon. Chris Green, Hon. L. U. Shippee, Senator A. L. Langford; timers, H. J. Agnew, O. A. Hickok.

First Race—The first race, a mile dash, brought six excellent horses to the start. Free-for-all, purse $400.

Heliotrope was a strong favorite, selling for $20 against $6 for the field. On the third try, starter Billy Donathan sent the half dozen off fairly, Heliotrope, pole, leading to the quarter in :26. Then Applause took up the running, and with Nancy was pushed through the back stretch and to the three quarter at a flying rate, too high to be sustained. In the homestretch Heliotrope raced into command and finished an easy winner of the race in 1:43½, Welcome, Oro, Applause, Nancy and Bay Bolton, finishing as named. The time at the quarters was in 26, 51 and 1:19.

Trotting—The second race, a District trot, for three-year-olds, was a "one-horse" race, Moses S winning in a go-as-you-please fashion. Two started. Grace Vernon might have been started in an opposite direction if it was intended that she should pass Moses. The first heat was done in 29, 1:17, 2:03 and won by Moses in 2:50, Grace only saving distance because Whiting pulled his horse almost into a walk. The second heat, in 2:50, was like the first. The third was even more pronounced in favor of Moses S. Grace Vernon went into the air at the quarter and galloped to near the head of the stretch, Moses trotting squarely. Moses was again pulled down to the merest jog to save Grace from being shut out, the heat being done in 2:55½.

Third Race—The third event of the afternoon, a special three-quarters and repeat, for $150, with Kildare, Elwood and Johnny Gray in was quite as interesting as either of the others. Old Johnny Gray, looking fine drawn and impetuous as ever, raced out the first heat in 1:16, winning by two lengths easily. Elwood, always erratic, showing a fondness for green fields by bolting to the fences at short intervals, but finishing second.

When the riders had mounted for the second heat, Mr. Shippee called them to the stand, and said: "Gentlemen, you are all old riders, and know the rules much better than I do. The people now here have paid their money to see good races and they shall have them. If you do not ride those horses for all there is in them, you will be punished in such a way that you will remember it the balance of your lives." The horse were then sent from an excellent start, Elwood being ridden by Cooke from start to finish with excellent judgment, and showing the way throughout. Johnny Gray made a brilliant play for the honors but lacked the pace, finishing second by a length, Kildare a bad third. Time, 1:16. The third heat was noticeable as showing the judgment and skill of Elwood's rider, Cooke. The horse acted badly and delayed the start, but finally got away on even terms with Johnny Gray, Kildare being retired under the rules. At the half Elwood led by a length in 0:25½, and ran easily to the three-quarters when he tried to bolt, but Cooke took him in hand, and using whip and spur vigorously kept him moving to the wire winning by a length only in 1:18. Cooke was loudly applauded as he deserved to be.

Fourth Race—Trotting, open to the district, two in three, for two-year-olds, brought out two likely colts in Kilrain and J. K., both sizable and of high form. Kilrain, although moving stiffly was made favorite in the betting for a few moments, but J. R. was soon given the commanding place, selling for $150 to $20, and again for $100 to $8. J. R. had it all his own way, taking two heats without being pushed, the first in 2:33 4-5 and the second in 2:41. In the latter Kilrain barely saved distance, Dustin slowing J. R. to a walk.

The pavilion exhibits are still inchoate, but it is expected that everything will be in readiness by to-night. The stock parade this morning attracted but a small crowd. Comparatively few horsemen are in town, but the hotels are filled by citizens of San Joaquin. Prospects are not flattering, but the great races listed for Friday and Saturday it is hoped will bring increased attendance. But very little business is being done by Messrs. Killip & Co., bettors being either absent or chary.

On Friday, Sept. 21st, there will be a free-for-all trotting race at Stockton, for which Arab, Lot Slocum, Stamboul, Director and Adair have been entered.

On Saturday, Sept. 22d, a free-for-all pacing race is on the cards at Stockton, the entries being Yolo Maid, Almont Patchen, Gold Leaf, Adonis, San Diego and Winslow.

Spokane Falls, Washington Ty.

The second annual meeting of the Washington and Idaho Fair association at Spokane Falls, opened September 3, under favorable circumstances. Springfield, Mass.

The unfinished events of September 12th, were first on the programme September 13th. In the 2:22 stake race, Geneva S with two heats to her credit out of the six heats contested, brought $20 in the pools, to $50 for the field. She finished first in the seventh heat, but the judges saw it otherwise, and gave the heat to J. B. Richardson. This gave Richardson the call at $40 to $50 for the field. In the eighth heat Richardson did some running in the home-stretch, but did not gain, and fairly outfought Geneva S to the wire, finishing four lengths ahead, in spite of which the heat was given to the mare. The result was a blow to the talent.

The only notable performance of the day was that of Johnston, who paced to beat 2:14, the record over Hampton Park, and lowered that mark by two seconds, recording at the same time the fastest mile of the year.

Prince Wilkes and Patron.

Cleveland, O., Sept. 13th.—Nearly 3,000 people saw the race between Patron and Prince Wilkes to-day at the course of the Cleveland Driving Park Association. The track was dry and springy, and cool breezes came off Lake Erie. Both horses were in fine condition. The pools sold at the beginning at $100 to $80 in favor of Wilkes. Just before the race was called, however, the betting was even. Shortly after 3 o'clock Crit Davis drove Wilkes upon the track and George Fuller followed with Patron. Wilkes wore elbow and postern boots, while Patron had nine-ounce shoes in front, and five-ounce shoes behind. Wilkes drew the pole.

At the first heat both horses were easily sent away abreast. Prince Wilkes gained a slight advantage a few rods from the wire, but Patron was trotting like sixty, and at the first turn won the pole. Davis urged his horse, but he could not overtake the stallion, who was two lengths in the lead at the quarter. In the second quarter Wilkes made another spurt, but Patron kept out of the way, increasing his lead nearly three lengths. To the three-quarter pole Wilkes lost inch by inch and both horses came into the home stretch going like the wind, Patron well to the front. Patron lost ground, but made a desperate effort to gain. Admirers of both horses cheered them half way to the stretch. In a few seconds Prince Wilkes was fighting his way at Patron's wheel. He gained slowly but surely, and Patron could not free himself. Four rods from the wire Prince was only half a length from victory. He needed no driver to urge him on, and he darted under the wire half a neck behind Patron, who completed the mile in 2:16.

The pool boxes were the scene of much excitement, as 117 mutuels had been sold on Patron and 40 on Wilkes. Mutuels paid $6.60.

Second Heat—In the second heat pools opened at $35 to $50 on Patron, but Prince Wilkes' fighting finish soon caused a change, and betting varied from the first figures to $20 and $30 on Patron to $50 on Wilkes.

The start was even, but Prince Wilkes was unsteady just before the turn, and broke a few lengths. The stallion needed no guidance in following the advantage gained by his rival's break, and he was soon three lengths ahead. The gelding continued unsteady and Patron put six open lengths between himself and Wilkes between the upper drawgates and the half-mile post. Prince Wilkes then settled down to repeat and surpass his brilliant finish in the first. Patron was steady and going with the wind, but at the three-quarter post Prince Wilkes had gained a third of his loss. The great racer meant to win the heat by a final effort. He increased his strides and gradually approached the leader. At the lower drawgate his head was at Patron's wheel, and at the band-stand they were side by side. Wilkes made another effort and he drew away from Patron, who seemed to give up, winning the heat in 2:16½. Prince Wilkes lost at least four seconds in the first half, but he closed the gap by trotting the last in 1:04.

The scene at the pool boxes was repeated. The winner had 186 ticket holders and Patron 141 in the mutuels.

Third Heat—Prince Wilkes was a strong favorite, selling $50 to $20 and $18. The start was in favor of Wilkes, and he held his advantage to the finish. Patron gave him a hot chase in the first quarter, but he gained nearly a half length at the turn. Patron trotted up to him on the second quarter, but he could not pass the fleet-footed gelding, who led by nearly a length at the half. Patron again went forward and nearly reached Wilkes' side at the three-quarter, but Davis slackened the reins and Wilkes went forward like a shot at the beginning of the stretch. Patron did not give up, but kept pluckily on, again coming up to the gelding's wheel at the lower drawgate, only again to dash under the wire nearly a length behind Prince Wilkes, who finished in 2:19½. The race was practically settled as far as the pools were concerned.

Fourth Heat—The start in the fourth heat was an easy one, and Prince Wilkes soon headed his rival, and the race then was simply a brilliant exhibition of trotting by both horses. Prince Wilkes had gained an advantage which he would not give up. A heavy season in the stud told on Patron's strength and he could not win. He went at his rival on the second quarter and was nearly with him, but Prince Wilkes drew away with ease. He again rallied on the three-quarter stretch, only to fall back again. The heat was finished by Wilkes in 2:18. Mutuels paid $6.60.

On the return voyage of Buffalo Bill's Wild West show he lost his famous old horse Charlie just before entering the New York harbor. The old horse came into the scout's possession twenty years ago. When he died he was wrapped in an American flag and was buried in the sea. The scout, with his company around him, delivered a little funeral oration, in the course of which he said: "You have never failed me, Charlie, old fellow. I have had many friends, but very few of whom I could say that. Men tell me you had no soul, but if there be a heaven and scouts can enter, I'll wait at the gate for you, old friend.—Chicago Times.

Our Kentucky Correspondent.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—Proctor Knott won the Futurity. Whether a better horse than the excellent Galen, or otherwise. If some accounts of the race are correct, Galen did the most running. On the other hand who can assert that the son of Luke Blackburn could not or would not have done a little more had it been necessary. Such questions are ever springing after races of importance, and but seldom are satisfactorily settled. Who ever attends races sees the best horse beaten, in many instances whether recognized as best or not. Placing the question upon the surest test under the surest crucible—that of trying their stamina and power as well as speed—it remains to be seen, only by waiting, which one of the two will be the best at weights, distance and speed, and endure the longest on the turf, unless equal trials as three-year-olds and upwards. In 1889, if Mr. Pinkus has no ill-luck with his gray colt by Falseito, out of Geneva, you all will see a race horse after the fashion that run fast and strong at two, and better at three-year-olds. I saw no yearling at the sales last spring that I liked better, if any I liked so well, and yet with all the buyers present who paid high prices, he sold low. Too many examples of this kind have already been lost to convince buyers of the error. At the sale of A. W. McAlister, Columbus, Mo., L. M. Lasey, Stanford, Ky., purchased for $400 bay colt, 1 year old, by imp. Claudius, dam Sally Mc by Tipperary.

Running qualities for 1889, '90, and '91 of imp. Wood Moss, b c 1 year old, (imp. in Utero), by Craucier, dam imp. Lady Nar by Macaroni, for $1,000. The colt possesses the very highest and most desirable strains of blood that enriches the English Stud Book; second dam Queen of Scots, by Blair Athol; third dam, East Sheen by Kingston, fourth dam, Christina by Wild Dayrell, and so on, while his sire, by Le Larrain, by Monarque, by The Emperor, by Defence, by Whalebone, he gets eight crosses of Whalebone, and through his dam's family he gets three, all close up through both sire and dam's lines of blood, and running through the best, fleetest and stoutest racers England ever saw. Chestnut filly by imp. Claudius, dam Prue Blackburn by Aaron Pennington, sold to Mr. Nathan King for $300. Two fillies were not offered on account of blemishes and injuries. It has been stated that Proctor Knott was sold to Mr. J. B. Haggin for $30,000, but as it is not authoritative I cannot believe it, and knowing the red-headed, Kentuckian very well, think he would rather own the horse than a much greater portion of Mr. Haggin's wealth. Who that loves the noble animal would not?

Mollie Wilkes in Austria.

The Star Spangled Banner waves on high in the realms of Francis Joseph. The occasion of rejoicing is not because of a diplomatic exchange of courtesies between Uncle Sam and Francis, but because an American trotter has lowered all European records in single harness; besides her own mark of 2:22½, got on her native soil.

The Austrians are more American in their characteristics than any other European people. Here are the headlines of a column in the Allgemeine Sport Zeitung for Aug. 19:

"2:20½!!!

"MOLLIE WILKES TRAIT IN WIEN DIE

"MEILE IN 2:20½!!!

"SENSATIONALLER RECORD!!!"

This means that Mollie Wilkes made the sensational record of 2:20½, at Vienna; Aug. 15.

There is an absence of detail in the report that comes to us, but we gather from it that a special purse was offered to her owner, "Herr Andrew Terry," to trot Mollie to beat the best previous European record of 2:26½, by Blue Bell, which was accomplished with 5½ seconds to spare. Mollie's best record previous to the Vienna performance was 2:22½ at Maysville, Ky., Aug. 20, 1887. Her Paris-Vincennes debut was a heavy handicap, but the late performance allays the stings of defeat under discouraging and unequitable conditions. "Herr Charley Dickerman" drove Mollie at Vienna and impressed the spectators with his style of handling a trotter. The 2:20½ may be credited to Young Jim and Augusta, as it was according to rule, over a track operated in the orthodox American fashion.—Spirit of the Times.

Larger Horses.

How rapidly we are being educated up to the larger horses! That we must have increased size to reach the best markets is now universally admitted. Only a few years ago 1200 to 1400 pounds was thought to be a big horse; now our grade draft horses sell all the better if they can be found heavier. Many of our best farmers have grand teams of grade draft mares that money cannot buy. Every one is worth a fortune for breeding, while the amount of work they can perform is astonishing. Even the thoroughbreds and trotters have caught the spirit of progress, and the largest of these horses are in popular demand, all clamoring for increased size. The farmers all want larger horses to work, and are eagerly breeding to increase the size. The dealers everywhere are actively looking for the grade draft horses all over the West, and fortunate are the farmers and the communities where this popular horse is found. His popularity is increasing faster than the supply, and prices are better than for any other stock. He matures early and sells for more money per pound than any other farm stock.—Western Agriculturist.

State Fair Receipts.

The total receipts of the State Fair at Sacramento, not including life memberships sold, was $25,766.85. This is $2,560 in excess of the receipts of 1886, and $3,848 less than those of last year. It is estimated that the rain of Friday night, which kept thousands from the pavilion, and of Saturday, which prevented racing on that day, cut the receipts short fully $7,000. Killip & Co. paid the Society $6,868 15 for eight day's pool selling.

On September 17th William Easton sold the entire racing stable of J. D. Morrissey, including French Park, Miss Cody, Sam Wood, Banbury, Kaloolah, Montana Regent and others; also, on the same day, fifteen yearlings bred by W. L. Scott, seventeen bred by A. Astor, half a dozen belonging to the Brooksley Stables, and draft horses in training from the Preakness and other stables, which brought good prices.

Mr. Irwin Ayres of Walnut Creek, Cal., has had the misfortune to lose a fine brood mare in foal to Mambrino Wilkes. This was Placida, b m foaled 1883 by Alexander sire of Geo. M. Patchen dam Countess (dam of Dawn, 2:19½) by Whipple's Hambletonian. As a 2-year-old, she lapped out Lucille in 2:28.

The successful Fall meeting at Hampton Park, Springfield, Mass., closed September 14. The track was fast and the weather perfect. The performance of the pacer Johnston, 1st in the afternoon, was the event of the meeting. It was announced that he would attempt to break the quarter-mile record; with a runner to accompany him. After warming up for a mile he was let out at the three-quarters post, and came down to the wire in 29½ seconds. This is the fastest time for the distance ever made on any track in the world.

CATTLE.

Close of the State Fair.

The heavy rain of Saturday was an unfortunate termination of what has been universally conceded as the most successful fair ever held here. Much disappointment resulted to the visitors, the receipts too, fell off, but on the whole these have been satisfactory, they are in the neighborhood of $30,000. The gold medal awarded to the Seth Cook Farm for their horses, to Mr. Peterson for his live stock (other than horses), and to Messrs. Weinstock and Lubin for their unique exhibit at the Pavilion, were well and fairly bestowed.

A large number of people have left for Stockton and Reno fairs. Mr. Frank Burke is among those going to the latter place; he takes his beautiful herd of Holsteins, together with many others of the same breed for sale during the fair.

The management was on the whole satisfactory, when the duties of the State Board of Agriculture are so onerous and are performed gratuitously, it would be invidious to overwhelm them with hyper-criticism.

I, and many who were with me under the wire think that Guy Wilkes should have been given first in the third heat of the stallion race. It is curious that there has been no allusion to "the murmurs for Guy Wilkes" in the various accounts of the race.

This Fair has done much for the State in past years. It has improved yearly in management and increased in interest. It deserves the support and commendation of all Californians, and we hope next year will tell the tale of still greater improvement in the various departments.

Mr. Edwin F. Smith made a most energetic and courteous Secretary. From start to finish it was whip and spur with him all the time. His attentions to members of the press deserve every acknowledgment at their hands.

Best heifer calf, Coleman Younger & Son, San Jose, $15; second, P. S. Childs, Davisville, $7 50.

Best thoroughbred Durham herd over two years old, one male and four females, owned by one person, P. S. Childs, Davisville, $60.

Best young herd of thoroughbred Durhams under two years old, one male and four females, P. Peterson, Siles, $30.

Sweepstakes—Best bull, Coleman Younger & Son, San Jose, Third Kirklevington of Forest Home, $50; best cow, Bridgeford & Mulligan, Colusa, $30.

CLASS II.—JERSEYS.

Best three-year-old bull—Levi Carter, Ceres, Earl Mameluke, $40. Second—H. S. Sargent, Stockton, Waterman, $20.

Best two-year-old bull—A. L. Nichols, Sacramento, Gladstone, $20. Second—William Johnston, Richland, Dick, $15.

Best one-year-old bull—W. C. Smith, Florin, $20. Second—William Johnston, Richland, $10.

Best bull calf—H. S. Sargent, Stockton, Alpha, $15. Second—S. F. Eaton, Florin, Black Bart, $7 50.

Best Jersey cow, three years old and over—W. C. Smith, Florin, Irene Staatsburg, $40. Second—Thomas Ward, Oakland, $20.

Best two-year-old cow—H. S. Sargent, Amy Platt, $20. Second—William Johnston, Beauty III, $15.

Best one-year-old cow—W. C. Smith, Florin, Martha of Florin, $20. Second—William Johnston, Richland, Ellen Douglas, $10.

Best heifer calf—W. C. Smith, Florin, Mona of Florin, $10. Second—J. Askan, El Dorado, Mountain Pink, $7 50.

JERSEY HERDS—OVER TWO YEARS OLD.

Those making entries under this head were H. S. Sargent, J. Askan and William Johnston. The committee says: H. S. Sargent and J. Askan have agreed to divide the $60 premium between them, the herds being so equal in merit that the committee have recommended this course.

CLASS IV.—AYRSHIRE.

Best two-year-old bull—George Bement & Son, San Pablo, Lord Faxon, $30. Best one-year-old—George Bement & Son, Red Mikado, $20. Second—George Bement & Son, Hotspur, $10.

Best bull calf—George Bement & Son, Express, $15.

Best three-year-old cow—George Bement & Son, Sybilla, $40. Second—Same, Highland Mary, $20.

Best two-year-old—George Bement & Son, Ethel Berta, $30.

Best one-year-old—George Bement & Son, Faxon, $20.

Best heifer calf—George Bement & Son, Frou Frou, $15. Second—Same, Highland Beauty, $7 50.

Best Ayrshire herd of any age—George Bement & Son, $60, or silver pitcher.

CLASS V.—HEREFORDS.

J. L. McCracken—Two-year-old bull, $30; do one-year-old bull, $20; do bull calf, $15; do three-year-old cow, $40; do second premium, $20; do cow one year old, $15; do cow one year, $10; do heifer calves, $15 and $7 50; best herd, $50. He also took the sweepstakes for bulls and cows, $50 and $50.

CLASS VI.—HOLSTEINS.

Best bull, three years old and over—F. H. Burke, Menlo Park, Sedro, $40; second, Leland Stanford, San Francisco, Mahomet, $20.

Best two-year-old bull—F. H. Burke, Menlo Park, Von Moltke, $20; second, F. H. Burke, El Cuervo, $15.

Best bull, one year old—Leland Stanford, Montague, $20; second, F. H. Burke, King of Menlo, $10.

Best bull calf—Leland Stanford, Asuno, $15; second, F. H. Burke, El Cuervo, $7 50.

Best cow, three years old and over—Leland Stanford, Pansy, $40; second, F. H. Burke, Sylpha, $20.

Best two-year-old cow—Leland Stanford, Ledo, $30; second, F. H. Burke, Ontarrette, $15.

Best one-year-old—F. H. Burke, Belanga, $20; second, Leland Stanford, Mecox, $10.

Best heifer calf—Leland Stanford, Ojinsgro, $15; second, Leland Stanford, Patino, $7 50. For the best herd of Holsteins, of any age, to consist of at least one male and four females, the premium—$50, or a silver pitcher—was awarded to Senator Stanford.

CLASS VIII.—GRADED CATTLE.

Best cow, three years old and over—W. Tryon, Sacramento, Jersey, $30; best two-year-old—W. Tryon, Sacramento, Pet, $10; best one-year-old—P. H. Murphy, Brighton, $5; best heifer calf—W. Tryon, Sacramento, Beauty, $5.

SWEEPSTAKES.

Sweepstakes, Jerseys—Best bull of any age, Thomas Ward, Oakland, Billy Ralston, three years old, $50.

Best cow of any age—H. S. Sargent, Stockton, Daisy W., $50.

Herd sweepstakes, milk breed, $100—Leland Stanford.

Best breed sweepstakes, $100—P. S. Childs, Davisville.

Best milk cow, any age or breed—Leland Stanford, Pansy (5,023), Holstein, 356 pounds 14 ounces, first prize, $30; second prize, F. Burke, Sylpha (5,964), Holstein, 302 pounds 8 ounces, $20.

Best Ayrshire bull—$50, George Bement; best cow, $50, George Bement.

ADDITIONAL PREMIUM.

Live stock other than horses—P. Peterson, Sytes, Colusa County; for his herd of Durham cattle, a gold medal.

NEW DIRECTOR APPOINTED.

Governor Waterman has appointed and commissioned Charles F. Swan, of Santa Barbara county, a cattle raiser and farmer, as a Director of the State Agricultural Society, vice L. J. Rose, resigned.

Cheese Making.

The art of cheese making is almost unknown to small farmers. The following is taken from Henry Stewart's recent work.

Any quantity of milk, from 100 pounds upward, may be used. The night's milk may be set in a cool place and stirred frequently up to the latest opportunity. In the morning this milk is skimmed and put in tin pails in a tub of hot water to get warmed up to 100 degrees. The morning's milk is brought in fresh and warm, and is at once mixed with the warm milk, which is reduced to 90 degrees by this mixture. The mixed milk is put into a clean wash-tub and the rennet is added. The rennet is made by steeping a piece of the dried stomach of a calf in warm water and adding salt. The exact quantity required for 100 pounds of milk is 60 grains, or one-eighth of an ounce of the dry stomach in 2½ ounces of water at 70 degrees, for twenty-four hours, for milk at 90 degrees. About one drachm or a tablespoonful of salt is added for this quantity. When the rennet is added the milk is well stirred to thoroughly mix the rennet, and the tub is covered with a cloth to retain the heat. This quantity of rennet is enough to make the curd in an hour. More rennet will make hard, dry cheese, and so will a higher temperature, either of these being equivalent in effect to the other. A low temperature and a small quantity of rennet are also equivalent to each other in producing a soft, mellow cheese, which cures in the best manner and develops a meaty, rich flavor. In one hour the curd is set. It is now cut with a long-bladed knife in straight, perpendicular slices, one inch thick, and then crosswise one inch apart. This causes the whey to separate and the curd to shrink.

Just here is the point where the various methods of making cheese separate. By the cheddar system the whey is dipped off and heated to 150 and 180 degrees, and is poured back on the curd, which is thus heated up to 100 degrees, and is kept so heated until a piece taken between the teeth "squeaks" when it is chewed, or, when touched to a hot iron, the curd draws out in strings several inches in length. The other system dispenses with the heating, and the curd is left with the whey until it is firm enough to be lifted up in the hand without falling apart or losing its shape, when it is ready for breaking up, salting and putting in the press. When the curd is ready the whey is all drained off by tilting the tub and breaking up the curd with the hands. In the cheddar system the curd is drained and broken up while still warm, and is left in a heat to become slightly acid. As soon as the acid is apparent to the taste the curd is again broken up by the hands quite fine, salted in the proportion of 2 per cent, of fine dairy salt, and put into the hoop and the press. In the other method the curd is not left to sour, but is broken up, salted and put into the hoop. The hoop is made of thin ash or pruce board, and for 100 pounds of milk or 10 pounds of cheese may be eight inches in diameter and ten inches deep. The curd is pressed in the hoop by the hands a little at a time, to get it firm and solid, and a loose head is put in with a block upon it. The cheese is then put under the press. The press is a frame or bench having an upright post at the end in which is pivoted a long lever. The cheese is put under this lever near the pivoted end and a weight hung upon the other end, so as to get a moderate pressure upon the cheese. A folded cloth is usually put under the cheese to absorb the whey which is present slowly out of the cheese. For a ten-pound cheese and a ten-foot lever a ten-pound weight would be enough for the end of the lever.

As soon as the cheese is firm enough to be handled, it is taken from the press, rubbed with butter, and placed in a cool, dry cellar, on a shelf, to cure. It is turned on the other end daily for a month; and if mold gather on it this is scraped off and the cheese is greased again. With six cows giving seven quarts each, a ten-pound cheese may be made daily.

Sheep for Mutton.

We Americans know very little about mutton—less than any people who know what good living means. We have been badly educated in this matter. American palates have tried to ape the English taste for mutton. We should have been more American, and had our own standard of excellence in a mutton chop, and for that matter, in a mutton sheep, too. All these years we have tried to create a demand for and grow a supply of English mutton sheep. A few men and a few localities have succeeded in growing very excellent specimens of these highly meritorious breeds of sheep in a small way. Why? Well, for singular and various reasons.

In the first place, we have not tried to learn how the very results sought for were produced. High-feeding, we were told, could produce such specimens, and what high-feeding meant was not fully told. Steady, even-handed feeding and care, that has created these wondrous sheep in England, is not an American characteristic at all. Nor will it pay one man here and another miles away to grow such sheep for the prices we get for mutton. Were a whole community engaged in the growing of such sheep, buyers would come in and pay well for the finished beauties, and ship them to the city markets, or export them to England.

After all that has been said about mutton breeds, and the abuse and representations as to the bad qualities of Merino sheep for mutton, it is a fact that thoroughbred and grade Merino sheep furnish by far the larger part of the mutton eaten in this country. Nor does it go under its real name in the markets by any means. Many a city butcher with a Southdown head on his brook for a sign, sells Merino chops to his best customers, English as well as American; and all the boasted ability to detect the Merino stench goes for a joke. Merino sheep are not treated fairly for mutton. They will pay as wool-growers two well to sell for mutton until too old to be first-class. Let the mutton breeds be kept to the same age, and would the results be any better? There is more in the handling, feeding and finishing than in the breeds.—Farm and Fireside.

Professor Stewart says a very valuable use of flaxseed can be made by grinding one bushel with eight bushels of oats, or all the flaxseed that can be ground without sticking to the mill-stones. Then mix 100 pounds of this ground oats and flaxseed with 200 pounds of bran. This will be the best kind of feed for young pigs, and it will be good for them all the time up to fattening; and besides this they will be smooth, rangy pigs, making good roasters at all times.

During the past few years there has been a very large immigration of permanent settlers into California. The total area of this State is 98,000,000. The present area of unentered government land is 38,000,000 acres. Of this the area suitable for agricultural purposes is 13,000,000 acres, and the area of that portion adapted to lumbering and mining purposes 15,000,000 acres. With the exception of San Francisco, every county has portions of untaken and productive land

Petaluma Cattle Disease.

The following question with answer from Dr. Murray, of the Breeder's Gazette, bears out Dr. Maclay's assertion with regard to the late cattle disease at Petaluma. "I want to ask Dr. Murray his opinion about feeding corn-stalks or corn-stover to horses after it is cured and has been passed through the cutting-box. Some claim that the joints cannot be digested, and will kill horses."

REPLY—I have usually found that horses leave what they do not like to eat, and I can readily believe that if they are, by putting them on short allowance, compelled to eat what they have refused, sickness will result. As corn is cut at different stages of its growth by different farmers, and is afterward treated differently, its feeding qualities must vary considerably under different circumstances.

Dr. Maclay's experience was with cows, and the indigestible nature of the stocks which had been half chewed up and rejected by hogs; these the cattle were compelled to eat, with disastrous consequences to themselves.

A Large Creamery.

The creamery owned by the Martin family, Big Meadows is a wonder of inventive genius. It is run by steam power. The milk, while warm, is poured into a large zinc tub, which is on a high table. It slowly runs into a small, shallow one, from that through a tube into another vat, that separates the cream from the milk. The machinery revolves at the rate of 6,000 revolutions per minute, and the cream, by its centrifugal force, is separated from the milk. The cream is forced through a small groove scarcely as large as a pin, while the groove through which the milk runs is about five times as large. It looks strange to see the milk running through the same vat that the cream does, only through different tubes, and there isn't a particle of cream left in the milk. When the cream has all been run through the machinery they have one-fifth cream. They churn twice a day by steam. The creamery is a large new building, well ventilated, and the only thing it lacks to be all one could wish is screens at the doors and windows. They say that if a single fly gets into the machinery which separates the cream from the milk, it stops the machinery. And I should imagine that would happen often without screens, and be a source of great annoyance and inconvenience to them.—Red Bluff Cause.

Notes.

The Hon. Lafayette Funk, of Shirley, Ill., has succeeded in getting a calf from a buffalo bull upon a grade Shorthorn cow.

The Northeast Missonri Shorthorn Association will hold their sale at Mexico, October 24th, instead of the 25th, as at first announced.

From recent tests at the English dairy show, the evening milk is proven to contain more solids than the morning milk.

The Arizona stockmen have made a new departure; they propose to fatten a large number of cattle on alfalfa fields before sending them to market this year.

The Farmer of St. Paul, Minn., has ceased to exist. Mr. Geo. Hill, its editor, in a farewell notice regrets that the State has shown itself unable to support a first class agricultural paper.

The Fresno Tribune says: J. G. James, a large cattle-raiser on Fish Slough, will take a band of 30,000 head over into San Luis Obispo County, where he has rented a range of 55,000 acres.

During the last twenty-four years 2,400 bulls and 1,700 horses have been killed in bull-fights in the City of Mexico. Two picadores have been killed by the bulls in that time.

The London Times says that the present grain crop in England is probably the smallest in a country. England will need 160,000,000 bushels of grain this year, and prices will probably go higher.

The Mechanic's Fair committee at San Francisco have announced the following awards for county exhibits. First, Best, most varied and extensive exhibit of farm products (exclusive of live-stock) in the State, Santa Clara $1,000; second, Sonoma $600; third, Butte $500; fourth, Stanislaus $400; fifth, San Luis Obispo $300; sixth, San Benito $200.

A butcher in Liverpool, England, was recently summoned before a magistrate on the charge of selling horseflesh for beef. He was fined 50s, not for selling the horseflesh, but because it was unsound: The magistrate said that he knew of nothing to prevent a butcher from selling such meat, provided it were good and sound.

There is one person in Cornwall, says the Hartford Times, who thinks an animal may know too much. While he was admiring the beauty of his favorite cow, imagine his surprise to see her fasten her horns into the limb of an apple tree, shake it and then pick up the apples. These proceedings were continued until she had satisfied her appetite.

The Breeder's Gazette well says: A prize for pure-bred live-stock at an agricultural fair is not an honor to be carelessly bestowed. It has a value to the recipient far beyond the few paltry dollars following the award at the time from the society's treasury, and the conscientious judge is not therefore merely drawing warrants upon the treasurer by his decision. He is rather proclaiming to the great host of uninitiated that through the ring—side the relative worth for breeding purposes of the competing animals, and the lesson is therefore either valuable or the reverse according as the verdict is just or otherwise. So long as show-ring awards are carefully made by competent men, their teachings are necessarily in the right direction, but a prize is truly a two-edged tool, which wrongly directed, results in naught but damage to the cause designed to be promoted. If by erratic judging the wrong beast be set upon the pedestal of official approval, not only is the worthy forced to give way to the unworthy, but also gods are set up in Israel which lead those who follow them astray. A grave responsibility rests upon the judge, and he should therefore don the ermine with a keen appreciation of that fact. Let us have careful, conscientious work for the next six weeks.

SUCCULENT FOOD FOR COWS.—Recent experiments throw some doubt on the old belief that succulence in food is best for cows. If given plenty of water of the right temperature, they will produce as much milk on dry meal and fodder as on that moistened. In summer, succulent food is best, because the cow needs more water during warm weather.—Humboldt Mail.

To Subscribers.

Look carefully at the date on the label of your paper.

Should this paper be received by any subscriber who does not want it, or beyond the time he intends to pay for it, let him not fail to write us direct to stop it. A postal card (costing one cent only) will suffice. We will not knowingly send the paper to anyone who does not wish it, but if it is continued, through the failure of the subscriber to notify us to discontinue it, or some irresponsible party being requested to stop it, we shall positively demand payment for the time it is sent.

Special Notice to Correspondents.

Letters intended for publication should reach this office not later than Wednesday of each week, to secure a place in the issue of the following Saturday. Such letters should be addressed to the "BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN," because if otherwise addressed they may be delayed until too late. Letters which demand immediate attention may be delayed, and still worse be entirely neglected.

Whatever pertains to the paper should be addressed to it. This will insure immediate attention.

The Night Hawk Stakes.

The stakes which bear the above name, are now christened after the mare which at the date of her winning had lowered the time of Jennie B., and thus won the right. That was in 1882 and up to this date no competitor has had speed enough to change the name, though it has been run fast enough to meet the conditions. In 1883 Jim Renwick won in 1.42½. In 1884 Forest King won in 1.43½. In 1885 Beaconsfield was first at the winning score, Alf Estill second, John A. third, the time of Beaconsfield 1.42, but he was found to be two pounds short when weighed in and Alf lacked 1½ pounds of being correct. John A. was one pound short, so that he was awarded the money. In 1886 Neilson won in 1.43 and in 1887 Edelweiss got the stakes though Lizzie Dunbar was first in 1.42½. Thus there have been two disqualifications in two years. Almost winning in 1888, in 1.42½ makes the fifth return of this record which is rather singular in such a small number of races.

"To be named after the winner if Night Hawk's time 1.42½ is beaten" is a condition which appears to be an effectual bar to a change. To be deprived of the honor through such a small thing as a lack of thirty-two ounces in the weight carried was aggravating, the consequent loss of money to owners and backers intensifying the regret.

Reduce the Per Cent.

In a conversation with the president of one of the prominent district fairs he advanced the idea that the speed programme would have to be excised owing to a lack of entries in the trotting classes. Should that be done the whole exhibition might as well be given up, as in this State a fair without trotting would be held a dull and uninteresting display. It may be that a plan can be fixed upon which will obviate the difficulty, something done to remedy the defect without resorting to such an extreme measure. In the case mentioned there should have been no lack of entries. The purses were liberal, the management popular, the track one of the best in the State. It came at a time which seemed favorable, and, in fact, there did not appear to be anything lacking to ensure the hearty support of owners and trainers.

In endeavoring to find reasons for the paucity of entries we have been a good deal puzzled, and, mentally reviewing the field, forced to acknowledge that it is an intricate question. The most plausible solution appears to be that a number of owners are unwilling to take the risk of so large a percentage as is required to enter in the purses of the whole circuit. From the early part of August until well into October there is not a week unoccupied, in several of them two or more fairs coming on the same date. Eight weeks, say, and if an entry is made for one race in each week 80 per cent. of the amount of one purse is required. As the divisions are usually made the winner receives one-half of the amount on which entrance is paid so that one "first money" and rather more than one second money is needed to make good that one item of expense. There is a general desire to participate in the State Fair classes, and therefore should there be also a desire to escape some of the risks one or more of the district fairs will be passed. A reduction from ten per cent. on the whole amount of the purse to a smaller sum would remedy that drawback, and then the question arises, can it be afforded? Owners are not satisfied without the purses are large, and if smaller is given than what is thought to be right entries are not made.

We thought that the managers of the Marysville Fair were more than liberal in the offer to return entrance merely to the horses which started in the classes they were named in and did not win any part of the purse. This was virtually an acceptance of 40 per cent on the amount offered, as there would be few non-starters when this was part of the contract. The difficulty which might come from a general adoption of that condition would be the naming of horses which had no show to win even the fourth premium, and in that way encumber the field with horses which would be in the way. Five entries and four starters were required to fill, so that with a like condition and the entrance fee reduced to five per cent, there would not be a great diminution with the minimum number and with a good chance to receive more than forty per cent of the amount of the purse.

We have always advocated the taking off the burden of expense as much as it is profitable to do from the owners of horses, but also due attention must be given to other interests at stake. If fairs and meetings entail losses to those who do the work, without any chance for remuneration, it will soon lead to abandonment and then there will be no chance for horses to earn their oats. Whether large purses with the ten per cent clause, the same amount with a reduced fee, smaller purses with five per cent to accompany the entry, stakes with a certain amount of added money, or the Marysville plan is the best for all parties interested is a troublesome problem. As Marysville adhered to its plan after the trial of one year, it is a fair inference that it was found satisfactory. We will be pleased to learn what is thought of it after two trials.

"Hayseed."

Every man we have met who was in attendance at the State Fair, has had something to say about Victor, the winner of the 225 race, and still more about his owner, Mr. Dougherty. A majority of our informants have looked on horse trainer and driver, management, etc., as a sort of burlesque on trotting, others who look below the surface are impressed with the idea that something can be learned from the peculiar methods followed. In many respects there are practices similar to those advocated in this paper. Tips are worn on the fore feet, the hind feet bare. The head is left free, and in place of the usual manipulations, bandaging, rumming, rubbing, and heavy clothing between heats, the horse is permitted to roll, and walk until the summons to prepare for the next heat is sounded. The dress of the driver is commented upon, and though the habiliments may not be in good taste it is evident that that has nothing to do with the performances of the horse. Mr. Dougherty's manner of driving evokes criticism, but as the horse trotted far better in his hands than when he was piloted by a man who comes nearer to the requirements of critics it must be admitted that in this instance at least it is the winning way. His methods of training, too, have met with the best kind of endorsement, a successful result. We learn from those who should know that before going into Mr. Dougherty's hands he was considered a failure as a fast trotter, and that his former owner, Mr. Todhunter, disposed of him for a small sum. For two seasons, perhaps more, Victor has been in the stud. A list of mares bred to him in 1887 was published in the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN, August 6th of that year, and had we referred to that we would have learned his pedigree and avoided the supposition that his dam was a sister to Monarch.

The pedigree given is "Victor by Echo, dam by Woodburn; second dam by American Boy, Jr.; third dam a mare imported from Illinois of untraced pedigree." Before the list of mares for 1887 was "looked up," we were informed by a man who made enquiries while in Sacramento that the dam of Victor was owned and perhaps bred by a widow who lived in Woodland, and that the pedigree was as is given above. The list of 1887 contains forty mares, several of them being by Ballot Box, and others of good breeding. In 1886 he had a record of 2:36, and this he reduced in 1887 to 2:30½. So far in 1888 there is a further reduction to 2:22½, and with sound reasons for the belief that he can compass 2:20 or better.

Now a system of training and driving which will show steady improvement is certainly preferable to that which turns out phenomenal speed in a short time, but is followed by retrogression. When there has been failure before under a different plan, subsequent success must be credited to superior skill. It may be well for those who laugh at the driver of Victor to study the innovations, and if there is a capacity to acquire knowledge they may be benefited thereby.

Fairs to Come—San Jose, Fresno and Carson City.

The fairs are drawing to a close. San Jose, Fresno and Carson City the coming week, and after that Napa, Willows, San Diego, etc. Those which are so close at hand are likely to prove as interesting as any which have come to a close, and from the information we have received, are sure to be the best ever held in these places.

Apart from the attractions which large fields of horses present, there are other inducements which will operate to increase the attendance from a distance as well as a multiplication of gate receipts from home patrons. San Jose has been appropriately christened the garden city of California. Fresno is the center of a country which has advanced with such wonderful strides in a short period as to be one of the marvels of the year, and Carson City a typical Nevada town where there is so much to admire that all the time which can be spared from the park and course can be pleasantly employed. The entries for Fresno and Carson City have not been received, so that they cannot be appended, though the programmes are reproduced which will be proof sufficient that a "good time" can be guaranteed. San Jose having closed August first, we are enabled to show the actual contestants.

There is an assured promise of grand sport at San Jose, and the programme gives like appearance of the same at Fresno and Carson City. San Jose is practically a part of San Francisco. So short a time is spent on the journey and that through a country every mile of which is interesting, that the trip alone is well worth the cost of two railway tickets. The morning trains arrive in time for two races of the afternoon, and it may be that an evening train will be in readiness to carry passengers to the city after the sport is concluded. Oakland and Alameda are just as favorably connected with the Garden City. From these places there is a choice of two roads and a country between which cannot be surpassed for fertility in any corner of the world.

Fresno has made such a rapid advance since the construction of the track, which was built under the superintendency of Sam Gamble, that "old settlers" who have been absent for a few months can scarcely realize on their return, the places they were familiar with before. The large increase of population insures a big attendance and this will be augmented by a large division from abroad, who will avail themselves of the opportunity to learn more about the resources of the country during fair time than could be obtained in a long sojourn at another season.

Not long ago we drew a slight sketch of Carson City, and have no hesitation in reiterating that whoever attends the fair and does not have a full quantum of enjoyment, the fault is in himself. Furthermore, that notwithstanding that those of the main exhibitions are held the same week that there will be no lack of horses to make the speed department entertaining. That there will be plenty of people is beyond reasonable doubt.

The State Fair.

There is nothing more convincing than figures provided they have not been subjected to some puzzling process which may make them appear as showing something entirely different from what an honest statement would disclose. But there are one set of figures which cannot be manipulated so as tell a wrong story when these are set forth sanctioned by men who are above suspicion. The receipts of the State fair, as shown in another column, are best evidence of its success. Exceeding those of 1886 by a handsome sum, and only a little short of 1887, when the drawbacks are considered, must be acknowledged to be the best exhibit ever made.

The extreme heat reduced the attendance in a greater degree than many would suppose. The reports deterred people from going who had fully made up their minds to spend the second week of the fair in Sacramento, and a large number who were in attendance sought relief by a trip to the bay. A gentleman from Tacoma paid us a visit while the Fair was in progress, and in reply to a question stated that he and a number of others from the north, who intended to stay during the whole of the Fair were reluctantly forced to leave by the heat being so much greater than they were accustomed to in their country. But while the heat was the cause of a diminution of attendance which it is safe to estimate equal to the loss of at least $3,000, the forced abandonment of Saturday's programme entailed a loss of fully $7,000. Deducting the entrance money and the three races only cost $920, and it is nearly certain that the mutuels would have liquidated that amount. That there would have been the largest crowd of the meeting is "dead sure," by far the largest as to our knowledge. The morning train from Oakland would have been crammed had it not been for the intelligence that the races were off.

Our folks were all ready. Not one late at breakfast that morning, and already equipped for the journey. The tinkling of the bells which announced the arrival of the morning papers was heard a block away, and a dozen eyes were fixed on the headlines which told of hopes disappointed. Even since Miss Wilson became connected with the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN, we have expatiated on the sights to be seen at the State Fair, though purposely refrained from coloring anywhere nearly as high as truth would justify in order that on her return she could say, "not one-quarter was told."

It had been so busy a week that she would not think of leaving until the business was in a shape to leave without serious detriment, and the last day of the fair, when Stamboul would meet Arab and Lot Slocum, with the fast trio of young pacers to give zest to the entertainment, was the best time of all others to attend.

The pavilion, too, would be a grand spectacle with all Sacramento and the thousands of visitors to take a parting look. We must acknowledge an over anxiety that she should see our State Fair, in order to prove how much superior it really was to like institutions of the East, and confess that we were the most disappointed member of the party which was looking so eagerly over the morning paper for news.

Scarcely one of our acquaintances which were encountered on Thursday and Friday who did signify their intention to see the big trot, and therefore have not a shadow of doubt that the feeling was general all over the State. Seven thousand dollars, more than likely $10,000 would have been added to the credit side of the balance sheet had the last day of the fair been held with a fair day for the close.

The old-time trotter Lucille Golddust, record 2:16½, is proving a great success as a brood mare. Her first foal, Lucille's Baby, has made a record of 2:21½ this year, and has won nearly all her races. She is eight years old, and the next foal from the old mare was Sprague Golddust by Gov. Sprague, that is now five years old and has been trotting second to horses that took records of 2:25 and better in order to beat her. There are three other foals from Lucille Golddust, all by Young Jim, son of George Wilkes, and they can all go well on a trot. It will be remembered that Lucille went through several hard campaigns when she was on the turf, but her vitality does not seem to have been impaired, and she is throwing speed to the cover of three different stallions, Lucille's Baby being by Princeps. That she will nick well with Young Jim there is little doubt, as he is of the Wilkes family, and has already sired two that have beaten 2:20—Butterfly and Garnet. Lucille Golddust was bred to George Wilkes, to his son Wilton, and to Dictator, in addition to the stallions mentioned above, but none of them got her in foal. Her first foal, the one that now has a record of 2:21½, would not trot a five-minute gait until she was four years old, but came fast when she started.

Subscriber, Wheatland, Cal.

Please give me pedigree of horse known as "Washoe," Also, Record, if any. He is owned in State of Nevada.

Answer.

We do not know the horse. Perhaps some of our readers can give us the desired information.

Miles City, Montana Territory.

Will you be kind enough to inform an old Californian and reader of your valuable paper the best time that was ever made in your State for half a mile running race, if 48 seconds was ever made. Please name the horse, track and date.

Answer.

Santa Rosa, August 17th, 1886, Cyclone won a race, heats of half a mile, in 48, 49. He ran in the same time at Petaluma, but was disqualified for a foul.

Reader, San Francisco.

Will you please give me date and place when the great race between Norfolk and Lodi was run in this city?

Answer.

At Ocean House Race Course, Tuesday, May 23, 1865, and at Sacramento on Saturday, May 27, Lodi and Norfolk raced. The great race was the first mentioned.

CORRESPONDENCE.

LOS ANGELES, CAL., Aug. 17, 1888.

BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN, 313 Bush St.—Mr. Hancock M. Johnston desires me to have you correct the orthography of his nominations as published in the last number of your paper in pacing class. It should be Hemet Stables, b. f. Ella Wood by A. W. Richmond, dam, Crichton's First by Crichton.

Very respectfully,

E. A. DE CAMP.

LOS ANGELES, CAL., Sept. 6, 1888.

BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN, S. F.—Mr. H. M. Johnston desires me to write you again to have you correct the publication of pacing mare entries. He says it should be "Hemet Stock Farm's" b. m. Elwood, by A. W. Richmond, dam, Crichton's First by Crichton.

Mr. Rose wishes you to correct your publication of his Stamboul, Inez, filly's name. You have it Visalia; it should be "Vesolia," a name from the Russian vocabulary.

Yours truly,

E. A. DE CAMP.

In regard to Ella Wood or Elwood, it is difficult to determine which is right. The sister to the great Arrow deserves to receive her proper name at all times, and we are anxious she should have it in our columns.

We understood that the Stamboul-Inez filly was named for Visalia, California, and so gave it. We are always glad to correct any errors that may creep into our columns. The confusion in spelling various names gives us much trouble. Various secretaries and exchanges have used "Peregrine," "Perigrene," "Perregree," etc., for W. M. Murry's chestnut gelding and many others have passed through orthographic changes more or less startling.

ED. BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN.—In your issue of last Saturday I see friend Marvin sees fit to reply to my article on "Manzanita." Allow me to say, Mr. Marvin never complained to me of the "track" concerning the mare's lameness—others did that. The "management" did the fault-finding. We wanted to please our visitors, and did all we could. I went to Mr. Marvin about the ditch, and if my "senses" were "accurate" he assured me there was nothing in it, but no controversy is desired. We only wish all visitors to feel that our board desire at all times to do all possible to cater to the desires of racing people.

Respectfully,

E. A. DE CAMP

Nevada State Fair.

AT THE TRACK.

The Nevada State Fair of 1888, opened most auspiciously, the weather was all that could be desired, and everything passed off without anything happening to mar the pleasure of the day. Although it was the first day, quite a large crowd was in attendance.

THE RACES.

The first on the programme was a selling purse, one mile dash, with the following entries: Leopold Steiner of Austin entered Parole, G. L. Richardson entered Minnie B, and Small & Whelan entered Theodore Winters' Alcatraz, which proved an easy winner by a length, with Minnie B, second and Parole third. Time 1:48.

The second was the Nevada Stake for two years olds, five-eighths of a mile dash. Theo. Winters entered Don Jose, and W. M. Murray, Almont, the latter winning easily in 1:48. The above were followed by three-eighths mile and repeat race, in which Theo. Winters entered Joe Courtney, J. M. Welch, Fox; J. F. Hansen, Look-out and Leopold Steiner, Rondo. Owing to the late hour at which it occurred the Gazette can give no account of it.—Reno Evening Gazette.

D. J. McCerthy, of California, has bought in New York a chestnut filly, sister to Cupid by Baden Baden, dam Brenda, by King Alfonso.

The Matlock Bros. and Lady Duffly were ruled off a year ago, for a fraudulent race. Nevertheless they started Lady Duffly and won with her at Portland. They also ran her at Spokane Falls.

A correspondent in an exchange writes: "I wish all horsemen knew the value of sunflower seed. It is not only one of the best remedies for the heaves, but a horse that has recently foundered can be entirely cured by giving half a pint twice a day for awhile in his feed. I took an otherwise valuable young horse last fall that was so stiff that you could hardly get it out of its stall, and in two weeks you would not know that anything was the matter with it, and it has been all right ever since."

The trotter Lot Slocum, made a mile in 2:16½, at Spokane Falls on Saturday, Sept. 8th.

Proctor Knott's Home.

Belle Meade, the birth-place of Proctor Knott is just now attracting the attention of horsemen. The famous Tennessee stud is under the charge of Gen. W. H. Jackson, and the success which the youngsters have achieved this season reflects credit on Belle Meade. Bramble, Great Tom, Enquirer and Luke Blackburn stand high among the winning sires. Frequently it has happened that the get of these four horses have won half of the races run on a particular day, and occasionally they have captured 75 or 80 per cent. of them. Another peculiarity of the horses bred by Gen. Jackson is that when one of them scores a victory he does not merely advertise his own sire, but springs from some homo-bred mare and adds to the renown of some other one of the Belle Meade sires. To illustrate this point, take the very notable case of Proctor Knott, who, while being chiefly instrumental in raising his own sire to the first rank of winning stallions, has done little less for Great Tom, the sire of his mother. Tallahoosa, Miss Ford has been a great card for Enquirer, and has been mutually a help to Bramble and Luke Blackburn, the half-brother of her mother, the great Bribery. That wonderful race horse Niagara, which at a mile (1:41½) has had but few superiors, is by Luke Blackburn, out of the dam of Bramble, while the great sprinter Bradford, who recently ran seven-eighths of a mile in 1:27½, and was then sold for $6,000, is by Bramble, out of the dam of Luke Blackburn. Had Salvator or Galen won the Futurity, Luke Blackburn still would have come in for his share of the honor, as these two are sisters' sons. Gen. Jackson has been quietly reserving as many of the Great Tom mares as possible, and has already turned fifteen of these magnificent blood animals into his paddocks. Several years ago he re-organized the surpassing value of the Great Toms, and at Lorillard's Racocas sale two years ago backed his judgement by repurchasing for Belle Meade the great English-trained mare Touch-Me-Not, who now has at her side a speedy-looking handsome son of Luke Blackburn, bred so nearly like Proctor Knott as to make them almost full brothers. There are eight other youngsters now at Belle Meade with the same close relationship to the Futurity winner. Among these is one Tom Boy, a young mare, the pet of the plantation, who had three winners, Romp, Minnie Palmer and Culp, representing her this year in active training. Top Light, by Great Tom, from the Great Vesper Light family, has a Luke Blackburn colt which, with proper training, should be heard from on the turf. The stud has in reserve the most distinguished if not the most valuable horse, the only American winner of the English Derby, Iroquois. No less than twenty of his beautiful offspring are now frolicking in the rich blue grass at Belle Meade. To Iroquois have been submitted many of the famous old dams of Belle Meade, and among these are a large number of Bonnie Scotland mares, doubtless the most popular family now in American studs.—The Republic.

St. Bel's Feat!—He Shows a 2:04 Gait.

What proved to be the most interesting and striking event of the week took place at 9 A. M., when Miller & Sibley's famous stallion, St. Bel, was brought out of the Prospect Hill stables and sent around the track to exhibit his movement. It had not been the intention to show his powers as to speed; but the performance to which the dark and sweeping follow treated the spectators, unexpected to nearly every one and wonderful to all, will reach far and wide and will add to the fame of the great son of Electioneer.

This event, not down on the regular program, was brought about casually. Dr. Madara, proprietor of the Twin Springs Stock Farm, near Altoona, Pa., remarked in Mr. Sibley's hearing that he had heard a gentleman say confidently that he didn't believe St. Bel could show better than a 2:50 gait. Mr. Sibley thereupon replied that, although the horse had been in the stud service continuously for two years, and during that time had never been given his head on the track, he felt certain he could show a 2:20 gait. To show his confidence, Mr. Sibley ordered St. Bel to be fetched out of his stall.

The stallion was driven around the track by his groom, Clel. Walters. Timers having their watches in hand, Mr. Sibley told the young man to let St. Bel have his head and see what gait he would take. When the horse reached the starting point of the test, the one eighth mile post, all eyes were well open with wonder at his stride. With his dark sides listening and his symmetrical form moving as if on coiled springs, he came sweeping down toward the wire, like "King Duncan's horses, beautiful and swift."

The time result astonished the timers. According to Dr. Madara's watch, St. Bel made the one-eighth mile in 15½ seconds, showing a 2:04 clip for that distance. B. M. Babcock, president of the Binghamton Driving Park Association, made the time 16 seconds, a 2:08 gait.

The circumstances all add to St. Bel's remarkable triumph in the trial. He had not a particle of preparation, had been in the stud service every day this season, and for two years had never been sped on the track. Moreover, he was driven by a young man who never even chirped to the horse, but just let him go.

The performance unquestionably places St. Bel in the forefront of the trotting horses of the world.

Ira I. Harris, of Budtown, Ky., driver of Virginia Evans, who was a charmed witness, declared that St. Bel is the fastest horse he ever saw, and that he showed the purest, cleanest, most frictionless gait of any horse he ever knew.

As to the accuracy of the time given, we copy the following certificates made out and handed to Mr. Sibley:

FRANKLIN, Pa., September 8, 1888.

I hereby certify that on Friday, September 7, 1888, I timed the stallion St. Bel one-eighth of a mile over the Franklin track in 15½ seconds. The time taken was from the last one-eighth pole, and was taken as accurately as possible from my position on the stretch.

J. W. MADARA, M. D.

Prop'r Twin Springs Stock Farm, Baker's Summit, Pa.

FRANKLIN, Pa., September 8, 1888.

I hereby certify that on Friday, September 7, 1888, I timed the stallion St. Bel as accurately as possible to catch time from my position on the stretch, one-quarter mile in 16 seconds.

B. M. BABCOCK,

Pres't Binghamton D. P. Ass'n, Binghamton, N. Y.
Evening News, Franklin, Pa., Sept. 8,

Daniel Bandmann brought back with him from Europe some remarkably fine Percheron stallions and mares, with pedigrees as long as your arm. He quartered the animals at the American Horse Exchange Stables, New York, where they created a sensation. The horses are intended by the actor for his ranch in Montana. There be some—his enemies of course—who say Mr. Bandmann's business ideas are keener than his artistic perceptions.

No Match for Galen.

CHICAGO, Ill., Sept. 14.—Two thousand people took advantage of the beautiful weather to-day to witness some very good racing at Washington Park. The track was in fine condition.

Mr. Gray, the owner of Galen, was asked by an Associated Press reporter this afternoon if he contemplated trying to arrange a match later in the season between his colt and the crack 2-year-old Kentucky colt Proctor Knott, who defeated Galen in the Futurity stakes. Mr. Gray said that he had not the remotest idea of doing so. His colt was entered in a number of stake events which, he said, were more valuable to him than a match with Proctor Knott for a big stake. He was opposed to such events on general principles, as they created discord and bitter feeling among race people. He did not care to push Galen too hard this season. Galen will start next at Letonia. Summaries:

First race, purse $400, for 2-year-olds, three-quarters of a mile. Starters—Richland, Galen, Cherry Blossom, Remini, Sparling, Redlight and Verdeur. Galen, the favorite, won in a gallop by two lengths; Cherry Blossom second, and Sparling third, three lengths away. Time—1:15½.

Second race, purse $400, for all ages, one mile. Starters—Pink Cottage, J. Q. Wills and Von Tromp. Pink Cottage won in a driving finish by a length, Von Tromp beating J. Q. Wills out by a neck for the place. Time, 1:42½.

Third race, the Avondale handicap, a sweepstake for all ages, with $800 added, one mile and a furlong. Starters—Bankrupt, Dyer, Col. Hunt and Poteen. Dyer led from the start to finish, winning in a gallop by three lengths; Col. Hunt, second, three lengths in front of Poteen. Time, 1:55½.

Fourth race, selling, purse $400, for all ages, seven furlongs. Starters—Clara C., Cupid, Morua, Hamlet, Golightly, Pat Donovan and Mirth. The finish in this race was very exciting, Clara C. getting her nose under the wire a neck in front of Cupid, who beat Pat Donovan out by a head. Time, 1:30.

Fifth race, purse $450, for horses which have run and not won at this meeting, one mile. Starters—Margo, Harry Glenn, Arundel, Dousman and Lizzie B. Harry Glenn won easily by two lengths; Dousman second, and Lizzie B. third, three lengths back. Time, 1:42½.

ENTRIES FOR TO-DAY.

Following are the weights and entries for to-morrow's races:

First race, three-fourths mile—Mooustone 94, Birthday 110, Hornpipe 113, Sereander 107, Rhody Pringle 105.

Second race, one mile—Hornpipe 143, Beaconsfield 146, Meekie H. 117, Malaria 143, Doubt 146, Jim Mulholland 136, J. B. Harris 143, Von Tromp 136.

Third race, seven-eighths mile—Lady Hemphill 97, Long Side 100, Laura Stone 112, Blessing 110, Hindoo Craft 102, Rosebud 95, Havillah 107.

Fourth race, one mile—Elmira 93, Bonita 112, Birthday 112, Dyer 103, John Daly 104, Lizzie B. 95.

Fifth race, one and one-eighth miles—Comedy 96, Bonnie King 93, Arundel 107, Hamlet 92, Winouo 93, Dousman 103, Mirth 93, Woodcraft 110.

The English St. Leger.

The great autumn race for three-year-olds of the English year, decided on Wednesday the 12th inst., was won by Seabreeze; Chillington second, Zanzibar third. Ayrshire has been the favorite for months, but fell off soon as the day drew near. The following was the state of the market on Ayrshire and Seabreeze September 1:

LONDON, Sept. 1.—Ayrshire still heads the list of quotations on the St. Leger, but it cannot be said that he fills the eye as a firm favorite. On the contrary, he is assailed day after day by a fresh batch of speculators, and even his old opponents have an occasional fling at him. Last Saturday Ayrshire had as healthy a look as his best friends could wish, 2 to 1 having been taken in London to £500 at least, and at Windsor a solid transaction of 800 to 400 was recorded. On Monday the same price was booked to the best part of a thousand pounds, with still a disposition to lay. The next day his position was weaker, 2 to 1 being much more frequently offered than taken, and Wednesday's market was still more hostile. Yesterday there was a persistent desire to bet against the Duke of Portland's horse, and one commissioner—a well-known backer—offered 900 to 400, no part of which was closed with. And so Ayrshire left off friendless for the day. A marked reaction occurred to-day, 9 to 4 being taken as soon as offered, so that the hostility of the previous day may be set down as naught. Seabreeze was rather shaky last Saturday, 11 to 2 being offered openly. Things looked a little brighter on Monday after two bets of 500 to 100 each and 5 fifties were accepted. Later in the afternoon an old stager appropriated 1,000 to 200 in a bet, but he was not so much in love with the transaction on learning that he could be accommodated with 5,000 to 1,000 more. Then again the price for a place was far from healthy, 6 to 4 having been laid to the best part of a thousand. And it is understood that long 6 to 4 is obtainable now. This latter, however, is anticipating. Both on Tuesday and Wednesday, 5 to 1 was always on offer, but yesterday a well-known backer of the mare took 5 to 1 to all he could get, which amounted in the aggregate to a couple of hundred pounds, and he it was who offered the 900 to 400 on the field. The complexion of things was not quite so rosy to-day, for he was offered 500 to 100 in several hands at once, each of which he declined, his only proposal to come to terms being an offer to take 600 to 100. This led to nothing.

The St. Louis Fall Meeting.

Cash premiums amounting to $70,000 are donated for the six days' meeting of the St. Louis Fall Trotting Meeting, commencing October 1st. On the opening day the 3:00 class trotters and 2:30 class pacers will contend for purses of $1,000 each, divided. On the second day, October 2d, the 2:25 class trotters are given full scope for a purse of $1,500, mile heats. The free for all pacers $2,000 purse, and the 2:40 class $1,000 will enlist the sympathies of horsemen and public on the third day, while on the fourth day the $2,000 purse, free for all, will be the card. This should be the great day of the meeting, and from present appearances will be one of the red letter days at the St. Louis track. The 2:20 and 2:30 classes will compete on Friday, $3,000 being offered to the winners, while to close the meeting the 2:35 class will trot for $1,000. Ten per cent of the purse must accompany each entry, and half fare rates for passengers, freight and live stock are guaranteed on all railroads within 1,000 miles of St. Louis. In the free for all pacing race on the third day, Johnston and Arrow are barred.

Garrison to Retire.

"Snapper" Garrison, the famous jockey, says he is going to quit riding. To a reporter of the New York Sun he said: "My contract with the Haggin stable expires November 1, and after that I will ride no more."

"No more this season, you mean?"

"No more this season nor any other, unless I change my mind greatly. I have received some splendid offers to ride next season, but I have declined them all, and some of them had mighty big salaries. I intend to have a stable of my own and I'll have some good horses, too, you can bet."

"Won't you ride your own horses?" was asked.

"No, sir; of course I may ride in a few events where I won't have to train down much, but I am sick and tired of having to get down to the weight I now ride at. I tell you a heavy-weight jockey has to undergo next to living death to be able to ride at the present weights. I only eat one meal a day, and that I don't get until my day's work is done and I have taken a Turkish bath. Oh! the hot room; it makes me half sick to think of it. I eat nothing in the morning nor at noon, and drink very little. Every day I take an eight mile spin in heavy sweaters. The first six miles I walk at a brisk pace, and I run the last two as hard as I can. I come in covered with perspiration, and then, no matter how warm the weather is, I have to jump into bed and cover myself with blankets. That is how heavy-weight jockeys reduce in training. I am sick of it. I will have a stable of my own, and next year I propose having somebody else do the walking, running, sweating and fasting for me."

Dry Monopole, that for the last two years has been one of the most successful handicap horses in the country, has finally given way in his forward legs, and it is doubtful if he ever races again. Were he not so small a horse, Dry Monopole would be in demand for use in the stud, but in these days a sire must have size in order to command the patronage of good mares.

TRAP.

R. K. Sutton reports that Squire Parker, of the station on Linkville road, Oregon, came in from a hunt the other day after axes and help, stating that he had treed a big buck and wanted to cut him out. He had shot the buck, when to his surprise, it took shelter inside of an immense fir log, which had been burned inside until there was nothing left of it but a shell. When Squire came up to the open end of the log, the wounded buck made a charge toward him, but ran back into the dark shadow before he could shoot, and then persistently refused to come out and be killed. Two men with axes succeeded in cutting a whole in the tree so they could kill the buck, and he proved to be one of the largest ever killed out there. This may sound like a good-sized yarn to some of our readers, but it is true. It must be remembered that fir trees grow big in Oregon.

Lincoln Gun Club.

The club closed its season at Alameda Point on Sunday last, the wind-up being a dinner. The day was fine, and many ladies attended.

The scores were not so high as usual, due perhaps to the unusual temptations in the way of entertainment.

THE KENNEL.

Dog owners are requested to send for publication the earliest possible notices of whelps, sales, names claimed, presentations and deaths in their kennels, in all instances writing plainly names of sire and dam and of grandparents, colors, dates and breed.

Communications relating to this department should be addressed to BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN.

An Inside View of the English Kennel Club.

Mr. Buckell, known because of his connection with Mr. Parcell—Llewellyn in the introducing and establishing of that cross breed setter which for some time bore the name "Llewellyn," recently gave expression through Land and Water, to some notions about the Central Kennel Organization of England, which will surprise readers. Just how far the writer has permitted pique to color his statements we cannot judge, but it seems probable that he has deemed himself affronted by the Kennel Club and is in a degree spiteful. He says:

"The Kennel Club Managers are chiefly composed of gentlemen who breed, for sale to a large extent, some one or more sorts of dogs. These gentlemen influence the selection of judges. In our opinion their appointments are good ones. The breeding for sale we have no earthly objection to in the abstract, and as far as non-sporting dogs are concerned, we see no disadvantage in one man breeding and keeping just as many dogs as he chooses; whether it is fair that these breeders should also appoint the judges is a question which does not concern us or, in fact anybody but the other exhibitors amongst which we are not to be found. What does concern us is that the same principal of breeding in great numbers should be applied by the managers of dog shows to the breeding in their own kennels of dogs which deceive the public under the guise of champion sporting dogs. When we see a dog show manager with twenty to forty retrievers in his kennel, and upon enquiry find that his sporting is of a limited character, while dogs broken or unbroken, figure as dog-show champions we are aware that he is keeping far more dogs than he can give work enough to do to render them really useful sporting dogs; and we are aware also that the public buy them and breed from them under the impression that they are procuring really sporting dogs, when as a matter of fact, they are offering nothing better than toys which have been tried for generations entirely for dog shows, some of which have incidentally been broken, and a much smaller proportion used in sport to any useful extent. This case bears a strong likeness to that of the successful breeders and exhibitors at Kennel Club shows. If the club were to inaugurate retriever trials in the field, and make entry at the shows depend upon success in the field, we should expect to find all these celebrities conspicuous by their absence. We know, as a fact, that merit is not considered in the breeding of the majority as show pointers and setters, and we are morally certain that it is the same with retrievers and spaniels. In fact, it must be so when they are bred in large quantities in any single establishment. There cannot be enough work to bring out and exercise the intelligence of the stud dogs and bitches, and the instinct in every succeeding generation becomes weaker as a consequence.

What one prominent member's kennel is amongst retrievers, we are inclined to think another's kennel of Irish setters is amongst setters. We have made particular inquiries as to what amount of shooting these dogs get, but we cannot hear of anyone who can affirm that they do get work to any considerable extent. Doubtless both these gentlemen occasionally breed a good dog, but that does not show good working blood. What does show it is when every puppy in a litter may be depended upon to be up to the average of good dogs, and many of them far above it. This we should not expect from either of the above kennels, where an occasional dog up to the average is all we should look for. The English setters and the black and tan setters at the show just past show us that there can be even lower grades of breeders of sporting dogs than those reached by the retriever breeders of both sorts. Here we find that breeding for show points for so long has defeated itself, and has physically incapacitated the outcome of the system for hard work, even if they possessed the will to do it, which we do not suspect they do. If the Kennel Club interfered with the present system, by making entry at their shows depend upon dogs having done something at field trials, Othello's occupation would be gone. All the champions and coming champions would be excluded from competition, and a dog show, instead of being a great assembly of dealers, would become a rendezvous of sportsmen who breed dogs because they want them. A few years ago we had hoped that dog shows might be drifted into something of this kind, and we used the little influence we possess to induce the establishment of field-trial classes at dog shows. A few gentlemen very honorably attempted to combine good looks and good work and public form. These were Mr. Lonsdale, Mr. Loyd Price, Mr. Barclay Field, Mr. Purcell Llewellyn, Colonel Cotes and Mr. Pilkington. Doubtless if the absence of these gentlemen had not been more or less preferable to their company at Kennel Club meetings, they would have been encouraged to continue to exhibit; but then, as before, Othello's occupation would be gone, so that, in one way or another, they have all been made to prefer to keep their dogs without the sphere of action of the Kennel Club. One only of those gentlemen exhibits one entry, viz., Mr. Pilkington, and we are constrained to say that the exhibition of Woodlon Game is the remnant of the better spirit and more sporting character of dog shows.

We have already said that we used our influence to induce classes for field-trial dogs; and at one time, before the Birmingham Dog Show fell under the boycotting influence of the Kennel Club, it looked as if it might become the fashion to send field-trial dogs to the show. We remember a class containing about a dozen magnificent field-trial winning setters; but, unfortunately, the Kennel Club followed Birmingham with a sort of feeble imitation such as to make the whole thing ridiculous; thus they give a first prize of £3 for pointers, and a second of one pound, and throw the prize open to any dogs which have been entered twice, or called up twice at a field-trial; for such is the meaning of the words of the regulation; whether it was intended or not we cannot say. But so little is the prize regarded by those who are ambitious to win field-trials that, although thrown open practically to all entries at field-trials, neither pointer nor setter field-trial class secured more than four entries, showing that those who have really valuable dogs do not regard the inducements of Kennel Club honors as equivalent to the risk run by the dogs in obtaining them. When, therefore, we see the name of a field-trial owner in the catalogue, it is generally a sign that he has a draft to sell which he will not personally recommend to a purchaser.

For these reasons we strongly advise our readers who want dogs for the moors to leave dog-show dogs entirely alone, and instead, to attend Aldridge's sales, where they may generally find dogs which some friend can tell them about, or if not, they may rely upon the affirmative descriptions in the catalogues when a well-known name is attached thereto.

Fishing in Japan.

Carter Harrison, in a letter to the Chicago Mail, writes as follows about fishing in Japan:

The farmers seem to be also fishermen. This is a vast business on the Yang-tse. For a thousand miles a huge dip net is to be seen every hundred or so yards on either bank. This is from twenty to thirty feet square, is attached to long poles inserted in the banks, and lifted by pulleys. It seemed to me that the fisherman invariably lifted his net as we passed, intending probably to have it up before the steamer's swell should drive the fish out.

A large fish caught is taken out by a small scoop net. The smaller ones drop through a throat in the centre of a net into a bag, where they remain until the fisherman is ready to go home. Thousands of fishing boats are always to be seen, and in swarms early in the morning and late in the evening. Some with dip nets ingeniously rigged out at the stern and also lifted by the pulley; others with drag-nets.

This muddy river is full of fish, some of them of great size and in great variety. In the spring vast quantities of samlai, a species of shad, are caught. They are said to be very fine. I have myself seen many varieties of fish, some very beautiful in form, and have eaten several kinds which are equal to any fresh water fish I know.

As with the Japanese, fish seems to be the flesh food of the average Chinese. Pork is his delight, but fish his piece de resistance. It is everywhere to be seen for sale, and is carried dried in great quantities to the far interior. It is very cheap, the very best costing only two or three cents a pound.

Many singular modes of catching fish are practiced. Boys and men dive down from the piers in the cities and bring up good-sized ones. I suppose they catch them in their hiding places. But still more amusing to me is to see a boat go out with a bamboo pole across its bow, with a dozen or so trained cormorants perched upon it. Reaching the fishing grounds a cord is tied about the bird's neck, and he is sent down to fish. He rarely fails to bring one up. He cannot swallow it on account of the cord on his "guzzle," so he brings it to his master, who rewards the bird with a small fish and sends down another. And so on till he fills his boat. I was told that some of the birds are so trained that they do not have to be throttled. This mode of fishing is used more on the small lakes, made when the river falls, than in the river itself.

Vast numbers of lakes are left when the floods go down, and these, I am informed, are simply alive with fish.

Trout Fishing.

Mountain trout are now catchable at the junction of the North and Middle Yuba rivers. Before the stoppage of hydraulic mining this was not possible. Grangers, here's a chance for a wild yell about the "purity of our streams," etc. Improve the opportunity, ye diabolical!

We clipped the above from the San Juan Times of last week. The Times' comments are unworthy of an Apache scalper. The same paper speaks very encouragingly of the agricultural and horticultural interests of the county, as demonstrated this season by actual experience. We ask our mountain contemporary if, by the acts of the men of the valley a natural condition should be reinstated in the mountains that would bring sure and lasting prosperity, would it still howl "diabolism?" Such must be your future.—Sutter County Farmer.

There are several reasons why brook trout do not thrive in the lower part of rivers communicating with the sea. One thing is very certain—they do not feel at home in salt, or even brackish, water, and do not seek it of their own accord. Occasionally they get washed down by floods; but as soon as the rush of water has subsided they begin to work their way up again, and if there is an obstacle to their ascending, such as a weir or mill, they are sure to be found close up to it. They always seem prompted by instinct to work upwards into shallow, rapid water, where the bottom is gravelly, and, I believe, for the following reasons: They can there deposit and cover up their ova, and, when hatched, the young fry can get protection among it from their numerous enemies in their early days. And although food may be plentiful in muddy, sluggish streams, near salt water, it is not of the kind that trout delight in. Larva, flies and minnows abound in quick, bright streams, and there the trout can clean themselves from their parasites, and, with healthy bodies and abundance of natural food, come into condition early and become lusty and strong.

A knowledge of the habits of trout is very essential to the angler, and such knowledge can only be acquired by careful observation. In the month of April they begin to leave the deep pools and work up on to the shallows or stickles in search of the flies which the increasing warmth from the sun is hatching out, and the largest fish take up positions where they can best intercept the supply of food coming down the river. Such places as just below sharp bends of the stream, behind large stones, posts, or other obstacles, at the head or tail of deep pools, and on the margin of swift currents, or where two streams unite; and if you take a good fish at any particular point, you will probably find, a day or two after, that the next best fish in that locality has taken up the position of the one you captured. Next, as to the time of day. The most suitable time is from about 8 A. M. till noon, and after about 4 P. M. until it is dark. In most trout clubs fishing after half-past nine in the evening is prohibited; but if you are not restricted in that respect you will find the largest fish are taken from sunset till ten or eleven o'clock; and it is desirable at times to take out the very largest fish, as they are apt to become addicted to cannibalism, and do an immense deal of mischief. A large white or brown moth, on strong gut, is very likely to bring them to bank, and you thus assist in bringing about the survival of the fittest.

Kennel topics between seasons rather pall on the taste, and so with those of interest chiefly to followers of the field, but the angler, like his loved haunts, is ever awake and fresh with eagerness to hear and talk about even very familiar phases of his chosen sport. As between wet and dry fly fishing, extremes are widely separated; and indeed it seems impossible to fish the dry fly upon an ordinary broken stream. A modest but evidently expert angler, says:

"Of dry-fishing as a finished art I know nothing. Let me explain that my remarks in favor of down-stream fishing are intended to apply only to rivers, or parts of a river where there is a stream—that is to say, where the water moves with greater or less rapidity either over a rough, pebbly bottom, or in a smooth channel. In such places it is, I reiterate, my experience that, throwing an ordinary cast of three flies, more fish are taken down stream than up. But in the deep, still pools, which occur here and there on most rivers where the current is scarcely perceptible, and where, owing to sheltering banks or bushes, the surface is seldom ruffled, it is, in my opinion, immaterial whether the fly be thrown up, down, or across the water, so long as it be lightly laid on and the fisher keep well out of sight of his fish. In determining from what direction I should fish a pool of this kind I should be guided by several considerations, in not one of which is the up or down stream question taken into account. In the first place the position of the sun, if shining: to turn your back to His Majesty is a rudeness for which the trout will speedily rebuke you by retiring to their private chambers the instant the shadow of yourself or rod falls upon the water. Then obstructions must be looked out for. Under those fringing alders on the opposite bank lie some of the heaviest fish in the river, but it is a long cast to reach them, and hazel and mountain ash grow thickly on this side. Here, then, we must disregard all question of up or down stream, and take such point of vantage as may offer. And here let me, in passing, emphasize "Red Palmer's" sound advice as to learning to cast with both hands. In such a position as I describe the ability to make a long left-handed cast may be a vital necessity of the situation."

Now, as to "striking." I was careful to confine my heresy on this point to stream-fishing also, but it is my opinion that in many cases, even in pool and lake-fishing, the fish hook themselves. The illustration of the blowing out by fed fish of a piece of stone taken by mistake for bread or potato, has not, I submit, any bearing on the question. A piece of stone is not a sharp barbed hook, nor does a trout, in taking sunken bait, dash at it, as he usually does at surface food. I say usually, for sometimes trout, and particularly the wily monsters which lurk in quiet holes by tree roots, etc., have a knowing habit of sucking the fly quietly under, and when this is the case, striking is invariably necessary to prevent the almost instantaneous ejection of the lure. It is well too, in fishing for these old stagers, to pitch the fly—one only should be used—on to something which overhangs the haunt of the fish slightly above where he lies—a leaf, piece of root, tussock or grass, or edge of the bank—whence it may naturally tumble off, and be carried by the current just to "his lordship's larder."

Finally, as to choice of flies. Perhaps I did not make my heresy on this point sufficiently clear. What I wished to say was, not that it is immaterial what kind of fly is employed, but that, given a supply of the ordinary well-proved patterns, it is not necessary to the success of any particular imitation that the original be upon that particular water at that particular time. On arriving at the stream side I select a cast of flies varying in size, colour and character according to the state of the water and climate conditions prevailing, and with this I continue to fish while like conditions obtain, regardless of what fly may be on or off the water during that period. Some of my friends, on the contrary, keep watch on the insect life around them, and when a rise of any particular fly comes on, stop to put on an imitation of it, if they have not already one on the cast. I cannot find that their creels are any the heavier for these frequent changes, nor does my experience lead me to believe that a fly like "Holland's Fancy," for example, ceases to kill because the Yellow Dun, say, is thick on the water and no brown fly is visible; but, as I stated at the outset, I merely in these jottings give my own impressions, and would not wish to form of my opinions a Procrustean bed in which to bind down the other anglers.

As to the reel or winch. Notwithstanding what many of the fishing books say against a multiplying reel, I always prefer one. I have used a 2-inch multiplier for fourteen or fifteen years, and have lost far more fish from not being able to get in the slack line quick enough, even with its aid, than from the inaction of the reel. Then with regard to the running line. The best that I know of is the "Acme." It is constructed of silk, with a very fine strand of annealed copper wire running through it. The wire gives a little weight and considerable strength to the line, and prevents it from kinking up; but it must be used with care, for if you do get it entangled you soon spoil it.

In selecting the line, it is very necessary to adapt it to the rod, for if you use a light line and a stiff rod you cannot get the line out properly, and if a heavy line with a pliable rod you soon strain the rod.

The gut or casting line should be moderately stout at the upper part and tapered down to the point, and let it be of the very best quality you can get, and if stained a dull blue color is less perceptible in the water than when it is white. It is far more economical to buy the most expensive gut than to whip off your flies or lose a fish by having an inferior article. Flies are commonly made with a loop on the gut, to be passed through a corresponding loop on the casting line. A much neater plan is to cut off the loops and tie the two pieces of gut together by a fisherman's knot. Never go without a landing net. The most convenient is that with a telescopic handle and a folding ring. The handle should have a hook fixed on to the upper part of the butt length, and let the handle with net attached, ready for use, hang suspended from the reel strap that crosses your left breast. A pair of wading boots or stockings, a good pocket-knife, a piece of india-rubber, with which to strengthen out the gut, a wicker creel, and something to eat, drink and smoke, and (with the exception of flies, of which I shall treat in my next), you are equipped for a day's sport.

I now come to the artificial fly, and there is no subject on which anglers differ so much as to what assortment of flies is necessary.

Some anglers will carry as many as 100 kinds in their book, while others are content with three nondescript's of quite an unnatural appearance, and pretend they can catch fish as well as those who go prepared with a large variety. Walton names nine, beside caterpillars, and Cotton mentions 69, while Ronald describes very many more to choose from. David Foster speaks of 31. My experience has taught me that about a dozen assorted flies are necessary and sufficient for all practical purposes, but they should represent in size, shape, and color as nearly as possible the natural flies which frequent the water on which you are fishing. In determining what colors to use, it is desirable to look at both natural and artificial specimens through clear water from underneath, as they then appear quite different to what they do when viewed out of water.

The late John Hammond, of Winchester, designer of the Wickham's Fancy, showed me this through a clear bottomed glass decanter.

In calm weather and smooth water one fly at a time is sufficient; but in rain, wind, or broken water, two, three, or even four flies may be used with advantage, as you not only give the fish a variety to choose from, but you can thus find out which kind they are taking and adapt your cast to their taste. Various opinions prevail as to wet and dry fly-fishing, and in this matter again, if we want to deceive trout, we should follow nature as closely as possible. On a dry, quiet day, the wings of the natural fly are dry, and when it falls on the water some time elapses before they become saturated, and until then it floats on the surface. Give your artificial fly two or three flicks backwards and forwards before you finally throw it. You thus shake the water out of it. But on wet or very windy days the natural fly soon becomes wet with rain, or from the broken surface of the water, and at such times let the artificial sink a few inches beneath the surface, and if the trout are feeding, fishing in this manner is most deadly. At night I have generally found wet fly-fishing answer best, even when there was no rain, and I attribute this to the natural fly becoming damp with dew and sinking. When it is thought desirable the use more than one fly at a time, break the gut line at the required point, and tie the ends in a fisherman's knot; but before drawing the half hitches together pass the end of the gut attached to the drop-fly through, having first made a knot at the end to prevent its drawing. The drop-fly will thus stand at a right angle to the casting line, and should be about three inches from it, and the trout will not be likely to come in contact with it when seizing the fly.

It does not very often happen that you hook two trout at a time, and after you have hooked them the difficulty is to get them into the landing-net, as they are pulling against each other, in divers directions; but if you can accomplish this difficult feat with fine gut, you may reckon yourself an angler.

The most useful flies for general purposes I consider to be the Red Spinner, March Brown, Blue Dun, Green and Grey Drake or May-fly, Coachman, Alder, Sedge, Black Gnat, Cooch-bonddhu, Wickham's Fancy, White Moth, and Red Palmer. The latter I have used in all weathers and seasons for nearly fifty years, and believe it to be the best general fly there is, although, strictly speaking, not a fly, but an imitation of the caterpillar commonly called a Palmer, from its wandering habits.

Second dam, by Peacock, thoroughbred.

No. 9—LOTTA.

Bay mare; 15.3 hands; foaled 1872.
Sired by LEXINGTON, sire of Norfolk.
This mare was brought to this State by Mr. Gage at the same time that he brought Katie Pease, and was represented to be thoroughbred. She gives every appearance of it, save as to her disposition to trot, which is remarkable. She could show a 2:30 gait to wagon on the road, which was the only discipline she ever had at the trot. The day I bought her she showed me a mile in 2:32 to wagon. Her produce shows the same tendency to trot.

No. 10—MARY G.

Brown mare; 15.2 hands.
Sired by BLONDIN, son of Imp. Sovereign, thoroughbred of great renown.
She was bred by Col. Charles Jennison, late of Kansas, and was brought to this State by Ben Ekers. She showed me a trial run most remarkable under the circumstances. This is the dam of Christmas.

$500 Reserved for Special Races.

CONDITIONS.

All trotting and pacing races best 3 in 5, to harness, unless otherwise specified. Six to enter and three to start, but the board reserve the right to hold a less number than six to fill, by the withdrawal of a proportionate amount of the purse. Entrance, ten per cent, on amount of purse, to accompany nomination. Any horse distancing the field will only be entitled to first money.

American Association Rules to govern all trotting, pacing and running races, but the board reserve the right to trot heats of any two classes alternately, or to trot a special race between heats; also to change the day or hour of any race if deemed necessary.

A horse making a walk over shall be entitled to only one half of entrance money paid in. When less than required number of starters appear, they may contest for entrance money paid in, to be divided as follows: 65% to first 33% to second.

In all entries not declared out by 6 P. M. of the day preceding the race shall be required to start.

When there is more than one entry by one person, or in one interest, the particular horse they are to start must be named by six P. M. of the day preceding the race.

If in the opinion of the judges any race cannot be finished on the closing day of the meeting it may be continued or declared off at the option of the judges. Non-starters in running races will be held for entrance under Rule 35.

Racing colors to be named on entries. In trotting races the drivers shall be required wear caps of distinct colors, which must be named their entries.

These last two rules will be strictly enforced. All races to be called at 2 P. M., sharp.

Entries to all the above races to close with the Secretary at 11 P. M. Saturday, Sept. 15, 1888.

All entries for exhibits must be made prior to September 25th. It would be better in order to get good accommodations for stock to notify the Secretary as early as possible the number of head and kind you intend to exhibit, so we can arrange for them. Although we have a hundred boxstalls on the ground, we find it necessary to build more, on account of advice from parties intending to make exhibits. Send for catalogue.

THE L. C. SMITH' Top Action, Double Cross-Bolted BREECH-LOADING GUN!

L. C. SMITH,

Manufacturer of both Hammer and Hammerless Guns.
SYRACUSE, N. Y.

A Demonstration of the Shooting Qualities of the "L. C. Smith" Gun.

At the Cleveland Cartridge Co.'s tournament, held at Cleveland, O., from September 13 to 16 inclusive the "Smith" gun won first money in every class. It also won nearly two-thirds of the entire amount ($83,000) of cash prizes, and championship trophy for the best average in the 90 class. In the 90 class it won the 1st, 2nd and 4th moneys; in the 80-class it took the 1st, 3rd, 4th and 5th; in the 70 class it took 1st and 2nd, with the 1st and 6th in the 60-class, making a total winning nearly four times greater than any other gun, of either foreign or home manufacture.

We think this a most excellent showing, as there was seven different makes of guns used by the nine-ty contestants in the ninety class.

Headquarters for all Latest Improved Dairy Machinery, Apparatus and Supplies.

The DeLAVAL CREAM SEPARATOR.

Extracts all the cream from milk, fresh and sweet, as it comes from the cow, without setting or holding. Is not affected by extremes of climate. Increases the yield and improves the quality of butter, greatly adding to the profits in dairying. Over 100 of these most valuable machines are in constant use on this Coast alone, many thousand in the United States, and all are proving so profitable that many dairies are using two or more De Laval.

It is now a well established fact that the Separator increases the yield of butter from 15 to 20 per cent., and even more in some parts of this State, while the quality in many instances has been greatly improved as is shown by comparison of market returns before and after the introduction of the Separator.

Four sizes and styles of De Laval now in use: "Hand Power," "Standard," "Increased Capacity," and "Steam Turbine" Separators. Steam, Water and Horse Power suitable for driving. Complete outfits furnished and fully guaranteed.

THIRD DAY.

September 20th.—The attendance on Thursday was noticeably better than on the two preceding days, but yet by no means so great as the excellence of the programme offered should have been attracted. Four races were listed, in each of which the betting was rather light, there being a pronounced favorite in every one of the events. The track had been placed in good condition, and the sport began promptly.

First Race.—Trotting, for the 2:35 class, had three starters in the first heat. Ben Ali, the favorite, trotted at Sonnet's wheel to the three-quarters, she having the pole, and doing the quarter in 0:37½, the half in 1:13. When straightened into the stretch, Ben Ali was given his head, and won easily into 2:25½, Perihellon being distanced. Pools: Ben Ali $60, Sonnet $14, before the second heat, in which Ben Ali led all the way and won in a jog, the quarter being 0:36, the half 1:11, the mile 2:26½.

In the third heat Ben Ali was off his feet from the quarter, and could not be settled until about the last turn was reached, when Sonnet was eight lengths to the good. Thence into the wire Ben Ali trotted fast, Sonnet winning the heat by three lengths. Time, 0:36, 1:11½, 2:24½.

The fourth heat was a jog for Ben Ali, Sonnet breaking and losing six lengths to the quarter, and saving distance only because Ben Ali was pulled down to a jog. Time, 0:35 4-5, 1:11½, mile 2:30½.

Second Race.—For the 2:27 pacing class, there were four horses listed. Gold Leaf had the call in the pools before the start, and ran even higher after the first heat, no pools being sold thereafter. Gold Leaf took three heats and the race with ease, never being extended, the time being 2:21, 2:22½, 2:20½. In the second heat Little Hope was distanced, second money going to Ned Winslow and third to San Diego.

Third Race.—A four-year-old stake, had but two starters, Steve Whipple a strong favorite over Dubec. The favorite, as in the preceding race, had everything his own way. Never being hard pushed, although Dubec held his position throughout each heat from the quarter to the wire, and seemed to have a bit in reserve. In the third heat Steve Whipple broke from the start and went half way to the quarter before recovering, Dubec opening a gap of twenty lengths. Whipple then settled and overhauled his handsome competitor, and when at the distance flag Dubec lost his feet and the heat, Whipple winning by two lengths in 2:28.

This brought five handsome 3-year-olds to the score. The race was taken in three straight heats by Jennie Wilkes, a bay filly of fine size, form and action. John W., a bay colt, was second in each heat, and will train on. Black Diamond persisted in galloping through the first heat.

FOURTH DAY.

Friday was the great day of the fair in point of attendance. The business houses and public schools were closed, and especial efforts made to induce general interest, with flattering success.

The vehicles present were tallied as they left the grounds, and eleven hundred and three were counted. Presuming that three persons came in each, and estimating the crowd fairly, eight thousand would not be too high a figure.

Both stands were crowded, the stretch was filled and the paddock well sprinkled with people. The day was warmer than Thursday, but yet not uncomfortable, and the racing began promptly. The sport was good throughout the afternoon, the leading interest, of course, being the free-for-all trot in which Stamboul, Arab and Lot Slocum met. Many prominent horsemen visited Stockton especially to see that race and they were rewarded by a contest as exciting, as any previous meeting of the great trotters.

First race.—The first race of Friday was a half mile and repeat with four entries. The starter had much annoyance in getting the horses off, and after the first heat it was apparent that jobbery of some sort was being attempted. Lida Ferguson was strong in the pools, but was plainly pulled and the heat taken by Sleepy Dick in 0:49. The pools being Lida $25, Sleepy Dick $14, Field $6.

In the second heat the rider of Lida Ferguson pulled the mare into the fence soon after the start and stopped her, Johnny Gray reaching the wire first in 0:49½. The attempt to throw the race was so patent that the judges displaced Barton and Leonard, putting Hazlett on Sleepy Dick in place of the former, and Cook on Lida Ferguson. The heat was declared "no heat," and Caleh Leonard, the rider of Lida Ferguson, was suspended for one year.

When sent off for the next heat under the new riders, Lida Ferguson had it all her own way, and won in 50 seconds. Johnny Gray and Springwater were then sent to the stables and Lida Ferguson and Sleepy Dick sent for the last heat, the former winning in 54 seconds easily.

Second Race.—The great event of the day and of the fair was that next on the card, a free-for-all trot, with Stamboul, Arab and Lot Slocum listed. Before the race Arab sold in the betting for $100, field $30, and again, Arab $100, Stamboul $20, Lot Slocum $7.

The horses were tapped from a good start for the first heat, Stamboul breaking on the turn, and Arab leading to the quarter in 0:33½ by eight lengths. To the half Stamboul partly closed the gap, the half being done in 1:07 1-5, but at the three-quarters Stamboul again broke and lost several lengths. Mahen soon straightened him out however, and he came down the stretch very fast, finishing at Arab's wheel, the heat being done in 2:16, a quarter of a second better than Arab's best previous time. Before the second heat the pools were Arab $100, field $13. In the second heat Stamboul held his own with Arab to the quarter in 0:33, and the pair went to the half like a span in 1:05, and in the same way to the three-quarters. When rounding into the straight Stamboul broke, but soon caught his stride and fairly out-trotted Arab down the stretch winning by a length in 2:15½. The crowd cheered wildly and the betting changed, Arab selling for $55, field $100. The horses were sent off at the third score for the third heat, Stamboul showing the way to the quarter in 0:33, and the half by two lengths in 1:05. To the three-quarters Stamboul broke and placed Arab by five lengths at the head of the stretch, but Mr. Rose's grand stallion would not be denied, and came so strongly that at the drawgate he was a length ahead, when Hickok began to drive and got Arab to the wire winner by a head in 2:17½.

The crowd rushed again to the pool box and the betting again veered, Arab selling for $100, Stamboul $50. Lot Slocum withdrawn. The fourth heat was taken by Arab, the gelding leading to the quarter by a length in 35, when Stamboul broke and lost a dozen lengths. At the half in 1:08½ Arab had things his own way and thence, home jogged easily taking the heat and race in 2:22½.

Third Race.—A trotting race for the 2:22 class started four fast ones, Tempest, Gus Wilkes, Alcazar and Thapsin. In the pools Tempest was sold at $100, Field $30, and the favorite took the first heat in 2:20½, easily.

The second heat was a surprise, being won by Gus Wilkes after a lively brush down the stretch with Tempest. Alcazar seemed out of sorts and trotted irregularly, although Mahen at intervals was able to settle him and get splendid speed from him. In the third heat Dustin and Gus Wilkes coming up behind Hickok and Tempest, locked his wheel in Hickok's. Hickok then cut Gus over the face with his whip, and after the heat Dustin claimed interference. The complaint was disallowed. The heat was hard driven throughout, Tempest and Gus Wilkes finishing closely, the former winning. The times were 36½, 1:11, 2:23.

Tempest took the fourth heat, Gus Wilkes zigzagging badly, despite Dustin's skill. Times, 35½, 1:11, 2:24½, Thapsin showing a good rate of going and crowding for the heat, and finishing third. It was so near dark after the fourth heat that the judges postponed the final heat until the succeeding day.

FIFTH DAY.

Saturday was well suited to racing and trotting, being just warm and a slight breeze. The attendance was much less than on Friday, but a goodly number, perhaps four thousand, were present. The unfinished race of the preceding day was called at 12 M. and the horses sent off after repeated scoring. Tempest led from the wire, with Guy Wilkes trailing and Thapsin shutting Wilkes in. At the three-quarters it was Tempest and Guy Wilkes, and a pretty race down the stretch, Tempest getting the whip and being sent for a record, which he got at 2:19, placing another Hawthorne in the 2:20 list, Guy Wilkes second, Thapsin third, Alcazar fourth.

Second Race.—A stake for three-year-olds was won by Direct, the favorite over Moses S. and Ben Davis. The first and second heats were very easily won, Direct being slowed to let the others save distance. In the last heat Ben Davis showed some pretensions, and pushed up so strongly that Direct was given the whip to win. The times for the heats were, first, 37½; 1:13½; 2:28½; second, 35, 1:10, 2:29; third, 36½, 1:14½, 2:30.

A running race for two-year-olds was next on the card, but only Serpolette appeared and galloped a mile to save, ridden by Howson.

Third race, special, pacing, with three fast entries, Yolo Maid, Gold Leaf and Almont Patchen was awnsited with high expectations, which were more than met. The performance of Yolo Maid was phenomenal. By pacing in 2:16½ she sliced 1½ seconds from Gold Leaf's three-year-old pacing record. She was driven by John Goldsmith, and demonstrated that beside having a flight of speed she can stay. The race was the fastest ever won by a three-year-old, and Goldsmith is not averse to matching the Maid against Adonis. She paced her heats out, without a waver and almost without turning a hair. There is lots of reserve power in her which cannot but lower her record in the future. The pools before the race were Yolo Maid $100, Almont Patchen $30, Gold Leaf $10.

In the first heat Gold Leaf piloted the string to the half in 1:10, doing the quarter in 35½. To the three-quarters Yolo Maid took command and drew away down the stretch winning by two lengths in 2:16½, Gold Leaf second. With the pole in the second heat the Maid went to the quarter in 35, and half in 1:09½, Almont Patchen, pacing strong and holding her almost level. Around the turn positions were the same, but when in the straight Patchen was carried off his feet, and the Maid won easily in 2:16½ as before. Patchen second and Gold Leaf along the road. The third heat from a pretty start was very fast to the half, the horses being bunched, with Yolo Maid perceptibly leading. To the quarter in 32½, and the half in 1:05½. From the half the Maid left her competitors, Gold Leaf breaking on the stretch and Patchen slowing, and won the heat and race in 2:18 the time which had previously given Gold Leaf a world's record. Almost Patchen second, Gold Leaf third.

Fourth race—A $700 purse for the 2:27 class had five starters which sold in the pools before the race as follows: Rosie Mc $80, Franklin $30, field $12, Ed. Barbaro and Ha-Hs. Considerable delay in scoring made the crowd impatient but the horses were finally sent off well, Franklin and Rosie Mc fighting to the three-quarters, doing the quarter in 36 and the half in 1:10. From the upper turn Franklin was in command and took the heat in 2:21, Rosie Mc second, Ha-Ha third, Ed fourth and Barbaro barely saving distance. Between heats Franklin sold for $150, Rosie Mc $40, field $15. The second heat was like the first, the race being between Franklin and Rosie Mc to the head of the stretch, where the gelding drew away, despite the use of the whip on Rosie, and won in 2:22½, Ha-Ha third, Ed fourth, Barbaro distanced.

Before the third heat Franklin sold at $50, field $12. Again Franklin and Rosie Mc. trotted, span-like to the stretch, down which both horses were given the whip, Franklin winning a close heat and the race in 2:20½, quarters 36, 1:10.

Fifth Race—The last race of the meeting was a two-year-old stake, with two starters, Margaret S and Vesolia. The pools were Margaret S. $40, Vesolia $13. Margaret took the first heat with apparent ease, the quarters being 0:37, 1:13 and the mile 2:34½, Vesolia barely saving distance. The second heat was all Margaret's way to the lower turn, she leading to the quarter in 0:37½, the half in 1:13½. Around the lower turn Vesolia closed the gap, and in the stretch fairly out-trotted the favorite, winning by two lengths in 2:29½. The hotting was mixed, Margaret S. leading, however. For the third heat a good score was made, and Margaret was driven to the quarter in 0:38½, the half in 1:16½. From the half Vesolia placed herself, and won easily by two lengths in 2:32½.

LADY EQUESTRIANS, STOCK AWARDS, PAVILION EXHIBITS, ETC.

On Saturday, between heats of the 2:27 class, trotting, the equestriennes, of whom several had signified a willingness to compete, were invited to the stretch and displayed superb manege. All the ladies present were Stocktonians, and noted in society circles for fondness for equestrian exercise.

Miss Annie Smith had much the better mount, her horse being a free, easy galloper and fencer, which gave her an advantage. She sat well, jumped a hurdle with light hand, and won first.

Second was presented to little Miss Frankie Cewell, petite, of eleven years, who rode without saddle, and deserved high commendation for the grace and firmness shown. Her little black pony was stiff in a shoulder and refused to jump, but went through it paces prettily, and with its sunny faced mistress received loud plaudits.

The third award was handsomely won by Miss Edith Bailey, who might well have taken first if she had been better mounted. Her horse while a very fine saddle animal was by no means the equal of Miss Smith's. Miss Bailey was quite at home on the saddle, and when in jumping a bar her horse stumbled, the graceful rider displayed rare skill in retaining her seat, and steadying the horse. The riding was an attractive feature of the programme.

STOCK AWARDS.

The stock exhibit was not in all respects satisfactory. The animals when strung out along the track for parade made a line more than a half-mile long only. The interest, as gauged by the attendance, was not great, being chiefly shown by a contingent of shrewd farmers of the more thoughtful sort, who spent hours in close study of the various breeds present. The judging was not completed until Friday, and as a rule of the society prohibits the furnishing of an official list to the press until after the directors shall have formally passed upon it, we are compelled to give the premiums as awarded by the judges.

In Durham the showing was not large, and the work of the judges consequently was not onerous. Such as were shown were of typical form, and in better condition than is usual, looking less like prize Christmas beef.

PAVILION EXHIBIT.

Despite the strenuous efforts of Secretary LeRue, the pavilion could not be arranged before Thursday morning. Exhibitors were laggard and many of the displays had to be fetched from Sacramento where they had been in the State fair. On Thursday, however, every thing was in order and on that evening the exhibition was formally opened by President Shippee. An oration by General N. C. Chipman of Tehama county was delivered, in which a resume of the history of the industrial interests of the State during the General's long residence was made. Much statistical information of value was embodied in the address, and the conclusion reached that in agriculture and stock raising the future of California and particularly of the central belt promised a prosperity greater than was dreamed of by the Argonauts. General Chipman's peroration was brilliant, and elicited long continued applause, when he said:

"I see in my prophetic vision your treeless plains covered with perpetual verdure, great forests of golden fruit, and wide-spreading meadows of emerald grasses; beautiful homes, surrounded with all the comforts of an advanced civilization; churches and schools everywhere; a clean healthy, moral, happy people, a self-reliant, self-supporting, self-respecting, God-fearing people. I see along your lines of travel and among your homes charmed towns and villages, where all arts of the architect and the landscape gardener have supplemented the cultivated taste of the people, to show that these heaven-sent gifts are worthily bestowed. I see this aspiring and ambitious city of Stockton, where your products are now gathered, and where we are now assembled, a large and prosperous center of trade, holding to our metropolis the relation that the city of Philadelphia holds to the metropolis of the East. A million people in that future that rises before me will enjoy this fair land of yours, and claim it as their heritage. You and I, Mr. President, may not see this in the flesh, but the boy and girl are before me who will witness this crowning glory of this heaven-blessed land, now all our own."

The new pavilion erected by the society during the past year, at a cost of some thirty-five thousand dollars, is commodious and an ornament to the city. It is in the form of a Greek Cross, and affords much more room than was found necessary for the last show. One arm of the cross in the gallery has been finished with a floor suitable for dancing, and that portion of the building contained most of the spectators in the evenings, attracted by the music and the lovely faces and brilliant costumes of Stockton's multi-fairest, by far the most interesting portion of the show. To those unfortunate, less susceptible to the moving power of rare beauty, attractions in the way of wagons, agricultural implements, fruits, cereals and all the lesser items which go to make up the agricultural show, were offered. The display of vehicles was excellent, both in variety and quality. The best part of the wheeled exhibits were the carriages, Stockton being especially distinguished for the number of fine private equipages owned by its citizens and used on the good driving streets during the soft evenings almost throughout the year. The showing of fruits demonstrated that San Joaquin County can produce as fine grapes and citrus fruits as any other part of the State. Considerable nurrigated fruit was shown, which in size compared favorably with that to which water was applied, while in color and firmness it was better. The showing of handwork by Stockton's good housewives was ample and attested the training which the coming generation will receive. The Art Gallery was well filled but the pictures could not well be studied under favorable light because the hall was used as a dancing gallery. As a whole the pavilion showing was fairly good, and since exhibitors have learned that they can have sufficient room in a good and well situated building, it will be better in future years.

The Oregon State Fair.

The Twenty-Eighth Oregon State Fair opened on Monday, Sep. 17. In spite of the rain the night before, a goodly number of spectators were present. A heavy shower fell at noon, but the latter portion of the day was bright and pleasant. In the pavilion very little had been done, but before nightfall it was in good order, as was also Machinery Hall. The number of entries in the stock department surpasses that of any year in the history of the institution. Clerks were busy during almost the whole day taking account of the collections of fine horses, cattle, hogs, sheep and an almost endless variety of prize animals.

The judges selected for the races of the day were Van B. DeLashmutt, John G. Wright, Thos. G. Richmond.

The timers were J. L. Hallett, W. G. Nesmith, R. E. Bybee. The morning shower had rendered the track very slippery, and fast time could not be augured for the day's contest.

The opening event was a single dash, ½ mile, for two-year-olds, for which there were three starters, the sorrel gelding Arthur H., the chestnut colt, Broadchurch, and the bay colt Pat Curran.

Very few doubted that Broadchurch would win the race, and pools sold on him at $20 to $4 for the field. A few tickets were taken at this rate, and then Broadchurch was barred and Pat Curran brought $10 to $6 on Arthur H. In the French mutuels four tickets were taken on Broadchurch, but there being no bidders on the other colts, the sale ceased.

The Race—Pat Curran drew first position, Arthur H. second, and Broadchurch third. The colts were restive and delayed the start. At last they were sent away and jumped past the flag in a bunch. Broadchurch almost immediately caught the pole and flew down the hackstretch, closely pursued by Arthur H. On the back-turn, Earle forced the gelding past the favorite and on the intrn led him by a length. Pat Curran, who was said to be sick before the race, cut no figure in the contest. It was a pretty race between the chestnut and the bay down the homestretch, and O'Hara gave the former a lively shaking up with whip and spur, but he could not overcome the strong pull Arthur had gained. The gelding passed under the wire an easy winner by a length.

The second race on the programme was the Oregon Derby, the starters for which were Oceanica, Coloma and Humboldt. They got away in the order named, Oceanica a little in the lead. Coloma, however, soon pushed to the front and was never headed. Humboldt and the filly fought hard for the honor of second place, the colt being the victor in the contest. Coloma finished ten lengths in front of Humboldt, the filly being third.

The Pools.—Coloma had found a number of strong backers, who bought him for $10 against $5 on the two others. The field soon dropped to $3, and then Coloma was barred and Humboldt brought $10 to $5 on Oceanica. Bidding in neither was spirited.

The bidding for pools on the two-year-old trotting race was more lively than in either of the two preceding. Wallula sold for $10 to $4 on Beulah and field $10. Later, Wallula sold for $20, Beulah for $9, and the field for $20. This race was really a family fight, all the contestants except Templeton, being by Altamont.

The Heat.—Altal drew first position, Wallula second, Templeton third, Beulah fourth, and Nervissa fifth. After three ineffectual attempts to score, the horses were tapped off, with a fair start. Altal, Wallula, and Templeton forged ahead in a bunch, Beulah and Nervissa following. At the first quarter, which was reached in 0:43, Altal drew to the front, Templeton then gained the lead but went into the air before reaching the half and Altal regained his position. The half was made in 1:45. On the back turn Altal broke, and Templeton went the front, but lost his feet in doing it. Meanwhile Beulah and Wallula, who had both been trotting steadily, were closing up, and before the home stretch was reached had passed the stallion. Down the stretch they went neck and neck, and passed under the wire together in 2:47½, the fastest time ever made by a two-year-old on this track. But Wallula had maintained his position with Beulah by running, and he was set back fifth; Altal second, Nervissa third, Templeton fourth. The fastest two-year-old time heretofore made on this track was 2:43, made by Mignonette in 1886.

Second Heat—Beulah's victory in the first heat awarded her the first place in the estimation of the bettors who bought her for $10 against Wallula $5 and the field $5. The partisans of Wallula soon weakened, and he brought $3 to $6 for the field and $10 for Beulah. The French mutuels sold but few tickets.

The Heat—After several attempts a good start was obtained, and the contestants moved around the turn all together; Beulah left her feet and dropped behind. It was a hard contest until the hackstretch was reached, down which they came in a bunch. Beulah had meantime settled down to steady work, and started in to recover her lost position. She went through her competitors in an amazingly short time, and on reaching the head of the stretch was leading the entire crowd. It seemed that Beulah would be an easy winner, but when near the distance flag she broke, and before Beulah could get her in hand again, Altal was at her wheel. Beulah was bound to win, and he pressed the little mare to her utmost, causing her to leave her feet again just as the wire was reached.

There was some complaint, and several claims of foul were made, but the heat and race were awarded to Beulah; Altal second, Wallula third, Nervissa fourth, Templeton fifth. The heat by quarters was made in 44, 1:25, 2:06, 2:43.

SECOND DAY.

For the second day, the judges were D. H. Looney, Van B. DeLashmutt, Wm. Galloway, in running race; D. H. Looney, R. E. Bybee, Thos. G. Richmond, in trotting race; Lute Lindsey, W. G. Nesmith, were the timers, and Thos. G. Richmond, the starter.

The grand stand was well filled and the track was in fine condition for fast time.

The special running race was the first on the card for the day. The starters were Repetta, Coloma, Diavolo and Rosa Lewis.

The Pools.—An eager crowd gathered about the auction pool-box, and bought their favorites freely. Repetta, notwithstanding that she was weighed by a 10-lb handicap, sold hot favorite, and Matlock, her owner, bought at heavy odds. Coloma, the three-year-old, which had made such an excellent showing in Monday's Oregon Derby, had gained many hacker by his fine performance, and sold a ready second choice. Nevada was third, and Diavolo and Rosa Lewis went together in the field. The average sales were $75 on Repetta, Coloma $42, Nevada $11, and field $15. Strong backing once forced the three-year-old $100 to Repetta $95, Nevada $15, and field $25. Then Coloma's partisans weakened, and he dropped to $6 against $25 on Repetta, field $16, Nevada $4.

In the allotment of positions Rosa Lewis drew the pole, Nevada second, Diavolo third, Coloma fourth and Repetta fifth. The horses got off at the first attempt, and Repetta soon jumped to the front. She was closely followed down the stretch by Coloma, and the others passed under the wire a short distance behind. On the turn, Diavolo pulled by the sorrel colt but was unable to maintain the second position, and soon yielded again to the three-year-old. On the back turn Coloma pressed hard for the first position, which, however, Repetta was able to hold without great effort, and she passed under the wire an easy winner by a length, Coloma second, the others in a bunch.

The special trotting race for the 2:40 class was next on the programme. J. K. Misner entered and drove the sorrel mare Maud Knox, G. M. Misner appeared behind his entry, the bay mare Oleander, James Matheson held the reins over his chestnut gelding James C. and Besch appeared behind McKnight Bros.' bsy stallion Oneco. The latter was the favorite in the pools, selling at $15, while James C. brought $8, Maud Knox $7 and Oleander $6.

Several scores were made before the word was given. Maud Knox had the pole, Oneco, James C. and Oleander being placed in order named. Twice in the race the stallion had the lead for a short distance, but the mare, at the finish, won by a length in 2:29½. In the pools for the second heat Oneco still sold as favorite, and was backed strongly at $20 against $7 for Maud, with Oleander and James C. in the field ($3).

The Heat—Maud Knox passed immediately to the front, with Oleander lapping her. On the first turn James C. collided with Oneco, causing him to break and fall back to fourth place. Before the backstretch was reached Oleander had lapped Maud Knox and stayed with her nearly to the wire. Maud won in 2:30 by only half a length, Oleander second, Oneco a good third. James C. was distanced because of foul driving by his driver, Matheson. In the third heat Oneco sold $5 to $20 on Maud Knox, and $3 on Oleander.

The Heat—Beach having entered complaint against G. M. Misner, the driver of Oleander, the judges substituted Lute Lindsey in his stead. The horses started at the third score and Maud took the lead. Oneco, as in the last heat, broke badly on the turn and lost his position. Oleander soon caught the mare and pressed her hard down the backstretch, and around to the last turn. Beach's stallion was meantime doing steady work, and was rapidly lessening the strong lead of Maud. But Maud came in ahead, though Beach succeeded in shutting out Oleander for second position. Time, 2:31½.

Della A., Lady Beach, Pricemont and Ilton came to the score for the three-year old-trot.

The pools—Pricemont's record of 2:48, made in 1887, when a two-year-old, elevated him in the opinion of the bettors and he brought $20 to $6 on Ilton and $5 for Lady Beach and Della A. in the field. Betting was lively and a good number of pools were sold.

On the third score they were sent off, Pricemont having the pole, Della A. being second, Ilton third and Lady Beach fourth.

The two fillies soon dropped back and Ilton moved up to Pricemont's wheel. Ilton broke several times and after passing the half fell back. From there on the race was a procession, Pricemont coming in an easy winner; Ilton second, Della A. third, Lady Beach fourth.

In the pools for the second heat Pricemont led in the pool box by strong odds, and he was soon barred and bid a received on Ilton against the field. Interest, however, lagged, and sales were few.

The heat—The favorite again got the advantage of the start, but on the turn broke and Della A. took the lead. On the back stretch, however, the bay forged again to the front and won the heat with hands down; Ilton second, Della A. third; Lady Beach distanced. Lindsay, the driver of Della A., was fined $25 for fouling Ilton.

In the pools for the third heat Pricemont was barred, and a few takers were found at $10 on Ilton against $2 on Della A.

The heat—Pricemont went to the front at the very first, and rapidly widened the gap between himself and two competitors. On the back stretch Ilton urged hard, drew up on him a little, but could not conquer the strong lead of the speedy favorite. Pricemont came out a long first, winning the heat and race; Ilton second, Della A. third. The time, 2:35, was the heat ever made by a three-year-old stallion in Oregon, the previous record being 2:40½.

Sept. 19.—The number of visitors was much larger than on any previous day. The weather was cool and pleasant with a southwest wind. The track was in excellent condition. The crowd waited for a weary hour and a quarter after the advertised time of beginning the contests, before the first race was started. The delay was as annoying as it was inexcusable.

For the day, the judges were D. S. K. Buick, J. G. Wright, T. G. Richmond.

The handicap race brought out Lady Duffy, Bogus, Keepsake, Daniel B. and John Hall. In the first bidding in the auction pools, Bogus was the favorite on account of his world-beating record for one half mile and repeat—48 in each heat—made in Montana during the past summer. He brought $10 to Keepsake $6, Lady Duffy $3, and field in which Daniel B. and John Hall were found, $6. Then some one got a "pointer" from the maids, and the field took a boom, bringing $15 to Bogus $10, Keepsake $5, and Lady Duffy $3. The switching in betting may have been caused by the information that Babb had had a row with his rider, McCaugh, and a new rider might not be able to get out of the famous gelding all that was in him.

The timers were T. H. Tongue, J. L. Hallett, W. G. Westcott, and D. H. Looney acted as starter.

Daniel B. drew the first position, Lady Duffy second, Bogus third, Keepsake fourth and John Hall fifth. The horses got started from the quarter pole, after several breaks, and Daniel B. immediately taking the lead, while Keepsake, who was in had condition, dropped behind. At the half John Hall was behind Daniel by only a neck. On the turn Bogus came away from the field, and joined the leaders. The race down the stretch was as pretty as any ever seen on the grounds. Matlock's mare, Lady Duffy, fought Baker's gelding hard for first position, while Bogus showed prominently on the outside. The finish was a beautifully close one, and the horses were so bunched that it was hard to give their respective positions as they passed the wire. Daniel B. was winner by a head over Bogus, who came in under a pull, and who, it appeared to five thousand people, could have won hands down. Lady Duffy was third, John Hall fourth, and Keepsake fifth. The time, by quarters, was 0:25½, 0:50, 1:16½.

The 2:35 trot was the chief event of the day. This brought out Conde, Contractor and Little Joe. The latter was the favorite, as his gallant race in last year's free-for-all was well remembered. Contractor had many admirers; Conde was said to be off, and but few put money on him. Joe brought $20, Contractor $10 and Conde $6.

Little Joe drew the pole in the choice of lots, with Contractor second and Conde on the outside. The horses were sent off after several attempts, with Contractor in the lead. Joe and Conde dropped to the rear together, and when the back stretch was reached there was a long stretch of daylight between them and the Sultan gelding. It began to look like a procession, but all at once both the bay and the chestnut began to close up the gap. The great Conde, then third, drew closer and closer to the leader, followed by Little Joe, but broke on the last turn. Little Joe came on well, but Contractor's advantage was too great and the latter won by a neck, Conde third. The time by quarters was 37, 1:15½, 1:51, 2:26½.

For the second heat pools on Contractor were $60 to $20 for the field. The horses were tapped off on the first score, Contractor in the lead. Little Joe closed on him and at the quarter the leader left his feet, falling back to third. Conde followed hard upon Little Joe and catching him at the back turn gradually drew even, and they swung into the stretch nose and nose. Down the straight they came like a team, neither having an inch the advantage. Just at the finish, amid great excitement, Conde pnt on a spurt and won by a neck in 2:24, Contractor a bad third.

For the third heat Contractor was still the favorite, selling for $30, against $10 on Conde and $5 on Little Joe. Afterwards $10 on Contractor, $5 on Conde and $3 on Little Joe. Little Joe secured the start, and Contractor broke on the first turn, recovering in a bad position. Jefferies kept Conde well together and pushed Joe for first position in a lively manner around the turn and down the stretch. The favorite, who was seemingly without any hope of winning the heat, now developed remarkable speed, and began to overhaul rapidly the two leaders. Joe and Conde flew around the back turn wheel and wheel, and trotted together as evenly as if hitched in double harness. At the head of the home-stretch Joe, who was inside, swung out, crowding Conde over, and leaving an opening on the inside for the favorite, who, while he still drew up rapidly, was not fast enough to take it. Joe passed under the wire a head in front of Jefferies' horse, with Contractor a good third. Time by quarters, 36½, 1:13, 1:50, 2:27.

Fourth Heat—The confidence displayed by pool buyers in Contractor's ability to win the race was astonishing, considering the very bad work he had done in the second and third heats. The pools brought $10 on Contractor, with Conde and Little Joe at $3 each. The betting would indicate that the insiders knew, or thought they knew, all about how the race would terminate.

The horses got a splendid start, and Contractor immediately began to justify the judgment of his strong backers. He pulled to the front on the turn, and by the time the quarter was reached had attained a good lead. But then both Little Joe and Conde began to decrease the distance perceptibly, and at the half had nearly pulled up with his wheel. Lafferty then urged Contractor again, and he came away from his competitors, and finished an easy winner in 2:27. At the head of the stretch, Joe, who had a well-earned reputation for steadiness, left his feet, and lost his chances for second place. Contractor first, Conde second, Little Joe third. Time, by quarters, 37, 1:14, 1:51, 2:28.

Contractor loomed away ahead of the others in the pool-box, for the fifth heat, and his backers took all the money they could get at the heavy odds of $60 against $6 on the field, in which Little Joe and Conde were placed. The favorite was soon barred, and Little Joe brought $20 against $5 on Conde.

The Heat—The judges began to suspect that the race was not being conducted altogether on the square, and so they decided to remove Lafferty, the driver of Little Joe, and place Sawyer in charge. The horses started evenly, and Contractor trotted at once to the front, leaving the bay and Chestnut away behind. On the back stretch, however, Sawyer urged Joe to his best efforts, and he gradually decreased the favorite's strong lead. On the turn, Contractor broke and dropped behind, amidst tremendous cheers from the grand stand. But he gathered himself together and started after Joe in amazingly rapid time, and passed under the wire several lengths ahead, winner of the heat and race, Little Joe second, Conde third. Time, by quarters, 37, 1:14, 1:51, 2:28.

FOURTH DAY—SEPTEMBER 20TH.

For many years Thursday has been the red-letter day for this State fair and an immense crowd could always be depended on for that day. But it looked very gloomy for the big day's prospects, as a heavy down-pour of rain descended during almost the whole morning. About noon the rain ceased, though the ominous overhanging clouds lightened but little.

Notwithstanding the disagreeable weather, the grand stand was filled by a crowd of five thousand people, whose antu-siastic anticipations of a fine afternoon's sport were not at all dampened by the threatening sky or muddy and slippery track. The run proved to be one of the most exciting contests of the week, while the trot was in comparison a tame affair.

Judges—Van DeLashmutt, D. S. K. Buick, D. H. Looney, in run. D. H. Looney, J. G. Wright, D. S. K. Buick in trot. Timers—W. G. Nesmith, R. S. Perkins.

Starter—T. G. Richmond.

The initial race for the day was the one and three-eighths mile dash, for which Lady Duffy, Nevada, Oceanica and Rosa Lewis appeared. The latter was the favorite in the pools at the rate of $15 to $7 on Nevada, with $3 on the field. Later Rosa brought $10 with all the others in the field.

They started in the order given above. Oceanica got the best of the start and led until the grand stand was reached, when Nevada went by her. Lady Duffy had dropped ten lengths behind, but before the flyers had pawed through the mud to the half she had drawn up, and made one of a pretty bunch of four that flew around the turn. At this point Rosa Lewis forged ahead, and, coming away, won easily by a length in front of Lady Duffy. Nevada was three lengths in the rear. Time, 2:38½.

For the special purse, 2:27 class, D. K. W., Lady Maxim and Kitty Lynch started. Col. Brdsdshaw was drawn before the race, on account of mud. The owner of Lady Don was fined $50 for not bringing her on the track. Money was put up freely on D. K. W. at $20 and Kitty Lynch at $16 and the field at $5.

Heat—Kitty Lynch drew first position, D. K. W. second and Lady Maxim the outside. The horses got off at the first attempt, and DeLashmutt's little bay, Kitty, crawled gradually to the lead. The big gray gelding pursued her closely around the turn, while Lady Maxim broke and recovered a bad third. On the stretch the gray pulled up to Kitty's wheel, and kept there till the beginning of the home-stretch, when Lady Maxim, who had been moving surprisingly fast, shoved her nose between the two leaders. At the critical moment D. K. W. broke, and Kitty passed out winner in 2:49½, Lady Maxim second, D. K. W. third.

Second heat—In the first heat Kitty had shown unmistakably that she was the best animal in the mud, and those who knew that her owner had caused heavily corked shoes to be placed on her before the race, were thereby made the more certain that that advantage would win her the race. Betting accordingly switched around, and DeLashmutt's mare brought $20 to the field at $6.

The horses were tapped off at the first trial. Kitty soon gained a short lead over Maxim, while D. K. W.'s feet flew up on the turn and he found himself, when he recovered, in a bad third. The race was a procession all the way around, Kitty passing under the wire two lengths in front of Maxim. D. K. W. saved his distance only by good work in the last half. Time, 2:53½.

Third heat—The race was considered a foregone conclusion, and nobody could be induced to buy any auction pools.

A breeze was created after the horses were called up, by the judges removing Barnes, the driver of D. K. W., and placing Sawyer in his place. They suspected that the gray was not being driven to win and it certainly looked as if he might be made to go faster than he had in the two preceding heats. The three horses got off well together, and the favorite and the gray proceeded to the front. It was plain that they were making much faster speed than before, and it looked like D. K. W. might beat Kitty out; but at the quarter pole he broke badly, keeping his position, however, for a considerable distance by running.

He then dropped into third position, but, recovering, passed Maxim and was gaining on Kitty, when he again left his feet and lost entirely what chance he had for winning the heat, and allowing Kitty to pass out in 2:38½. At the half pole Lady Maxim had been observed to be traveling very slowly, and soon she stopped altogether. It afterward transpired that Sawyer, the protomorphe driver of D. K. W., had run into Lafferty's sulky, because, he said, Lafferty was crowding him over to the outside of the track. Though warned several times, he refused to get out of Sawyer's way, and the latter accordingly ran into him. The right wheel of Lafferty's sulky was badly bent in by the shock, and before the mare could be stopped the crooked wheel had struck her hind legs many times, cutting one very badly, and marking the other. Lafferty walked the mare around to the judges' stand, and entered complaint against Sawyer for running him down. The judges went around to the back-stretch and examined the tracks of the sulky wheels of both Lafferty and Sawyer, and found that the latter had deviated somewhat from a straight course, but possibly not intentionally. As the statements of the two drivers were at variance, and it was not possible to arrive at any safe conclusion from the direction of the wheel-tracks, no decision on the matter of the collision was made. D. K. W. was given second place, and Lady Maxim third.

The judges for Friday's contests were J. T. Apperson, W. Thayer, D. H. Looney. Timers, J. L. Hallett, T. H. Tongue. Starter, Thos. G. Richmond. The afternoon's sport was the finest of the week, and the track was in fine condition. For the mile dash handicap appeared Warpeake, Broadchurch, Roly Boly, John Hall and Lady Duffy. Repetta was drawn, as she had 130 pounds to carry, and Matlock Bros. thought their chance better with Lady Duffy. She was a hot favorite, the others all being in the field. In scoring Broadchurch behaved badly, but at last they got away in the order named above. Roly Boly immediately took the pole. At the half all were together, Roly Boly and John Hall in the lead. On the turn Broadchurch pushed to the front. Lady Duffy had been behind until the half-mile pole was reached, but since then she had been coming rapidly to the front. At the head of the stretch she burst from the crowd, and, rushing down the outside, won the race from Broadchurch by a neck.

In the 2:35 special trot, the contesting horses were the same as in Tuesday's race, except that James C. had been replaced by Jim Irvington. Maud Knox was a hot favorite at $20, to $10 on Oneco, Irvington $8, and Oleander $5.

In the first heat Oneco drew first position, Oleander second, Irvington third, and Maud Knox on the outside. They were tapped off at the second scoring, Oleander slightly in the lead, with Oneco pressing him closely. There was a very palpable foul on the turn, Oleander causing Beach, the driver of Oneco, to preceptibly slacken the pace of the stallion in order to prevent a collision. The mare crossed in front of him while Oneco pulled out to second position and trotted finely in a vain endeavor to make up the last ground. On the back stretch Maud came forward and contested gallantly with Oleander for first position, at the three-quarter post she broke badly and fell back to fourth place. A close struggle was going on in the meantime between Oneco and Irvington, but the son of Altamont could not make up the vantage lost at the start from the fouling of Oleander, and the Irvington took second place. Time by quarters, 38½, 1:17½, 1:55½, 2:34. Beach reported the foul, saying that Misner had twice touched his wheel, but the judges took no cognizance of it, believing it would be a gross injustice to the mare either to send her from the track or to set her behind the other horses, one of which penalties would have to be enforced if the claim of foul was allowed.

For the second heat Maud Knox was still the favorite, $20 being bid to $10 on Oneco, and the other two in the field at $3.

At the request of the owner of Maud Knox, Misner was taken from behind her and Green substituted just before the start. The impression prevailed that Maud should have won the heat if driven at her best. The horses scored six or seven times, being finally ordered to score by Oneco, who is certainly the slowest animal at the first of a heat that ever stood in the 2:35 class. When they were finally sent away he was fully two lengths behind.

Oleander and Maud Knox were making a pretty race at the quarter post, with Oneco coming up rapidly. At the half the stallion has taken the lead, with Maud second, but dropped back to second by a short break, still keeping in the lead of Oleander. At the three quarters Maud and Oneco were again neck and neck, and trotted beautifully in that position until within a few rods of the wire, when Maud forged ahead, to the delight of the crowd and the immense satisfaction of her driver, Oneco second, Irvington third, Oleander fourth; time, 2:30½.

Third Heat—Maud was a greater favorite than ever, bringing $20 to $4 on the field. The start was fair, and the horses were all well hunched. At the quarter pole Maud broke and fell back to third place. Oneco and Oleander were neck and neck at half, and closely contested the remainder of the heat, but Oleander broke near the finish and Oneco won easily, Maud Knox third, and Irvington just saving his distance. Time, 2:34½.

Fourth Heat—The judges gave the horses a bad start, both Maud and Irvington being two or more lengths behind the others. Oneco immediately took the lead, and the race was simply a procession. Maud broke at the three-quarters and lost all chance of coming to the fore. Oneco won easily in 2:34½, Oleander second, Maud third, Irvington fourth.

Fifth Heat—Pools were turned completely over by Oneco's victories, and many tickets were bought at $25 to $50 on Maud and $2 on the field. The horses secured a good start, and Oleander and Maud passed to the lead together. Oneco broke badly on the first turn, and recovered in bad position. The two mares trotted neck and neck around the turn and down the backstretch. At the five-eighths pole Maud went from her feet and lost two lengths before she came down. Oleander also broke, and Maud passed out winner in 2:32½, closely pursued by Oneco, who had been working splendidly, Oleander third, Irvington distanced.

Sixth Heat—The pool-box was completely reversed again, and sold at $20 on Maud to $6 on the others in the field. The horses secured a start, with Maud at a slight disadvantage. On the turn both Oneco and the big sorrel broke, and Oleander pushed far to the front. Oneco, however, settled down to work, and succeeded in catching her on the back-turn. Breaking, he lost two lengths, but recovering again passed Oleander just before the wire was reached, winning the heat and race by a head, amid tremendous excitement, Oleander second, Maud Knox third. Time, 2:36.

The next event was a special trot for the 2:20 class for a purse of $600. The starters were Little Joe, Condee, Fantasia and Contractor.

First Heat.—There was much difficulty in getting the first away, the judges imposing fines freely on the drivers who did not obey the orders from the stand,

At the twelfth scoring the bell sounded the go, and they all got off in good style, Little Joe was ahead at the quarter pole, with Condee close and the other two some distance behind. They were the same at the half mile mark and on to the homestretch, down which Little Joe kept the lead and came in two lengths ahead of Condee, Contractor third and Fantasia almost distanced. Time 2:25½.

Second Heat.—In this heat Beach was the driver of Contractor. At the start they got off in good order at the second scoring, and Condee soon took the lead, with Little Joe at the wheel, Fantasia third and Contractor last. At the half mile post it was the same with the first two, with quite a distance between them and their two followers. The same continued past the three-quarter mark and down the stretch, Condee coming in a length ahead of Little Joe, Fantasia third, Contractor fourth. Time 2:31.

Third Heat.—Soon after the start Condee again took the lead, with Little Joe close, and the others strung out as in the previous heat. It remained unchanged until the three-quarter pole was reached, when Little Joe got the lead and held it to the wire, Condee second, Contractor third, Fantasia fourth. Time, 2:26.

Fourth heat, there were a few start, soon after which Little Joe took the lead, held it to the quarter, to the half, to the three-quarter, with Condee close and the others far behind, coming under the line in 2:26, winning the heat and race, Condee second, Contractor third, Fantasia fourth. The last act was an attempt on the part of the old-time trotter Charlie Hilton, 2:17½, to beat the best Oregon record, 2:23½. He was accompanied by a runner and had three trials, failing to reach the mark by a quarter of a second in the second heat. The time of the trials was 2:26, 2:23½, 2:25½.

Fleetwood Park.

Continued wet weather prevented the drivers from giving the trotters the usual preparatory work at Fleetwood, Sept. 9th. It seems unfortunate that the choice array of flyers of high and low degree should perforce be kept housed on the eve of a great meeting. Between the drops on Monday some of the horses were jogged around the slippery track. Crit Davis, who had just arrived from Cleveland, where he piloted Prince Wilkes to victory in the second match race with Patron, relieved Ed Geers from looking after the big bay gelding Jeremiah, and gave him some slow work outside the sticks. Speaking of the proposed special that Secretary Floyd Jones has been trying to arrange between Patron, Prince Wilkes and Rosalind Wilkes, Crit said: "I should be pleased to accommodate the people here, but Mr. Singerley has made another match between Prince and Patron, to be trotted at Belmont Park, Philadelphia, on Friday, so that it would be almost impossible to come here on Saturday. Besides that I know that Mr. Emery is as much opposed to trotting Patron in company as Mr. Gordon is with Clingstone, and I don't believe he would start in a race where there were more than two horses."

Mr. Jones has not yet abandoned the idea of getting the cracks together on Saturday, and as he is sure of Rosalind Wilkes the great event may come off after all.

James H. Goldsmith, looking neat and natty as ever, drove up to the club house about noon, and donning a rubber coat proceeded to give Company and Beauty Bright some moderate exercise. Knapsack McCarthy, ever diligent and careful about his horses, was early on hand, but concluded it was not advisable to try to do any work on the track. McCarthy says that Geneva S. has come out of her long and trying races at Springfield in good shape, and will be ready to go in the Fleetwood Stake on Friday.

"Everybody's horse seems to get praised but my mare," said Knapsack, as he sat in the wagon with Frank Fox, getting ready to return to the city, "No matter how well she trots, nobody has a good word for her, but she can make them all go some, most any day."

Attie McDonald, the Albany whip, had Eph and Golden Rod out for a short time. "Golden Rod seems to like this track," said Attie, "and I think my chances in the 3:00 stake are pretty good."

Just then Guy came along, led by a groom, on his return from the blacksmith shop: "There goes the most dangerous one in my race," remarked McDonald, "but if he don't stub his toe going down the hill, I'll lose my guess."

The little black crank seemed to be in the pink of condition, and with a new set of shoes, Millard Sanders will try hard to keep him steady in to-day's contest.

Roy Wilkes, King Bird and a dozen more were looked up in their stalls, and not at home to callers. Kit Curry was shipped from Springfield on Friday, and looks little the worse for the wear and tear of the many races she has been in since May 15, excepting a swelled tendon, caused by hitting herself in the stake race at Hampden Park last Wednesday. Her groom, who is an unusually bright, young fellow, says the mare was out of sorts at Hartford, when Spofford wrested the $10,000 stake from her, owing to her being in season at the time. The queer old Buckeye farmer who owns and drives Kit, came along and talked about the Springfield race. "I won the first and second so easy," said the veteran, "that I thought it would be a good idea to lay up a heat, and see what J. B. Richardson and Geneva S. were going to do. My mare was so willin' that I could scarcely keep her back in the third heat. Then when I sent her along the next time she hit herself and was bleeding when I took her to the stable. She went all right in the fifth and sixth heats, but was afraid of hurting herself and would not go fast enough to win. That night her leg swelled up badly and the next morning she was so lame I thought she would be shut out. She wasn't though, and I was lucky to get third money. If I had gone along I could have won the race in three heats."

There is a rumor that Kyger was stopped after he won the second heat, but that does not seem reasonable even in his case. With careful nursing the mare may be all right for the Fleetwood Stake.

Secretary Jones was at the Park early and kept at his post faithfully all day looking after last details. He has arranged that in the races where fields are large the drivers shall wear numbers as they did in the Flower City and Consolation Stakes at Rochester, and as is now the custom on running tracks, so that there shall be no difficulty in placing the horses correctly as they finish. A new entrance to the grand stand has been made on the south side of the park, in addition to the gates on the east and west sides. The admission fee to the quarter stretch and club house has been placed at the moderate sum of fifty cents, and there will be complete accommodation for any one wishing to see the flyers in their struggle for fame and fortune. It is to be hoped that there will be no postponement on account of the weather. The track has been carefully prepared and will dry quickly when the rain ceases.

The great trotting meeting which opened September at old Fleetwood Park had so brilliant a beginning as to satisfy every one of Fleetwood's right to a place in the Grand Circuit, and President de Cordova, Treasurer Clafin, Secretary Jones and the members of the Executive Committee must have been more than well content. Nothing had been against them but the weather. Their entries were of the finest, and with fair weather a grand attendance was certain. But the threatening skies that have hovered over New York for several days were very unpromising yesterday morning, and of course prevented many from risking a probable ducking on the remote chance of seeing a race. Yet, as it was, four thousand people went to the track, and they were rewarded by seeing some of the finest trotting races this year has witnessed.

The judges were Messrs. George Archer, starter; Henry Hughes and D. S. Hammond, Mr. Archer, who is one of the mainstays of the Rochester track, is a gentleman of great experience and absolutely impartial, and he got them away with the least possible expense of time, though several of the starts were notably ragged, and the pole horse was as often behind as even.

Everything about the track was in the best condition, and the management are to be congratulated on the entire success of their efforts to provide in every way for the comfort of the public.

The number of ladies was very large, and the total number of people present was nearly four thousand—far exceeding anything known at Fleetwood for years.

As to the track there were no two opinions. It was smooth as velvet, firm, but not too hard, and altogether as perfect as its peculiar shape permits. Very fast time could have been made had it been necessary, and if Guy had been pressed he could have equaled or surpassed any time ever made on this track.

It was a great day for betting, too, the pools amounting to hundreds of dollars each, and Herdic must have reaped a rich harvest from his commissions. In each race the original favorite was defeated, and handsome winnings or heavy losses were the rule.

In the great event of the day, the Morrisania Stake, $5,000 for the 3:00 class, twelve horses answered the bell, the only absentee being Mount Morris who is out of form. It was a grand party. There was Guy, 2:14½, the sensational horse of the year, and a terror to bettors because of his bad conduct and his extreme speed. There was Golden Rod, good as gold, who was made the favorite, but was not at his best in this race. There was Cleon, as fleet and reliable as he is beautiful. Among the others were Fred Folger and David Jones, who were the choice of many good judges, and Kingbird and Marksman Maid. Folger fell into difficulties in the first heat, and David Jones ran away while scoring, and both were behind the flag when it fell. Cleon alone was able to make a race with Guy, and could not drive him out, though he trotted fast and well. Guy surprised every one by his good behavior while scoring and in the heats, and won as he pleased without being extended. So the great stake resulted, as is apt to be the case in such races, in rather a hollow victory. In the first heat alone was the winner called upon to show his speed. He was a distance behind when the word was given and trotted on the outside the most of the way, making a very long mile. From wire to wire he must have gone in less than 2:20.

William was considered a very sure winner in the 2:24 class, but he was not quite right, and did not have his speed. Darkness was tipped to win the first heat, and she did it cleverly, and was a good mare throughout the race. She made the fight with Elda B in several heats, but weakened at the finish. The heat won by Jeremiah was a scratch, apparently as the horse seemed to take it because those in front of him left their feet.

The 2:38 race was a very pretty contest from first to last between Greystone, who was an absurdly strong favorite, and Horton, who delighted his friends by showing the speed and gameness in public which his private trials have indicated. In the second heat, which he lost, he made two mistakes, entirely excusable in a five-year-old whose education is far from complete. But he caught quickly, and after each break came on like a race-horse. In the first heat he was taken back from the three-quarter pole, jogged down the stretch and walked under the wire. Had he been forced out he would have taken a very fast record. In each heat he showed speed enough to go away from the party without troubling himself. Fully matured, he ought to be a very great race-horse. The summaries are as follows:

Nevada State Fair.

The fourth annual fair of the Nevada State Agricultural Society began at Reno on September 17th. The weather was propitious and the attendance unusually large. President Theodore Winters as usual was compelled to attend personally to a world of details which in the hurry of preparation had been neglected until the last moment. The track and grounds were in first rate condition, and a large number of fast horses were in attendance. President Winters appointed Messrs. W. R. Chamberlin, O. H. Martin and J. R. Bradley judges, and Director White and Adolph Shane timers. Although announced to begin at 1 o'clock, the first race was not called until 2 P. M. on the

FIRST DAY.

The opening race was a mile dash with three starters. The favorite, Alcatraz, justified the faith of his backers, by winning the race out of hand in 1:48.

SUMMARY.

September 17th, Reno—Running. Mile dash.
Alcatraz by Norfolk—Golden Gate.....	1

Parole.....	3
Time, 1:48.
Pools—Alcatraz $25, field $9.

Second Race—A two-year-old dash of three-quarters of a mile was the sensational event of the day. When the pools sold Don Jose $60 and Almont $30, some of the horsemen thought there was a "nigger on the fence." If so the coon was thrown clear over for Don Jose did not run even a little bit, and Almont won the race by good three lengths in 1:18, time slower by two or three seconds than that was expected. Mutuels paid $11.85.

SUMMARY.

Don Jose by Joe Hooker—Countess Zelka.....	1
Almont by Three Cheers—Question.....	2
Time, 1:18.

Third Race.—The third, a five-eighths dash, was the best race ever run over the Reno course and was won by Al Farrow, a colt which showed up well last year. The field was a strung one and made a brilliant play for the race but the favorite had the foot of them.

Time, 0:37, 0:37.

SECOND DAY.

Pleasant weather and increased attendance enlivened the track materially. A noisy crowd surrounded the pool-box, and money moved freely. The stock parade at eleven o'clock was excellent, there being about sixty horses and as many cattle. A pony race, by fifteen Piute riders, was the first racing event of the day, and was a lively one. Pete XVI. won, Tally-Ho second, Dr. Hogan third and the rest along the road. Time for the mile, 2:15.

First Race.—For District horses, purse $100, three quarters, was well run out by the field of five, Al Farrow being protested for not being owned in the District, but the protest was disallowed and Farrow won the race easily.

SUMMARY.

Sept. 18, Reno, Running. Three quarter of a mile. Purse $100, $75 to first, $25 to second.

Time, 1:17.

Second Race.—Excitement ran high when the second race was called for the 2:27 class. The fast record of Victor at Sacramento, and the known speed of Sensation, drew bettors and jolly Sam Whitehead soon sold $3,000 at $20 for Victor to $16 for the field. The first heat was a brilliant one for Sensation, the gelding winning after a sharp brush, in 2:23½ by two lengths. Before the second heat Victor brought $20, Field $25. Sensation won again, and in 2:23½, trotting the mile without a skip, while Victor broke twice. In the third heat, at the first turn, Sensation went wide and struck Victor's sulky, the shock causing the pole horse to break. But he soon caught his stride and passed Victor just beyond the quarter, holding his own and winning the heat in the same time as the preceding ones 2:23½.

THIRD DAY.

Wednesday saw an influx of strangers greater than on either previous day. Many of them were well known horsemen, a large proportion were substantial ranchers and farmers, and there was a sprinkling of "sure thing" men, the latter reaping a heavy harvest. The races were called promptly and were very good.

First Race—A novelty race was the first listed, and was closely contested, the runners being sent for all they were worth. Susie S. won the race easily, Haidee and Blue Bonnet dividing $45 for the first horse to the half mile, and Haidee taking $90 for the first horse to the mile post.

SUMMARY.

Second race—A dash of five-eighths of a mile, was won easily by Joe Courtney, Bronco, Ogalena and Ozille being the field. Time, 1:03.

Third race—Third was a dash of seven-eighths of a mile, won easily by Blue Bonnet in 1:30, the field being Policy, Painkiller and Alcatraz.

Fourth race, a special mile and repeat, with three starters, was won by Belmont Boy in two straight heat over Valentine and Pocahontas.

FOURTH DAY.

The fourth day brought thirteen carloads of visitors from Virginia City and Carson, and with them came generous sacks of coin which was piled up on the races heavily.

First Race.—The first race on the programme at the State Fair was a mile and repeat running race, purse $300, in which Susie S. and Dave Douglass started. Susie S. won the first heat handily in 1:47, and repeated the performance in the second heat in 1:45½, a rattling pace.

Second Race.—In the trotting race for the 2:40 class, William P., Eva W., Cricket and Engineer started. The first heat was won by Cricket by a nose in 2:33½, Engineer distanced. The second heat Eva W. won in 2:33. The third heat was a repetition of the preceding one, Eva W. winning in 2:33½. In the fourth heat Eva W. ran badly and went under the wire at a length ahead of Cricket, but was set back for running and Cricket given the heat. The final heat was a beautiful contest for the first half mile, from which point Eva W. pulled out and came in ahead in 2:33.

Third Race.—A special one fourth mile dash was won by Rondo, Fox 2, Outlook 3.

Fourth Race.—The concluding event of the day, a special pacing race for District horses had three starters. The first heat was interesting only for the number of breaks made by the contesting horses. First Pasha went up, then Sam Lewis, and finally Ned, a performance which they alternately went throughout the course. On the stretch Ned was in the lead, but in a critical moment he broke, and Sam Lewis passed under the wire a length ahead, Ned second, Pasha third. Time 2:35½. The second heat was won by Sam Lewis, Ned and Pasha acting badly in their breaks. Time 2:30½. Sam Lewis won the third heat easily. Time 2:35.

Time, 2:35½, 2:30½, 2:35.

FIFTH DAY.

Friday showed no diminution of the attendance and Whitehead's pool business was greater than on previous days. The stand was well filled, ladies predominating.

First Race.—The half mile and repeat running race was won by Rondo in two straight heats. In the first heat Rondo and Lookout made a pretty race, both coming down the homestretch at a lightning pace, but Rondo's staying powers were too much for the Carson favorite, and he came in a length ahead. Time, 0:50. The second and final heat was a repetition of the first, and Rondo won handily in 0:51.

Second Race.—Great interest was manifested by the sporting fraternity in the one-mile dash in which Joe Courtney, Haidee, Al Farrow and Peregrine started. Over $8000 changed hands on the result. A good start was made, and it was anybody's race until the homestretch was reached, when Peregrine and Al Farrow forged to the front. Both riders plied the silk freely and for a hundred yards the fliers ran neck and neck. Then Peregrine put on a magnificent burst of speed and came under the wire about half a length in advance of his plucky antagonist. Time 1:44, which is said to be the best time ever made in a mile dash on a Nevada track.

SIXTH DAY.

The last day was by far the most interesting of the week. In the morning there was a parade of the Veteran Guards of the Grand Army of the Republic.

During the stock parade at the grounds this morning an incipient stampede occurred, and during the melee a young man named Marian Sellers was seriously, and perhaps fatally, injured, by a vicious bull, which gored him in the throat, lacerating him fearfully. Others were more or less bruised, among them being A. T. Rice, who was trampled upon and bruised on the back.

First race—The first event on the programme was a trotting race of the 2:23 class for a purse of $1,000, $500 to first, $300 to second and $200 to third. In the pools Sensation sold the favorite. From the wire to the finish Valentine paid close attention to Sensation, and for two-thirds of the course they traveled together as if the wheels of the sulkies were locked. On the last turn Sensation gradually forged to the front position, which he retained until the wire was passed. Victor acted nervously throughout the heat, breaking badly at the first turn and repeating the performance when at the three-quarter mile post.

In the second heat, Sensation went up in the air at the half, and before the driver could get him down to a pace Valentine was far ahead but when Sensation was again in hand he struck a 2:18 gait, which soon reduced the daylight between them, and when the turn into the homestretch was made, Sensation was about a length behind. But his lightning pace was too much for Valentine, in spite of the frantic efforts of his driver to land him a victor, Reno's favorite horse passed under the wire a length ahead. Time, 2:24.

It was on the cards for Victor to worry Sensation in the third heat, Valentine having signally failed in the two preceding heats. At the start Victor struck a slashing pace, but at the first turn Valentine swerved, and Victor went up. From that time to the finish Sensation led. Victor quickly closed up the gap between him and Valentine, and passing him, close up on Sensation around the turn, and was only a length behind, but he had done his best, and could not do more than lessen his defeat by two lengths. Time 2:23½.

Third race—The three-quarters of a mile dash between Ogzilla, Minnie B and Policy was won by Ogzilla, Minnie second, in 1:19½.

A Novel Idea.

As will be learned from the advertisement in the appropriate column there is to be a "combined meeting" next week in Altaville, Calaveras County, Cal., commencing Thursday, October 4th, and holding three days. There are purses for running, trotting and pacing horses, and one which is restricted to the "fastest lady riders." There are ten events in all to be decided upon the track, and then the forum comes in for a share of attention, noted speakers being engaged to discuss the political topics of the time. Saturday the closing day of the meeting, and on that the speeches will be made, while a grand barbecue will be one of the main features. There should certainly be a large attendance, and without doubt "old Calaveras" will turn out en masse.

Trotting Stock to be Sold.

Those desirous of purchasing well bred trotting stock will be interested in examining the animals to be offered at auction on the Bay District Track, on Thursday, October 18, 1888. They are the property of P. A. Finigan, and will be sold by S. B. Whitehead & Co. A complete and correct list of pedigrees of all those to be sold will be found in our advertising columns. The catalogue recently issued by Mr. Finigan has been found to contain serious errors, and therefore another has been compiled in this office, which revised list may be obtained from Mr. Finigan, or Messrs. Whitehead & Co. Some of the stock offered is bred within the requirements of the standard, adopted by the National Association. Others show strong infusions of popular thoroughbred strains. The sale is absolute, without reserve, and intending purchasers may have every opportunity to examine the stock at the track between October 10th and the day of sale.

Fair Notes.

In giving the premium list of the California State Fair we omitted to state that in the class for standard bred trotters Mr. H. S. Beal's Berlin took first premium, and the two-year-old Billy Irving, by Berlin, received second.

The pool selling privilege on the Bay District and Oakland Park tracks have been let to S. B. Whitehead & Co., for one year, they being the highest bidders. This award will give satisfaction to betting men and be a source of profit to Mr. Hindeman.

The fall meeting of the Pacific Coast Blood Horse Association will open November 10th. This will give the California horses now in the East ample time to return and get into condition, and they will all be here. The Santa Anita stable has been absent from these meetings for two years, but Mr. Baldwin announces his intention to be in the lists again this fall.

The sale of Holstein cattle from the herd of Frank H. Burke, of Menlo Park, Cal., at the fair grounds, Saturday, C. W. Borton, auctioneer, was very successful, sixteen thoroughbred and two graded cattle being sold in less than forty minutes for $1,875 cash. The sale was a satisfactory one in every respect, and Mr. Burke will repeat the experiment at an early day.

At Fresno on Wednesday last, Gossipee took the trotting race for the 2:30 class in straight heats, 2:29½, 2:31 and 2:34.

A manager of experience in handling horses, both running and trotting horses, desires a position. Any one in need of a man of ability will do well to address "Manager," care this office.

A. S. Mercer, editor of the North Western Live Stock Journal called at our office during last week. He is greatly interested in the procuring a proper mode of inspection of live-stock, previous to its being killed, and sold to the public. Upwards of twelve per cent of tubercular diseases in man have been traced to the consuming of tuberculous meats, and it is full time that some steps were taken in the matter. Mr. Mercer is commissioned by the Government to visit this coast.

"Hark Comstock" in California.

The following is the initial letter of a series written for the N. Y. Spirit of the Times by Hark Comstock. That the interesting contributions is shadowed by the one copied, and our readers will be gratified to learn the views of a man who has been so long associated with the literature of trotting horses:

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL., August 30th.—A few days in this State has already enabled me to see many objects of interest, some of which your readers will not be averse to hearing about.

I visited the Palo Alto ranch, the country home of Hon. Leland Stanford, with Mr. Ariel Lathrop and a few friends on the 14th inst. The dry season being far advanced the fields are brown and dusty, except where by irrigation the alfalfa has kept green. Yet the dried grasses keep the stock in fine condition, when the casual observer at a distance would think from the appearance of the ground that they would starve. The dry season kills the grass each year and cures it into hay as it stands, but the seed having fallen a new crop starts up with the first rains in the fall, and grows luxuriantly all winter and late into the spring. The most abundant of the natural grasses is a kind of wild oats, of which the chief portion of the hay crop is made. The wild oats is also used for seeding down lands after cultivation, producing, when cut green, a better quality of hay in this soil and climate than can be obtained from the tame grasses used in the East, which can only be maintained by irrigation. The absence of rain greatly facilitates the harvesting, leaving the hay always bright and sweet. Grain is all threshed in the open fields, put up in bags and hauled to the railroads for shipment, while the straw and hay is baled in the fields and often left there for weeks or months before being housed. Nobody gives himself any trouble of mind about the weather—that constant source of anxiety during harvest time at the East.

But the wild oat, while the chief, is far from being the only natural forage of value. There are other plants which to the Eastern observer would appear to be little better than worthless weeds that are very nontrusting to grazing stock. Among these are alfilera (the needle) grass and burr clover. The former is early to ripen and makes fine hay. The latter is a vine which lies closer to the ground than our Eastern clovers. Livestock do not eat it while green, but as soon as the drouth of summer has killed and dried it they consume it with avidity. The seed balls of the burr clover drop to the ground as soon as ripe, and here the stock finds them at a later period. The seed is a very nourishing and stimulating food, quite equal to grain, and to it is largely due the thrifty growth and condition of the animals which one often sees in pastures that to the uninitiated appear at this season of the year to be little better than bare ground. The natural grasses are all annuals, and the dry summers render it impossible to maintain perennial grasses except upon irrigated lands, of which there are now many thousands of acres in the State. The favorite grass in use upon irrigated soil is alfalfa, known better in the east as Lucerne. With an ample supply of water five crops, averaging one and a half tons each to the acre, are not uncommon, but four cuttings is the more general rule. With this grass and water supply, well established green pasturage can be had through the year. At Governor Stanford's ranch at Vina, 200 miles north of San Francisco, which I also visited, I saw many hundred acres of alfalfa, some of which were reserved for hay, and others, having been mown of the earlier crops, were used for pasturing the horses and Holstein cattle. Most of the stock was in very high flesh, but many think that alfalfa, fed exclusively, does not raise as good a growing animal as the dry grasses, which are of more substances. Stock that has been kept any length of time on alfalfa run eagerly to any stack of dry forage within reach, and eat of it as ravenously as though it was grain. Hence dry fodder is supplied to the horses kept on alfalfa pastures at Palo Alto and Vina, and the animals are in superb condition.

This Vina ranch, of some 55,000 acres, is a remarkable establishment. Upon it are 3,325 acres of vineyard, of which the present crop of grapes is now being converted into wine and brandy. In the last two years over 100,000 gallons of pure grape brandy were distilled, and an average of 65,000 gallons of wine are made annually. The greater portion of the wine are clarets, but angelica, sherry, port and other varieties are also made. They contain nothing but the pure product of the grape. The winery is said to be the largest in the world. The storage capacity of the wine house is sufficient to hold the products of the vineyard for four years, after which time it will be necessary to either build or sell. It is the intention to sell the wine when four years old. The present is the second year in which a full crop of wine has been made at Vina.

Among other appendances of this farm are 30,000 sheep (which I did not see) of mixed breeding. These are being graded to a medium wool standard. A great number of hogs are also raised. The latter are in a semi-wild condition, and are chiefly Berkshire grades, though a Poland-China cross is now in contemplation. Last year the increase of about 1,100 head were sold to the butcher. A herd of registered Holstein-Friesian cattle is kept, of which the bulls are principally of the Netherlands family, but a range herd of beef cattle, well graded up in Shorthorn blood, are the main stay of this cattle department.

There are nearly as many head of trotting stock at Vina as at Palo Alto. Some of the stallions and a large number of broodmares are kept at the former place. A few years ago a plan of shipping drafts of horses from Palo Alto to Vina was instituted, in order to give them the advantage of a greater supply of green pasturage (alfalfa) in summer. The intention at first was to bring them back again to Palo Alto, but with 300 broodmares bringing an increase yearly the stables, paddocks and pastures at Palo Alto became so crowded that it was convenient to let them remain at Vina, and gradually some 300 head have been left there with little prospect of finding room for their return to Palo Alto. Indeed, many of the younger were dropped at Vina, the oldest of which, now past two years, have never had a strap on them, except to break them to halter.

The size of the yearlings is marvelous. They possess the stature and make-up of matured horses, and some of them seem to have the natural speed of a 2:30 horse when turned loose on the miniature tracks. These tracks are quite an institution, and I believe are an important aid in the development of speed in young horses. And who can successfully deny that to develop speed young, provided it can be done without overtaxing the strength or injuring the ligaments, adds to the ultimate capacity of the horse? The miniature track is about one-tenth of a mile in circumference, is about eight feet wide, surrounded by a high fence, and thrown up high on the outside at the turns. Along the inside of the track is a rail about four feet from the ground, supported by posts which slant from the bottom towards the track. Hence if the colt inclines in he will hit the rail, which is made smooth to prevent accidents, and cannot strike his legs against the posts. By thus keeping the colt in his place upon the track he is soon taught to make the circuit, and it is surprising how quickly they settle down to a steady trot after working off a little surplus vitality at play when first brought out.

A track of this kind under cover would enable trainers and those wintering young stock in the East to sufficiently exercise a large number of horses every day when the weather or the roads were too bad to drive them. Unbroken stock particularly could be fed higher without surfeiting, and developed faster through the winter than when wintered in a straw yard or confined to box and paddock. In these days the great point is getting to be early development of the trotter as with the running horse. Those who are obliged to run their colts in sections which have snowy winters should neglect no means that assists the winter growth of their colts in strength and power as in stature. Strong feeding is essential to early development. To feed high without corresponding exercise is to make bullocks of them. They may do to show on the fair ground, but unless their lungs, arteries and muscles have been developed in unison with their bulk they will not race. And the time to get the best growth of the vital organism is during the plastic stage of colthood, nothing hurts the promise of well born youngsters like going into a semi-torpid state all winter like a bear, freezing through with no exercise. If grained high at such times their blood gets fevered up and they come out in the spring enervated, when put to work they get scratches and cracked heels, and the humor has to be physicked out of them that should have been blown out of their lungs in exercise through the winter. The miniature track should not be overlooked. Yet while familiar to everybody here on account of the prominence given at the Palo Alto, I doubt if many California breeders use it. I think it is really less needed here than in the East, particularly in the snowy regions where it could be made to serve an admirable purpose in offering efficient exercise with little labor. Charles Marvin, of Smuggler fame at the East, and still more widely identified as chief trainer of the Palo Alto and during all its trotting success, tells me that he regards the miniature track as an almost unfailing index of natural speed in harness. The colts that could go the fastest on the miniature track were the ones that could show high speed in harness at one, two and three years old. Norlaue was a wonder on a miniature track but not the fastest, nor is she considered to have been the fastest yearling developed at Palo Alto, though her 2:31½ leads the record.

The trotting string at Palo Alto has been in very bad luck this year. The fire in the spring, which burned the stable of the leading horses, killing some and injuring others, was a sad set-back, and upset the plans of the campaign completely. A new lot of horses had to be taken up and a too-hurried preparation went against their legs, and several of them had to be laid up for the season. Still, putting California and the East together, nine new representatives of Electioneer have entered the 2:30 list this year, and Fallis has reduced his record from 2:28½ to 2:23, while Sonnet, a daughter of Bentonian, won two heats in 2:26½, this week, and would have won her race but for going lame.

The central figure at the Palo Alto Stable at present is the two-year-old bay filly Sunol by Electioneer, out of Waxana, by General Benton; 2d dam thoroughbred Waxey by Lexington. Her present record is 2:25, taken in her first race, at Los Angeles, two weeks ago. She won again at Petaluma, last week, in straight heats, of which the time was 2:28½, 2:26½. She was really not extended in this race and skimmed along over the ground with low-reaching action at such perfect ease as to give color to the extraordinary estimates that were rife about her speed. Mr. Marvin regards her as the fastest trotter of her age that has ever been trained at Palo Alto, and that her speed is natural, for she has always been the fastest since first she was put in harness. She could beat Norlaue at any time as a yearling, but her powers were kept quiet and held in reserve in the expectation that some Kentucky yearling would come over here in the fall to try conclusions. Electioneer carries his years well and has not the appearance of an old stallion, although he has entered upon his twenty-first year.

While I have seen comparatively little public trotting since I came to California—three days at Petaluma and two at Oakland—yet I have seen in these few races considerable Electioneer blood in the first and second generations. I have yet to see one of the family that is not a pure, level-going trotter (excepting one fast pacer), and this applies to a large number that I saw worked on the private track at Palo Alto as well as those in public races. It seems to make little or no difference whether the get of Electioneer are from mares of trotting blood or from those wholly or in part thoroughbred. The trotting habit of action is there, born with the foal. Not only is the action there, but in the main the trotting disposition is there, and many of the highest bred Electioneers are his best actors in races.

A great many colts have been sold from Palo Alto during the past two years and but comparatively few fillies. The public in buying colts for stallions almost invariably prefer those which are trotting bred on both sides, and this has left many colts from dams possessing more or less running blood that would unquestionably prove very valuable sires if crossed upon mares bred exclusively of trotting lines. These colts can trot, too, but for want of having been registered prior to the changes in the rules many of them that might have been are not standard, and this is a point that goes against a public stallion. Had not the range of prices been raised, the young mares and fillies would be carried away from Palo Alto in droves. And furthermore, while bays have thus far preferred the stallions of unmixed trotting origin, they are becoming very partial to those fillies which partake liberally of stout thoroughbred crosses. Those are the ones, however, which Palo Alto is least desirous of parting with.

But appearances indicate that the day is not distant when it will be recognized that Electioneer is not the only sire that can get reliable trotters out of high bred and thoroughbred dams. Few breeders have had the courage to try it as confidently as Governor Stanford has. Each year his confidence has increased as results have tested his theories, and in no year has he bred so many or so good thoroughbred mares to trotting sires as in the present year of 1888. His new catalogue, compiled in excellent form by Mr. Ed. A. Tipton, of Lexington, Ky., who has been over here for that purpose, is just issued from the press, and all who send for it and carefully examine its contents will see that many thoroughbred and half-bred mares have been served this year, not only by Electioneer, but by Clay, Piedmont, Norval, Nephew and Liberty. This policy would not have been continued and extended this year had not previous results satisfied the owner, who is unquestionably one of the closest observers, that it is a policy of progress. The stallion Nephew, added to the stud last year, was chosen not alone for his breeding, which is very rich in trotting lines, but in part upon satisfactory evidence that he possesses unusual power to impart trotting action when crossed with high-bred mares. His fastest trotter, Voucher, 2:22, is from a mare half thoroughbred, but it was not on account of this one public instance of his merit as upon other private evidence that he was bought. At present he has five representatives, with records from 2:28 to 2:22, and one pacer in 2:21. As most horsemen are aware he is by Hambrino, 2:21½, out of Trotting Sister, and is inbred to Rysdyk's Hambletonian, through Edwars, Everett and Alexander's Abdallah, with an outcross of Hambrino Chief.

There will always be wide differences of opinion upon theories of breeding. Many breeders contend that the thoroughbred element is hard to control and of no advantage to the trotter when it is controlled. Others, of which Governor Stanford is one, believe that it is capable of rendering trotters of higher capacity than can be had without it, and he is working to that end. Some think he has made no progress except with Electioneer. He thinks differently. But, however opinions may differ upon the influence of thoroughbred blood, the power of a stallion to so control the action of his progeny as to give them trotting speed of a high order when from mares of running antecedents, is a very significant test of superiority in the stallion, which renders him all the more desirable for trotting mares. A breeder remarked last week, while Sunol was warming up for her two-year-old race at Petaluma: "I don't want any thoroughbred blood in my broodmares, but I would like to breed them to a stallion that can get trotters out of thoroughbred and half-bred mares, for I think it is the strongest test of merit that can be applied." Directly after getting the word in the first heat Sunol broke, and, like most big gaited youngsters, made very losing work of it, coming nearly to a walk before she again resumed her steady measuring stride. "That's the thoroughbred of it," I heard whispered just back of me. Her opponent, Mergret S., by Director, 2:17, out of May Day, opened up a great gap and went off as steadily as an old campaigner, and our friend on the next seat remarked: "I think Sunol will be beaten to-day." And he might with reason think so, for Margaret S. is one of the best two-year-olds that ever did battle for the reputation of an ambitious young sire. She is as handy as any old campaigner, goes clean and true without weighing, and is as near perfection in action and disposition as an owner could wish. If she prove not ultimately a first-class one promise goes for naught. But good as she was, she had met a nonpareil on that occasion. Sunol resumed her strids without showing any temper, gradually increased it, until she began to overtake her opponent, and then, having closed the gap, passed her with a long, even, measuring stroke, that displays no effort on the surface, and made me think of old Lady Thorne in the first race in which she and Dexter ever came together, in which she beat him, on the old Union Course on Long Island, many a year ago. But Lady Thorne (who also had a thoroughbred grandparent) in those days was no sweet-tempered mare like Sunol. The latter came up the stretch at the finish with her ears alternately pricked and then thrown back towards her driver, wondering at the as yet unaccustomed sight of an applauding grand stand. She took the heat in 2:23½. She has yet some timidity of an inexperienced filly, but it is fast disappearing. At Los Angeles, when she took her record of 2:25, it was necessary to stop the band from playing when she was driven past the stand, but here she ceased to regard it. She is learning fast, and has the temperament and good sense to make a reliable race-mare. She took the following heat without skip or break, in 2:26½. Margaret S. was separately timed in this heat in 2:28½. In alluding to Lady Thorne I wished to convey no further sense of comparison with Sunol than in their stately manner and stride. The resemblance ceases with that one feature.

Sunol is a large, bright bay filly, with a highbred look throughout. Her head and neck are neat, and countenance, good-tempered and sensible, while expressive of plenty nervous force. She has a deep shoulder and girth, with excellent fore legs and feet; middle piece of good length and of peculiar formation, in the fact that her back arches or roaches not only at the loin, but from the saddle place to the coupling is a strong curve that rises toward the quarters to a height at least two inches above the level of her withers. It is a strong back, yet Mr. Marvin thinks it has not the remarkable power of Bonita's. This extra height behind is supplemented by a proportionate development otherwise, so that her real parts seem formed for an animal two sizes larger than would be indicated forward of the girth. Yet so nicely are the two ends united that there is no unpleasant sense of disproportion in the general effect. One rather admires than criticizes when he realizes what she can do. It would seem that nature had given her more than a due share of propelling power, but there is no apparent want of strength forward. Her shoulder is capital, and her neck and head light, clean and airy. Her legs and feet all round are capital, and show no signs of hard usage.

It is an open question whether Sunol has added more than she has detracted from the prestige of California two-year-olds. In appropriating to herself as winner of so much attention, she has obscured two other remarkable animals, the performance of which, but for her, would doubtless have been heralded throughout the country. In thinking of the winner we are apt to overlook the real merits of beaten horses. In a later letter I hope to mention more particularly the great two-year-olds belonging to Mr. Rose and Salisbury that raced against Sunol respectively at Los Angeles and Petaluma. Should the Kentucky horsemen carry out their proposed visit to the Pacific Slope with two-year-old trotters, there is little doubt they would meet with creditable opponents, even in case accident should disqualify Sunol from starting.

The race between Stamboul, Guy Wilkes and Woodnut, on Monday last, was a disappointment in many ways, but as my letter is already too long I will defer comments until another date.

Yours,

HARK COMSTOCK.

Geo. Turner, of Chicago, has bought the black colt Heather, by Herod, dam Jessie by Bates' Emperor.

Since August 11th, Jockey Barnes has won upward of twenty races, the value of which aggregates close to $100,000. No jockey in the country has ever made a record approaching this.

In the first day's racing at Charter Oak Park four trotters beat 2:20 for the first time, viz., Gsneva S., William, Protection and Gene Smith. This is without precedent.

The yearling cheetnut colt Prosit, by Springbok—Venora, own brother to Ordway, the property of the Madison Stable, died September 12th from lung fever contracted from neighboring stables at Monmouth Park. He was a cracking good yearling and had shown a great trial at a quarter of a mile.

CATTLE.

Great Herds from Small Beginnings Grow.

No line of agriculture is more fascinating to ambitious young men than the rearing of pure-bred live stock. Many, however, enter into the business without giving themselves that thorough training essential to success; they drift into it, following their natural bent, taking up the more intellectual side of the calling, and fail to drill themselves properly in the little details of handling, feeding and managing, so necessary to success. The best merchants are those who have grown up in the business from cash boys and have learned by years of drudgery just how each branch of the business is conducted. The young man, the goal of whose ambition is to some day own and manage a herd of pure-breds, should begin at once by schooling himself in handling and managing just such animals as he may find about him to-day. Feeding calves may not appear to be very elevating work, yet until one can successfully feed calves he should not think of taking care of older animals. How can one leave to others duties which he cannot perform thoroughly and well himself? Having learned just how a young calf should be fed and how it should appear when well fed, one is ready to take the next step in the business. If rightly started the young animal is on the way to a thrifty yearling, and here study is needed again to make that happy decision between unprofitable over-feeding and not less expensive under-feeding.

In studying how to feed and handle too great haste should not be incurred because of the drudgery; to do anything well and easily and to have the judgment rendered quick and active one must repeat the operation he is studying many times. Our young stock breeder reading the directions given by noted cattlemen warms up and feels that he can rapidly learn to do just as they are doing; let him remember, however, that these men have grown gray in their calling and that they started as well equipped mentally and with as great ambition to succeed as the coming generation, and only the long procession of years has given these masters the deftness and good judgment they now exhibit. To hope to acquire the same degree of expertness in a brief time is utter folly. Reading alone will not make one expert. No one can at first pitch a base ball successfully after having carefully studied the directions from a book. Careful, thoughtful reading will help one greatly and materially shorten the time required to attain success, but reading must be followed up by extended practice.

Young men who cannot own full bloods can get excellent practice in handling grades. They can secure pure-bred sires—for any other system is absolutely inexcusable at this time—and can rapidly grade up the herd with ample opportunity for carefully observing the value of good blood. They can take much pride and gain a world of information in just this work. The young man who will not improve to the utmost the cattle he may happen to possess, but neglects them, longing for the time to come when he can own better ones, is not worthy of his calling and his pretended devotion to such is probably not deeply enough planted to ever bear fruit, even if it has an opportunity. To be expert in pedigrees is very proper and essential, but one had a thousand times better begin his studies by rendering himself expert in feeding, handling, and judging. When this is acquired in a fair measure the other can be added, and then one can set out on the road with little fears but that success will ultimately crown his efforts.

Another point: Ambitious young men are not always willing to begin in a small way and let time make up what they lack in money. To start with one or two pure-bred females seems entirely too small a beginning for their ambition, and rather than take up with so little they make no start at all. No greater mistake could be made. In beginning so small there are almost no chances of failure, while the opportunity for studying is concentrated thereby. We have in mind some of the very best breeders whose beginning seems very insignificant compared with present attainments. The long years have brought much experience to them, and with the increasing herd comes increased experience and the judgment so essential to success. We have but to look around us and observe how the majority of our successful business men have begun and advanced to get an excellent idea of the best way to proceed in building up and managing a herd of pure-bred cattle.—Breeders' Gazette.

Washington Territory Holsteins.

The Holstein-Friesian cow Amazonia, No. 8658, H. H. B., property of B. N. L. Davis, of Mt. Vernon, W. T., has recently completed a most remarkable milk record for one month. She calved July 4th. Mr. Davis writes: "We began the milk test July 5th, and from the 5th of July to the 15th she gave an average of 69 lbs. of milk daily, or 690 lbs. in ten days. From July 15th to July 25th she gave an average of 70 lbs. of milk per day, or 700 lbs. in ten days. On the 25th of July she gave 74 lbs. of milk; on the 26th 75 lbs.; on the 27th 74 lbs.; on the 28th 76½ lbs.; on the 29th 76 lbs.; on the 30th 78½ lbs.; on the 31st 76 lbs.; on the 1st of August 74 lbs.; on the 2d 79½ lbs.; on the 3d 80 lbs.; on the 4th 80½ lbs. A total yield in 11 days of 843½ lbs. of milk, and a grand total yield of 2,233½ lbs. of milk in one month from July 5th to August 5th.

In order to test her milk for butter we set it separately for seven days, from the cream of which we made 16½ lbs. of firm gilt-edged butter, an average of 2 lbs. 5 ozs. per day. Owing to the hot weather and our manner of setting the milk—in common tin pans—fully 15 per cent. of the cream was lost, and from that fact we did not continue the butter test during the month. We believe that Amazonia is fully capable of producing three pounds of butter daily.

The tests as given above seem almost incredible when we consider that the weight of her milk for two days is equal to the weight of an averaged sized man; in 16 days she gave her own weight in milk, and in one month as much milk as a span of horses would draw. Witnesses who saw her milked will vouch for the accuracy of the statements above given. During the test she was milked twice daily. For the first 20 days she had only the same care and food of other cows of the herd, turned out on the range during the day and turned into the pasture at night; fed twice a day three quarts ground oats, but during the last 11 days of the test she was turned on good pasture and given 1 1-2 gallons of chop at a feed.

Amazonia is five years old; she is a perfect type of this unrivalled breed of cattle. She was bred by W. Buiz, Bergen, North Holland; imported by Geo. Brown & Co. Her sire is the great Netherland bull, Cor. N. H. B., No. 122, the district bull of Bergen, and her dam Amazonia, a great milker descended from a Netherland family noted for their deep milking qualities for generations. In our herd of 53 head of pure bred registered Holstein-Friesians, Amazonia is queen. Four cows of our herd have averaged 67 lbs. of milk per day. Six cows have given 60 lbs. and upward in one day. From our experience we believe that in the four essentials for human food, viz., beef, milk, butter and cheese, they are unrivalled by any breed.—Exchange.

American Bulls.

If forty per cent. of all the purely bred cows of all ages now in the United States were to have bull calves that would reach maturity, they would produce 48,000 such hulls. These would be less than one-sixth of the number which might be profitably used for the immediate improvement of cattle in this country. To furnish all the hulls wanted for that work 750,000 cows of high breeding would be needed. There are now in the country 116,000 cows of all ages of such breeding, or 634,000 less than might be profitably used to the great advantage of the producer, middleman and consumer. Among horses, swine, sheep, poultry and other stock, the percentage of animals of pure breeding is doubtless no greater than it is among cattle. It is therefore clearly evident that there can be no over supply of stock of pure blood. In the United States are some 50,000,000 cattle, mostly "scrubs." In the whole land there are less than 200,000 cattle registered or eligible for registration as being of pure pedigree. This is an average of one of pure blood for every 250 cattle. There are in the country 58,000 hulls and 116,000 cows of all ages, and pure breeding. These well bred cows will require the services of not less than 2,000 bulls of like breeding. This would leave 55,000 which might be used on the 12,000,000 grade and scrub cows in the country, for the immediate improvement of their young to the great advantage of all concerned. There would be then an average of only one purely bred bull for every 218 cows not pure in blood. Six times that number of hulls will be needed for the work.—Holstein-Friesian R.

Successful Surgery.

In the late railway accident at Melrose on the Southern Pacific Railway, a very fine two-year-old filly was severely injured. A splinter from one of the cars entered her side between two of the ribs, making a large wound through which eighteen inches of the omentum protruded. As she was of valuable stock, the Spaniards, who were taking her to South America, determined to give her a chance for life, and placed her under the care of Dr. Thomas Bowhill, at the Centennial stables, San Francisco. It was determined to proceed according to the German method as recommended in operations on the human subject. The omentum was cut off with a view to having the remaining portion become adherent, and form a granulating surface which would plug the wound and heal successfully. Six catgut sutures were employed to draw the sides of the wound together, and a catgut ligature also tied the omentum. The strictest antiseptic precautions were used throughout.

Everything proceeded satisfactorily until a severe attack of broncho-pneumonia set in which complicated matters, and tended to overstrain the wound by the severe cough which accompanied it. Special treatment, however, relieved the difficulty, but not until a rather large portion of the granulating matter had been protruded through the wound. This was cut off with the ecraseur, and from this time forward everything progressed in a satisfactory manner. No farther complications impeded matters, and on a careful examination of the filly on Sunday forenoon, one month from the date of injury, was had the satisfaction of finding a complete and permanent cure; the animal being ready to resume her journey.

The Skin of Cattle.

Touch affords a criterion second to none in judging of the feeding powers of an animal. The touch may be hard or mellow. A thick, firm skin, which is generally covered with a thick-set, hard, short hair, always indicates a bad feeder. A thin, papery skin, covered with thin, silken hair, being the opposite of the one just described, does not, however, afford a good touch. Such skin is indicative of weakness of constitution, though of good feeding properties. A perfect touch will be found with thick, loose skin floating as it were on a layer of soft fat, yielding to the least pressure, and springing back to the finger like a piece of soft, thick velvet, and covered with a thick, glossy, soft hair. A knowledge of touch can only be acquired by long practice, but after one has once attained it, it is a sufficient means of judging of the feeding qualities of an animal.

Texas fever in cattle has been for some time occupying the attention of experts, and a conclusion has been arrived at with an unanimity which is not over common amongst scientific observers. It has been finally determined that Texas fever is contagious. On July 13, 1888, there were placed native cattle in a pen which had been occupied by Texas cattle. No sign of sickness was discovered amongst them until August 9th, when symptoms of Texas fever began to appear. One of the animals died on the following day, and another was killed when in a moribund condition. Since this time others have died, and the post mortem examinations revealed the following: The bladder found filled with bloody virus, the kidneys were highly discolored and inflamed, and gangrene had set in. The stomach and spleen were much enlarged and diseased. On July 20th some native cattle were placed in a pen with ten Texas cattle. The Texans were taken out after a week and put with five natives out to grass, where they remained for a week, the object being to discover whether a week's contact is sufficient to produce the disease. The experiments are still being conducted. A peculiarity of the disease is that it never affects Texas cattle themselves unless they are sent back home after a stay of six months north. The completed experiments up to the present show that a month is required for the disease to manifest itself, so that fat cattle may contract the disease and be killed before it is possible to discover any symptoms of the fever. Another danger is the spreading of the disease by native stock cattle which have been put in Texan pens.

Few open ranges are now left for stockmen. Instead of giving up the business it would be better for them to confine themselves to their own lands and raise a winter supply of feed. The raising of a number of cattle without a supply of winter food is no longer practicable in the majority of instances, but proper management will result in equally remunerative prices.

The operation of dishorning is easy and comparatively painless if performed on young calves. Watch the signs of the coming horn, which will generally show itself when the calf is five or six weeks old. Remove it then, and it will never start again. There is no doubt that hornless cattle will, in a few years, sell better than others. In many places they do now, and dishorning is the easiest way to add to their value.

The English have a roller system of storing ensilage which is very simple; and when there is a scarcity of laborers this latter is a great desideratum. Ensilage is best made in showery weather; moist grass packs much better under the roller than if built up dry, though quite green; air is also most effectually excluded. A good brown color should obtain in ensilage, in fact it should be moist and warm, in odor of a rich fragrance. A black color is inadmissible.

A number of Arizona cattle raisers have determined to establish a wholesale butchering establishment at Los Angeles. They believe that an excellent market is offered by that place, and complain that too much margin at present rules between the prices paid them for meat on the hoof and the ruling retail prices.

Mr. L. H. Gormley has been the mover of this project, and in an interview with a newspaper representative, said that there were from 70,000 to 80,000 head represented by the cattlemen of Southern Arizona who were interested; this would furnish upwards of 8,000 beef steers during the year. In order, however, to supply fat cattle the year round it would be necessary for them to feed from 2,000 to 3,000 head on Alfalfa for the winter months and the spring market. Properly conducted, such an enterprise would result in mutual benefit to breeders and consumers.

The importance to human health of having live-stock sent to market free from disease is paramount. The quality and condition of flesh and milk have much effect upon the health of consumers. Medical authorities all agree in saying that one of the most potent sources of human maladies is the consumption of unsound meats. The milk of diseased cows has been of late discovered to be a deadly compound, carrying into many a family the germs of deadly disease and inevitable death. To remedy this it is absolutely essential that herds be kept in a more healthy condition by proper management, both as regards sanitary precautions with regard to feed and water, and the use of common sense and discrimination in the selection of animals to breed from, and in the care of the youngsters as they grow to maturity.

Dr. D. E. Salmon, a very close observer of all matters connected with breeding, says that crossing is a direct cause of reversion, whether the animals belong to different breeds, to different varieties of the same breed, or even to different strains of the same variety. Different breeds are produced by different surroundings, care and food. Families are but steps toward breeds. As crossing different breeds is an exciting cause of reversion, because of their dissimilarity, so crossing varieties, and even uniting unrelated animals of the same variety which have necessarily been subjected to different conditions of life, are also subject to the same great law. In-breeding of itself is not a system; practised alone, without proper attention to the selection of the breeding stock and food, care and training of the offspring, it will almost invariably lead to failure. When those points have been observed it has generally produced the most marked and brilliant results.

A proper supply of salt should never be omitted on the dairy ranch. Experiences such as the following of a Wisconsin dairy man we have met with in many instances. He milked seventeen cows the last season, and early in the summer ran out of salt. Having read in an agricultural paper that cows do just as well without it he neglected to get another barrel. The drought came, the milk-flow dropped to about 220 pounds a day, which gave no profit, nor did it increase after the pastures were freshened by the rains. He bought a carload of milk stuff and began feeding, but still received only 220 pounds of milk a day, and several of the cows would hold up their milk once or twice a week. Then he began to salt regularly every day; the cows improved at once, and the increase was steady until, on the same feed, they were producing 380 pounds of milk a day, and instead of being kept at a loss yielded a fair profit. A well balanced ration fed at regular hours and in regular quantities, with attention to water, salt, bedding, and all the points which go to make the animal comfortable will save money, particularly in a season when feed is high priced.

Notes.

The United States produces ten pounds of meat to one of mutton.

According to the estimate of the Northwestern Live Stock Journal, only 41,636 head of cattle have gone into Montana this year from the southern ranges.

All young animals quickly learn to eat ground oats, there is no ground grain better for them. They will grow and thrive upon oats, even when drawing milk from their dams.

Do not wean your calf too gradually. Give him green corn leaves, vegetables, middlings, and a little cotton seed meal should he show signs of growing poor.

A careful estimate of fatality from cholera puts the loss, in the last three years, in the State of Kansas, at one million swine; there are not more than 40 per cent. as many in that State as there were three years ago.

The total area under cultivation in corn, rye and oats in the United States this year, is about 140,000,000 acres or nearly 219,000 square miles. This is less than half the 322,000,000 acres of public lands which have not yet been surveyed, much of which is well adapted to the cultivation of cereals.

Enforce the Law.

That there will always be complaints entered against those who have charge of racing and trotting is nearly certain so long as human nature is what it is. There are two sides to a large majority of controversies, and when these are of as exciting a character as arise from horse-racing, it cannot be expected that a perfectly cool view will be taken by the partisans.

But there are questions which there cannot be any differences about, and in the general consensus of opinion it would appear that there should be no room for disapproval. Trotting races afford a greater chance for disagreement than when a gallop is legitimate, and the question of "breaks" is the most troublesome which the magnates in the stand have to deal with. That and foul-driving are the topics which we have heard discussed oftener than all others when the late fairs are brought on to the carpet, and a majority of those we have listened to are inclined to criticize the judges in allowing what the rules positively condemn.

One of the Sacramento races is cited wherein it is claimed that a horse made seven breaks in a heat and was so nearly level at the finish with a horse which did not break, that spectators were about equally divided as to which was first, was not punished for the infringement of the rules, the heat announced "dead."

The rule regarding "Horse Breaking" is somewhat cumbersome, and it is very doubtful if it has been observed in full in the race alluded to or any other during the Circuit. One clause commands that one of the judges shall "call out during the progress of a race every break made, designating by colors or name the horse making and the character of the break, and a judge or assistant shall at once note the fact down in writing." With a debit of seven breaks, and as close a thing at the finish, the horse which trotted all of the time would have been apt to get the heat, unless it was evident that they were all "losing breaks," and then the question would arise: If even they were detrimental at the immediate time, did not the animal obtain relief which enabled him to make the mile faster than he could have done had he maintained the trot?

Breaking is a intricate thing to handle and do justice to all parties. Were the old-time rules in force, that is the oldest of all, which compelled a horse under saddle to turn clear around, while one attached to a vehicle had to "hack the wheels," breaking would be at a discount; as it is, drivers calculate on the laxity of the judges and violate the law with a recklessness which may cause admiration for the boldness of the play, exasperatingly provoking, however, to those who are injured.

But there is another feature of "ordinary judging" which gives a premium for unfairness and which can easily be remedied. Again we hear from eye-witnesses that "carrying out" was commonly practiced all through the circuit, and that in no instance was punishment inflicted, excepting in one case and our informant was not positive whether the fine imposed was for that or some other offence. Now the most that can be said against the driver who runs his horse is that he is over-anxious to win, the carrier-out is endeavoring to stop some one else from winning. In quite a number of cases it is the job allotted to the helper, and this is doubly wrong. We can sympathize with a driver who is so eager to score a victory that he transgresses the rule with that object in view. But when he deliberately retards a horse in order to help another, had we the power, one clearly proved case should "rule him off for life." Trotting should be a fair test of the relative merits of the horses, and skill in driving should also meet with reward. Provided that the skill be legitimately employed. The charge is also made that some drivers are favored by judges giving them a latitude not afforded to those of less renown.

This is probably more fancied than real. There was a time in the East when that indictment would hold good on some of the tracks, but so far as our knowledge extends will not apply to California. When a driver has justly acquired a reputation for honesty, fair driving and general good behavior he should have the benefit of his "good name." What might appear wrong in one, who did not possess such a potent certificate of good character as years of sterling uprightness has endowed the other with will have a different look, and when it came to decide on unsupported testimony one will have weight while the other will be lightly valued. But when decisions are given to secure the favor of a driver who can control a number of entries, it is a crime which cannot be too strongly denounced.

That there have been mistakes on the part of judges who have occupied the stands during the circuit is altogether probable. That errors have been made which would have been avoided by a stricter adherence to the rules is beyond reasonable doubt. But it must be borne in mind that it is a trying situation. Some traits which we admire in private life are incompatible with the duties of a judge. Sympathy is likely to interfere with the enforcement of strict justice, and boundless good-nature is far too big to be confined by the letter of the law. Friendship may bias in one direction, it may pull the other way in the fear that friendship obscures the vision. But with all the needed qualities for a model judge, should there be lacking a full and accurate acquaintance with the rules, the place will not be properly filled. It will not answer to place the entire dependence upon a perusal of that portion of the code which bears on the management of races during the excitement and hurry of the contest. There should be prior study. There should be previous experience, and the surest way to overcome the difficulty is to adopt the plan of employing a man to preside at all the meetings of the Circuit.

Axtell.

The following is copied from the American Agriculturalist of Sep. 10th, and is not only a pleasing account of the greatest of Eastern two-year-olds, but is also valuable in elucidating the breeding of the phenomenal youngster, and by the way the breeders of trotters in the far East will be ready to acknowledge before many years have passed the obligations they are under to that paper. By drawing attention to the breeding of these trotters, giving their pedigrees which other journals take especial pains to hide when crosses of the thoroughbred come in, readers are correctly informed. This is of major importance in the New England States. Though years ago there were many thoroughbreds in that section, the blood has been diluted by inferior strains so, that in place of being the region where Eastern cities depended upon getting the best horses for nearly all purposes, the racehorse countries are now the source of supply. Fifty years ago there would have been no trouble to find mares in all of the New England States which were got by thoroughbred horses. A few thoroughbred stallions were imported direct from England, a large number were purchased in New York and taken further East. While great benefits are still derived from the blood, it is manifest that new strains of kindred material to that which laid the foundation will be of great value. All kinds of business horses will be benefited, especially fast trotters, and the teachings of the American Agriculturalist will surely aid in a proper appreciation of the necessity for revivification.

That Axtell is entitled to the foremost place of Eastern-bred two-year-olds is beyond question, that he should rank next to Wildflower is not sustained by the history of another two-year-old. The only difference is that Axtell received a specific prize for trotting in 2:24 while Palo Alto observing all the conditions which the rules impose there was no purse, premium or wager depending upon the issue.

Regularly appointed judges and timers were in the stand, it was a public performance in every sense when the colt marked 2:23½. The following is an account copied from the N. Y. Spirit of the Times of Axtell's race:

Before the beginning of the third heat of the 2:22 class, Axtell was brought out, his owner in the seat, and after scoring a couple of times, was sent off, accompanied by a running horse, to beat Bell Boy's two-year-old record of 2:26½. He sped around to the quarter pole in magnificent style, but at that point went into the air, and Mr. Williams drove back for another trial. The second attempt was successful. He got off beautifully, sped to the quarter in 36 seconds, and started off down the backstretch at a terrific gait, trotting as steady as a machine. He made the half in 1:10½, the second quarter being made in 34½ seconds, a 2:13 gait. Without a skip he shot around to the three-quarters in 1:45, and then down to the homestretch, still keeping up his even stride and went under the wire in 2:24, thus beating Bell Boy's record. Axtell has but to trot three seconds faster to equal the record of Wildflower. The announcement of the time caused a roar of applause from the grand stand. Mr. Williams remained on the track long enough to wire his success to his home at Independence, Ia., and then hastened off to join his horses.

Special purse, to beat 2:26½.
Axtell, b.c (2), by William L.—C. W. Williams 1
Time (2:26½)..... 2
Time, 2:24.

Palo Alto trotted on the same day that Sallie Benton lowered the four-year-old record, John A. McKerron gave a fine harness as a premium for that, but Marvin objected to anything which would har the colt from slow classes. A "round dollar" would have given Palo Alto the second place in the two-year-old ranks, and the first among entire colts of that age. Had a premium been "hung up," however, he would have been debarred from making his victorious campaign when a four-year-old, so that it was better in that respect to avoid the record which would also have been a bar. That brilliant raid made amends for the "glory" lost, and the races won over such competitors as he met, give a higher rank than a mile accomplished in time for a stake which would have interfered with his journey to the East.

On our first page is an excellent likeness of the two-year-old colt Axtell, one of the sensational trotters of the season, and the fastest trotting stallion of his age that ever lived. The likeness was reproduced from one drawn specially for the wide-awake Chicago Horseman by the distinguished artist, F. Whitney. Axtell was bred by C. W. Williams, proprietor of Rush Park Stock Farm, Independence Ia., and was foaled March 31, 1886. He is a light brown in color, with star in forehead, stands 15.2 and weighs 975 pounds. His sire is William L., by the famous George Wilkes (2:22).

William L. is one of the most noted Ash Grove stallions, the property of "George Wilkes Simmons," Lexington, Ky., and is a full brother to the renowned Guy Wilkes (2:15½), sire of the remarkable young stallion Sable Wilkes, which reduced the three-year-old trotting record last season to 2:18. He was foaled in 1882, and got this trotting wonder, Axtell, when in his three-year-old form.

The dam of William L. and Guy Wilkes (2:15½) was Lady Bunker, by Herr's Mambrino Patchen, which as every horseman knows, was full brother to the invincible Lady Thorne (2:18½), the fastest, gamest trotter got by the founder of the Mambrino Chief trotting family, and was strongly inbred to imported Diomed, with a double Messenger cross. Lady Bunker's dam was Lady Dunn, by the famous inbred Diomed Seely's American Star. She was also the dam of Joe Bunker. The latter was by George Wilkes, and had sufficient speed to get a record of 2:19½. He also had endurance and pluck that enabled him to win forty-seven heats in 2:30 and better while upon the turf.

The dam of Axtell, together with a full sister, was purchased by Mr. Williams from the Messrs. Stont of Dubuque, Ia., in 1885. The price paid for the two, as reported by the New York Sportsman, was barely $250. Mr. Williams was then just embarking in the trotting horse breeding business, and two mares were among the first of his purchases. They were got by Mambrino Boy, a son of Herr's Mambrino Patchen. Mambrino Boy was quite a speedy trotter. He got a record of 2:26½ at Cynthia, Ky., Aug. 26, 1876. The dam of Mambrino Boy, like his sire was very highly bred. She was by Strader's Cassius M. Clay, from a daughter of Berthune, her second dam being by Rottler, by Sir Archy, and her third by imported Spread Eagle.

Berthune was by Sidi Hamet, son of Virginian, by Sir Archy. His dam was Susette, by Director, by Sir Archy, and second dam by Potomac, son of imported Diomed. The dam of Virginian was Lady Burton, by Sir Archy.

The second dam of Axtell was by Mambrino Royal, son of Relf's Mambrino Pilot, sire of Hanus (2:17½), Mambrino Gift (2:20) and others of note. Mambrino Pilot was by Mambrino Chief, from Juliet, by Pilot Jr. The dam of Juliet was by Webster, and Webster was by Medoc, son of American Eclipse, by Duroc, out of Maid of Lodi, by Virginian, by Sir Archy. Mambrino Royal's dam, according to the "American Trotting Register," was Barilla, by Lieut. Bassinger; second dam, Ann Merry, by Sumpter, son of Sir Archy. Lieut. Bassinger is recorded in "Bruce's American Stud Book" as by imported Fyde, dam by Randolph's Roanoke, by Henry, generally known as Sir Henry, and Henry was by Sir Archy, out of a daughter of imported Diomed. The Sir Archy lines are even more closely interwoven in the pedigree of Axtell than in either that of Maud S. (2:08½) or the phenomenal pacer Arrow (2:13½), which met his first defeat at Hartford last week.

Through the dam of Strader's Cassius M. Clay Jr., which was by old Abdallah, out of a daughter of Lawrence's Eclipse, son of American Eclipse, Axtell inherits another strain from the old Derby winner Diomed, and several strains from imported Messenger. Judging from the character of the fountains in which these streams originated, and the character of the individuals through which they have been filtered, it is not surprising to those who have gained some knowledge of the law of heredity that the animal in which they are centred possesses such a wonderful amount of speed, courage and endurance. There is no cold-blooded cart horse dross in the composition. There is just enough trotting instinct in the combination to control the action, and a suitable proportion of the thoroughbred to enable the possessor to keep up a fast clip throughout the mile.

Axtell is described as a well-proportioned colt, with a very handsome, intelligent head, and clean, frictionless action. He needs no weights to balance him and trots in light shoes. He is so pure gaited that he does not interfere nor strike himself, yet it is thought prudent to boot him in his races lest he might accidentally make a misstep and get injured. He was worked a little to road cart as a yearling, but was not started in any race. His first experience to snly was on the 26th of May last. The second time he was speeded in that rig he showed an eighth of a mile in eighteen seconds, a 2:24 gait. Before ever starting in a race he trotted a quarter in thirty-four seconds and an eighth in sixteen seconds, a 2:08 clip.

In his first race at Keokuk, Ia., Aug. 10, Axtell met and defeated a field of three-year-olds, winning in straight heats, time 2:50½, 2:41½, 2:31½, over a half-mile track. At Chicago, Ill., Aug. 23, he was started to beat his record of 2:31½, for a silver cup, and accomplished the feat easily in 2:30½, 2:24½, trotting the second quarter of the last mile in 35½ seconds. He was started again at Minneapolis, Minn., Aug. 30, to beat 2:26, and lowered his record to 2:24, trotting the first quarter in thirty-six seconds, the second in 34½, the third in 34½ and fourth in thirty-nine.

This is two seconds faster than the famous $50,000 Bell Boy's record at the same age, and he has never been surpassed or equalled except by Electioneer's wonderful daughter, Wildflower, which set the two-year-old trotting mark at 2:21 in 1881. The effort evidently did her no good, as she has never made a faster record. It is predicted by some that Axtell will beat Wildflower's performance before the season closes. Considering the fact that he trotted the middle half of his fast mile in 1:09, it seems probable that he may succeed in accomplishing the Herculean task.

It will show much better judgment on the part of his owner, however, to rest content with his brilliant achievements until the colt is more mature. Wildflower was foaled March 5, 1879, and made her record Oct. 22, 1881. She was then thirty-one months and seventeen days old. Axtell lacked one day of being twenty-nine months of age, when his record of 2.24 was obtained.

Napa and Solano Fair.

On Thursday next the fair of the Napa and Solano District will open, and that it will be one of the most enjoyable meetings of the circuit is already assured. The new grounds are admirably adapted for exhibitions, and those who have seen the track pronounce it one of the very best in the State. As will be seen by the list of entries there is a capital promise of good sport, nearly all of the prominent horses which have participated at previous meetings being named. Trotting, racing and pacing show strong fields, and that there will be struggle after struggle to reach the winning score first is as certain as anything in the future is a certainty. There could not be a pleasanter trip than the journey from San Francisco and Oakland to Napa City. Skirting the bay until the junction is reached, the short time occupied appears still shorter from the interesting scenery the whole distance of the route.

No matter how often the trip has been made, people who have the least appreciation for the beauties of Nature will see something new to admire. That five days can be spent pleasantly is beyond cavil, and those who are too busy to give up the major portion of the week, can select a day when business will best permit, and which ever one is selected, there is no chance for drawing a blank. This is sustained by the following list of entries:

The National Trotting Stallion Stake.

The time is rapidly approaching when the National Trotting Stallion Stake will come off, and should there be no hindrance on the part of the weather clerk, three weeks more will decide the question. There has never been a trotting stake which has awakened the interest that this has. From the time it was advertised until the closing of the stake it was the main topic when trotting matters were discussed. When it closed with nine nominations the feeling was intensified, and when Stamboul made his great race in Los Angeles, the talk was not confined to horse circles, the whole country being interested. The victory of Guy Wilkes at Oakland gave a new impetus to the subject, and when Woodnut wrested the championship from Guy and Stamboul at Sacramento, that third grand surprise raised the excitement to fever heat. Those of over sanguine temperament, or rather those who are easily swayed by present performances thought the race was "as good as over" when Stamboul beat Arab in "straight heats," and that in such magnificent time. Guy started them on another tack and the money lost was to be recouped on his second victory, which was also thought as good as won. Woodnut was the Warwick to dethrone the last Monarch, and there was a maze, a labyrinth without a clew to lead out of the entanglement, further than to shout for the new Emperor, and prophesy that the National was at last decided. But after a lapse of a few days Stamboul shows that he is fast recovering his Los Angeles form and at Stockton not only wins the fastest heat made in California this season, outside of his own, but gives Arab another hard tussle, so hard that he nearly repeats his previous victory. Both races in which this trio of National nominations have been engaged in have been trying tests. Five heats necessary to determine the question of supremacy and after that was thought to be settled, a new verdict sustained by what introtting affairs is thought to be the best testimony, that of the watch. As it now stands, were the three stallions which have come together to meet, each of them in prime condition without an "out" to interfere with a proper display of their powers and each would have staunch supporters.

But there are further complications. The talk now is that Guy Wilkes has gone wrong, that Director has met with a mishap, and three weeks ago we published that "Antevolo was doing as well as we could ask until a little over two weeks anterior when the leg that troubled him last year 'filled' and he showed a slight lameness." As for the first two named we hear contradictory accounts, and though there may be some foundation for the reports, the most reliable information leads to the belief that both will be in condition to start. As for Antevolo, we have no desire to magnify or lessen the injury, and happily are in a situation that no offense can be taken at a true statement of the case. From the time he went out of the stud, August 1st, he did well until he was worked on a heavy track, and until after a brush of half a mile in 1:09 on August 21st, no fault could be found. The next morning the outside middle tendon of the near hind leg was swollen and there was some tenderness. The swelling increased and at times there was well-defined lameness. This was the same leg which troubled him before, though previously the injury was between the ankle and foot, while in this case it was between the ankle and hock. The suspensory was sprung outwardly and the swelling extended to the back tendon and from ankle to hock was enlarged. He was jogged every day, a part of the time on the road, and some three weeks after the injury the jogging rate was increased to a four-minute gait, winding up a little faster. Although "hanging on" longer than anticipated there was steady improvement, and as it was imperative that something must be done if he took part in the National, Saturday last, Sept. 22d, he was given two heats in 2:28, 2:25. If anything, the leg looked better, and when exercised the next morning he went as sound as ever. The Monday following the exercise was finished with a move of a quarter in 36½ seconds, and Tuesday last he was given a mile in 2:26 and repeated in 2:19. He was "scraped," and cooled out nicely, and Wednesday and Thursday mornings he did not show any ill results.

We feel that the chances are favorable for him to stand work enough so that he will be able to start in the race, and certainly neither Guy or Director can be counted out. Guy, especially, as the condition acquired in two such hard races as he trotted will permit a cessation of work, a resumption of which a short time before the race comes off will bring him back. After seeing Director moving as easily and as fast as he did during the Golden Gate Fair, we trust if there has been trouble that it will be temporary.

The twenty days which still intervene are very likely to have a beneficial effect, and that everything will be done that skill and care can accomplish to bring the horses engaged to the post in good condition is assured. In that case we have not the least hesitation in predicting one of the greatest trotting races ever witnessed in this or any other country.

The Speed Drive.

As will be learned from the annexed report, only a little more is needed to complete the speed drive in Golden Gate Park. That it will be secured is beyond question, though there may be delay in finishing it which should be avoided if possible.

The breeders of the Coast are interested in the project and the many wealthy men who are engaged in breeding and rearing trotting horses can well afford to subscribe no matter where their residence is. The completion of the drive will increase the demand for road horses to an extent which will quadruple their value, and animals which can only be disposed of now at work horse prices be eagerly sought after. Though, of course, the project is more especially a San Francisco scheme, and incidentally will annually benefit the city to an amount far exceeding the whole cost, this should not debar subscriptions from those who are not residents. The trouble in that direction is the necessary delay and should there be a break in the work there will be greater difficulty in finishing it, and also an increase of cost.

The drive will be one of the greatest attractions of San Francisco, and it is within bounds to say that many visitors will be headed who will stay during the winter, not a few become permanent residents when their fondness for the truly American recreation of driving fast trotters can be gratified. The claim that it will be anything but reputable is such arrant bosh as to be unworthy of notice.

The Executive Committee of the Park Speed Track Association met Thursday afternoon in the Pacific Hotel. Adolph Sutro was invited to preside, Hiram Cook acting as secretary.

Among those present were W. W. Stow, Wendell Easton, W. F. Fargo, C. S. Crittenden, M. H. de Young and John McMullen, President of the San Francisco Bridge Company.

After the meeting was called to order Mr. Cook explained the association's financial circumstances. Three weeks ago he found himself at the end of his resources. The funds at his disposal had all been paid over to the contractor, who, on becoming aware of the state of affairs, declined to go on until he saw some money ahead. The contract of the San Francisco Bridge Company obligated it to complete the work for $31,000, and that amount was represented by subscriptions from merchants and capitalists. The majority is good for the amount of subscriptions, but some are out of town, and others desire a little more time. Finding it would be impossible to go on without securing further subscriptions, Mr. Cook said he had made a personal canvass, and during the three weeks had collected the sum of $3,000. The subscriptions now amounted to 26,800, and the expenditures of the contractor footed up the sum of $26,000. The association is, therefore, $800 ahead. It would be disastrous as well as expensive to have the Bridge Company break up its camp and remove its appliances. A long delay would undoubtedly ensue, besides the set-back which the abandonment of work would give the project. Mr. Cook asked suggestions from the gentlemen present.

Adolph Sutro favored delaying the project until the entire sum promised had been collected. The quality of the clay found in the work, he said, was not suitable for the work and it had been found necessary to procure it elsewhere. The extra labor would cost, he said, about $5000.

John McMullen, President of the Bridge Company, said that he had prepared to stop three weeks ago, when notified by Mr. Cook of the condition of the subscription list. The contract which the association had with his company was a one-sided affair. At one end was the Bridge Company and at the other he did not exactly know who. He was willing, he said, to go on with the work if any member present guaranteed the payment of the extra $5000.

W. W. Stow suggested asking the gentlemen who had already paid up to increase their subscriptions.

This proposition did not meet with any support. It was objected to on the ground that it was not fair to ask people who had already been so liberal to subscribe further.

Mr. Cook said that two or three gentlemen whose names are down for large sums were in the East at present. J. M. Donahue, who is now in New York, is down for $1000. Senator Hearst, J. B. Haggin and Lloyd Tevis had not yet given anything. If these gentlemen were asked, he said, he thought they would willingly be large contributors. There were many other men in the city who had not yet contributed but are safe for $50 or $100. He believed that at least $1000 could be collected weekly until the work was finished.

Mr. de Young and Wendell Easton added $100 to their subscriptions, making them $400 each.

W. W. Stow, in speaking about collecting money for the speed-track, said he was aware that a prejudice existed in certain quarters against the scheme. There was an idea that the control of it would be vested in a low class of the sporting element. The contrary is the case, he urged. The Park Commissioners will have the most complete control, and it is not in the power of that body to divest itself of it. Should it happen that the speed track becomes a nuisance or is offensive to the public it can be closed up by the Commissioners.

Some desultory conversation, which hardly took the form of discussion, followed, and it was finally decided to go on with the collecting, the individual members of the committee promising to use their best efforts to obtain funds. Contractor McMullen promised to go on with the work in the meantime until the $800 were exhausted. Mr. Cook also promised that he would have no reason to stop again.

The committee then adjourned to meet a week from next Monday.

Following are some of the names of the gentlemen who have contributed very largely up to the present to the funds of the association: Leland Stanford, Charles Crocker, W. S. Hobart, A. Hayward, $1,000 each; W. W. Stow, Russ House, A. B. Spreckels, J. McM. Shafter, Edward Barron, C. W. Sin, Jessie S. Potter, Adolph Sutro, James G. Fair, Palace Hotel, Huntington, Hopkins & Co., C. F. Fargo, Millen Griffiths, W. Dunphy, C. S. Crittenden, Alexander McCord & Co., W. H. & F. C. Talbot, $500 each; M. H. de Young and Wendell Easton, $400 each; Henry Pierce, $300; G. A. Pope, J. V. Coleman, J. D. Spreckels, J. C. Johnstone & Co., Wieland Brewery, Main & Winchester, Holbrook, Merrill & Stetson, W. H. Crocker, A. P. Hotaling, Dunham, Corrigan & Co., Wilmerding, Kellogg & Co., C. F. Kentfield, H. Morgan Hill, W. S. Blair, J. McDonough, W. H. Dimond, W. B. Bradbury, $250 each; O. H. Kingsley, $200; Farnsworth & Ruggles, Frank Bros., $150 each.

In addition to the above sums the individual $100 subscriptions foot up $5,100, the $50 subscriptions $2,650, and the $25 subscriptions $1,250.

On Bar Shoes.

[By A. E. Buzard, Veterinary Surgeon.]

A Bar Shoe is a nearly circular piece of metal applied to the foot of the horse, and is so-called because, when first used, a bar was most probably welded across the heels of a common shoe.

The diseases, to the cure of which the bar shoe is most frequently applied, are corn, sand or quarter crack; and the effect sought to be produced is the creation of a space between the shoe and the foot, so that no part of the weight of the animal shall bear on that portion of the foot which requires protection.

In a foot to which a bar shoe has never been applied, there is little difficulty in keeping a shoe, however clumsily it may be made, from bearing on the diseased part; because the frog being in most cases higher than the heels of the crust, the bar of the shoe rests upon it, and the heels of the crust are thereby relieved entirely from the pressure of the shoe. But when, by the constant use of the bar shoe the frog is worn down level with the heels of the crust, it becomes necessary that the shoe should be made to adapt itself to the altered state of the foot. This is done by making the shoe considerably thinner for the diseased or tender part, and leaving it thicker over the frog, that it may come in contact with that organ while still at some distance from the heels.

Another advantage is gained by this form of shoe, viz: a perfectly flat ground surface; the quarters are also preserved, which, under other circumstances, are almost sure to be destroyed. (I mean when the quarters are weak or injured); and when the frog and quarters are worn away, the difficulty of keeping the shoe from bearing on the heels is increased in proportion to the length of time the shoe is worn. Hence it often follows that a horse that wears a bar shoe once, wears it forever, as it actually produces the disease it was meant to cure.

I am perfectly aware that it is much easier to shoe horses on paper than it is at the forge; and I also know there are some feet which can only be shod so as to make them go sound in the very sort of shoe I would condemn as generally mischievous, viz: one which is bent up to keep it from touching the heels, instead of being made thin over the heels, more particularly the outer edge of it, which is opposite the crust, but these owing to several causes which do not properly belong to this subject, are getting very rare, and some of them have, no doubt, been produced by being shod, in the first place, with the shoes they are now compelled to wear.

Now, though I must confess that the art of shoeing at some forges is brought nearer to perfection than it ever has been before, yet I was led to make these remarks by having lately seen several bar shoes, which had been put on at some establishments totally devoid of principle, both in the construction and application, and yet finished in a very superior manner and highly creditable to the makers as mechanics. This is a state of things that ought not to exist at the present time; and though I am fearful this will not be read by many who are intrusted with the important duty of fitting and putting on the shoe, I think their employers may derive both honor and profit, would they attend to this branch of the art themselves; instructing those who are ignorant of the principles of shoeing, and confirming, by judicious explanation, those who are doing the thing properly, in many instances, I am afraid, by mere accident.

The Kind of Horses to Raise.

It is only those who keep common or inferior horses that can complain of the prices now ruling, says an exchange. There is no boom now, of course, but values are such that those who produce good stock can make as good, if not better, profit on the money invested as in any other enterprise which is strictly confined to the operations of farming or raising live stock. Horses that sell from $200 to $300 per head, and sometimes a great deal more, are going to pay well for their raising, besides giving a nice dividend on the capital invested. The trouble is to convince farmers that this is the case. Some argue that they could not obtain such prices even if they produced the horses. There is no greater mistake than this. There are ten buyers for a horse that is worth $250 to one for the horse that is worth from $50 to $100. "Give us good horses" is the cry of every horse market in the country. Consumers of horses are more and more convinced every day that it is the cheapest in the long run to buy nothing but the best, and when they find what they want they do not quibble very long about prices. Neighborhoods that have established a reputation of producing a good class of horses are always overrun with buyers who want the horses regardless of price. There is only one department of the horse market that is overstocked, and that for common low grade stock. The most effective way to change men's minds in regard to such matters is to take them into some of the leading horse markets of the country. The best way in which to discourage and break up patronizing mongrel and cheap stallions is to show the horse raiser the difference in market value between the offspring of such horses and that of some pure bred horse of good individual merit.

ROD.

Communications relating to this department should be addressed to BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN.

TRAP.

Riverside Sportsman's Club.

The meeting on Sept. 21st brought out seven members, whose scores were rather lower than has been the rule.

At 12 singles and 6 pairs, blue rock targets. Chamberlin rules, C. F. Packard, 16; N. Cundiff, 15; J. E. Beamer, 14; T. Cundiff, 10; Mr. Locke, 10; L. Brackenbury, 7; J. W. McLeod, 6.

At 12 single blue rocks, $2.50 entrance. C. F. Packard, 8; T. Cundiff, 8; J. E. Beamer, 7; J. W. McLeod, 5; L. Brackenbury, 5; N. Cundiff, 5.

Southern California Championship.

The third match for the championship of Southern California, and the medal presented by the Selby Snelting and Led Company, was shot at Pacific Driving Park, San Diego, on Sunday last. The medal was first won by Doctor O. F. Britton of Los Angeles, then by Mr. Martinez Chick of San Diego, and now by Mr. Chick again. The medal must be won four times before it becomes individual property. In the match of Sunday last, the work done was of a very high order of merit; and argues strongly for the general excellence at the traps of the famous quail shots of sunnier California. The fourth match for the medal will be shot off within thirty days.

At 50 single blue rock targets, and 25 pairs. Chamberlin rules. For Selby medal, championship of Southern California and 5 entrance, divided into 50, 30 and 20 per cent. Won by Martinez Chick; F. Ecker, second; Will Francis third.

Vacaville Gun Club.

The first of a series of five trap meetings to be held by the Vacaville Gun Club, was given on Sunday last. The chief prize is a valuable gold medal to become the property of the participant making the highest average in the five events.

The Vacaville club desires to match a team of six against like teams from the other trap organizations of San Francisco, or other cities. Correspondence may be addressed to the secretary, Mr. H. G. Boyce, at Vacaville. The next meeting of the club will be held to-morrow. The scores on Sunday last were:

Death of Judge Freer

Hon. Leon D. Freer, Judge of the Superior Court for the County of Butte, died in this city on September 19th last, after an illness of less than one month. The announcement will surprise and grieve very many. Of splendid physique, Judge Freer seemed likely to be among the last of his generation to be called away. A young man, being but forty-three years, three months and nineteen days old, he had established himself in the hearts of the people of this commonwealth as to command more general respect and love than, perhaps, any other man upon whom public position had been forced during the twenty years last passed. Frank, sunny, sincere and always courteous, he was a type after which all men might order their lives with a certainty of reward in peace of mind and the regard of fellow-citizens. Judge Freer was a man of unusual force mentally. His legal studies, while deep and covering a wide range, yet had not precluded acquaintance with science, art and general literature. A peculiarity was that his reading was perfectly assimilated, and he was in the best sense an epitome of the works to which he had applied himself. Graciously open-handed and charitable, even to the impairment of private fortune, the sorrowing and needy near him will miss the strong face, kind words and supporting hand. Immersed in public business, Judge Freer yet found time to practice his favorite recreations, shooting and fishing, in both of which he was masterful.

For several years President of the California State Sportsman's Association, and lending to the office, all of the energy and knowledge of affairs which he possessed, the sportsmen of the State owe him a debt of gratitude which they gladly acknowledge and which they can only in a degree repay by holding in high honor the name and good deeds of their chief craftsman, over whom the lilies of fair Butte must grow the purer because they emblem the white soul beneath. The funeral services were held in this city on Sunday last, under the auspices of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, of which Judge Freer had been Grand Master, and three times Grand Representative to the Sovereign Grand Lodge, an honor which was his when he died. Rev. W. H. Hill, Past Grand Master and Rev. Dr. Spaulding, rector of St. John's Episcopal Church, officiated. The pall bearers were A. S. Bush, A. N. Scott, J. Swan, W. K. Dietrich, Philo White, H. J. Lask, E. F. White, Alexander Hay, H. L. Res, J. W. Meredith, J. H. Hartman and L. L. Alexander. After the ritual of the Episcopal Church, Hon. J. N. E. Wilson, a life-long friend of the deceased, delivered an eloquent eulogy of the great man. The choir sang "Sleep the Last Sleep," and the remains were then taken in charge by the pall bearers and transferred to Oroville, where the interment is to be made.

The next contest for the championship of Southern California will probably be held at Riverside in October, the club of that city desires it, and the present holder of the medal being willing.

The annual tournament of the California State Sportsman's Association will begin at Stockton on Thursday, Oct. 11th. The Stockton members, Messrs. Haas, Lane, Sperry, Merrill, et al., have made provision for pleasant entertainment. Live birds cannot be had in sufficient number, but the lack will be more than met by the use of Blue Rock targets.

CANOEING.

Oakland Canoe Club.

Since the regatta there has been a slight reaction and there was not a large attendance at the club house on Sunday last. Most of the larger boats were out, however, and had a very enjoyable sail including several brushes with local sailing craft. The big scow with the enormous balance lug sail was around and the boys were after her right off, as her owners have been thinking they could get away with the canoes. After a tack or two something happened to one of her lee boards and she fell off to leeward and was no more seen. The little canoe, Iris, was out in the afternoon and sailing very fast. After awhile a race was made between her and the Gypsy, won by Gypsy by a small margin, after which the Iris beat her twice in succession. There were several photographers around among the regatta, and one of them is now making up a handsome album, including some sixty views of the canoes sailing, paddling, and in every possible position and of all the races, which will be of much interest to those who participated as well as the visitors.

The Mayriach Badge race will be sailed in three weeks and a keen competition is anticipated.

THE KENNEL.

Dog owners are requested to send for publication the earliest possible notices of whelps, sales, names claimed, presentations and deaths in their kennels, in all instances writing plainly names of sire and dam and of grand parents, colors, dates and breed.

In the absence of Mr. Vredenburg, the Secretary, Mr. A. D. Lewis was appointed Secretary pro tem.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read.

Mr. Peshall: Before the minutes are approved I should like to ask in regard to the resignation of the Stafford Kennel Club, if that is properly authorized. I think we have no right to accept that resignation, as the party who tendered it had no right to make it, and if we accept it we are acting upon a statement that is untrue. I think we had better reconsider the vote on that subject, and then approve the minutes.

The Secretary then read some correspondence between the Secretary and a member of the Stafford Kennel Club.

Mr. Peshall: I move that the minutes be corrected so that it will appear that the Stafford Kennel Club is still a member of the American Kennel Club.

Motion seconded and carried.

On motion of Mr. Peshall the minutes were then approved.

The Secretary then read the reports of the Secretary and Treasurer, which were approved.

The President: On behalf of the Committee of Associate Membership, I have to say that the Committee was instructed to draw up a constitution and rules on certain lines laid out at the last meeting for the government of the Associate Members, and to incorporate into the Constitution such changes as were deemed best. The Committee, after careful consideration of the subject and conferring with the officers of the Kennel Club, found that it would be very difficult to make a separate association of Associate Members, with a separate constitution, and it was deemed advisable to simply incorporate the Associate Membership as a body within the Kennel Club itself, and then endeavor to provide for it in the constitution, which had to be considerably changed, and if you will follow me in your copies I will read to you what has been done.

The President then read the draft of the proposed constitution.

Mr. Peshall: I move that the Constitution, as amended, be ratified and printed and sent out to the different clubs. I have been through them and consider that they are amendments that are necessary. I also move that notice be sent to the different clubs and the Committee have the thanks of the Club and be discharged.

A Member: I think the word "accepted" would sound much better.

Mr. Peshall: The report being accepted it is ordered printed.

The President: There are two ways of adopting it. Article 11 provides that this Constitution may be revised or amended after thirty days notice has been given to such members of the two-thirds vote at any meeting of this Association where at least two-thirds of the members are represented. Now if you give them thirty days notice the ratification can be obtained in writing, if it is your wish to do it that way. Or simply give notice now and let it go over to the December meeting. If you are in a hurry to have this done now, it will take sixty days.

Mr. Peshall: I accept the amendment that the report be received and accepted and ordered printed and sent to the different clubs for ratification.

The motion as amended is seconded and carried.

The President: Your Committee was also instructed to revise the rules with respect to the suggestions made, and in taking up the subject the Committee went very carefully through them and made a great many changes and alterations, which they think it best to present to-day.

The President then read the draft of the rules as altered and amended.

Mr. Peshall: I move that Rule 13 remain as it is, and that Rule 15 of the new Rules be stricken out.

Motion seconded and carried.

Mr. Hitchcock: I move that Rule 18 remain as it is, and Rule 21 of the new Rules be stricken out.

Motion seconded and carried.

Mr. Peshall: I move that the report be accepted, and the Rules be ordered printed and sent to the different clubs.

Mr. Cook: There is something not specified in regard to this Kennel Gazette. Does this Gazette design to publish anything except the Judges' decision in regard to these dogs without comment, or does it publish the decisions with various comments, and the reasons for the judge's decision?

The President: They are signed articles by the judges themselves. No reports, no comments from any outside parties, no editorial comments at all. Of course there will be reading matter. Reports of the English shows are made in the same way. The reports are signed by the judges themselves. The judges merely say why they awarded their prizes.

Mr. Cook: We have had some difficulty in the publishing of these reports. I speak of this as it leads to controversy in the Sporting Press, and tends to antagonize the different sporting papers. If the Gazette publishes these reports without comment, then I am in favor of it. Otherwise I am opposed to it.

Mr. Rowe: So far as I am concerned, I am positively in favor of the Kennel Gazette. I cannot see that the objection which Mr. Cook raises has any force whatever. It cannot have any possible effect in antagonizing the Kennel Gazette and sporting papers that are in existence. Your paper, as I understand, is an official record. It is true that you publish the prize lists. But a great many persons are anxious to know why a judge has placed one dog over another; what his reason was for doing it. Now, he is given opportunity for giving his reasons, and as the President very properly remarked, you then form an opinion. Mr. Cook, for instance, has spoken of fox hounds. I believe he knows what a good fox hound ought to be. He sends that fox hound to a show. He is beaten. He has seen the other dog that had beaten him. He doesn't know why he has beaten him. But then he has the judge's decision to know why he has beaten him. He has seen the dogs and compared them. Many owners overlook the weak points in their dogs and see only the strong ones. A judge is supposed to be competent. If he is not competent, the only way to ascertain it is to let him give his reasons for his decision. A judge does not want to defend himself from every criticism and objection in the general sporting paper, and there is no reason why there should arise any controversy between them and the American Kennel Gazette, because if you allow these controversies, you shut the judge out. You place him in a position that he does not wish to write his report.

Mr. Peshall: I move that this report on the Rules be printed.

Seconded and carried.

Mr. Peshall: I move that the Committee have power to send out a circular to the breeders stating what the A. K. C. has done, and I would ask that the Committee have power to prepare their report, and have it printed and sent out.

Mr. Cook: I would like to amend that so that the paper when sent out will contain a statement of the true method in which a decision is to be arrived at, so that the different delegates will know what action will be taken in regard to the adoption of them.

Mr. Peshall: The circular is apart from the rules and constitution and in charge of a different committee, and the committee having nearly completed its labors asks that it be printed and sent out.

Mr. Cook: The Constitution provides that changes in the constitution and rules may be adopted either at the regular meeting in December or by the votes of the delegates. Will this report, as it is printed and sent out, give that information to delegates as to how and when the matter will be decided?

Mr. President: Mr. Peshall suggested that it was one and the same thing as to time, either method consuming from sixty to seventy days. So if you want to make a motion that printed copies of the amended rules and constitution be sent out to the different delegates and secretaries, with instructions to be ready to vote on the subject at the next meeting, it is in order.

Mr. Cook: Yes, I make that motion. I move that the Committee be instructed to notify the secretaries and delegates of the different kennel clubs, and with that notice send a printed copy of the revised rules and alterations in the constitution, and a notice to be prepared to vote upon their adoption at the annual meeting in December.

Motion seconded and carried.

The President: The Canadian Kennel Club proposes to form an association somewhat the same as our own, and the London Kennel Club is at the head of it. They propose to have their own stud book if possible and to regulate their own dog affairs in Canada, and have an interchange of the wins between their club and the A. K. C., so that they will recognize our wins and we recognize theirs; that we recognize their regulation and they ours. This is a very important matter, because it brings the American and Canadian clubs into harmony, and will have the effect of removing a great deal of trouble which we would not want to be embarrassed with.

Mr. Peshall: If I understand, they have not organized yet. I do not see that we can do anything in that matter until they have organized their Canadian Kennel Club.

The President: The point is, the officers do not want to go on between now and the next meeting overhauling a plan that does not meet with approval.

Mr. Peshall: Can we do anything until they are organized? The proper way for them is to do that and to notify us that they have organized, and then for the two clubs to make the arrangements.

Mr. Cook: Wouldn't it be proper to appoint a committee to confer with them?

Mr. Peshall: I move that the President appoint a committee of two to act with himself in the matter with full power.

The President then read some correspondence between the two associations.

Motion seconded and carried.

The President: I will appoint that committee at the close of the meeting.

Mr. Hitchcock and Mr. Terry were appointed.

The secretary called attention to the application of the Mascouta Kennel Club, of Chicago, which club, on motion of Mr. Peshall was elected a member.

The secretary also called attention to the application of the Chattanooga Valley Exposition company.

Mr. Peshall: I move it be admitted.

Seconded and carried.

The secretary also referred to the applications for membership from the Columbus Club and Rochester Kennel Club.

On motion the above applications were received and laid on the table for action at the next meeting.

Mr. Peshall called attention to the appeal made by Mr. Anthony from a decision made by the American Field Trial Club, upon the division of third prize, and he moved that a committee be appointed to hear the evidence on this question of appeal and report.

Motion seconded and carried.

Mr. August Belmont Jr. was, at the request of the members present appointed such committee.

Mr. Peshall: As a member of the A. K. C. I desire to tender to Mr. Belmont our thanks for the magnificent way in which he has defended the A. K. C. from the assaults from without, and I want to say that I endorse his action in that regard, and I think that a great deal of good will come out of the controversy to the benefit of the A. K. C. in the future. I am satisfied that if we keep on in the way we are going now, at the end of the year we will have fifty-five clubs belonging to the A. K. C. and all opposition will die out.

Mr. Terry: I think a resolution is perfectly in order and I would like to offer the resolution in this form: That the club is heartily in accord with the action the President has taken, and approve of his action in every way.

Seconded and carried.

The President: Mr. Vredenburg will be away for two or three months, or at all events until the next meeting. In the meantime somebody should be appointed to act as secretary in his place.

Mr. Herman F. Schellhass was appointed secretary pro tem.

Meeting then adjourned. HERMAN F. SCHELLHASS, Secretary pro tem.

The accuracy and promptness with which Mr. Herman F. Schellhass, secretary pro tem of the A. K. C. has sent out his reports of the last meeting of the association, entitle him to the thanks of the members.

The dogs of the Rob Roy Kennels, left by Mr. Arnold Burges' death, are now owned by the following gentlemen:—May Queen, Mr. M. McMillan, Mahony City, Pa.; Dryad M. R. J. Gaines, Greenfield, Iowa; Dashing Berwin, Mr. F. Kissinger, Walnut Hill, Cincinnati, O.; King Craft, Mr. E. O. Damon, Northampton, Mass.; Kelpie, Mr. L. P. Edgerton, Meriden, Conn.; Doncaster, Mr. James E. Patterson, Detroit, Mich.

Mr. W. F. Berry's black pointer Blackbird, whelped Sep 16, eleven, four dogs to Mr. H. S. Worts Fennimore.

The potency of black pointer blood in marking progeny is illustrated in the litter of Mr. Berry's Blackbird, noted elsewhere. Blackbird is a granddaughter of Sensation, but strains strongly to black. Her puppies are by Fennimore, a dog very strong in white and lemon, being by Tom Plach, also a grandson of Sensation, out Lassie, entirely white and lemon for four generations. Yet two of Blackbird's puppies are solid black, the others being lemon and white, and liver and white.

Great Auction Sale

Mules, Work Horses, Roadsters & Trotting Horses,

MONDAY, OCTOBER 15, 1888, at 10 A. M.

At REAVIS' RANCH, near Chico,

Butte County, Cal.

On the above date we will offer for sale, at the ranch of D. M. Reavis, Esq., 2 1/2 miles from Chico, three hundred head first-class Mules, sired by Kentucky and Imported Jacks, out of first-class American Mares. These Mules were all raised by Mr. Reavis, and are first-class in every particular; none will exceed seven years of age. They will be sold as desired, in string teams, matched or single. There will also be offered about fifty head of first-class Work Animals, out of American Mares, by imported Percheron Stallions. At the same time will be offered about fifty head of fashionably bred Trotting Mares, Colts, Fillies and Geldings, got by standard bred Stallions, such as Director, Mourne Chief, Steinway, Blackbird, etc. This will be the most extensive sale that has taken place in Northern California, and Mr. Reavis' reputation as a breeder is a guarantee that the stock offered will be of superior character.

The terms will be cash, or approved notes at current interest.
Catalogues are being prepared, giving pedigrees and full particulars.
Any information desired may be obtained upon application to Mr. Reavis, Chico, or to the undersigned,

No. 13—LOTTA.

Bay mare; 15.3 hands; foaled 1872.
Sired by LEXINGTON, sire of Norfolk.
This mare was brought to this State by Mr. Gage at the same time that he brought Katie Pease, and was represented to be thoroughbred. She gives every appearance of it, save as to her disposition to trot, which is remarkable. She could show a 2:30 gait to wagon on the road, which was the only discipline she ever had at the trot. The day I bought her she showed me a mile in 2:32 to wagon. Her produce shows the same tendency to trot.

No. 14—MARY G.

Brown mare; 15.2 hands, foaled 1867.
Sired by BLONDIN, son of Imp. Sovereign, thoroughbred of great renown.
She was bred by Col. Charles Jennison, late of Kansas, and was brought to this State by Ben Ekers. She showed me a trial run most remarkable under the circumstances. This is the dam of Christmas.

A Demonstration of the Shooting Qualities of the "L. C. Smith" Gun.

At the Cleveland Cartridge Co.'s tournament, held at Cleveland, O., from September 13 to 16 inclusive the "Smith" gun won first money in every class. It also won nearly two-thirds of the entire amount ($3,000) of cash prizes, and championship trophy for the best average in the 90 class. In the 90 class it won the 1st, 2nd and 4th moneys; in the 80 class it took the 1st, 3rd, 4th and 5th; in the 70 class it took the 1st and 2nd, with the 1st and 6th in the 60 class, making a total winning nearly four times greater than any other gun, of either foreign or home manufacture.

We think this a most excellent showing, as there was seven different makes of guns used by the nineteen contestants in the ninety class.

Sprain of the Suspensory Ligament.

Last week there was allusion to a sprain of the middle tendon in connection with Antevlo and the National Trotting Stallion Stakes, and as the treatment so far seems to have been efficacious it may be well to give a synopsis of the method pursued. The first injury was to the ankle and to the ligament below that and above the hoof. It came from a blow when a two-year-old, the first Ismeness showing in a three-year-old race. Since then there have been occasional returns of the lameness, the most severe attack being last season which put a stop to fast work. There were few days during the winter when he was not driven and all through the season he got daily exercise of from seven to nine miles each day. The exercise was to a road-cart until July 7th, when he was hitched to a sulky the first time since Nov. 4, 1887. The furthest "moves" were furlongs in from 16 to 18 seconds until July 18th, when he was driven around the first turn in 37 seconds. On the 22d he was driven two miles in 5:21 in order to scrape him. Quarters occasionally in from 34 to 36 seconds until August 4th, when on that date his first half miles at speed were given 1:10 and 1:08 being the mark, done apparently with much ease. August 7th two miles in 5:23, scraped, and on the 11th halves in 1:14-1:11. Another scrape on the 14th, the flow of perspiration being induced by two miles in 5:07½, and on the 18th three halves with intervals of walking and jogging between in 1:11, 1:10-1:10. This last work was on a track which had been harrowed very deeply and it was still deep when on the 21st of August he was driven a half in 1:09, though not "repeated."

There was a little swelling the next morning, and the leg was bathed with lotion diluted with five parts of water to one of lotion. Owing to the track being so soft he was jogged on the road, and during the Golden Gate Fair he was kept on the streets, as the horses galloping on the track in their morning exercise excited him. The diluted lotion was replaced on the 30th of August with an English remedy, "Royal Embrocation," and at first it seemed to have allayed the swelling, but after ten days' use, there being more heat and an increase of swelling it was abandoned, and lotion again applied. After a few days that was given up and the leg was swathed with bandages saturated with hot water in which was soda to soften it. The swelling commenced to subside under this treatment and on the 20th and 21st of September he was allowed to finish his exercise with short brushes. During all this treatment he was jogged daily, part of the time at a good pace.

While the leg was at the worst we had the good fortune to have Dr. Woolsey call. That eminent surgeon was forthwith interviewed and his opinion solicited in regard to the treatment of sprains in human cases, especially what he thought of bandages, elastic, etc. He very kindly answered, stating results in his practice, recommending, among other things, the use of cotton batting. In the meantime, McKerron had made an elastic stocking, and we also had him fabricate two pads to go on each side of the leg and thus support the tendon. The batting was used in the atable under bandages, the pads while jogging and walking. But being so well satisfied with the application of the cotton, we determined to give it a further trial, and on Saturday the 22d ult., held quite a bulk of cotton against the injured tendon, securing it by an ankle-boot and a long shin-roll, drawing the atropa which fastened the roll so as to bring strong pressure against the cotton. He was walked to the track, jogged 4½ miles, scored once and given a mile in 2:23. Walked and jogged two miles, scored once and driven in 2:25, the last half in 1:11, the last quarter in 34 seconds. He wore a heavy hood and on the completion of the second mile he was clothed, walked to the three-quarter pole and back, scraped, and taken home. His leg was bandaged with warm water softened with soda, bandages left on over night. There was a deal of anxiety to see how the leg looked the next morning, and a great deal of satisfaction that there was no increase of swelling, and still more so when he jogged without showing any tenderness.

After the walk of three miles in the afternoon, cold water was used, borax and alum taking the place of soda, and bandaged as before. Monday he was jogged six and one-quarter miles, moved through the backstretch in 36½ seconds, roll and cotton the same as in Saturday's work, and he went as smoothly as could be desired. This was encouraging, and being well aware of the necessity of work, we resolved that on Tuesday he should undergo a more severe trial. That was nearly a duplicate of the other, excepting that the first heat was made in 2:26, then jogged one and three-quarter miles, walked a quarter, scored once and the second mile made in 2:19, the last half in 1:09. Warm water and soda after the work, cold water, borax and alum since. Wednesday and Thursday he jogged and walked all right, and when writing this, Thursday night, we feel very hopeful over the situation.

"In the name of common sense what reasons have you for not calling a veterinarian the moment you discovered the injury?" we hear from all sides and the answer is, had we done so the order would have been imperative, rest, absolute rest. With only two months between the date of injury and that when the race was to come off, even a few days confinement was out of the question; therefore, the resolution was taken to make the second payment and trust to Dame Fortune, who has oftentimes come to our relief, to again pull us through. About midway between the ankle and the lower part of the hock, the ligament was "bowed" outward until it was even with the cannon bone, the swelling at its highest stage, involving the back tendon, extending from ankle to hock, and there was considerable heat. That it was not a severe sprain is true, serious enough, however, for a competent V. S. to insist that he should be "let up."

The above was written last week as stated in the article, and now, Monday, of this week, the result of Saturday's fast work can be given. That was so nearly similar that the only difference was in the time of the first mile, which was 2:23, and in the repeat in 2:19, the stretches were made at a faster pace, 34 seconds each. Sunday and Monday he jogged as nicely as could be, and on both days he was indulged with a brush at the completion of the jog, going as true as one could ask. There is another thing worthy of note. After the move on Saturday his front tips were pulled off. They were put on September 15th, then weighing three and one-quarter ounces each, and fifteen days wear had reduced them to two ounces each. So far as could be told without "timing," he displayed as much speed barefooted as when wearing the tips.

The tips on the hind feet wear away much faster. At the same date, September 15th, new hind tips were put on weighing four and one-quarter ounces each, and these were replaced on the 24th with a pair weighing about four ounces each, and though not worn enough to demand removal, they were considerably worn, and in order to put on a new set all around, Monday afternoon, October 1st, that was done, the front weighing three ounces each, the hind two and three-quarter ounces each, the set eleven and one-half ounces. It does not require long arguments to sustain the position that the lighter the metal carried on the feet the less strain there will be on the tendons, and therefore the smallest amount compatible with safety will be best in a case of this kind. Were tips cast, or made by machinery, there would be no objection to frequent renewals, as the same nail holes could be used for several settings, but as light tips can be held with small nails and "flow holds" are taken, it is not so bad.

Were it not for the wearing away of the toes, we would just as soon work and trot Antevlo barefooted as with tips. There is a surplus of growth of horn at the heels, and when the new set were put on to-day, the heels of both fore and hind feet had to be cut away. The greatest wear is probably occasioned by the trip from the stable to the track, the street being coated with gravel so sharp that the metal is cut away quicker than when driven on macadamized streets. The daily exercise is generally some nine miles on the track and four miles in going and coming. The afternoon's walk, which is given in harness, is two miles on the street and once around the track, and this seems to have as much wearing effect as twice as fast a trot.

But we have deviated from the treatment which has proved efficacious so far, in a sprain of the suspensory ligament, though it may be that the light weight on the feet had a good deal to do with the favorable result, and hence the method of showing should be taken into consideration.

The treatment may be summarized as follows. Before the last injury, diluted lotion was used when he came in from work, the hind legs dampened with it and rubbed dry. After the injury and when the leg was swollen, bandaged with warm water in which a little washing soda was dissolved and diluted lotion rubbed on before applying the bandage. Nine days after the half mile in 1:09, viz., August 30th, used "Royal Embrocation" according to directions, fomenting the leg with warm water and rubbing in the R. E. until nearly dry and then bandaged. He showed more lameness on the 7th of September than he had before, and the next day the tendon supports heretofore mentioned, were put on, the R. E. being still used. He showed less lameness, though the swelling remaining, on the 19th resumed warm water bandages, and on the 21st cold water with borax and alum. Dr. Woolsey's plan of using cotton batting was adopted on September 22d, when his first fast miles were given, which has been continued to the present time. The roll with the compress of cotton is used when out of the stable, when in it is put between the bandage and leg. Warm water after fast work, cold at other times. Although the R. E. unquestionably increased the swelling and in this way lengthened the time of slow work, as it came very nearly blistering, it may have been beneficial, at all events we will not take the responsibility of saying authoritatively which should be given the most credit. But this much we will say, that the use of cotton in ailments of tendons and ligaments of the horse is assuredly an improvement over anything we have seen before, and especially when the middle tendon is the seat of injury. Pressure can be applied with any degree of force, and with a uniform soft and elastic strain.

We were quite apprehensive in regard to the work on Tuesday, as the second heat was given in company with Rathbone, and expected that he would "rush" and thus throw a greater strain on the leg. It was his first work in company this season and he could not have gone more kindly. He was driven in 2:22½ and with the galloper the second in 2:20½. All right yet, so that confidence is growing stronger.

The oddest race on record is one lately flown in Northern Germany between—if the reader has not heard of it he would not guess the genus of the competitors in a week—bees and pigeons. If the reader, again, informed so far, were asked to guess which won, he would still in all probability be wrong. Twelve pigeons and twelve bees (four drones and eight working bees) were taken an hour's distance from their home at Hamm and freed simultaneously. A drone won the race, arriving 4sec in advance of the first pigeon, the three other drones and a second pigeon came next together, and the eight working bees preceded the remaining ten pigeons "by a length" I am told, but what sort of a length is not mentioned. If a bee beat a pigeon a length—that is to say by a bee's length—it would be a very precise judge who did not give the result a dead heat. It would certainly have been supposed that a bee would not have had a 1,000 to 1 chance with a pigeon, but I of the bee's best distance in an hour's flight,

An Infallible Betting System.

That always entertaining writer "Roper" discusses betting systems in a recent article with much ingenuity and shrewdness. He says: "My need was of a 'New Infallible Turf System,' and one has been sent me for review, the inventor being 'quite sanguine about its efficacy'—they are that way sometimes, if not, indeed, very often. I am willing to add that there is a good deal of plausibility about my friend the inventor, though at the same time it cannot be said that the whole thing is plain sailing throughout. 'In the first place,' he says, at the beginning of his pamphlet, 'I would advise following a good tipster,' and I am bound to add that the advice is excellent; but where, oh! where, is the good tipster to be found? One advertises in this very pamphlet, for example, but I do not think he is really a good one, because I am afraid he does not—how can one put this politely? I hardly know, but what I mean to say is, I fear he does not tell the truth, and I am impelled to that conviction by his statement (he makes several, but this will do) that he tipped Oberon last year for the Lincoln Handicap, and Merry Duchess, at 33 to 1, for the City and Suburban. Well, I do not believe him myself; but I have not time just now to wrap my doubt up euphemistically, so I will not dwell on that further than by remarking that if he fancied Oberon he knew more than Alec Taylor and his employers, which might seem improbable to an incredulous man."

To proceed, however. You are to make up your mind what amount you will be satisfied to win a week, and the author suggests £3, which he says are "real good wages," and so I am afraid he is trying to beguile the working man, which is very wrong of him. You are next to take your tipster's daily selection and back yourself to win 10s., the sixth part of the sum you propose to gain weekly; and our tipster supposes that you lose—which you will find is the case as a rule, I can incidentally add. You are then to back the next, however, to win you 12s., the 10s. you are going to live on (when you get it), and the 2s. you have lost; and if it wins you are to go away. You are to do so, but the chances are ten to one that you will not. You have heard, in a roundabout and more or less disreputable fashion, that Fair Promise cannot be beaten in her race, and that the Deception colt has been tried to be better than something else that could not lose if it ran. You have won your 12s., but are you going to miss your chance of backing these two "real good things?" (we had a description of several of these last week in discussing Lewes, and we saw how they failed to come off one after another). Not likely! You put down your winnings and a bit more on the first; it loses, and you go to get back your losses, with a bit of profit as well, on the second, which is beaten a third head by a 20 to 1 outsider. The tipster will here triumphantly remark that this is not following his system; and he is right, but it is following human nature.

Our adviser continues, "Your tipster—if he is a man who knows anything at all—will surely find you one winner a day;" but for one thing it is very likely that your tipster will not know anything at all, a gloomy fact that you will discover when you are broke, and for another thing it is by no means certain that with the very best information you will get one winner a day, more particularly as you are to "leave all odds on chances alone." To find one winner a day against whom odds are bettered is very far indeed from being a certainty. I have not seldom known cases in which men who have the best information that is obtainable—too much of it in fact—have gone through a two-day meeting without backing a single winner, though they have sometimes backed two horses, and occasionally three, in a race. Last season a very well-known owner and gentleman rider told me that he had backed, I think it was, twenty-three consecutive losers, and it was no certainty that his twenty-fourth or twenty-fifth venture would be a success. I remember also William Day telling me of a backer—not an outsider, but a man well in the swim—losing fifty-seven consecutive bets. Where would our backer have been by this time? No man who thinks he can make money by betting is likely to confine his ambition to winning £3 a week. If he chanced to find that he could do that, if he met with good luck for a time, he would inevitably ask himself why he should be content with such a pittance; and to win anything worth winning the follower of a system would have to risk, and would sooner or later lose, a very large sum of money.

This "new system," by the way, is older than the days of a man whose name was famous a few years ago as a system monger. He made a fortune, I believe, by systematic backing. After that he lost it, and, if I remember aright, the fortunes of several other people who followed his multifarious schemes. I do not know if he is alive still (and that is why, having written his name, I have scratched it out); if so, no doubt he has several newer and still more infallible than the last, which went wrong. Our adviser in another part of his pamphlet says: "You back to win a certain amount on each horse, say £1 for example. You back the first horse to win you £1. We will suppose he loses. You back the second to win you £2, and the money you lost over the first." (I do not quite follow this, but the idea seems to be that the more losers you back the greater is your chance of backing a winner, and so, instead of being content to win £1 at the second go you try to win £2). "If you again go down you must back the third to win you £4, and the money lost."

Directly you get a winner you commence again. By following this system anyone who obtains good information may be certain of making a regular income, according to the capital he is able to employ. If you are so unfortunate as to have seven consecutive losers simply commence"—why will not people say "begin?"—"again with the lowest stake." Let us see. Our punter would scarcely care about winning less than a couple of sovereigns, we may reasonably suppose; that is a very small reward for the labor and anxiety of finding and backing a winner. Well! He begins with £1 on a 2 to 1 chance, and loses. He has to win £3 at the second attempt, and that goes down. Then he has to win £8—the £4 according to the system, and the £4 lost. Supposing the first favorites stated at events, he would have to back the seventh, if they lost, to win him £224, but there would probably be some 5 to 1, 6 to 1, 2 to 1 chances, perhaps longer odds, so that it might be that the seventh bet would not be so large. On the other hand, according to the system now under discussion, backers may lay odds of not more than 2 to 1 on if there are two equal favorites, so the losses might at times be more than £224. There is no sort of guarantee that the backer might not have two, three, four or more sequences of seven losers—that he would have one or two now and again is one of the very few real certainties of racing—and would not his position be a merry one some fine morning when he had won his daily £2 after the failure of three sequences, which meant that he was between £500 and £600 out of pocket! It is well that our adviser should have made that remark about the regular income being according to the capital the backer is able to employ.

Hear our adviser on another head. "Always wait until you feel sure what is the favorite." Excellent advice! Where is a SPORTSMAN? Here is one—August 9th—a few days old, but it will do. Now then, Brighton Races. The Ovingdean Plate. "Betting—5 to 2 each against Chaplet colt and Gallinule." Imagine our backer waiting till he felt sure which was the favorite! The next race was the Juvenile Selling Stakes. "Betting—4 to 1 each against P. and O. and King Cole." Here was more trouble for our backer. I should think the chances are that he would, in both cases, have concluded first that one was favorite, then that the other was, and so sorely muddled his accounts. I hope he did not back the two coupled in the Juvenile Selling Stakes, because Satyr won. The third race was the Brighton High Weight Plate. "Betting—5 to 2 each against Ilsestein, Ahelard, and Belisarius II." This is awkward! "Always wait until you feel sure what is the favorite. When there are two equal favorites, back them coupled." Quite so; but what when there are three, as here? "You can take my word that this is a system that can be worked practically," we are assured, but how would it have come in on this Wednesday at Brighton? I have lighted on a specially awkward day for the system maker, no doubt; for it is, I admit, to be quite frank, rare to find two equal favorites in the race that comes next; but it very frequently happens that till the fall of the flag no one can feel sure what is the favorite. Not seldom one horse is favorite in one part of the ring, and another horse in another part. It was at Lewes on the Saturday with P. and O. and Needles, to give a recent case, and the day before with Rapparee and Peck o' Pepper, returned at 100 to 30 and 75 to 20, while in the same race a good many backers only got 3 to 1 about Elm, who is returned at 4 to 1, and Dartmouth is returned at 9 to 2, a shorter price having been taken. It was impossible to say whether Rapparee or Peck o' Pepper was really favorite, but if the follower of the system had backed them coupled he would have gone down, for neither won. The drawback to the "New Infallible Turf System" are that at the best you can only win a very little, and that you are exceedingly likely to lose a great deal. If you have an enormous capital, and are content to win £4 to £5 a day, you may do so; but even then, strictly following the system, you may accumulate a loss of thousands.

I have heard of scores of systems, but never saw one which had not at least one fatally weak point in it. They read well on paper, beguile the inexperienced, but are absolutely impracticable even if strictly worked, unless, of course, a backer has unlimited command of money. And they never are strictly worked. Listen to the advice from the prophet I have been quoting. "Back the first favorite to win you a certain sum per day, say, for example, £10. If the favorite wins the first race, bet no more that day; but if it loses, back the first favorite in the second race to win you the £10 and what you lost over the first race." Let us take the last day of Lewes—it is the last day's racing I saw, and I have not a more recent return, but it is, to a certain extent, in favor of our adviser, because it came right in the end. Well! He would have had his £5 at 2 to 1 to win £10 on Goldsmith, and would have been beaten. Then he would have had to win £15 on Theodolite in the second race, at 11 to 8 on (many people laid 6 to 4, and some 7 to 4, but will not exceed published prices to aid our wins), and that means 20 to 15. This would be a loss, and our backer would have had to back Shrivensham at 2 to 1 to win him £35—the pony lost and the £10. This would cost him, avoiding the fractions, £18, and so he would have had to win £35 + 18 + 10 = £63 on Ellington, which means that he must lay 73 to 63 on. He is now out £141—we will call it £140—and has to win £150, which he must do by laying 2 to 1 on P. and O. and Needles coupled, for we have seen that they were equal favorites—one is returned at 7 to 4 and the other at 2 to 1, but I was there, noted the market carefully, and am sure that no human being could have said with certainty which was the better favorite. That means laying 300 to 150 on. Objection wins, as I described last week, and here is our backer out £440. He must have £225 on Alchemist to win him £450; and he has landed his tenner surely enough, but only by a neck, and if the neck had been the other way he would have been £665 out, all in the endeavor to make £10. Was the game worth the candle?

If I had to propound a system I should take something like the following, but I must repeat most emphatically that all systems are full of risk and uncertainty, and the follower of mine would be very likely to lose his money. My system, too, requires a little knowledge of Turf affairs. It is timely to follow certain horses. I would have any man select a good two-year-old, a good three-year-old, and one or two good handicap horses, and back them whenever they ran. How is he to select them? It is there that his knowledge will come into play. I propounded this system, if it can be called a system, to a friend last season and picked him his horses. The three-year-old turned out a very bad choice, for it was The Baron; but the handicap horse was Carlton, and the two-year-old Friar's Balsam—it is quite useless to pick a two-year-old till Ascot, and not seldom the Ascot selection would have to be discarded later in the year. These had claims to be considered good horses; it was certain that when they ran they would do their best, that they would be fit to run, and would be well ridden. I do not for a moment think this a sound system, but good horses are tolerably sure to win races.

Showing Horses.

Did it ever strike you in looking through the exhibits on a fair ground that nothing was so difficult to see to advantage as horses not at the time actually in the ring or led out for inspection? It no doubt has, and we know that we have been impressed in the same way. The visitor starts around among the stalls, and if a door is open he gets a pretty fair view of the hind parts of the occupant of the stall, with possibly a glimpse of the remainder of the animal in the darker part of the enclosure, barely enough to enable him to guess at the appearance of the horse as a whole. He dislikes to ask the owner to lead the horse out, for he has no direct business with him, and sees no possible compensation for the courtesy. Ladies, who are often good judges of horses, and admire them as much as any other stock, are practically debarred from seeing everything not in the ring. Now why not show horses as other stock is shown—in open pens, in which they can easily be seen from all sides? There are objections to this, of course, but we do not see why some compromise arrangement could not be made which would meet with the approval of horsemen and accommodate the public. Let everybody have a chance to see the horses, and the interest in the fairs will very materially be enhanced.

The attendance at Agricultural Park, Lakeport, has been the largest in the history of Lake County Fairs.

"The Standard."

There is likely to be a great dissimilarity of views in relation to the trotting standard, and until the time comes when a rating will be peremptorily established such as is now the case in thoroughbreds trouble will exist. The following cut from the American Cultivator is a sensible view of the matter.

We believe that both justice to the trotting horse breeders and the best interests of all those engaged in raising trotting stock demands a restoration of the old rule. The object of the standard is, or should be, to encourage improvement in the quality of the trotting stock of America. Those who advocate the present standard advise to breed only from standard animals. In a previous issue we called attention to the fact that the present rules, had they been in force when these horses were foaled, would have consigned to the list of geldings such renowned stallions as Harold, sire of Maud S. (2:08½), Dictator, sire of Jay-Eye-See (2:10), Volunteer, sire of St. Julien (2:11½), and twenty-six others of the gamest turf performers, with records of 2:30 or better, that ever faced a starter; Electioneer, sire of at least thirty-three that have beaten 2:30, including Manzanita (four-year-old record 2:16), and the phenomenal trotter Wildflower, with a two-year-old mark of 2:21. George Wilkes (2:22), the most remarkable trotting sire that the world has ever seen, who also have shared the same fate, together with such noted sires as Red Wilkes, Alcyone and Alcantara, which have up to this time outstripped all of Wilkes' other sons in producing turf performers capable of fighting their way to the front in fields of the fastest, gamest trotters in their classes.

It is a singular fact, too, that the fastest performers got by all of the above sires were from non-standard dams. Not only that, but what seems still more remarkable is, the great brood mares Green Mountain Maid, Miss Russell, Emeline, Waterwitch, Alma Mater, Clara, Dolly, Midnight, Columbo, Crop, Flora, Jenny Bryan, Old Kate, Logan Maid, Meg Ferguson, Molly Walker and a host of others would have been rejected as brood mares, had the present rules been in force when they came upon the stage of action, and the advice of those who recommend breeding only to standard mares been followed. Were there any of their day that were bred according to the present standard formula which will bear favorable comparison with the animals above named?

We are aware that this is not the popular side of the question just at present, but breeders all over the country are studying the subject carefully, and doing a large amount of independent thinking. There is sure to be a change in public sentiment in the near future.

Now in case the old rules for standard cannot be restored, and forever remain so, we would certainly be in favor of making the rules retro-active, and striking from the list of standard all the animals that have ever been registered from first to last under the rules which have been changed. Justice would also demand refunding to all parties who have paid for registering such stock the money that they paid in registration fees, together with interest. As the matter now stands, there are thousands of stallions registered under the defunct rules that will continue to get standard animals. Many of them will doubtless get a better class of stock than the majority of these registered under the higher rules, still if there is a standard it should be uniform and apply alike to all, whether foaled in 1887 or later.

Many of the most successful trotters now upon the turf are from mares whose dams were first-class thoroughbreds, or very nearly so. Favonia (2:15), J. B. Richardson (2:17½) and Loretta F. (2:19) are among this number. The present rule would discourage the breeding of such trotters, yet, they are among the best of their sires' get. The dam of J. B. Richardson was by Almont, second dam by imported Glencoe, and third dam by Bertrand, son of Sir Archy. The dam of Loretta F. was by Col. Grayson, a thoroughbred son of imported Glencoe, and Col. Grayson's dam was Ann Bell, by a grandson of imported Diomed; second dam by Kennedy's Diomed. The dam of Favonia was Fadette, by Alexander's Abdallah; second dam, Lightsome, by imported Glencoe; third dam, Levity, by imported Trustee. It is by no means certain that the best results in producing first-class trotters will not be obtained by following a similar line of breeding as that which gave us the above-named animals, together with scores of others, and until such has been proved to the contrary, it would seem advisable to have a set of rules that would encourage breeders to give it a thorough trial.

The science of breeding trotters, as has often been remarked, is in its infancy, and if a set of rules is to be laid down for the guidance of breeders, they should come from men who have not only thoroughly studied the matter, but have tested their theories and made a success of the business. The most valuable lessons in breeding will always be those learned from a careful study of the blood lines of all the noted winners, from the earliest trotters to those which are at present actively engaged in fighting the greatest battles upon the turf.

The National Horse Show.

The National Horse Show will be held at Madison Square Garden, New York, November 5, 6, 7, 8, 9 and 10. These shows have in previous years attracted great numbers of people to New York, as well they might, as they are of a nature to arouse the deepest interest on the part of all persons interested in horses of every description. They add to the interest already left in horses, and thus are deserving of the support of all lovers of the horse, whether for racing, trotting, pacing, park or agricultural work. It is by such shows as these that the English have stimulated the interest felt in horses, and the success attending past shows in New York has been of an encouraging character.

As to the exhibition in November, it will be the most extensive ever held in America. The prize list at hand shows eight classes for the thoroughbreds; stallions four, three, two and one year old, and mares the same, the prizes ranging from $200 down. There are two prizes for Arabs. The trotters are well cared for. There are fourteen classes, the highest being for a prize of $400 for a stallion shown with four of his get, with five other stallion prizes, and eight for mares. Roadsters have six classes, with prizes from $35 to $150. Draught horses have three prizes for singles, pairs and tandems of four. Clydesdales have eight classes and Normans ten prizes. There is a prize for coaching stallions, one for four-in-hand teams, two for cabs, four for ponies, one for horses and for cob. Saddle horses, cobs, ponies, hunters, fire-engine horses, police horses, cavalry horses, etc., are also offered prizes. There are also the usual prizes for jumping contests. The list of special prizes is large, the Directors of the Coaching Club, Mr. F. A. Schermernorn, Mr. F. T. Underhill, Mr. W. E. D. Stokes, Mr. E. D. Morgan, the Hotel Brunswick, Mr. Edward D. Adams and other offering prizes. The entries close October 15th.—N. Y. Spirit of the Times.

The Chicago Meeting.

CHICAGO, September 15th.—The fall meeting of the Washington Jockey Club is a thing of the past, and no one seems to be more thankful than the Executive Committee. It has had a number of difficulties and annoyances to contend against, and in the face of them all has done remarkably well. The meeting has not been a pronounced success, and it is more than likely that Chicago has seen the last of fall racing, at least for some time to come.

There is no denying that the continued running at the West Side Park has hurt the older organization, but then it is doubtful that even if the former had closed its gates whether the latter would have been a success or not. The people in this vicinity have had too much of racing this year, and that fact is well recognized by the Washington Park people, who are beginning to look around for a remedy. The question has been discussed on all sides, and a number of different solutions have been offered, but the most favorable, as well as the most feasible one, seems to be the getting of the Legislature to pass a law limiting racing in Illinois to thirty days during the year on any one track.

The club directors held a meeting for the express purpose of wrestling with this question, and came to the conclusion that their only salvation would lie in having such a law passed. There is not much doubt but what it can be done, and before the racing season of 1889 is opened, an ordinance will be seen upon the statute books prohibiting more than thirty days' racing in the State of Illinois on any one track. Such a law will be thankfully received by the better element of racing circles in this locality, and they will do all in their power to have it passed.

At the same meeting it was practically decided to discontinue the fall meetings of the club for the present, and the programme for the year 1889 was formally agreed upon. This calls for a summer meeting, commencing on June 22d and ending on July 24th, with an average of five races to be run every week day between those two dates. The management has acted very liberally in the way of stakes and prizes, and none of the former will have less than $1,000 in added money, while $600 will be the lowest offered in the latter races. With such inducements to horse owners the quality of the horses that will compete cannot be other than first-class, and with a law limiting racing within the State the meeting will undoubtedly be a most pronounced success. People will not have had a superfluity of racing by a class of inferior animals, and they will be only too glad to pay their money to witness the battle royals between the cracks of the turf. The public here love thoroughbreds, and under favorable circumstances will liberally support any club that brings them together, but where two or three comparatively unknown horses constitute the entries for race after race, they cannot be expected to give much encouragement.

The West Side people are bent upon getting every cent they possibly can out of the present season. They are not satisfied with the injury they have inflicted upon the king of sports already, and will continue their meeting until the bitter end, without any regard to the rights of others whatever. It was hoped that after Mr. Corrigan had wreaked his spite on the Washington Park management that he would curb his desire for the mighty dollar, and try to promote the interests of the turf and preserve harmony in the ranks of its supporters, but he has absolutely refused to do anything of the kind. He, no doubt, acknowledges to himself that both Louisville and Latonia ought to be given a fair show, but as long as his West Side money making machine is in even fair working order he refuses to stop it; but some day he may wake up and find that he has killed the goose that laid the golden eggs.

Now, as to the racing itself at the meeting just closed. The majority of the races were just fair, but some were really creditable, and stamped their winners as being of the first quality.

The best performer of the meeting was the great Galen. In every race he disposed of his field with the greatest of ease, and in several instances made shows of them. His performance in running five furlongs with 122 pounds up in 1:01½, was certainly a creditable one, and in merit ranks with Renwick's record of 1:00½, made in San Francisco as a five-year-old. Ed Mack is also showing up in great form, and should give a good account of himself before the season ends. Laura Stone is another one that is just getting into shape again. In the beginning of the season she was considered very fast, but before long she went the way of so many other good two-year-olds, but now she is just getting back again, and will be very dangerous. Doubt, Bonnie King and Birthday made a finish that was worth going miles to see. In the stretch Doubt looked like a sure winner, and Bonnie King had as firm a hold on the place. Overton, however, brought Birthday up with a rush, and in the last strides managed to catch Bonnie King, who had poked his nose ahead of Doubt, and one of the prettiest dead heats ever run on this track was seen.

Racing in Days of Yore.

On my table by the side of my green covered spring edition of Ruff, says Rapior in The London Sporting and Dramatic News, is what may be called the progenitor of that series, the first volume ever issued of The Racing Calendar, bound in yellow leather like the Calendar of to-day, except that the covers project a good inch beyond the leaves. It is dated 1727-28-29, and includes a list of "the principal Cock Matches of the Kingdom in the years above, and who were the Winners and Losers of them." There are many quaint things in this volume, one of the strangest being the astonishing frequency with which horses fell when running on the flat. They do not seem to have gone any great pace. Thus, at Nottingham, in July, 1727, Frenzy "at the Turn Posts the first Heat lost, as was believed, near a Distance; yet won the said Heat very easily." She likewise fell the second Heat, and lost thereby two Distances, yet run third. In running for the £30 Sophonisba fell.

"Vicious Ball fell down likewise." Soon after there was a meeting in Bedfordshire, and we read that "Tinker, in running the first Heat, fell down twice or thrice."—a fall more or less does not seem to have been worth counting—"the last of which times he broke from his Rider, and that caused his being distanced: He's the same that is generally called by the name of Black Ovington." So the horses changed their names apparently as it seemed convenient. Going on to Cheshire we find that "Colbin in the first Heat fell down." So at a meeting in Lincolnshire. "There were several accidents in running for the Plate. * * * * * Snip fell, and Dwarf in the second Heat lost a stirrup for a Mile or further." Jockeys nowadays lose their irons occasionally, but it is not recorded in the Racing Calendar. In Lancashire, "Now or Never was thrown down." Further north, in Northumberland, "Mr. Genison's mare in the first heat fell down." In Shropshire, "Who Can Tell fell after starting." "Carlisle was so unhappy as to fall"—this was in Cheshire. In Lancashire, "In the first heat this day both horses fell." In Lincolnshire, "In a second of three heats Jeggs was so unhappy as to get a fall, otherwise 'tis believ'd he had won the same and consequently the Plate."

Is it not strange? In about one race out of every three something seems to have fallen, and why should this have happened? For one thing I fancy that crossing and jostling were not unknown, though it was not allowed, and I find an account of Milkmaid at Lancaster being "charged with breaking the articles by crossing upon one of the others." They seem to have carried on the sport in rather a casual fashion, and the want of stewards is often very obvious. This, for instance, is a curious description of a race run in Berkshire, June 1828; "Cupid's Qualification for the Plate was long disputed, and though at last he was permitted to start, the others in the Heat were off near a Distance before him, otherwise many were of opinion he had won the Prize." This was handicapping Cupid with a vengeance! Fancy suddenly permitting a horse to start for a race when the rest of the field had already gone a distance! Here again we see the trouble that arose from the lack of a judge. There were some races in August, 1727, at Hambleton. "The two last of three Heats were won by the Gelding, and the first of 'em by the Horse; but the 2nd Heat was so even a thing that neither side would yield it up as lost; and 'twas long said it would be contested at law, but 'twas after many months referred to arbitration, and given in favor of the Gelding." Surely this ought to have been settled on the spot! Stewards were also wanted in Berkshire on a certain occasion. "There was something very particular in the day's sport," the chronicler says, "for Dwarf was not Enter'd for the Plate till after the first Heat, yet was then allow'd to be regularly enter'd and permitted to start the 2nd heat as a qualified Horse." This was certainly irregular by the Article.

Many horses at this date ran without names, being described by their colors, strawberry among others, and when names were given they were often eccentric. Kiss in a Corner beat Bald Charlotte at Lincoln. Whipping Kate beat Would if I Could in Berkshire, Long Meg following. Look About Ye, Tickle Me Quickly, Never Mind Her, Will if I Can, No Trust Like Trial, and I am very little-pity-my-condition all ran badly at one meeting in Durham. Last Time of Asking won a heat in Gloucester (Miss Kitty fell). Tickle Me Quickly was apparently a favorite name. The Durham bearer of the name was a gray horse, and in Herefordshire I find a brown mare so called. Six Pound and a Bottle is a name I do not understand. Who'd Have Thought It fell lame in Huntingdonshire. Peggy Grimes Me won a race in Lancashire, and, indeed, seems to have traveled about a great deal, and run in many places. Nancy Grieves Me I also find running. Love to be Honor'd was a Durham mare, and in the same county there was a gray horse called Whistle Jacket running at the time, I have copied out some half dozen names that I really do not like to print. It was an out-spoken generation, and their humor was rather full flavored.—Sporting World.

How the Leger Was Won.

LONDON, Sept. 15th.—The autumn event par excellence for the racing man has become a matter of history, and nothing remains now to be said of the St. Leger of 1888, but merely to gather up the old fragments and stray bits of gossip in regard to it. The running of the favorite and Derby winner, Ayrshire, was one of the greatest surprises and disappointments. There was evidently a screw loose somewhere, and an anxiety evinced by the book-makers to lay the favorite proved that the knights of the pencil, who seem to have an intuitive faculty of scenting out anything amiss, knew that Ayrshire on the Leger day was not the Ayrshire of the Derby day. When he came into the paddock and was stripped the cognoscenti hurried to see him, to form an opinion of his condition and see if there was any grounds for the strong feeling against him. The result of their inspection was that though many fancied him looking short of work there was not much fault to be found with his condition so far as appearances went, and his backers again shook hands with themselves. The weather was all that could be desired and had made the going perfect as it well could be.

The race was run at a capital pace, and after the first two hundred yards Ayrshire was making the running. He was pulled back, and the field swept on with varying changes until half a mile from the finish. There Seabreeze was taken to the front, with Ossory and Orbit second and third, the trio being followed by Chillington and Ayrshire, on whose tracks were Merry Andrew and Zanzibar. Ossory and Orbit were done with as they swept round the bend; Ayrshire took second place and Chillington became third. Just outside the distance Ayrshire made his effort, and, with the inside berth, got within a neck of Seabreeze, but in a few strides he was beaten, and Seabreeze won, hands down, by three lengths. Ayrshire not being persevered with when defeat was inevitable, was soon headed by Chillington and Zanzibar, who were second and third respectively, with a head between them. Ayrshire pulled up very weary. Still worse befell Chillington. He broke down in his near fore leg and had to be promptly declared out of the Casarewitch, for which he should, on this performance, have had a very great chance. Capt. Macchell was not sanguine, and was by no means so large a winner on Seabreeze, who was trained in his stable, as he was on last year's winner, Kilwarline, but his connections, notwithstanding, reaped a rich harvest. The time of the 1 mile 6 furlongs and 132 yards was 3 minutes 11 4 5 seconds, the fastest time ever chrouched for a St. Leger; but putting aside the time, it is certain that Seabreeze is a long way from being the best winner of the race even in the last few years, and the fact of Chillington running third proves the field to have been but a moderate one. Ayrshire was, without doubt, as the race proved, not fully up to his Derby form, and after he had made his run, he shut up like a knife, and without a struggle left in him. One must go far back to find a Derby winner who has cut up so deplorably.

Mild preparations will not do for the Leger, and his performance proved conclusively that Dawson had not dared to give him what he knew was necessary in the shape of work. The attendance was an immense one, all Yorkshire apparently putting in an appearance, despite its being such a grand day for harvest operations. There were many horses among the candidates for St. Leger honors who would have been far better at home in their stable, but there was a Derby and an Oaks winner in the field, and that, of itself, was sufficient to give immense public interest to the result.

The Doncaster sales made the mornings preceding the races almost as busy as the afternoons. There were many yearlings and blood stock generally for sale than ever before. Mr. Tatterall and his son had two separate sale rings, and were both kept up to the eyes in work. Taking them through, the quality of those offered was good, but the prices realized by no means reassuring. There were only some four or five sold at 2,000 guineas or over, and nothing made a sensational figure. The highest price was paid by Mr. Douglas Baird—2,800 guineas for a colt by Bend Or—Tiger Lily (sister to Lily Agnes, the dam of Ormonde), bred, as was also the dam, by Mr. Snarry, the V. S. of Malton. The second highest, 2,600 guineas, was for a filly by St. Simon—Crucible, by Rosicrucian, bred by Mr. Simons Harrison. The foreigners were heavy purchasers, more especially of the fillies which they had an eye to for breeding purposes. The Irish youngsters did not fetch at all satisfactory prices, and were many of them returned unsold.

The acceptances for the Casarewitch and Cambridgeshire show a total of 70 left in out of 100 original subscribers to the latter, and 50 out of 84 to the former race.

Stuart, the great undefeated French three-year-old, has broken down. His last race was in the Grand Prix at Paris. It is singular that not one of the four best horses which France has produced of late years—Frontin, Little Duck, Plaisanterie and Stuart—should have stood training after their three-year-old career, and the coincidence is all the more remarkable in the case of Frontin, Little Duck and Stuart, because in each instance the Grand Prix de Paris was their last race, an English colt being each time second. Stuart is the property of M. Pierre Donon, and will now be relegated to the stud.

John Osborne is slowly recovering from his accident at Hull. A similar one nearly happened in the Leger, where a mounted policeman again managed to get in the way of the runners. Probably after this these mounted guardians of the peace will be dispensed with, as they should be at race meetings. Jimmy McDonald, the jockey, long known to all racegoers here, has this week died of consumption, brought on by excessive wasting. He was a very popular and successful rider, and has piloted the winners of many of the leading events, more particularly the big handicaps.—ANGLO-AMERICAN Sporting World.

SECOND DAY.

A perfect day was given for the second day of the fair at the Garden City.

The judges were James Boyd, D. J. Murphy and George Polhemus, and W. H. Parkhurst, Harry J. Agnew and Pat Farrell acted as timers.

The first race called was the trotting contest for the 2:35 class, for a purse of $400, best three in five.

There were three entries, Ben Ali, driven by J. A. Goldsmith, Sonnet by James Dustin and Maggie E. by Wm. Doniphan. The latter was the favorite in the pools, and before the first heat was sold for $25 to $5 against the field.

Ben Ali drew the pole, Maggie E. second, Sonnet third. They got away well together, Ben Ali taking the lead and keeping it all around the track, making the quarter in 37 seconds, the half in 1:14, and the mile in 2:28, Maggie E. second.

In the second heat pools sold as before, and the heat was trotted like the first, except that there was a very close finish between Maggie E. and Ben Ali, but the horse was a little bit too quick for the mare and passed first under the wire. Time, 2:22.

At the close of this heat pools sold $40 on Maggie E. to $26 on the field. Maggie was a clear favorite and her friends were backing her for all they had, though she had two heats scored against her and must win three straight to win. When the third heat was started Maggie took the lead. In the first quarter she had a close brush with Ben Ali, and both lost their feet. Maggie, however, kept her advantage and increased it steadily. The quarter was made in 36 seconds. There was close racing down the track to the homestretch but Maggie drew ahead gradually and came in an easy winner in 2:23.

Fourth heat - Pools now sold $25 on Maggie to $7 on the field. The favorite took the lead and kept it, both Ben Ali and Sonnet coming well along behind her and keeping her up to her best work. The speed down the homestretch was very great. It was said that Ben Ali's driver was determined to take the heat himself or make Maggie E. break her record and go inside of 2:20. If this was his intention it succeeded, for the favorite closely pressed, rushed under the wire in 2:19.

The victory of the mare was now supposed to be a foregone conclusion. No one would buy pools, and some who had Ben Ali pools sold them for $1, or offered them and found no takers.

There was a great deal of scoring before the horses could get a start on the fifth heat, but finally they got away well together, Maggie E. took the lead and increased it until at the half-mile the three horses were strung a full length apart. As they neared the three-quarter post Ben Ali began to gain on Maggie and turned into the homestretch with his nose at her wheel. The excitement became intense as the two came flying down towards the wire, and for a time it looked like a dead heat, but Ben Ali was too much for the favorite and came in winner by half a length. Time, 2:23.

There was a great deal of argument over the result of the race, as it was the greatest possible surprise to everyone. Many asserted that the mare had not been driven on her merits. There was for a time a probability that the judges would give Maggie another driver and order the heat trotted over, but after consideration they decided that it should stand, giving the race to Ben Ali, Maggie E. second, Sonnet third.

For the Garden City colt stake, in which seven entries were made, there was a walk over as none appeared except San Mateo Stock Farm's bg Grandee, by LeGrande dam Norma, by Arthurton.

The next race on the programme was the Santa Clara County Colt Stake, mile and repeat, which closed April 1st, with thirteen entries.

The second race was a special for a purse of $500, best three in five. There were three starters, Rosa Mc, driven by J. A. Goldsmith, San Diego by James Walsh, Franklin by Wm. Doniphan. Pools sold at the start, Franklin $25, Rosa Mc $18, San Diego, $11. The first heat was won by Franklin in 2:23, Rosa Mc second; the second by Rosa Mc in 2:24, San Diego second; third by Franklin in 2:23, Rosa Mc second. As it was now getting dark the remaining heats were postponed.

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 26TH.

The third day was remarkably successful, both as to the excellence of the programme and the number of spectators. A crowd was on the grounds in the morning to witness the stock parade. The line of stock was three quarters of a mile in length. The horses included thoroughbreds, trotters, roadsters, draft animals, carriage and saddle horses. Among the cattle were herds of Durhams, Holsteins and Jerseys, Polled Angus, graded beef and dairy cattle.

The crowd which assembled in the afternoon was very much larger than on previous days. The weather was even pleasanter than the day before, the heat of the sun being agreeably tempered by a refreshing breeze.

As there was a postponed race of Tuesday to be finished, and four other races to take place, the judges had the running races sandwiched in between the heats of the trotting matches, and thereby succeeded in getting through by 5 o'clock.

First on the programme for the day was the conclusion of Tuesday's postponed special race. The contestants were Franklin, Rosa Mc and San Diego. At the close on Tuesday Franklin had two heats and Rosa Mc one. Pools sold $30 on Franklin to $15 on the field. In the fourth heat they scored but once, Franklin having the pole, Rosa second and San Diego third; but shortly after the start Franklin broke badly and Rosa took the lead, closely followed by San Diego, who passed her at the quarter and kept his advantage until turning into the homestretch, when Rosa overtook him and the two came down to the wire together in an exciting finish with Rosa half a neck a head. Time, 2:21.

In the fifth heat Rosa Mc had the pole, but San Diego went ahead at a pace which kept him in the lead until the half mile post was passed. Here he made a bad break and the others slipped by him. Franklin then took the first place and kept it, gradually widening the distance between himself and his rivals, and coming in a length ahead of Rosa Mc, and winning the race. Time, 2:21.

THE TWO-YEAR-OLDS.

The next race excited a great deal of interest among the spectators. It was the running stake for two-year-olds, three-quarters of a mile and repeat. Five horses made a start, Faustine, ridden by Cook, having the pole, Aurelia (Schofield), Bessie (Hennessy), Wild Oats (Hitchcock), and Futurity (Murphy), taking their places in the order named. Faustine and Aurelia were from the Palo Alto ranch, Wild Oats and Futurity from the stables of W. H. Appleby, while Bessie Shannon was owned by J. Reavey & Co. The pools were sold $50 on the Palo Alto stables against $10 on the field. The horses started well together and ran in a bunch for the first quarter, after which the two Palo Alto colts took the lead and kept it. The rush down the homestretch was closely contested, but Faustine ran away from the others as she neared the wire, her stable mate coming alone at her tail, and the rest working hard for third place. They passed the line, Faustine first, Aurelia second, Wild Oats third, Futurity fourth, and Bessie Shannon fifth; the winner making the three-quarters in 1:16.

SUMMARY.

SAN JOSE, CAL., September 26, 1888—Running Stake. For two-year-olds; $25 entrance, $10 forfeit, $200 added; $50 to second horse, $25 to third. Non-winners this year allowed five pounds. Three-quarters of a mile.

THE COLT STAKES.

The Santa Clara County colt stake, a mile and repeat, was the next event called for on the day's programme. Robin Adair, Nutgrove and Rockwood started in order named. Pools sold before the race began. Nutgrove $20, Rockwood $8, field $5. D. J. Murphy, George Polhemus and Jessie D. Carr acted as judges.

After scoring twice the horses started away well together with Robin Adair in the lead. Rockwood cut in ahead of Nutgrove before the first quarter was reached, and in this order the entire heat was won, Robin Adair winning the heat in 3:14.

For the second heat pools sold: Nutwood $15, Rockwood $8, to $40 on the field. The horses scored five times before they got away, and when they did Rockwood took the lead, closely followed by Robin, Nutgrove in the rear, never having a chance for the race. Just before turning into the homestretch Robin closed up on Rockwood, Nutgrove made a spurt and broke badly. Rockwood made a brave effort to keep his lead but Robin pursued him and came in first under the wire. Time, 3:10.

At the conclusion of this race Mr. Topham took the place of Carr as judge.

The third event of the day was a running free purse of $200, free for all ages, one and one-half miles. The entries were Daisy D. (Hennessy), Welcome (Cook), Nancy (O'Day), Carmen (C. Hitchcock), Daisy having the pole, and the others being placed in the order named. Pools stood $30 for Daisy D., $6 for Carmen, and $5 for the field. The horses got away together, with a little advantage for Daisy, Nancy following her closely and taking the lead as they passed the quarter pole, but Daisy soon recovered her place and kept it to the end. Welcome, Carmen and Nancy followed her under the wire in the order named. Time, 1:57.

The last race was the three-minute class trotting. Perihelion, driven by J. A. Goldsmith, and Lady Ascott by James Dustin, were the only entries. Pools sold $50 on Perihelion to $13 on Lady Ascott.

The first heat which was a closely contested one, was won by Lady Ascott, in 2:24. In the second heat Lady Ascott led to the quarter, where Ascott drew ahead. He kept this position to the head of the homestretch, but there he broke and the mare took the lead. Goldsmith settled his horse and sent him down the straight, taking the heat in 2:28.

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 27TH.

The fine weather which makes it a pleasure to be out of doors and the excellent programme of races drew a very large crowd to the Fair Grounds. A fine cool breeze was blowing when the races were called and there was not a cloud in the sky.

The first event on the programme was the running race, a mile and repeat, for a purse of $200 open to all ages. Fusilade's Last and Notidle were the only starters. The latter was a strong favorite and sold in the pools at $25 to $5 on her opponent. In the first heats he confirmed the faith of her friends; for though Fusilade's Last got away with the pole in her favor and half a length ahead at the start, the favorite easily made up to her and ran with her half a length ahead around the track to the finish, winning the heat easily in 1:45.

The second heat was a duplicate of the first except that there was not a foot advantage for either at the start. Notidle took the lead and kept it all around the race, but did not widen the distance between herself and his opponent until near the finish, when she ran in two lengths ahead in 1:47.

SAN JOSE, CAL., Thursday, September 27, 1888—Running. Free purse $200, $50 to second horse. For all ages. Mile and repeat.

 Time, 1:45, 1:47.

The second race was one which excited a good deal of interest because it was contested by Franklin and Ben Ali, whose close finish on Tuesday evening, resulting in a victory for Ben Ali, caused so much surprise and excitement among the betting men. The race was for a purse of $500 and was open to the 2:27 class. There were five entries but three were withdrawn and Franklin and Ben Ali were the only starters, Billy Donathan driving the one and Jonny Goldsmith the other. In the pools Franklin sold for $30 and Ben Ali for $14.

In the first heat Franklin had the pole, and Ben Ali in trying to pass him broke before reaching the quarter but quickly recovered himself. The quarter was made in 36 seconds. Shortly after passing the half mile Ben Ali broke again, but soon got down to his work and from that time to the end pushed Franklin close. Indeed, at one time as they came down the homestretch, it looked as if Ben Ali would win, but the favorite was too much for him, and came in a neck ahead in 2:25.

The second heat was very similar to the first, Franklin leading all round the track. Whenever Goldsmith would try to force Ben Ali he would break and did this three times during the heat, going clear off his feet at the finish. The heat was won by Franklin in 2:25.

The third heat was a repetition of the other two. Franklin taking the heat at the start and keeping it to the end, making the final heat of this race in the same time with the others, 2:25.

In the trotting race for a purse of $600, 2:22 class, there were five entries, but Alcazar having been withdrawn the starters were as follows: Rosa Mc, driven by Goldsmith; Gus Wilkes, by Dustin; Lillie Stanley, by Hickok; Thapsin, by Wilber Smith.

In the pools Rosa sold for $50, Wilkes $20, Lillie Stanley $50, Thapsin $5.

After scoring three times the horses got away well together for the lead, the others following close until the quarter was passed when they were strung out with the Lillie in the lead. The leader made a bad break after passing the half mile, but got her feet again and kept her advantage to the end. The horses passed under the wire in the following order: Lillie Stanley, Thapsin, Gus Wilkes, Rosa Mc, in 2:21.

In the second heat the horses got away at the first trial and Gus Wilkes made a rush for the lead: he did not succeed in getting away from the bunch until after the quarter was passed, but at the half mile had a good deal of daylight between him and Rosa Mc, who was nearest him. Near the three-quarter post Rosa made an effort to get first place, but Wilkes was too fast for her and on the home stretch had it all his own, coming in two lengths in the lead of the others, Rosa Mc second, Thapsin third, Lillie Stanley fourth. Time, 2:23.

The third heat found the pools selling: Lillie Stanley $30, Gus Wilkes $20, Rosa Mc $15; Thapsin $5. The horses scored four times and got away on the fifth trial. As they passed the quarter post Lillie Stanley led, with Gus Wilkes second, Rosa Mc third and Thapsin fourth. When near the half-mile Wilkes and Stanley had a spurt for the lead, in which both broke, but the advantage remained with Wilkes. Rosa Mc made an effort to take the lead on the homestretch, and Goldsmith plied the whip freely, but she could not win. The heat was won by Gus Wilkes in 2:23, Lillie Stanley second, Rosa Mc third, Thapsin fourth.

The fourth heat was an exciting one. Thapsin got the lead, and his driver managed by a free use of the whip to keep it until the homestretch was reached, when Lillie Stanley and Gus Wilkes passed him, one on each side. It was noticed that the driver of Thapsin, Wilbur Smith, in using his whip always flourished it when Wilkes was coming near him, and at last, when this whip waving could retard Wilkes no more, Smith crowded out upon him and permitted Lillie Stanley to pass him on the inside. The horses passed under the wire, Lillie Stanley first, Gus Wilkes second and Thapsin third. Time, 2:23.

When the heat was over James Dustin came to the judges' stand and protested against the way in which Smith had acted. The judges declined to entertain this protest, but the crowd was with Dustin and cheered him when he denounced what he called the "dirty work" of Smith.

At the opening of the fifth heat pools were sold: $25 for Lillie Stanley, $18 for Gus Wilkes and $1 for the field. The horses scored seven times before they got away, and when they did Lillie Stanley and Gus Wilkes settled down to a long, close contest all around the track. Thapsin and Rosa Mc being nowhere near the leaders. After passing the half-mile Wilkes broke badly once or twice, but managed to keep close to Lillie, and on the homestretch they came down neck and neck. Just before reaching the wire Lillie Stanley broke, but recovered herself just before she went under it first, Gus Wilkes second, Thapsin third, Rosa fourth. Time, 2:24½.

Friday, Sept. 28th, there was a large attendance at the races; the day was the pleasantest of the week, and there was never a moment when the sun was too warm for comfort.

The first race called was a running stake for three-year-olds, one and one-fourth miles, for which Vinco, Welcome and Carmen were entered. Welcome was a strong favorite in the pools and sold for $25 against $6 for the field.

In the first heat the horses started well together and ran to the quarter with Welcome and Vinco running in the lead close together and Carmen some distance behind. The latter, however, began to gain after passing the quarter, and at the half-mile post the three were running so close together that a blanket would have covered all of them. From that point Vinco began to fall behind, and when the homestretch was reached was out of the swim. There was a close finish between Carmen and Welcome, the rider of the former using the whip freely; but his efforts were useless, Welcome winning the race in 2:11½, Carmen second, Vinco third.

The second race, a running stake for all ages, a mile and a half was contested by Index and Laura Gardiner. The pools sold at $40 on Laura to $24 on Index. The horses started at the half-mile post and came by the judges' stand with Index in the lead. As they passed the quarter post Laura closed up on her rival and for a quarter of a mile there was a close race between them, but the favorite took the lead despite the fact that the rider of Index used the whip freely. On the homestretch Index made a spurt, but it was without avail and Laura Gardiner came in two lengths ahead in 2:38½.

For the trotting race, a mile and repeat, Vendome Colt stakes for two-year-olds, there were nine entries, but as eight of them did not start, Fortuna took the race in a walk-over in 2:55.

The race of the afternoon in which the greatest interest was manifested was the special match for a purse of $1000, best three in five, for which there started the trotters Woodnut and Maggie E, and the three-year-old pacer, Yolo Maid.

Maggie was driven by Donathan, Woodnut by Holly and Yolo Maid by Goldsmith. Pools sold very briskly on this race in proportions of $200 on the Maid to $36 on the field.

After scoring twice the horses got away well together, but scarcely had they started before Woodnut broke badly and fell far behind. Yolo Maid took the lead, Maggie E. second and Woodnut last. In this order they made the quarter in 36 seconds. The horses were strung out with plenty of daylight between them until the half-mile was reached, when Woodnut closed up the gap and passed Maggie making a fine effort to overtake the Maid, but the favorite was too swift for him and won the first heat easily in 2:22.

The second heat was closer than the first, but its general features were the same, Yolo Maid taking the lead, Woodnut following her closely and Maggie right with them as they passed the quarter post. After passing the half mile Woodnut pressed the favorite hard, and as they entered the homestretch it looked as if he would take the lead, and there was a moment of keen excitement, but the Maid got away from him and won the heat in 2:18, Woodnut second.

The third heat was a close one all the way round, and the result was never certain until the finish. Yolo Maid having the pole at the start had a little advantage, but both Woodnut and Maggie E. kept at her neck and put her upon her mettle to hold her place. The horses were in a bunch up to the half mile, and at that time it looked as if Woodnut would get the lead. Neck and neck he and the Maid came round into the homestretch with Maggie pressing closely behind them. Yolo Maid managed to draw away from the others, although Woodnut came down the track like a whirlwind, and threatened even to the end to take the heat from her. The finish was made in 2:18½, Yolo Maid winning the heat and race, Woodnut second.

The fifth race on the programme was a trotting match for a purse of $200, for two-year-olds, a mile and repeat. There were two starters, Vesolia, driven by Walter Maben, and Fortuna, by Donathan. Pools sold $40 on Vesolia to $13 on Fortuna. The first heat was without particular interest. Vesolia took the lead and held it throughout the course, Fortuna breaking badly twice. Vesolia won in 2:29½ leading Fortuna by two lengths.

Pools on the second heat sold $40 on Vesolia to $13 on Fortuna. It resulted in a surprise to the betting men; Vesolia took the lead and had a clear length between her snaky wheels and Fortuna's nose as they passed the quarter post, but from that time on Fortuna began to gain. After passing the half mile, Vesolia broke up badly and before she could get her feet again, Fortuna shot by her like an arrow and took the lead. Once again Vesolia broke, and again Fortuna made good use of her chance, and as she turned into the home stretch she was fifty feet ahead. Vesolia made a brave effort to recover her place, but her driver saw there was no use and saved her at the finish. Fortuna took the heat in 2:31.

The third heat, which was to decide the race, was a Waterloo for the favorite. Just after starting Vesolia made a spurt to get in the lead and got the inside track, but Fortuna was not to be beaten so easily, and held the pole until after the quarter was passed. It was neck-and-neck from that on for the next quarter, and Vesolia was gradually getting ahead when she broke badly and Fortuna got away from her. The distance lost by this break was never recovered, and though Maben did his best to urge his filly on, and sent her down the homestretch for all she was worth, the spurt was useless. Fortuna won the heat in 2:31 and the race with it.

For the sixth race, a trotting match for $200, a mile and repeat, the starters were Robin Adair, driven by Waldron, and Rockwood driven by Flemming. Robin was the favorite and sold in the pools for $25 to $15 for Rockwood. In the start Robin had the pole. Rockwood broke badly before he had gone ten rods, and Robin at the quarter post led by a length. Rockwood broke after passing the quarter, and again after the half-mile post, and it looked as if the heat was gone, but from this point Rockwood picked himself up and came into the homestretch even with his rival. The race from the final quarter post to the finish was a close one but Rockwood won it in 3:25; Robin Adair second.

In the second heat Robin got away from Rockwood in the first quarter and kept his lead to the end. Rockwood broke a half a dozen times, and at the finish was away behind. Robin won the heat in 3:16.

The third heat was a repetition of the second, except that Peter Brandon drove Rockwood. The horse broke as before, and Robin Adair won easily in 3:12.

The closing event of the day was a cart race for which there were four starters, X. E. B. owned by X. E. Burns, Charlie G., by Mr. Grover, Old Sport, by J. Howard, and Billy Dixie, by W. Ahlers.

The horses trotted in sulks; Old Sport was the favorite in the pools, selling for $25, X. E. B. $7, the field $6.

After scoring four times the horses got away, and Old Sport immediately forged ahead and took the pole from X. E. B. At quarter post Old Sport led, followed closely by Billy Dixie, X. E. B. and Charlie G. in order named. At the half-mile Billy Dixie had got a good lead and X. E. B. was pushing Old Sport closely, Charlie G. being far in the rear. The race down the homestretch was continued in this order, though it was doubtful for a time if X. E. B. would not win. The heat was finished in 2:45 in the following order: Billy Dixie, X. E. B., Old Sport and Charlie G.

It was now dark, and the remaining heats of the race were postponed until Saturday.

SATURDAY SEP. 29.

The last day of the races drew a good attendance at the track. The day was cool, cloudy and very pleasant. The first race of the afternoon was the unfinished cart race, of which one heat had been trotted on Friday and won by Billy Dixie.

Old Sport was the favorite in the pools, selling for $25 to $9 on the field. After scoring five times the starters got away when Billy Dixie broke. X. E. B. won the heat in 2:40, Old Sport second, Charlie G. third, Billy Dixie shut out.

The second heat was a very exciting one. Old Sport made a rush at the start and took the pole from X. E. B., who broke before the quarter pole was reached. Passing this point the horses went down to the half mile with Old Sport in the lead, X. E. B. second. Charlie G. third, but near the half-mile post X. E. B. broke badly and Charley G. took second place. Old Sport came in an easy winner in 2:39; Charlie G. second, X. E. B. third.

In the fourth heat the driver of X. E. B. was changed and J. A. Goldsmith pulled the reins over him. The heat was won by X. E. B. in 2:36½; Charlie G. second, Old Sport third.

The fifth heat was one of the most exciting of the whole week. Old Sport, who in this heat was driven by Dick Havey, got away at the start and took the lead, X. E. B. second. Charles G. broke badly before he had gone ten rods, but caught up with X. E. B. at the quarter, which they passed neck and neck a short distance behind Old Sport.

After passing this point both X. E. B. and Charlie broke badly once or twice, and Old Sport seemed to have the race, when suddenly he broke and stopped dead on the track before he could be got to work again. Both X. E. B. and Charlie passed him and he seemed to be out of the race, as the other horses led by ten lengths when they passed the half-mile, with X. E. B. in the lead. As they came round into the homestretch, however, Old Sport closed up the gap, passed Charlie G. at the three-quarter post, and after a keen and exciting race beat X. E. B. under the wire, and won the heat in 2:41, X. E. B. second, Charlie G. third. To most of the spectators this ruling seemed very unjust, for Old Sport ran nearly one-third of the whole mile.

Old Sport and X. E. B. having each two heats, a sixth heat was trotted to decide the race, which was won easily by Old Sport, who took the lead at the start and kept it to the finish, winning the heat in 2:39.

The first race called after the conclusion of the cart race was a running contest for a purse of $200, three-quarters of a mile and repeat. There were eight entries for this race, but only two starters, Notidle and Daisy D.

The first race was a free one from the start to the finish, the horses running side by side without a shade of advantage to either until the homestretch was reached, when the Daisy got away from her rival and won the dash in 1:16½, after a most exciting race and a close finish.

The second heat was a repetition of the first, a close race all round the track, the horses running neck to neck, and a close finish, Notidle's jockey using the whip freely. Daisy D. won the heat and the race in 1:15.

The second race for pacers of the 2:23 class for a purse of $400, best three in five, was contested by San Diego driven by Walsh, Belmont Boy by George Bayless and Almont Patchen, over whom Jas. Sullivan pulled the lines. Almont was a strong favorite in the pools, and sold for $50 to $15 on the field.

In the first heat Belmont Boy took the lead at the start, after scoring six times, and went down to the quarter pole closely pushed by Almont Patchen. San Diego was three lengths behind when the quarter was passed, and never got any nearer the leaders until just at the finish, when he closed the gap somewhat. The race between Belmont Boy and the favorite was a close one, the horses coming into the homestretch neck and neck. Belmont gradually pulled away from Patchen and won the heat in 2:19½, Almont Patchen second, San Diego third.

The second heat was similar to the first, a close race between Belmont Boy and Almont Patchen, with San Diego out of the swim. The two leaders made the first half mile neck and neck, but after that Belmont took the lead and kept it, despite the fact that, as they came down the homestretch, Sullivan used the whip freely on Almont Patchen. Belmont Boy won the heat in 2:19½, Almont Patchen second, San Diego third.

The third heat was similar to the other two. Belmont Boy started off at a rattling pace and took the lead. Near the quarter post Almont Patchen pressed him closely, but after that point the Boy had everything his own way, and won the heat and the race easily in 2:20, Almont Patchen second, San Diego third.

The third race was the grand event of the day, a free-for-all contest for a purse of $1000, best three in five. There were four entries, but L. J. Rose's bay stallion, Stamboul, and O. A. Hickok's bay gelding Arab were the only starters. Arab was the favorite in the pools and sold for $60 against $20 on Stamboul. O. A. Hickok drove Arab and Walter Maben Stamboul.

In the first heat Stamboul had the pole, but before the quarter was reached Arab had passed him gained the inside. Stamboul, however, kept up his pace and before the half-mile was reached had again taken the lead and the inner position. They kept close together to the three-quarter post, but as they turned into the homestretch Stamboul broke and the two sulks came into collision, knocking two spokes out of Stamboul's wheel, without however stopping the speed of either. Hickok called on Arab for his best, and followed closely till near the finish, by the bay stallion, the gelding came under the wire a winner in 2:15.

In the second heat Stamboul broke just after the start, and though he recovered himself quickly he had lost more than he could make up. The first quarter was made in 34 seconds, the half in 1:08 and the mile in 2:16, Arab leading all around the track and winning by two lengths.

The third heat, which was finished just as the sun went down and darkness began, resulted in a surprise to everyone. Arab led as in the two other heats until the homestretch was reached, when he broke badly and before he could recover himself Stamboul shot by him and kept first place to the end of the race, winning the heat in 2:16.

It was too dark to try another heat, and accordingly the race was postponed until Monday at 1 o'clock.

A MATCH RACE.

After the second heat between Arab and Stamboul the crowd was entertained by a quarter-mile dash for a purse of $200 between Oregon Annie, owned by George Ayers of San Jose, and Belle Johnson, owned by W. H. Stayton of Gilroy, which was won by Oregon Annie in 26½.

Cook Stock Farm Premiums.

At the Golden Gate Association the first premium was taken by the three-year-old standard bred trotting horse, Charles Derby. In the Cleveland Bay Class the first premium was awarded to Royal Studley, and the second premium to Saxon Prince. In the sweepstakes Baron Hilton won the premium.

At Sacramento Charles Derby won the first premium in the class for three-year-old standard bred trotting horses. In the Cleveland Bay Class Royal Studley took the premium. In the three-year-olds the imported Cleveland Bay General took the first premium and imported Barrington the second; and in the sweepstakes Baron Hilton took the premium.

Charles Derby, foaled 1885, was bred at Cook Stock Farm. His sire is Strinway, record 2:25, first dam Katy G. by Electioneer, second dam Fanny Malone by Niagara, third dam Fanny Wickham by Herald, fourth dam by imp. Trustee, fifth dam by imp. Barefoot, etc.

Royal Studley is by Young Candidate; first dam by Whalebone; second dam by Lucks All; third dam by Summercock. General is by Salesman. Barrington is by Prince of Cleveland. Baron Hilton is by Lucks All, first dam by Sportsman, second dam by Lucks All.

At Fresno these Cleveland Bays were shown, but on account of the premiums above mentioned were not allowed to compete.

Guy's Triumph.

Gny is now king of the Fleetwood Park track.

Maud S. had her colors lowered last Saturday. Until that time she had trotted the fastest mile over the Gentleman's Driving Club course, having gone the distance in 2:13½. On Saturday Guy was sent to beat this record, and succeeded in doing so by one second and a quarter. Guy is a black gelding and is owned by Mr. W. J. Gordon. Early in the season Mr. Gordon said he would get a record of 2:12 for his trotter, but very few believed him. His performance on Saturday, when he trotted a mile in 1:12½ over the Fleetwood track, is a much better performance than it looks, as the Fleetwood track is very slow. This is shown by the time of the three quarter. The track at this point is up hill and the time made was two seconds slower than any of the other quarters.

Mr. Robert Bonner, the owner of Maud S. was not at the track to see this performance. One of his sons was however, and said that, while it was a very remarkable mile, he thought Maud S. could beat it any time. The mare is now in Mr. Bonner's private stable in this city and is in very good condition. Mr. Bonner said:

"Maud S. could be put on edge in two or three weeks. She is in good shape now, and about a month ago trotted a mile over the Fleetwood track in 2:12½. I don't think she will be sent to beat Guy's record. You see she is still queen, having a record of 2:08½, and four seconds is a good deal to cut down."

Guy will be sent to Cleveland, and will probably try to lower his own record.—Mail and Export.

At Napa, Oct. 3rd, San Diego, Gold Leaf and Damiana competed for the free-for-all pacing purse of $500. Gold Leaf won in straight heats. Time, 2:20½, 2:23 and 2:15. This is the fourth time this year that Gold Leaf has broken the record. She has taken 7½ seconds from Dodd Peets' time of last year.

Game Butchers Convicted.

Editor BREEDER & SPORTSMAN:

You have at different times kindly referred to an organization in this place, known as the 'Knights of the Trigger' of Kern County, and always in a spirit of good will. As you are aware the club was started by the sportsmen of Kern County, with the object in view of advancing sporting matters generally, but principally for the preservation of all kinds of game. The organization has now under its control over 70,000 acres of enclosed lands, on which notices are posted, at the expense of the club, which have the effect of keeping off all market hunters. Nearly 6,000 acres of enclosures are held in reserve from all hunters to be devoted to the use of those participating in the Pacific Coast Field Trial Clubs trials, during the coming January, comfortable club rooms have been fitted up in Bakersfield, for the entertainment of members and visitors. We refer these matters in justification of the large membership we have in your city, as proof to those who have joined us, that their interests are not overlooked.

All organizations of this character start out with the best of laws, rules and intentions, for their arrangement and government; it rests upon the interest and activity of its members, to attain the objects sought for by those who become its supporters. In the short time our club has been in existence, we think it has a good record, especially in the result of prosecutions of those violating game laws in our country. We have to-day achieved a victory, which we think entitles us to notice in your columns; the brief history of the case is as follows: Less than a week ago, we were informed that a party of hunters were killing lawns and antelope in the "Temblor Hills." We immediately employed an active constable, George Tibbet, to follow up the case and arrest the parties, we issuing a warrant, to be used in the event he found sufficient evidence to convict. Tibbet visited the camp of the hunters, which was forty miles from here, last Sunday; all were away, he discovered sufficient evidence there to satisfy him that conviction would be an easy matter. Several antelope and doe skins were scattered about the camp, quarters of meat were thrown away that had just been killed, quail in large numbers were found rotting, in fact everything about the camp evidenced the most wasteful destruction of game that could be imagined. After fully satisfying himself that he had a good case, Tibbet left the camp, to return next day, to make his arrests. He made a very early start, but found when he had reached the camp that the party had decamped; they had without doubt some knowledge of his visit the preceding day. Tibbet took their tracks and made twenty miles in an hour and a quarter, overtaking the whole party on the plains; they were making the best time possible for their homes in Tulare County. It took the argument of a six-shooter to make the party six in all deliver up their guns, and change their direction of travel towards Bakersfield, which they reached Monday night at 12 o'clock. Their trial took place to-day; all pleaded guilty, as had been previously arranged between the prisoners and the Directors of the Knights of the Trigger, in consideration of the promises of the organization that they would appear before the justice and plead for his leniency, as it was the first offense. The least fine was imposed, about $85 to each man, or $538 in all.

The Knights are very jubilant over their success, and intend to persistently follow up all parties violating game laws in Kern County.

Bakersfield, Sept. 25, 1893.

W. E. HOUGHTON.

J. M. Bassford, Jr. writes from Vacaville that quails are "fairly plenty." He bagged 27 in an afternoon's shoot in Capay Valley.

Mr. P. C. Byrne, until recently a resident of Grass Valley called upon us last Thursday and reported the killing of a buck by Mr. John Ford on the Yuba, about five miles from Grass Valley, that weighed 200 pounds dressed.

Mr. William Schreiber shot near Novato on Monday and Tuesday last over his pointers, Mountain Boy and Sall. The days were warm but he had fair sport, getting about four dozen heavy quails, most of them over points.

Mr. H. S. Wort and his Nate are sticking closely to the birds on Throckmorton Ranch with uniform success. Nate is about as good as an Irish setter ever gets to be, and stays through the longest day without suffering.

Mr. L. L. Campbell, who returned last week from Sidney, N. S. W., was out on Monday with his Irish setters near Blythe-ale, Marin County. He reports birds enough, but very heavy cover and excessive heat. Mr. Campbell will furnish our readers some notes of his experiences with Antipodean sportsmen and dog fanciers.

That inveterate pursuer of quails, Mr. W. S. Kittle and his exquisitely handsome English setter Luke, were seen going over the hill from the Poor House near San Rafael one day last week in search of some heavies left last year. They make a strong team and always "do well"

Messrs. H. R. Brown, David Thom and Clarence A. Haight took out their pointers Sport, Dick H. and Donna Sensation near Haywards last week. Although all of the gentlemen are fine shots, luck so prevailed against Thom and Brown that they got but a half dozen quails each, while Haight had twenty. The dogs were in first-rate form, and their work was satisfactory.

This paper is indebted to Mr. F. D. Waite of San Diego, for a report of the Selby Medal tournament shot at that city last week. It is always a pleasure to give prominence to the doings of sportsmen, when some fellow-craftsman will be at the pains to furnish accurate reports.

The Knights of the Trigger of Santa Clara will give a two days' tournament on or about Thanksgiving Day, at San Jose. Clay pigeons, blue rock targets, and live birds will be used, and generous cash and special prizes given. The shooting will be managed by Captain Portal and T. Taylor.

THE RIFLE

State Rifle-Practice.

The annual rifle-practice of the Second Artillery Regiment, National Guard of California, took place at Shell Mound Range yesterday, under the supervision of Lieutenant F. A. Kuhls, Inspector of Rifle Practice. The regiment was represented by companies A, C, D, E, F and H, and acquitted itself creditably, as was expected, it having among its members some of the best rifle-shots on the Coast. There was an extra incentive for the men to do their best, beyond the winning of the medals, in the shape of a gold and silver cup eighteen inches high, beautifully and appropriately engraved. This cup was presented to the regiment to be competed for by the companies, the highest total score of the best six marksmen in each company deciding the ownership. Company C won the cup, and altogether made a higher percentage than any other company this season.

To win a medal in the rifle practice it is necessary to make 25 out of a possible 50; which entitles the marksman to a bronze medal, 40 insures a silver medal and bar.

The following is the complete score of the medal winners. Battery A—Lieutenant Geary, 42; Sergeant Darcy, 41; Captain Sine, 40; Sergeant Elliot, 39; Lieutenant Benneman, 39; Lieutenant Smith, 38; Sergeant Cummings, 37; Sergeant Howard, 36; Lieutenant Beatty, 35; Lieutenant Berry, 33; Corporal Keller, 31; Corporal Wickenbouser, 31; Private Fortio, 35, Cainsford, 31; Hall, 26; Keunedy, 27; Moore, 30; Muller, 26; Robinson, 28.

Company C, thirty-eight out of sixty present, winning medals with the following scores:

Captain A. Huber	44
Lieutenant H. Mulhern	35

The scores of the six non-commissioned officers and privates of Company C. (commissioned officers being debarred), who won the regimental trophy, are as follows: Corporal J. H. Ringen 38, Privates Koch 41, Wiegmann 39, J. H. Petrie 38, L. Lingen 29, C. Piebrock 34. Total, 219.

Bay City Rifle Club.

The series of target shoots for a trophy presented by the AMERICAN FIELD, was finished at Shell Mound on Tuesday last by the Bay City Rifle Club, representing California. The conditions were: National Rules, ten pound rifles or under, ten shots each, on each of three days, the first day ten men shooting, the second day six men and the last day all to shoot. The scores are excellent. All the men used Winchester single shot rifles. The averages insure a high position, if not absolute winning of the trophy. The scores both on the Creedmoor and American field targets are given:

Third Regiment.

The annual shoot of the Third Regiment was concluded at Bay View range on last Saturday. A good representation from the regiment was had, and some good shooting was done, especially by A and D.

In Company A the bronze medals were won by First Sergt. James F. Trainor, who scored 39; Corporal P. Hagan, 34; Denis F. Driscoll, 40; William Delury, 40; Thomas McMullen, 28, and M. J. Santry, 36. In Company C, by Edward Fitzpatrick, 25; J. J. Lane, 26; J. B. Leach, 27; and Charles Radumsky, 27. In Company D, by John Olsen, 25; Thomas Rumley, 24; W. J. Barry, 32; James Barriman, 30; M. Collins, 28; George Colby, 26, and W. P. Collopy, 26. In Company E, by E. M. McKeage, 56; J. M. Farrell, 25; M. Keogh, 32; Frank Merrill, 41; F. J. Ralph, 32, and Tim Sullivan, 26. In Company F, John Sullivan, 36, and Sergeant R. O'Donnell, 30. In Company G, Frank W. Barr, 38; D. J. Driscoll, 35, and Sergeant F. Maloney, 34.

G. Company, Sacramento.

Some introductory scores were made at the annual target shooting of the company held at Sacramento last week, and the average is higher than was ever before made in the history of the N. G. C. A full complement of men appeared and the whole day was spent at the butts. Mr. Will Sheehan second 48 out of 50 which will give him the championship of the State. The shooting was all at 200 yards, offhand, Springfield rifles, 6 pounds full. The totals are given.

The following are the totals: Captain T. B. Hall, 44; Lieutenant E. Sheehan, 41; Lieutenant W. A. Mott, 46; John Zillinger, 30; Jerry Carroll, 24; W. W. Robinson, 11; F. P. Powell, 43; W. F. Sheehan, 43; J. A. Klein, 30; George McKenna, 36; John Mitchell, 45; G. M. Griffen, 40; D. McLaughlin, 20; W. H. Kern, 36; W. J. Boaz, 39; W. Baker, 39; William Coulter, 29; C. Coker, 7; W. E. Doane, 20; J. F. Lenham, 39; George Elliott, 41; R. H. Fleischer, 22; W. J. Greenlaw, 39; A. J. Goodwin, 22; O. E. Hughes, 42; J. J. Hefferman, 30; J. McC. Hastings, 39; M. J. Judge, 38; W. J. Johnson, 36; J. D. Laing, 37; M. McDermott, 36; J. A. P. McLain, 30; Angus McMillan, 42; J. F. McCormick, 12; Herman Miller, 39; Jacob Nutie, 34; F. L. O'Brien, 29; F. V. Runstler, 23; J. L. Rutherford, 39; F. H. Stevens, 40; L. A. Sellers, 39; C. A. Startzman, 39; Benjamin Sprock, 25; Fred Turner, 14; Edward Tesreau, 20; George Theilbahr, 36; George Weise, 25.

Second Regiment.

The annual target competition instituted by the State for the improvement of the National Guard was held by the Second Regiment at Shell Mound on Sunday last. There was a fair attendance from all the companies. Where all the work was so good comparison might seem invidious and it may suffice to give the results without comment, except to remark that C Company sustained its reputation as first at the targets.

Company F sent thirty-one men into the boxes. The scores of the best shots are given, fifty points being a perfect score: Captain White 31, Sergeant Clark 32, Sergeant McDowell 33, F. O. Brown 35, L. C. Brown 35, Arnold 32, J. Brown 32, M. Brown 35, Page 34, Nicholl 24.

The members of Company C did some fine shooting. The company is considered the best score-maker in the regiment. The following is the score:

Capt. A. Huber	44	Private G. Brooks	29
Lieut. A. Mulher	35	Private H. Eschenboost	26
Lieut. J. Lemeke	43	Private F. Kock	41
Sergt. H. Huber	28	Private M. Kahn	30
Sergt. W. Wessling	32	Private H. Menke	28
Sergt. W. Ruth	31	Private J. Muzio	27
Sergt. C. Boxton	34	Private J. H. Petrie	38
Sergt. J. F. Siehe	32	Private C. F. Repeun	31
Corp. W. H. Frank	37	Private L. Ringen	29
Corp. S. J. Ruttinger	34	Private C. Viebrock	34
Corp. J. H. Ringen	38	Private P. H. Will	27
Corp. W. H. Sabin	29	Private H. Wiegmann	39
Corp. W. A. Schenck	31	Private W. Woodall	25
Corp. G. W. Boxton	29	Private C. Woodall	27

Company H did some good shooting and made the stitched score: Captain W. D. Waters 34, Sergeant T. L. Burns 30, Corporal Robinson 21, Sergeant Seams 30, Sergeant Nichols 37, Corporal Tyson 27, G. Anderson 27, J. J. Boyle 27, R. Brower 36, W. Cooney 21, J. D. Devine 35, J. Heeney 25, J. Loomison 31, S. Mills 28, F. Boynton 32.

Thirty-six men from Company D shot and made the following score: Lieutenant Steltz, 25; Sergeant Carson, 23; Sergeant Henry Reid, 29; Sergeant Wagner, 25; Sergeant Bristol, 26; Sergeant Umland, 27; Corporal Smith, 37; Corporal Morrison, 21; Corporal O'Donnell, 28; F. H. Holtz, 36; C. Smith, 24; F. Flueger, 21; F. W. Durgan, 40; J. E. Elkington, 21; W. Marshall, 21; T. Murray, 21; H. C. Weidemeyer, 30.

Appended is Company E's score: Captain J. H. Flynn, 29; Sergeant O'Connor, 34; Sergeant Cunningham, 24; Doyle, 29; Durtin, 20; Heilmann, 23; Marshall, 27; G. R. Taylor, 31.

The marksmen from Battery A made the following: Lieutenant Geary, 42; Sergeant Davey, 41; Captain Sime, 40; Sergeant Elliott, 39; Lieutenant Belineman, 39; Smith, 38; Sergeant Cummings, 37; Sergeant Howard, 36; Lieutenant Beatty, 35; Lieutenant Berry 32; Corporal Keller, 21; Corporal Wickenheuser, 31; Fortio, 35; Gainsford, 31; Hall, 26; Kennedy, 27; Moore, 30; Muller, 26; Robinson, 28.

The field and staff shot under the inspection of Rifle Inspector Lieutenant F. A. Kuhls and made the following: Colonel Wilder, 23; Captain Ammerman, 26; Lieutenant H. V. Scott, 12; Lieutenant J. D. Eissing, 3; Lieutenant C. C. Fisher, 25; Lieutenant Kuhls, 41; Lieutenants Pike, 19; Major W. D. McCarthy, 35; Sergeant-Major Oakley, 21; Quartermaster-Sergeant Batchelder, 22; Sergeant Kelleher, 15; Orderly-Sergeant Smith, 32; Musician J. S. O'Brien, 35.

Hennery of the Signal Corps, 4.
Retired officers—Captain Kingswell, 31; Captain J. H. McMenomy, 36; Captain W. C. Little, 37.

An interesting feature of the day was a team shoot for a trophy in the shape of a silver goblet lined with gold on a stand eighteen inches high. The six best shots from each company competed for it, and Company C's team was the victor. The score: Private F. Kock, 41; Private H. Petrie, 38; Corporal J. Ringer, 38; Private H. Weigman, 39; Private Viebrock, 34; Private L. Ringer, 29. Total, 219.

The rifle shooting of Will Sheehan at Sacramento last week, has excited general remark. It was so astonishing, especially in view of the recent lead-pencil work. As a consequence of the above shoot and Sheehan's 48 score, Thomas Carson, a member of Company C, First Infantry, is about to issue a challenge to shoot Mr. Sheehan a hundred-shot match for $100, or he himself cannot repeat his remarkable feat, either in San Francisco or Sacramento. The best ten men at Sacramento averaged very nearly 86 per cent. with Springfield rifles."

CANOEING.

Oakland Canoe Club.

The great event of last Sunday was the launching of Vice-Commodore Harrison's new canoe just received from the East. She is from Joyner & Co., of Schenectady, N. Y., 16 ft. x 37½ in. Smooth skin and of very pretty lines, in fact she is not unlike an enlarged "Pecowsie," having practically no floor but lots of headrise and a very sharp entrance. She is necessarily crank, but when laid over recovers herself much quicker than her flat-bottomed sisters. She is fitted with a plate centerboard and cross-rudder of the latest pattern. After an appropriate launching, when she was christened "Frolic," she had a trial race with some of the flyers, and though handicapped with a passenger and her rigging being entirely new and not in shape, held her own in good style and will evidently prove very lively to windward. It breezed up very strong later in the afternoon, and during another race the Mystic capsized, the Gypsy having set her the example earlier in the morning, and the Commodore was rescued and dried out. Next Sunday is the quarterly race for the Mayrisc hadge and more than usual interest is taken on account of the large entry and the presence of the new boat. Her owner is trying to get his big racing sail on her during this week, but has no idea of how she can stand it. He is badly handicapped in knowing nothing of his boat yet, but says he is satisfied with her so far.

THE KENNEL.

Dog owners are requested to send for publication the earliest possible notices of whelps, sales, names claimed, presentations and deaths in their kennels, in all instances writing plainly names of sire and dam and of grandparents, colors, dates and breed.

Communications relating to this department should be addressed to BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN.

W. D. Howe claims the name of Elko for liver and white pointer dog (Professor—Belle H.) whelped August 26, 1888.

Manitoba Field Trials.

The third annual meeting of the Manitoba Field Trials Club, held at Morris, Manitoba, on September 11th and 12th, was fairly successful. Mr. W. B. Wells was sole judge. The weather was rather cold but moist, and a strong east wind blew on the first day. First went to Pitti Sing, an English setter bitch, after an inadequate showing of her merits. She was fast and stylish, but was not on birds a great deal. Most of the dogs were rank and lacked training.

But three starters went in the Derby, all of them puppies of considerable merit, and first and second were divided by Prairie, a stylish setter, and Mac, a pointer, but under what rule does not appear. Neither dog gains a record. Third went to Pete.

Mr. H. S. Wort's pointer Femminore, by Tom Pinch—Lassie, died at Watsonville on Monday last. The dog was a rarely good one, and gave promise of becoming very handsome.

Mr. Thomas Dawson, known as an able kennel writer and editor, died in New York on Sept. 15th of pneumonia. He was born in Yorkshire, England, and came to America five years ago.

Agnew's Chief Jr. and McDonald's Weasel have been matched, best two of three courses, for $100 a side, the match to be brought off at Newark to-morrow. Both dogs are good and much interest centers in their meeting.

Mr. J. K. Newton is doing the foxterrier interest of the State much good by bringing well-bred dogs of the breed from Australia, on his yearly visits to that pre-eminently terrier-fencing land. He now has some fine youngsters of clear antecedents and good quality, which might be seen with advantage by local owners.

Coursing seems to have about died out for the time. The fervor in its behalf of a few years ago may return, as new men and untired dogs come on, but at present it cannot be said that it retains much of the patronage which it had when John F. Carroll, Dominick Shannan, Pat Lyman, Henry Wormington, Robert Devlin, Clement Dixon and all that sturdy company were actively on deck.

ROD.

Communications relating to this department should be addressed to BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN.

Sight of Trout.

Ohservant anglers must have noted how much more quickly trout return to feeding after being startled by noise or jar than after seeing the form of the fisherman or the glitter and swing of his rod. A writer who speaks from experience has this to say about the matter, after describing a bright day in which the fish were driven to shelter and hiding by the glint of the gut leader:

"Now he was quite an orthodox distance from these fish—was on the north side of the river, so that the shadow of the rod could not disturb them, and was evidently a practised fisherman by the way he handled his rod, but the flash of the gut in the sun, long before it reached the water, gave the alarm. The lesson stuck to me, and to it I owe what little success I may have obtained as a fly-fisherman, for I may as well confess that I do not owe it to my skill in throwing a fly. In fact, I cast badly—that is, I cannot throw a long line. Wherever I fish I find men who heat me easily at that, but they do not beat me in the pains they take to keep out of sight. A trout's eyes are so set that he can see a good way behind him, and not only must one keep out of his sight one's self, but keep rod and line out of it too, as far as possible. 'Go down on your hands and knees and pray for them,' was the advice of an old friend of mine, and it is not to be despised.

More especially are a trout's eyes quick to see anything above him. If the hawk you are on is high, it is useless to approach him from above; you must make a wide circuit to get below him, remembering that the top of your hat is some inches above your eyes, and that he may see that when he cannot see you; remember, too, the change in the line of sight as it passes from air to water and vice versa, caused by the different angle of refraction, as illustrated by the bent appearance of a pole thrust into the water. One great advantage of wading is that you are low down, and do not show so much of your body to a fish. I do not think trout care a bit about a man's legs in the water. They take them for posts, possibly, or something equally harmless, for they certainly take much less notice of a wader than of a man on the bank. I remember one May-fly season, a trout rising persistently below me, and not 20ft from me. He was so straight below me that I put my fly on the water with my hand and let it float down to him, when he took it. It would not be safe, however, to reckon on their always being so blind; it is only when they first get mad on the May-fly that they seem to lose their usual caution. Doubtless, too, many have noticed how indifferent fish are to them when bathing. I have seen a perch come swimming so closely past me, when I have been under water, that I could have put my hand on him, but that a timely recollection of his back fin restrained me. It is, in my opinion, the rod that frightens fish more than the man, and if that is all spick and span with brass and varnish, it will send them into hiding quicker than anything.

Once sent into hiding, it is a question how long it will be before a fish comes out again. If hungry, and there is plenty of fly on, he may come again in ten minutes, or he may be an hour or more. If you have plenty of fresh water before you, he is not worth waiting for; but if fish be few and anglers many, it is a question whether you would not do better in waiting for him than in looking for another.

A Vacaville party has been encamped on the North Fork of the American River, trouting. Mr. Wm. Saxton returned on Wednesday last, leaving Messrs. Clark, Noel and Rogers still on the river. Good sport has been the rule.

The Emperor of Russia, who is a passionate angler, has since June last rented the salmon fishery by the Langinkoski Waterfall, in the Kymmene river, in Finland. No alterations have been made in the vicinity, except the building for the imperial family of a cottage in old Norse style, situated close to this picturesque waterfall. The house is exceedingly simple, consisting only of two sitting rooms, a kitchen and two bedrooms, one being used by the Emperor and one by the Empress. From the verandah running in front of the house a magnificent view is obtained of the lovely waterfall and surrounding country. A few weeks ago the imperial couple stayed here for some days, and it would seem, were charmed with their visit, as the autocrat of all the Russias was frequently seen carrying water in a can from the river, whilst his august consort was busy cooking in the kitchen. The Czar chiefly fishes with the fly, but some exciting net-fishing was also enjoyed. When the Emperor is not at his quarters three men look after the fishing, the salmon being forwarded in ice to the imperial household. Recently, when yachting on the Finnish coast, the imperial family also indulged much in salt-water fishing by themselves, and often went ashore on some little secluded island, made up a fire, cooked their spoil with their own hands and eat it, as, it would seem, to their great amusement and relish.

Queries Anent Shoeing.

From Bath N. Y. and Honolulu we have received letters in regard to shoeing either of which will require a good deal of space to answer. We will take pleasure in answering them fully as the importance of the subject demands, feeling confident that the defects men-

Bay District Trotting Meeting.

To-day, Saturday, October 6th, the fall trotting meeting of the Bay District Association will commence, and an attractive bill is presented. There are two races, and the entries are as follows:

First Race—2:22 pacers; purse $400.
A. McDowell names	b g Crickett
Lee Shaner names	b g Bracelet
S. C. Tryon names	s m Pocahontas
C. S. Roberts names	ch g Belmont Boy
Second Race—2:30 trotters; purse $500.
O. A. Hickok names	s m Tracy S.
Palo Alto names	b g Emaline
R. H. Walton names	b s Argent
S. C. Tryon names	br m Eva A.
Honsen & Soule names	b s Ha Ha
A. L. Hinds names	b m Cricket

The quartet of pacers are so close together in point of speed that it is likely to be a guessing affair from start to finish, and though Belmont Boy may have the call, there will be supporters for all the others. The trotters have the great charm of novelty to enhance the interest.
With the exception of Ha Ha and Cricket they are new names to us, and though they may have trotted before, it is not likely that much is known of their respective merits. There could not be more favorable prospects for good weather, and as the track is sure to be in good shape, an enjoyable afternoon is assured.

The Last Day of the Napa Fair.

The telegraph brings the information that the free-for-all at Napa to-day has been declared off and in place of Stamboul and Arab coming together again, the place of the former will be taken by the great pacing three-year-old, Gold Leaf. This will excite more interest than would have been felt in the others after the result at Stockton and San Jose, though both of them were so close that a shade would have turned the scale.
Had Stamboul taken a hand in the game and joined issue with the others it would be one of the great sensations of the circuit.

The National, Junior and Primary Stakes.

There is an increase in the interest taken in the coming together of the stallions on the 19th and 20th of this month. Although the old horses absorb the greatest share, the youngsters are not wanting in attractions, and the three-year-olds especially elicit a good deal of argument. While this year has been superlatively unlucky in regard to trotters meeting with mishaps, there were so many named in the Stakes that enough are left to insure good sport.

The Primary being on the same day as the Junior, a short field in that will not mar the sport of the afternoon.

The following made second payment in the Stake so that there is nearly a certainty of at least five starters, viz:

A. McFadyen	Redwood
Jas. P. Kerr	Memo
A. L. Hinds	Balkan
Pleasanton Stock Farm	Direct
Palo Alto Stock Farm	Wild Boy
L. U. Shippee	Moses S.
A. C. Dietz	Ringwood
H. H. Helman	Strathway

Five starters in a trotting race is enough, in fact four, or even three if closely matched, is better than so many that they have to be started in two tiers. Five fill up the track pretty well, and should they be of nearly the same speed, it is altogether probable that several heats will be necessary to decide which shall be crowned victor.

Redwood, Balkan, Direct and Moses S. have been winners this season, and in good time, and there are "dark ones" which are likely to be troublesome.

The National is the engrossing topic wherever trotting affairs are discussed, and even the injuries to some of the horses appear to heighten the interest. People are prone to magnify mishaps, and some men connected with trotters seem to take delight in prophesying disasters. Should a horse go slightly amiss, they are ready to promulgate their dark-colored views, and no matter how slight the foundation, every time the story is told there is an addition. We have not seen either Guy Wilkes or Director since the Golden Gate Fair and, therefore, from personal knowledge, cannot say anything in relation to their ailments. Still there were doubts of the injuries being nearly so bad as was reported and this has been confirmed by subsequent information.
A few days ago Mr. Corbitt was in our office and he said that Guy Wilkes was doing so well that it was nearly a positive certainty that he would be in shape to start in the race.

The great trouble came from applying a blister.
After the race at Sacramento his ankle was swollen and a veterinarian was called. A vesicant was ordered and that so strong that the swelling was increased to a fearful extent, and after that had partially subsided a preparation of iodine was put on which of course kept up the irritation. Although we have lost faith in the efficacy of powerful blisters under any conditions, it certainly is evident that when a horse was expected to trot in six weeks such treatment was wrong, and that milder methods would have been better. But the swelling was accredited to the injury received in the race by those who were not acquainted with the facts, and when he had to be kept in the stable for several days, the conclusion that he could not start in the National was thought to be justified. That swelling which was due to remedial agents is nothing like so bad as that which followed sprains of ligaments or tendons will be acknowledged, and as was stated last week one great point in Guy's favor is that the condition acquired previous to the let up will be a potent aid in recovering form.

There are conflicting reports about Director. Pessimists will asseverate that he is out of the question, others affirm that there was nothing to ground such positive statements upon. The most euphatic predictor of his absence from the field, we have met, acknowledged that he had not seen him since his appearance some weeks ago, and when pressed closely for reasons for his belief was forced to admit that he did not know whether it was a fore or a hind leg that was ailing.

Until more is known we shall assume that all of the horses on which second payment was made will start, and sincerely hope that everyone of the five will be in "shape." In that case there will be a race which will well repay visitors from a distance, and that there will be a big gathering of people outside of residents of California is more than probable.

Premature.

In a communication to the N. Y. Sportsman, Mr. L.
J. Rose writes: "From present appearances Guy Wilkes, Director and Antevolo will not be in the way. Woodnut and Stamboul are the only ones left to trot in the National Stallion Stakes, etc." Counting chickens before they are hatched is considered somewhat hazardous, and to make such an authoritative statement a month before the race is akin to speculating on the fertility of the basket of eggs. Guy Wilkes has been in the way twice, and it is within the bounds of possibilities that the others mentioned may present some claims for consideration. Then again as it does not lie in Mr. Rose's power to "declare out" the horses which have made second payments, the positive assertion that "Woodnut and Stamboul are the only ones left to trot in the National Stakes," is not justified.

Napa and Solano Fair.

We are greatly pleased to record the success of the Napa and Solano fair. There was doubt of it being successful from the time of its inception, as the energy and spirit displayed ensured that result. But that a track could be constructed within a few months of the date fixed for the meeting which would prove so good and fast was not within the bounds of reasonable expectation.

It must be nearly perfect in shape and solid, and kept in the best possible order. Either of these considerations being wanting, and 2:17½ would not have been marked in the 2:20 by a mare which had even shown so well as Lillie Stanley, and a nonpareil of the stamp of Gold Leaf fail to knock so much off the three-year-old pacing record as 2.15 in a third heat. Both can be ranked as among the most notable performances of the year, and while awarding due credit to the animals, the track must also come in for a share of the merit.

The Reavis Sale.

Messrs. Killip & Co. will offer at auction on Monday, October 15th, at the ranch of D. Reavis Esq., near Chico, Butte County, Cal., a large lot of fine stock. Fine all through. The mules to be sold, numbering 300, are said by those who are competent judges to be as good as ever seen in the great mule breeding districts of the East, and when the quality of their dams is taken into consideration, they could scarcely fail to come up to the highest standard. The same can be said of the grade Percherons, as the highly-bred mares are just the thing to breed the best general purpose horses from. The trotting strains are of the very best. The time will surely come when a cross of Reavis' Blackbird in fast road horses and track trotters will be fully appreciated, and subsequent mixtures of Director, Steinway, Monroe Chief, etc., will meet the approval of experts in the breeding of fast trotters. Still after conceding all that can be claimed for these horses, we should put a higher valuation on these which traced to Blackbird. A Director, Steinway, or Monroe Chief filly from a Blackbird mare and that further "reinforced" by the blood of some of the thoroughbreds which stood in that section, would be apt to nick with any of our prominent stallions, and we have no hesitancy in making that prediction. Speed, quality and gameness were the characteristics of Blackbird, and had his colts been awarded fair opportunities, in all probability, would have proved that they inherited all of these traits.

S. B., Walla Walla, W. T.

Can the judges make a man run off a dead heat, Blood Horse Association rules? One man refuses to run six hundred yard dash.

Answer—Unless the parties running the dead heat naturally agree to divide the purse or stakes, the dead heat must be run off. Any owner or trainer refusing to start may be ruled off the course or otherwise punished in the discretion of the judges.

H. J. Robinson, Independence, Imyo Co.

The rule of the Pacific Coast Blood-Horse Association is:
"All horses whose heads have not reached the distance post as soon as the leading horse arrives at the winning post are distanced, but as proof of the fact the distance judge must have dropped his flag in answer to the judges' flag." The State Fair rule close, "but as an indispensable proof of the fact, the distance judge must have dropped his flag in unison with the judges' flag." The judges were singularly derelict in not seeing that a distance judge was in the stand, but under the rules there is no recourse.

Fleetwood.

The great trotting meeting at Fleetwood, which ended September 21st, also closed the Grand Circuit of 1888. In the face of generally spiteful weather, and with a postponement of the opening day, the meeting has been very brilliant in its events, and has paid a handsome profit to the exchequer of the club, a result as novel as it is delightful to the officers. This success was won by the spirit of President de Cordova and his associates of the executive in offering such purses as secured thoroughly first class entries and plenty of tuem, and by the effective work of Secretary Jones in making everything pleasant for the visiting horsemen. The track was kept in line condition all the time, and it is to be noted that a brush was worked over it after every heat.

The average time of the heats for the meeting was 2:22 2-5, which is fast enough for good sport. The best record for the track was reduced from 2:13 1-4 to 2:12 1-4, and a half mile was paced in 1:00 1-2. There were no palpable jobs, and altogether it was a smoothly conducted and delightful meeting.

The closing day was the best of the week, so far as gate receipts are considered, as fully five thousand people were present. The announcement that the famous Guy would be sent to beat 2:13 1-4, made by Maud S over this track, attracted the sensation seekers, and the other events for the day, the 2:18 and the 2:29 trots, were very promising for good sport. The betting had been remarkably strong all the week, but it was at high water mark on Saturday, the pools being very large. Spofford's victory was generally expected and those who bought him paid in a good deal to win but little. The 2:29 race, however, was a genuine surprise, and on its result a very large amount of money changed hands. Eph was the tip and was heavily backed at first, and later on Issaquena, B B Custer and Gracie B had many supporters. No one seemed to fancy the three-year-old Repetition, and he was an unthought of fielder when he won the second heat. He is a big, workman-like colt, a brother in blood to Phil Thompson, being by Red Wilkes and from a John Dillard mare. His victory over such a party of matured trotters is one of the most phenomenal performances of the year and marks him as one of the coming wonders.

That Guy would succeed in his bold attempt was thought very improbable by most of the knowing ones, and the betting was principally against his going in 2:15. He seemed to fancy the trick, however, and was on his best behavior. He was given a warming mile in 2:27 1-2, and when he came out for his great effort he moved and acted superbly. Sanders added for the word without unnecessary scoring, and apparently tried to get all he could out of him at the start. John Splan drove a running mare behind Guy to urge him on, but the fleet footed gelding went so fast that the runner was no company for him. He went to the quarter in 32 seconds, and to the half in 1:04, moving in faultless fashion. The third quarter, which includes the hill, was trotted in 35 1-2 seconds, and it seemed impossible that he would win but he came on again at great speed in the home stretch and made the last quarter in 33 1-2 seconds, the mile in 2:12 1-4.

The feat excited more genuine enthusiasm than anything that has occurred at Fleetwood for years. As a matter of interest to breeders, it is to be noted that Guy has not a drop of the highly prized Hambletonian blood, and that no other horse lacking that blood (except Rarus, whose breeding was never established) has beaten 2:14 1-4. Maud S. Jay Eye See and St. Julien are the only trotters with better records than this new one of Guy's.

The 2:18 race was fairly won by Spofford, but there are stories of very unfair methods said to have been used. T. T. S., it is said, was given a big bucketful of water between heats. Kit Curry had a sore leg, resulting from a out, and could not do herself justice, and the burden of the battle fell upon Kenilworth, who has not been in perfect form. He made a noble effort, but the task was beyond his powers, under existing conditions. Eph started out like a winner in the 2:29 class, and captured the first heat in handsome style, but after this Repetition was hardly ever headed, and Issaquena alone gave him trouble, but lacked the speed to beat the great three-year-old. The summaries follow:

The 2:18 class.
J. E. Turner's blk g Spofford by Kentucky Prince	1	1	4
John Murphy's b g Kenilworth by Lethair	3	2	1
George Haner's ch g T. T. S.	2	3	3
H. D. Kyger's br m Kit Curry	4	4	2
Time, 2:21 1-4, 2:23 1-4, 2:22 1-4, 2:25.
The 2:29 class.
Crit Davis' b b Repetition by Red Wilkes	5	1	1
A. P. McDonald's b g Eph by Jack Wilkes	1	2	4
Parkville Farm's b m Issaquena	2	4	2
W. H. McCarthy's b g B. B. Custer	4	3	7
C. T. Kenyon's blk m Hamietta	3	5	5
Sire Bros' b m Gracie B	6	7	3
J. Kaufman's ch m Hornet	7	6	6
Time, 2:24 1-4, 2:23 1-4, 2:24, 2:25.

There was but little work done at Fleetwood yesterday. Horses and drivers were glad to rest after the long and fatiguing weeks of the Grand Circuit. There was the usual crowd at the club-house, and a few horses were driven in a listless way and languidly watched from the piazzas, but in the main every one seemed to prefer conversation over the stirring events of the past week. There was a little ripple of interest when Mr. F. Waller, with his good gray gelding, Gabe Case, had a brush with Mr. N. Strauss, who drove Emerald. Gabe Case finished at a jog in 2:48, several lengths ahead, and now Mr. Alexander Newburger offers to match Emerald against Gabe Case for $500 a side, owners to drive, to top wagon. Such a match would be very interesting.

The much mooted question—how to recover the place in the public affection which trotting formerly occupied, has strongly exercised the minds of many devoted horsemen lately, and one of the plans suggested is likely to be tested at Fleetwood this fall. It is proposed to give a continued meeting, lasting until the fatal 15th of October. At this meeting, in place of two or three events of heats, there will be each day six or more races of a single heat, and at different distances, from half a mile up to two miles. Some of these races will be under saddle, some to wagon and some for double teams, though as a rule they will be in harness. It is believed that such a multiplication of events, with the natural increase of book betting and of business in the mutuels, will prove quite as attractive to the public, if not more so than the running contests. Measures are already being taken to test this plan, and it may be that the long desired change in the trotting system is near at hand. Certainly the idea merits a fair trial, and a better opportunity than the present could scarcely be found, as there is just now an unusually large number of good horses here and hereabouts that are available. Many changes of the trotting rules would, of course, be necessary to adjust such an assimilation of trotting races to running methods, but a brief trial would suggest these changes.

This week the principal local trotting meetings will be those at White Plains and Mineola.—SAN JUAN, in Sportsman World.

The Blood Horse Association.

The fall meeting of the Pacific Coast Blood Horse Association will open on November 10th. The programme of open events on the regular days will be found in our advertising department. Extra days will be run if conditions are favorable. The outlook for a grand meeting was never better. Mr. Baldwin has intimated his intention of being here in force, the irrepressible Dan McCarthy has increased his stable by purchase at Eastern sales to seventeen racers, and there are several stables in Oregon and Washington Territory that will be represented. The prospect for plenty of racing could not be better. After the Blood Horse meeting there will be racing at Enreka, Humboldt county, and San Diego, with a strong probability of winter meetings at Los Angeles and San Francisco. Owners and trainers will find opportunities enough down to the close of the year. The fixed events of the Blood Horse Association to be run at the coming fall meeting are four in number. The horses engaged and not declared out are as follows:

THE LADIES STAKES—Two-year-old fillies. Three-quarter mile. To be run on the first day.

Lady Emma, Maid of Salina, Icardy, Glen Ellen, Little Rose, Maid of Honor, Cassandra, Cares, Isabella, Gertrude McCarthy, Jeany McCarthy, Sinfire, Fauetline, Shannon Rose, Lady Helen, Picnic, Agnes B., Songstress, Libby's Filibet, Jo Viva, Regina, Sonoma, Zinfandel, Eralita, Norfolk—May B. filly, Hooker—Alice N. filly.

VESTAL STAKES—Three-year-old fillies. One and one-quarter miles. To be run on the second day.

Martine, Lilly, Olive, Tulega filly, Geraldine, Mother Hubbard, Rosedale, Lovelock, Orinda, Verona, Winona, Lillita, Los Angeles, Snowdrop, Trickys, Corona, Serpolette.

FAME STAKES—Three-year-olds. One and three-quarter miles.

Lillie, Tulega filly, Geraldine, Mother Hubbard, Kildare, Glen Echo, Lovelock, Sunbeam, Adonis, Peregrine, San Simeon, Peel, Leon, Canny Scot, Ed McGinnis, Verona, Sunset, Pocatello, King Idle, Lillita, Wonderland, Puente, Prince Charlie, Prince of Troy, Bolero, Emperor of Norfolk, Colonus, Corona, Serpolette.

AUTUMN STAKES—Two-year-olds. One mile. To be run on the third day.

Lady Emma, Glen Ellen, Maid of Honor, Isabella, Gertrude McCarthy, Harry Mc, Sorrenuto, Robin Hood, Almont, Shannon Rose, Kenneth, Duke Spencer, Sherman, Glencola, Jo Viva, Zinfandel, Jo Hoge, Eralita, Bronco, The Czar, Maid of Salina, Little Rose, Lucknow, Tiburon, Jonnie McCarthy, Dan M. Murphy, Sinfire, N. T. M., Fauetline, Flood Tide, Philander, Lewis P., Lady Helen, Picnic, Cordova, Jack Pot, Hotspur, Don Jose, Tellish.

Sale of the Lorillard Horses.

A total of $29,260 obtained for Twenty-Two Head, other Sales.

Col. S. D. Bruce sold at auction September 21, in the paddock at the Brooklyn track Mr. Pierre Lorillard Jr.'s entire string of horses in training as well as some miscellaneous lots. The attendance was good, the bidding brisk and prices very satisfactory, Mr. Lorillard obtaining $29,260 for his twenty-two head—an average of $1,330.

Fair Notes.

The races at Willows, Cal., have been postponed. The dates now are Oct. 23d—27th. Entries remain open until Monday, Oct. 15th.

Marysville, Ynba County, Cal., will hold a citrus fair in December next, open to all the counties of Northern California.

Marion Dellas was terribly mangled by a bull at the Revo Fair.

The Nevada State Fair in this year's receipts, is $2,000 behind the total of last year.

The largest exhibits of live stock ever made at the Santa Clara Fair is to be seen during the present week. It is a highly creditable showing.

At Napa a grand special race for $1,000 a side will take place on Saturday between the three-year-old pacer Gold-Leaf, with a record of 2:15, and the great gelding Arab, with a trotting record of 2:15. Persons in San Francisco desiring to witness the race can leave there at 8 o'clock in the morning and return the same day. The trains run direct to the fair grounds.

SALES—Mr. W. H. Wilson, of Abdallah Park, Cynthiana, Ky., has sold to Geo. R. Caldwell of Chillicothe, O., the bay colt Senator Rose, foaled 1887. He is a full brother to Le Grange, 2:23 1-4, by Sultan, 2:24, dam Georgiana by Overland; second dam Maggie Mitchell by Clay Pilot, third dam Mignon by Spaulding's Abdallah.

Mr. John Arnett, of Pleasanton, on Sept. 30th last, sold a sucking filly, three months old, by Three Cheers, dam Queen Emma, to Messrs. Schevear and Whitled of Pleasanton. Price $400.

A rare opportunity to engage in a lucrative business is offered in the Advertisement of Messers Killip & Co., in another portion of this issue. One of the best appointed, centrally located Livery Stables in the city, has been placed in their hands for sale. It is really a choice property and desirable in every particular. The terms are easy and the deferred payments we have no doubt can be made out of the business in a short time.

In some respects the most remarkable race trotted this season was the 2:24 class at Island Park, won by Del Monte. The first heat fell to Lucille's Baby, and in the fourth she was distanced. The second and third went to Greylight, and in the fourth he was distanced also, together with Company. Del Monte won the fourth and fifth heats. The fifth heat left four in, three of which were ruled out the next heat, leaving Del Monte to go through the formality of jogging the conclusive heat without a competitor. No race was ever won under easier terms or under like circumstances. A canvass of opinion among the old horsemen resulted in a general agreement that the contest was unprecedented in character. A large number of the old hands were hit hard.—Mirror and Farmer.

CATTLE.

A Marvellous Milker.

The following is the record of the greatest milker in the world. It is not only wonderful—it is almost beyond belief. The cow is the famous Pieterje II., born on April 25, 1877, at Boxum, Friesland, Holland, on the farm of T. K. Kuperus. She has yielded during 365 consecutive days the enormous quantity of 30,318½ pounds of milk—which exceeds all the milk records ever made by any cow, living or dead, by four thousand two hundred and ninety-seven pounds and six ounces.

Let us try to comprehend this immense quantity of milk. It is 14,437.38 quarts. It is more than fifteen tons! It would fill fifty-seven hogsheads and leave eighteen quarts over. It would fill a tank one foot square and nearly one-eighth of a mile high, or in other words, the quantity is more than 432 cubic feet. At six cents a quart this cow earned $866.25 during her record year—enough money to buy thirty-five ordinary cows! While these estimates, by weight, gallons and cubic feet do not represent a quantity beyond comprehension, they do represent a fact impossible for the average mind to take in—that one cow produced this more than fifteen tons of milk in a year. Yet such is the truth.

A study of this marvelous record in detail, comparisons with the other highest records, and a history of Pieterje II., must still further interest the reader in this wonderful cow. All the care and science applied to breeding for ten centuries, it would seem, is centered in Pieterje II., and in her is this care rewarded.

Pieterje II. was imported by Alonzo Bradley of Lee, Mass., on November 1, 1882. "At the time I bought her," says Mr. Bradley, "I visited hundreds of herds in Holland, and I think I am safe in saying that I saw 1,000 cows milked before I found Pieterje II. I looked after her dam, Pieterje, and found her a wonderful cow. The milk veins were extraordinary in their development, extending fully forward and losing themselves in the shoulder-blades." Mr. Bradley, after keeping Pieterje II. a short time on his farm at Lee, sold her. She is now the property of Dallas B. Whipple, of Cuba, Allegany County, N. Y., who gives the following story of her life up to the time she began her famous record.

"On visiting several herds of Holsteins in the New England States in September, 1884, I came across Pieterje II., in Elizabeth Smith's herd at Lee, Mass., he having bought her soon after she was imported. After examining her, and seeing her milked, I was fully satisfied that she was capable of milking more than any cow I had ever seen milked; so I bought her, together with twelve others, and shipped them home to Cuba, where she has remained ever since. With her persistent milking, and the low condition she was in, I did not think it advisable to undertake to make a year's record, although she milked 103½ pounds after dropping her next calf. I delayed breeding her, so that twenty months elapsed between the births of her two calves. This was preparatory to her making this record, although she milked sixteen out of the twenty months before we could dry her up. I am informed that this is the only time she has ever been dry since first coming in milk."

The most reliable authorities state that the highest previous milk record of the world was 26,021 pounds and 2 ounces, or 4,297 pounds 6 ounces less than that of Pieterje II. The largest quantity of milk ever given by any cow in one day was 116 pounds; the largest for thirty days 3,129 pounds 1 ounce. Here is the detailed record of Pieterje II., commenced on February 24, 1887, and closed February 23, 1888—365 days. (She dropped her last calf on February 17, 1887):

	LBS.	OZS.
Total for the year	30,318	8
Average per day for the whole year	83	11-365
Highest day's yield, third month in milk	112	7
Smallest day's yield, January 13, 1888, when sick	41	5
Last day of the year's record witnessed	60	13
Average yield per day for each month:
First month	87	10½
Second month	90	14½
Third month	97	17
Fourth month	106	1½
Fifth month	96	9-15
Sixth month	91	3
Seventh month	83	0-29-31
Eighth month	84	14
Ninth month	76	4
Tenth month	66	13
Eleventh month	58	3-15-61
Twelfth month	57	4-25-31

The last three months were on dry feed and in midwinter, also when the cow was in calf. She was only milked three times a day during this record.

The analysis of Pieterje II's milk was made by officers of the New York Agricultural Experiment Station at Geneva, N. Y., and at Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y., both at the same time, and from samples from the same milking. The analyses agree very closely, and are as follows:

	AVER.	STAND.
Specific gravity	1.0284	1.032
Total solids, per cent	11.20	12
Fat, per cent	3.16	3 to 3½
Solids minus fat, per cent	8.04	9 to 3½
Caseine, per cent	2.72
Sugar, per cent	.70
Sugar (by difference), per cent	4.52

In summer, during the warm weather, Pieterje II. was kept in the barn daytimes and turned to pasture at night. She was fed three times a day during the entire year. The feed consisted of equal parts in measurement of ground oats and bran, ranging from twenty to thirty pounds a day. If any were left it was ordinarily taken away from her. Also during the season for turnips she had about one-half bushel a day and some potatoes, the amount of both ranging from one-half to one and one-half bushels. The potatoes were fed during the entire year, and averaged from one-half to three-quarters of a bushel a day for the whole year. Whenever anything was refused it was usually taken away. In the daytime during the summer she was fed grass, and during the winter her fodder consisted of timothy hay and corn stalks, neither of them cut. During cold weather she had water to drink three times a day at a temperature of 60 degrees. No drink of any kind was given her during this record but good water. She was also fed one pound of Batchford's Royal Stock Food; also a small quantity of Thorley's Horse and Cattle Food. These foods were fed with the ground oats and bran, moistened with water. Her stable was 13x15 feet in size, and she ran loose in it.

The record was kept accurately, the greatest care being taken to have it made as public as possible from the beginning. It is believed that no record has ever been given to the public except this one, before being completed. The gentlemen who witnessed the milking are of undoubted honesty and honor. Mr. Whipple has the sworn affidavits of most of these gentlemen, including Mr. Brooks, a merchant of Cuba; the Rev. W. W. Rafter, rector of Christ Church, Cuba;

Prof. J. E. Dewey, of Limestone Academy, Limestone, N. Y.; Frank H. Robinson, District Attorney of Steuben county; Wm. Ormison, of Messrs. Ormison & Bro., of the Valley Point farm, breeder of the Ayrshire cattle; and Albert Jencks, who had full care of Pieterje II., both in feed and in milking—all of whom testify to the correctness of the record made upon the days they witnessed the milking, and Mr. Whipple and Mr. Jencks made affidavit as to the correctness of the entire record.

Noxious Plants.

From several sources complaints have come during the few months last passed, about illness in herds of dairy cattle which could not be satisfactorily accounted for. In several instances the only apparent cause was the fact that owing to oversight the cattle had eaten the wild flowering plants common to all meadow lands, some of which are undoubtedly poisonous. The lesser spearwort (ranunculus flammula) a poisonous variety of crowfoot is notoriously acid and deleterious to animals feeding upon it. The cause of this poisonous quality lies in the acid juice with which most plants of the order to which it belongs are furnished. So biting is it, that if applied to the skin it excites itching, redness and inflammation, and even blisters, swelling, and ulceration. When chewed it corrodes the tongue, and if swallowed causes all the painful effects of an irritant poison. This quality, which was quite well known to the ancients (as a passage in Dioscorides shows), resides in all parts of the plant, when freshly gathered, the spearwort, and still more the celery-leaved buttercup and the Alpine form not found in this country, have excited considerable inflammation in the palm of the hand in which it has been carried. In rustic surgery they are sometimes applied as a blister, and tramps are said to use them to ulcerate their limbs, in order to excite the compassion of the simple-minded public. Yet, curiously enough, the water crowfoot, the near relative of the objectionable land species, is not only innocuous, but absolutely nutritive to cattle.

There is a widespread legend to the effect that the lower animals are certain to distinguish safe from poisonous plants. So far as those which grow freely in their usual pastures are concerned, this dogma is, to a certain degree, correct. But if the animals are transferred to a strange district their instincts fail them. This is proved by the fact that sheep in New Zealand perish in great numbers from eating a native poisonous plant, and that flocks in America devour freely the deleterious dwarf laurel; while the prevalence of three plants belonging to the same order in the Lapland pastures renders the sheep in that region so invariably unhealthy that they are seldom kept. If further instances were necessary, the constant cases of cattle poisoning by yew leaves would be in point, though it is not often that this dangerous fodder is browsed when it grows in fields ordinarily frequented by the cows.

There is a common notion that cows eat the buttercups which abound in many meadows, and that for this reason the butter is yellow. Hence the common name for the plant. This, however, is a mistake, for it is seldom that the plant is touched by cattle, who equally shun the marsh marigold. And it is equally an error to imagine that because a plant is injurious to one animal it must be so to all others. On the contrary, what is one beast's meat is another beast's poison. Linnaeus noticed long ago that goats turned on to an island which abounded with reed grass perished of hunger, but that horses which followed them grew fat on the same plant. The goat, on the other hand, thrives on the water hemlock and the meadow-sweet, plants which are injurious to cattle.

To no one has it apparently occurred that a very simple remedy exists in the case of the buttercup; it consists merely in the keeping of geese, which are annihilatory to the noxious plant. Only fairly large quantities need be kept, when the buttercup will disappear entirely from the ground.

Live Stock in Australia.

The July report of the United States Department of Agriculture contains an article on agriculture in Australasia, including the seven British Colonies, New South Wales, South Australia, Western Australia, Victoria, and Queensland, subdivision of the island or continent of Australia, and Tasmania and New Zealand. The increase in the flocks and herds since 1860 has been remarkable and uniform. Wool is, of course, the staple product, and constitutes the leading article of export, which during the last few years the shipment of fresh meats has assumed considerable importance, and gives promise of great development in the future. The numbers of the various classes of stock at different periods since 1880 to 1884, as officially estimated, are thus shown:—

Year.	Horses.	Cattle.	Sheep.	Swine.
1870....	797,800	4,712,918	51,294,241	694,848
1874....	877,277	6,262,919	61,627,122	669,114
1880....	1,230,158	8,226,739	75,158,683	1,019,744
1884....	1,304,235	8,464,370	75,626,404	1,108,940

*New Zealand for 1885, except in sheep.

The plague of rabbits has worked great injury to the live stock interests, as well as the raising of crops, though the damage done to pasturage; and the production of wool has been in some of the colonies diminished thereby. The exports of wool rose from about 181½ million pounds in 1872 to 415½ millions in 1884, but fell off in 1885 to 404 millions; and the total production of 1886 is stated as less than 400 millions, averaging from about 3lbs. per sheep in Queensland to 6 lbs. in South Australia. The average export price in 1886 was 9 s. d. per lb.

Controlling the Sexes.

The Progres Agricole de la Somme publishes a letter from one of its correspondents relating to a question which has for a long time been more or less studied by the breeders of live stock. The writer, having seen an account of an experiment by an American fowl-keeper, decided to make a similar one, and the result he has just published. The process recommended for producing either cockerels or pullets at will is to take a cockerel four or five months old and perform partial castration by removing the right testis. The bird is allowed to rest quietly for about fifteen days until it has recovered from the operation. Then it is turned amongst hens or pullets which have not been near any other male bird for at least twenty-four days, and if the operation has been properly carried out the eggs afterwards laid will all hatch out pullets. To obtain cockerels it is sufficient to reverse the process. The correspondent of the Progres Agricole was desirous to have all pullets, and he carried out the above instructions as laid down by the American "inventor." Several broods of chickens "came off" about May 15th last, and, when he wrote, the birds were more than two months old, so he was able to distinguish the sexes. He then found that the sixty-four chickens comprised fifty-nine pullets and five cockerels.

From this he concludes that the American paragraph was not a hoax, as some persons were inclined to regard it, but that it was thoroughly genuine. The large number of pullets to cockerels in the experiment he made could not, he maintains, have been the result of accident or chance, or of a fortunate but doubtful selection of eggs by the poultry keeper.

Professional Judging.

Some people object very much to what they term professional judging at the fairs, i. e., committee work done by men who make a business at that season of doing work of this kind. And why should such objection be urged? Is it not desirable to have men of the highest available skill and experience? Is there any other way in which incompetency is so likely to be overcome? But, it is urged, many of these men are not competent. Then do not employ them. There are incompetent men in every business—and not few among them alleged breeders of fine stock; and it is not any more strange that a presumptuous ignoramus should set up for a fair judge than attempt anything else. "And then he is easily influenced and given to favoritism." Is he? How about the "picked-up" committee on this point? Without making a long article of this we want to say that we think the judging at fairs would be greatly improved if there were more professional judges. Let those who want to enter the field prepare themselves for it. Let them advertise their business as others do, and when application for their services is made let them furnish references as to competency and character. Do not allow a man to judge simply because he claims to do so professionally. If looking for judges who will please everybody, remember that they will not be found under any system. If good judging is wanted, make it an object for men to prepare for it, and expect them, just as you expect any other man whose work you pay for, to do it well. This does not necessarily mean that the work be done by one man, unless it be so desired. For our part, we do not see that number is so great a consideration as honesty and ability in judging, and do not care whether it be placed in the hands of one man or three men, so it is a duty properly discharged.—National Stockman.

Inoculating for Splenic Fever.

Among the recent valuable discoveries of the famous French physician, M. Pasteur, is that of the vaccination of domestic animals for the prevention of the dire disease known as anthrax, or splenic fever. The marked success attending his system, in combating the rinderpest in Europe, encouraged Mr. J. H. Lamprey to bring the subject under the notice of the government of India, where no efficient remedy was known for this rapidly fatal illness, which annually carries off a large percentage of cattle of every kind. An order in council has been issued, after the most careful investigation of the merits of the system and of the probability of securing its favorable reception by native proprietors. In order to carry out this object, some native Indian students, who have received their education at the Cirencester Agricultural College, are now undergoing a course of instruction at the Paris laboratory of M. Pasteur, and will shortly proceed to stations in India to dispense the vaccine, which is applied to elephants as well as to oxen and other beasts. It is confidently expected that their labors will be attended with the same success that followed the introduction of the system into those countries where it is now in full operation, with an ultimate prospect of the total extermination of the most serious maladies, working great havoc among flocks and herds throughout the world. The elephant, in a domesticated state, is liable, as well as other animals in the service of man, to certain epidemic diseases.

Management of Bulls.

The idea that every bull is incorrigibly vicious, is not warranted by the facts. Kindness and firmness are as necessary in the management of bulls as in the case of any other animals. A writer in the Scottish Agricultural Gazette says: "In something like thirty years' experience of a Short-horn herd, in which bulls were reared for sale, and into which sires were drafted from various herds, I have never known a vicious bull, if I except the following case, which goes to prove the truth of my contention. One young bull was what I called a lively one, playful, and simply needed that you kept your eye upon him when loose, or in his gambols he might have upset you. Once, when he was chafing at his strap, owing to flies, a visitor, a friend of the owner, struck him several blows with his stick, remarking that he needed correction. Had the bull been loose, the correction would have been reversed, for so long as the bull remained with the herd, whenever he heard the voice or the footsteps of the man who had struck him, he made desperate efforts to release himself. In proof that his rage was reserved for this one man, I may mention that one night a noise was heard in the farmyard. One of the men went down, and found the bull loose in the yard. He walked up to it, took it by the nose-ring, and led it as quietly as a lamb back to its stall. In this herd the animals were always kindly but firmly treated, and kept in contact constantly with human beings; up to a year old they were let out daily in the yard for exercise. Before being sold a ring was put in the nose, and they were bound up in a stall by a leather strap around the neck, and affixed to a head stake, with a movable ring to the latter, regularly led out for exercise, and kept in touch with the human attendants. Whenever I hear of a vicious bull, I come to the conclusion that he has been badly trained in youth. Whenever I hear of a bull attacking a human being, I am convinced that he is but repaying previous brutal treatment. When a cow kicks on being milked, she is either suffering from sore teats, or has been abused. Whenever a cow holds her milk, it is a sign that her attendant has ill-used her. Whenever I see a kicking, unmanageable, or stupid horse, depend upon it that he has been in the hands of an incompetent breeder or trainer, or both. Either he has been unskillfully treated as a foal or badly broken."

All About the Cow.

The following, says the Hartford Times, is a little girl's essay on a cow: A cow is an animal with four legs on the under side. The tail is longer than the legs, but is not used to stand on. The cow kills flies with her tail. The cow has big ears that waggle on hinges; so does her tail. The cow is bigger than the calf, but not so big as an elephant. She is made so small that she can go into the barn when nobody is looking. Some cows are black and some brown. A dog was hooked once. She tossed the dog that killed the cat that worried the rat. Black cows give white milk; so do other cows. Milkmen sell milk to buy their little girls dresses, which they put water in and chalk. Cows chew ends, and each finds its own end. That is all there is about cows.

Among the Stockmen.

BUTTE COUNTY STOCK RANCHES — GREAT HERDS OF FINE HORSES, CATTLE AND SHEEP, FIELDS OF ALFALFA, WITH CLEAR RUNNING WATER AND AMPLE SHADE.

Butte County is situated centrally north and south in the Sacramento Valley, and it extends from the eastern bank of the Sacramento River eastward to the crest of the Sierra Nevada range. Its surface is remarkably varied, and presents almost every topographical feature. It has wide stretches of rich valley-plains covered with great oaks, rolling uplands extending up to, and merging into the foothills that rise in wavy lines higher and higher till they become a part of the mountains with their forest belts, deep canons and lofty elevations. All this varied surface is watered by clear, swift mountain streams, and before the plows of the grain-growers, orchardist and vineyardists invaded it, was covered by an almost endless variety of indigenous grasses. It was then the grazer's paradise.

Long before the American occupation, the early European settlers had obtained large land grants there for grazing purposes. What are now known as the Bidwell, Farewell, Gridley, Pratt and Parrott ranches had been occupied by adventurous and far-seeing men. These great ranches as now formed princely land holdings. The proprietors had extensive establishments, big adobe houses, barns and corals and Indian villages, from which the labor of the ranch was amply obtained. These patient natives made the gardens, raised and threshed the grain and tended the stock all for wages that returned a more living. At most of these places were several Americans of the extreme frontier type, men who had been hunters and trappers in the Rocky Mountains with the early fur-traders. These men were fine horsemen and good hunters. There were also a number of Mexicans who, as horsemen and herders, have never been excelled.

These people would, upon occasions, gather at some one of these great ranches, and then there would be rare festivities, with feasting, drinking, gambling and horse racing. These contests of speed led to the improvement of the breed of horses, till at the time of the gold discovery there were bands of horses on these ranges which, for general saddle purposes, have been rarely equalled and never excelled.

The gold hunters came in swarms, by ship and steamer, or in almost endless lines of white-covered wagons. These last brought with them the best blooded horses of the sections, from which they came, and bred them here. Each successive year more horses from the "States" were brought across the continent. In this way the American horses of the State were developed.

In Butte County the stockmen spared no pains nor expense to get the best equine blood of the American continent. From the south came the blood of Boston, Lexington, Leviathan, Glencoe and other speedy and game running horses. From the north came the blood of the trotting families descended from the great Messenger.

Almost every field and farm in Butte county can show descendants of these trotters and runners. On the ranches of Gen. Bidwell, Gen. Montgomery, Messrs. McIntosh, Reynolds, Biggs and Reavis are bands of as fine horses and mules as can be found in the far famed blue-grass pastures of Kentucky and Tennessee. Perhaps a visit to the last named of these breeding establishments will more fully show what Butte county is doing in breeding and grazing than any other.

The Reavis rancho comprises 5,000 acres of the Farewell Grant. The land is the equal to any in the country around Chico and that is equivalent to saying that it is as good as any on earth. It is about three miles from the railroad and extends west to the Sacramento river. The northern boundary of the ranch is formed by Chico creek, a clear lasting stream. These 5000 acres are subdivided into fields of convenient size, having ample shade, water and a variety of forage grasses. On this rancho are 1,000 horses, 400 mules, 1,000 hogs, and several hundred cattle. There are at least 500 head of brood mares. These mares when Mr. Farewell commenced breeding comprised the blood of the best trotting and running families. There were the produce of Cheatham, Langford, Belmont, Rifleman, Owen Dale, Valsuan, Norfolk and Bayswater, on the running side. On the trotting side there were Mambrino, Hambletonian, Day and Bashaw blood. Upon all these Reavis' Blackbird, the son of Simpson's Blackbird and half brother of A. W. Richmond was crossed. The result has been all that could be desired in size, form, action, and disposition. Upon this Blackbird blood have been crossed Director, Minnie, Chief, Steinway and Singleton. It is safe to say that finer colts and fillies cannot be found on the Pacific coast than Mr. Reavis has in his pastures. There are no finer road horses in California than the Blackbards. They are high-headed, of fine, strong action, gentle and no road is too long for them. They are good track horses and will be invaluable as brood mares.

Mr. Reavis has also proved that California is as well adapted to raising and producing draft horses and horses of all work as any Eastern country. He has bred some grade Percherons from these fine mares, which are as well adapted for all the varied uses of the farm as can well be. He has also proved that this State can produce mules equal to those of Kentucky. From his high-bred mares he has raised several hundred mules, which for size and form cannot be excelled anywhere. They are young and gentle, and many of them will weigh from 1200 to 1500 pounds. It requires a whole day to drive through the fields and see the horses and mules, and it will take another day to see the cattle and hogs. They are mostly Herefords and Durhams and are all in fine condition. The hogs are Berkshires and are fat enough for the butcher. A visit to this 5000 acre breeding farm, with its pasture fields, wide-branching oak shelters, its bands of draft and trotting mares, colts and fillies, big fat mules and high-bred cattle, is well worth a trip from any part of the State. The visitor is sure to find open doors and warm hospitality. There are other places near Chico that will repay inspection. Notably that of Gen. Bidwell. In fact the whole of the country around Chico is as rich as a garden and is under high cultivation; every ranch, great or small, has fine stock.

Look Here, Friend. Are you Sick?

Do you have pains about the chest and sides, and sometimes in the back? Do you feel dull and sleepy? Does your mouth have a bad taste, especially in the morning? Is there a sort of sticky slime collects about the teeth? Is your appetite poor? Is there a feeling like a heavy load on the stomach, sometimes a faint, all-gone sensation at the pit of the stomach, which food does not satisfy? Are your eyes sunken? Do your hands and feet become cold and feel clammy? Have you a dry cough? Do you expectorate greenish colored matter? Are you hawking and spitting all or part of the time? Do you feel tired all the while? Are you nervous, irritable and gloomy? Do you have evil forebodings? Is there a giddiness, a sort of whirling sensation in the head when rising up suddenly? Do your bowels become costive? Is your skin dry and hot at times? Is your blood thick and stagnant? Are the whites of your eyes tinged with yellow? Is your urine scanty and high colored? Does it deposit a sediment after standing? Do you frequently spit up your food, sometimes with a sour taste and sometimes with a sweet? Is this frequently attended with palpitation of the heart? Has your vision become impaired? Are there spots before the eyes? Is there a feeling of great prostration and weakness? Great Auction Sale

Mules, Work Horses, Roadsters & Trotting Horses,

MONDAY, OCTOBER 15, 1888, at 10 A. M.

At REAVIS' RANCH, near Chico,

Butte County, Cal.

On the above date we will offer for sale, at the ranch of D. M. Reavis, Esq., 2½ miles from Chico, three hundred head first-class Mules, sired by Kentucky and Imported Jacks, out of first-class American Mares. These Mules were all raised by Mr. Reavis, and are first-class in every particular; none will exceed seven years of age. They will be sold as desired, in string teams, matched or single. There will also be offered about fifty head of first-class Work Animals, out of American Mares, by imported Percheron Stallions. At the same time will be offered about fifty head of fashionably bred Trotting Mares, Colts, Fillies and Geldings, got by standard bred Stallions, such as Director, Monroe Chief, Stelmway, Blackbird, etc. This will be the most extensive sale that has taken place in Northern California, and Mr. Reavis' reputation as a breeder is a guarantee that the stock offered will be of superior character.

The terms will be cash, or approved notes at current interest. Catalogues are being prepared, giving pedigrees and full particulars. Any information desired may be obtained upon application to Mr. Reavis, Chico, or to the undersigned,

First dam, full sister to Henrietta, by Bell Alta, son of Williamson's Belmont.
Second dam, by Peacock, thoroughbred.

No. 13—LOTTA.

Bay mare; 15.3 hands; foaled 1872.
Sired by LEXINGTON, sire of Norfolk.
This mare was brought to this State by Mr. Gage at the same time that he brought Katie Pease, and was represented to be thoroughbred. She gives every appearance of it, save as to her disposition to trot, which is remarkable. She could show a 2:30 gait to wagon on the road, which was the only discipline she ever had at the trot. The day I bought her she showed me a mile in 2:32 to wagon. Her produce shows the same tendency to trot.

No. 14—MARY G.

Brown mare; 15.2 hands, foaled 1867.
Sired by BLONDIN, son of Imp. Sovereign, thoroughbred of great renown.
She was bred by Col. Charles Jennison, late of Kansas, and was brought to this State by Ben Ekers. She showed me a trial run most remarkable under the circumstances. This is the dam of Christmas.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.

A Demonstration of the Shooting Qualities of the "L. C. Smith" Gun.

At the Cleveland Cartridge Co.'s tournament, held at Cleveland, O., from September 13 to 16 inclusive the "Smith" gun won first money in every class. It also won nearly two-thirds of the entire amount ($83,000) of cash prizes, and championship trophy for the best average in the 90 class. In the 90-class it won the 1st, 2nd and 4th moneys; in the 80-class it took the 1st, 3rd, 4th and 5th; in the 70 class it took 1st and 2nd, with the 1st and 6th in the 60-class, making a total winning nearly four times greater than any other gun, of either foreign or home manufacture.

We think this a most excellent showing, as there was seven different makes of guns used by the nineteen contestants in the ninety class.

An Attractive Home.

According to ideas which prevail among many people, a "horse-jockey" is an individual who is about as ignorant as and with no higher aspirations than the animals he rides. As to possessing cultivated tastes it is out of the question in their opinion, and all in the profession are given the same rank. That a large number can thus be classed is unfortunately true, that a portion of them are far higher than the popular estimate is also correct. The appended account which appeared in the London World of Sept. 12th is a description of the home of Tom Cannon, one of the great many celebrated jockeys of England, and ranking very high as a trainer. In many respects English systems are better adapted to improve the intelligence of jockeys than American methods. In both countries riders of race-horses are mainly recruited from boys who had small opportunities for education. Picked up when quite young, the selections usually made from the size being below that of boys of the same age, and showing in the countenance that they are naturally bright. In England they are regularly apprenticed, and among leading trainers, and in large establishments due care is taken in educating them for the business. Not merely for the duties they are engaged to perform, but also to fit them for a higher position than that of an "exercising lad" or even a successful jockey. Apprenticeship is recognized there in all pursuits, and the master has no trouble to enforce his authority. There is a wide difference here which it is not necessary to present in detail.

A wide expanse of downland stretches before you. Very few buildings are to be discerned about the landscape, which is, however, relieved by fields of ripening grain on the hill-side a couple of miles away and by a long plantation of trees. Some forty horses, decked with sheets or cloths, each bedridden by a lad, are slowly walking in a circle; a good-looking animal with a hogged mane grazes unattended, and in the middle, looking at the horses as they pass are a couple of men. The shorter of the two removes his keen blue eyes from a thoughtful contemplation of his charges, as you ride up to his side, and, with a hospitable smile, he welcomes you cordially to Danebury. This is Tom Cannon, of whom all must know much if they know anything of the history of racing during the last quarter of a century, and these are the "morning horses"—the animals, that is to say, in active training. His attendant is Olding, a faithful servant, who has been in his employment for more than twenty years, and who now received instructions to "let them all canter again," an order conveyed to the boy at the head of the string. They file off, and as you prefer riding to walking, Tom Cannon beckons for the hoganmad hack—old Duke of Parma, you are told, who won the Cesarewitch in 1875, and has for many years done duty here as a hunter, trainer's horse and in other capacities; and so you trot off with the eminent jockey, taking up your station by him at the side of a post which marks the course, and is, like most other things here, painted with a scarlet and white stripe—the Danebury colors. Here they come, exhaling the air from their nostrils, as they canter past, with a resonant sound, and then they pull up. Five horses that have engagements close at hand are to gallop six furlongs and then the morning work will be over, for the string had walked and cantered once before we arrived. Tom Cannon often rides in these gallops himself, but this morning he will not leave his guests, and so his sons, Tom and Morny, both lads who have shown more than mere promise of future excellence, George Mawson (who won the Grand National last Spring, on Playfair), and a couple of the boys are called, and they are instructed to jump off and to come along at a good, brisk gallop. Morny's horse is anything but a pleasant hack, and goes along in a series of vigorous buck-jumps, which in no way disconcerted the boy, who has not taken the trouble to kick his feet into the irons after being put up on his horse's back. Again, we take up our station, and in a few moments the thunder of approaching hoofs as the five come near tells us what was in progress, if we could not see. The riders pull up and dismount; we canter to where they stand, and Tom Cannon listens to and looks over each horse, one after the other. Then we turn our horses' heads toward where the square tower of Danebury rises not far away, trot past the white rails and stands of Stockbridge Race-Course (home of the famous Bibury Club), and so on in the stable-yard where we surrender our horses to the care of Ben, coachman and factotum.

Passing through a little door in the corner of the yard, you enter a square gravelled enclosure, of which the house forms nearly the whole of one side, the stables, however, being actually joined on to the dining-room. A huge chestnut tree spreads its branches over the circular flower-bed which surrounds it; two other sides of the square are stables, and the fourth side is occupied by the entrance gate (beyond which you see a lawn-tennis ground), and a bricked pond on which some ducks are disporting themselves. Half a dozen canons are placed round the chestnut tree; two more guard the door, just inside of which stands the telegraph machine, a necessity in such an establishment as Danebury. The hall is evidently used as a sitting-room on occasions, for a piano occupies one corner; by it stands a harp, and on it are a violin case and a banjo; a fireman's helmet is on the pillar of the staircase; and on the walls are many pictures of horses, among which will be noticed Tom Cannon on Robert the Devil, and the finish for the Epsom Gold Cup between Robert, Cannon up, and Bend Or, with Archer on his back. Down a passage to the right is the dining-room, wherein on the sideboard stands an admirable silver model of the fight between Sir Guy of Warwick and Colbran the giant. Sir Guy's horse has been killed by a desperate slash over the neck, but the knight is on his feet and dauntlessly faces his mounted adversary. This was the Stockbridge "Cup" of 1882, won by Tom Cannon's horse Sigmophone, who won the Richmond Stakes at Goodwood, and would very likely have carried off the Derby also, but that he unfortunately went a roarer, thus defeating our host's great ambition to win the Derby on a horse bred, trained and ridden by himself. Other silver cups stand on brackets in the corners of the room. At one time, when there was a race meeting at Weymouth, Tom Cannon used to send a horse there every year, and take the cup almost as a matter of course, and he has secured many others in all directions till he has accumulated enough material to stock a large silversmith's shop. On the wall at each side of the fireplace are portraits of the master of Danebury on Shotover, in the Duke of Westminster's yellow jacket, and on Gebeinniss, in the late Lord Stamford's blue and black belt; facing these is Playfair, George Mawson on his back, in Mr. E. W. Baird's light and dark blue hoops, Cannon standing by; all these three pictures of the Derby, Oaks and Grand National winners being by Sexty, for whose work Tom Cannon—who himself has an excellent idea of sketching—entertains a great admiration. The panels of the doors are to be noticed also, for Miss Alice Cannon, the eldest of our host's ten children, paints very tastefully, as, indeed, does Miss Letty; and since the latter young lady is an accomplished violinist, while her elder sister plays the harp, a concert is easily improvised, with Mrs. Cannon at the piano.

And now what will we do till time to go and see the horses after they have been done up? Will we play a game at lawn tennis? Will we have a little practice at cricket? Shall we take our guns and see if we can get a leveret or a few rabbits up in the "Rings"—a plantation which crowns a neighboring eminence, the trees being planted on earthen ramps which rise tier above tier, and are said to be the graves of innumerable Danes, who were killed here in days of yore after a terrible, sanguinary battle with the natives. Or will we go and look at the mares, foals, and stallions? We choose the latter, and set off, glancing into the drawing-room with its picturesque conservatory beyond, and just looking in at the cottage, a small thatched building behind the house, where Tom Groom, Cannon's secretary, is at work on the thousand and one details which are necessary in carrying on an establishment of such magnitude, including as it does a large and well stocked farm—for Tom Cannon is a breeder of sheep and other stock, as well as of horses. Most of the business is conducted in the cottage, the walls of which are decorated with pictures and the rules of the Danebury Fire Brigade; while the table is covered with letters, Racing Calendars, a sample of oats, a pair of spurs, a cap and jacket—the familiar scarlet and white hoops—and other characteristic litter. A few words to Mr. Groom concerning the entering of horses for Sandown, the striking out of one whose legs were found to be filled, and we set off, accompanied by the big dog Hyp—short for Hyperion—and past through the farmyard, where we look as critically as complete ignorance of the subject will allow at the rows of sties, in which pigs of all ages are being fattened, at the pedigree cows, and at the boys' bulldogs Peter and Bluey, which are so handsome, as bulldogs go, that a long career of prize-winning is anticipated for them. A few steps more, and we are in the first of the range of admirably sheltered paddocks planned years ago by Lord George Bentinck. No sooner does Tom Cannon pass through the gate than the mares walk gravely towards us, their foals gambolling by their sides. There is no timidity about these young things, who come and poke their delicate little noses into our hands with the utmost confidence that no harm would befall them. Here we see Postscript—who won the Metropolitan, and ran third for the Cesarewitch—Reine Blanche, Gruach, and a dozen others whose names are recorded as winners in the Racing Calendar, and our host tells us the paternity of the youngsters. One for the moment he does not recognize, but a tap on the nose and an order "go and find your mother" sets the long-legged little creature trotting off to his dam's side, and so he is identified. Followed by the whole bevy, we pass through the gate into the next paddock, where the yearling fillies are out. Like their young relatives, they immediately surround us, and their owner fondles one charming little bay, to whose beautifully benign countenance he draws attention, while he shakes his head at another, whose sour and surly expression displeases him, for Tom Cannon maintains that horses have as much variety of expression in their face as human beings. The led about and we were introduced to the gem of the establishment—if he is only as good as he looks—in Tedworth, admiration for whom (and certainly he is a charming colt) does not prevent us from doing justice to the good looks of the neat little Gerard, a son of Sweetbread, on whom Tom Cannon won the Stewards' Cup of 1884 in Mr. Gerard's colors, just beating Archer on Duke of Richmond after a desperate race, and their companions. Then we visit the lords of the harem, St. Michael, Silver, Don Juan, The Devil to Pay, and the huge Porton; and so we stroll back past the little plot of ground where bright flowers spring above the graves of Bay Middleton and Crucifix, and of Counterpane, the Prince of Wales' filly, who dropped dead close to the winning post on the race-course here while running for Stockbridge Cup.

Tom Cannon does not know how many horses he possesses, but thinks about 130 in all. A few he owns in partnership with Mr. Tom Robinson, of High Wycombe. Mr. E. W. Baird has some horses here, notably a good-looking Bend Or colt, which cost nearly £1,000 at the July Meeting, and Playfair, who won the last Grand National. Mr. Douglas Henry, Mr. H. E. Beddington, and one or two other owners are represented; and for Mr. Leopold de Rothschild the master of Danebury transformed Aladdin from a senseless handicap horse into a trilliant steeplechaser, and winner of the great hurdle-race at Autenil. Nearly all the occupants of the boxes and paddocks are Tom Cannon's own property, for he breeds many, and is quite unable to see an auctioneer selling horses without bidding.

Cannon's father was a horse dealer at Windsor, and the boys, Tom and Joseph (the trainer of Clifton House, Newmarket), have been among horses ever since they could walk. A natural aptitude for riding, keen intelligence, untiring diligence and perseverance enabled Cannon to make his mark early in life, and his ambition to own a horse or two was soon gratified. Settling down at Houghton, a few miles from Danbury, he became associated with the late John Day—at a time when the last Marquis of Hastings was, perhaps, the most prominent figure on the turf—and some twenty years ago married John Day's daughter Kate. George Fordham, than whom a greater rider of races was never put up into a saddle, early took a fancy to the youthful Tom, "my boy," as he affectionately called him, and from Fordham's hints and example he learnt much. Tom Cannon differs from too many contemporary jockeys, not only because of his extraordinary coolness and skill, but by reason of the fact, so prominently brought forward at a recent trial, that throughout his career the breath of scandal has never once impeached his integrity. His patience, good temper and marvelously light hand make him by universal consent peerless on a two-year-old, though his admirers declare that on horses of all sorts and in races of every kind he is unapproachable. Horses as a rule do their best for him without punishment, and he declares that if you look at a hundred horses he has ridden in a close finish you will not find spur-marks on three of them. He bets little, putting sometimes a "pony," more often ten pounds, not seldom five, very rarely indeed fifty, and only on the most exceptional occasion a hundred pounds, on his own horses. Other people's horses he hardly ever backs, not believing in the possibility of getting the best of the ring in the long run. Few living men have had more to do with the buying and selling of horses; and yet, with all his knowledge, he has let some famous animals go for less than their value. Gebeinniss was worth much more than the two thousand guineas which the late Lord Stamford paid for her, and both Fullerton and Humewood proved to be also very cheap animals. There are few greater treats for a lover of the horse than a stroll round five o'clock stables at Danebury in its master's company. He is full of happy phrases which precisely express his meaning, and there is a quiet humor about his shrewd observations. From one yard we go into another, the spacious, airy boxes seeming endless, and as we pass along we are told something about the peculiarities and performances of their tenants, while the keen eye of the master notes everything. It is in fact, impossible to pass a few hours at Danebury without perfectly understanding how it is that Tom Cannon has gained the unique and honorable position he occupies in the racing world.

Rohnerville, Humboldt County, Cal.—Ninth District Fair.

SECOND DAY, SEPT. 26TH.

The second day opened most favorably, the grounds and pavilion were filled with people, and there was just breeze enough to make it comfortable. There was an excellent stock parade, and to the lovers of fine stock it was a grand one indeed, making, as it does the rapid strides, in comparison with preceding years, of improvement in breeding.

The first race on the programme was the trot, mile heats, for a purse of $150 for the three-minute class. The entries for this race were Daisy Hayward, Prince Moor and Johnny Moore, but Johnny Moore was withdrawn leaving Daisy Hayward and Prince Hayward to start. They started with Daisy Hayward slightly in the lead. Prince Hayward broke badly and lost ground which he failed to recover; Daisy Hayward winning without effort in 3:09. She easily won the second heat in 3:03½.

The next race was a two out of three, mile heats for two-year-olds for a purse of $125. Posse and Johnny Moore were the only starters, the latter winning in 3:18, 3:15.

The next was a running race, three-fourths mile and repeat, for a purse of $150, with the following entries: Thunderbolt, Gray Eagle, Harry B., Maria, Stoneman, Why Not and Amy B. Why Not and Maria were withdrawn. The drawings for positions resulted in Amy B. getting the inside, Harry B. second, Thunderbolt third, Stoneman fourth, and Gray Eagle on the outside.

A large number of pools were sold on this race, and the bidding was spirited, with Gray Eagle the choice for $10, Stoneman $7, Amy B $5, and the field $2.50.

After several trials they were sent off with Stoneman in the lead, which he maintained throughout, with Amy B second, and Gray Eagle third; time, 1:20½. After this heat the pools sold with Stoneman the choice. Stoneman took the second heat and race easily in 1:19.

THIRD DAY, SEPT. 27TH.

The trot for the 2:45 class, mile heats, was first on the programme. Bert Holmes, Electric and Silver Shield started, Electric being favorite. After a number of attempts they were tapped off with Electric and Holmes together and Silver Shield in the rear, which position she kept throughout, barely saving her distance. Electric and Holmes came in almost nose and nose, Electric winning. Time, 2:42½.

In the second heat both Silver Shield and Electric broke badly. The latter came under the wire even with Bert Holmes, who had trotted without a skip. Some dissatisfaction was expressed at the decision of the judges, the claim being made that Holmes should have been given the heat. The judges decided it was a dead heat between these two. Silver Shield third. Time, 2:43½.

The horses got off well together for the third and fourth heats. Bert Holmes won in 2:43½, 2:42, Electric second, Silver Shield third.

In the fifth heat Holmes broke and Electric won in 2:43, Bert Holmes being second, Silver Shield third. The latter went to the stable, and the remaining two were sent off for the sixth heat, with Electric slightly on the lead. Holmes went to pieces and lost the heat and race, just saving distance. Time, 2:44½.

SUMMARY.

Rohnerville, Cal., Sept. 27, 1888. 2:45 class.
Electric.....	1 0 2 2 1
Bert Holmes.....	2 0 1 1 2
Silver Shield.....	3 3 3 3 3

Time, 2:42½, 2:43½, 2:42, 2:43, 2:44½.

On account of the lateness of the hour on which the above race was finished, and the fact that Silver Shield was entered in the other trotting race previously assigned for that afternoon, the second trot was postponed, and the horses in the half mile and repeat running race were called on. The starters were Stoneman, and Edith R. Stoneman being the favorite in the pools. The horses were flagged off the second time they came up and ran from the very start neck and neck, passing under the wire a perfect tie; time, 51½.

In the second heat Stoneman came in first in 53½.

The next heat Stoneman won handily in 54 seconds.

The last race was the Ferndale merchants' stake. The starters were Restless, Senator, Poscora Jr., and Rackett. Rackett, an old horse, got away in the lead and held it throughout, Poscora Jr. second, and the rest strung out away back. Restless was run in to save distance when Rackett passed under the wire in 3:04.

The second heat was substantially a repetition of the first heat, Rackett taking the heat and race in 2:56½.

FOURTH DAY, SEPT. 28TH.

The first race was a Petrolia special for three-year-olds, half mile dash. George Crippen entered Roan Dick, W. Bryant entered Patsy, Fred Watson entered Black Pet. Black Pet sold the favorite in the pools, with Roan Dick second choice.

In drawing for positions Dick secured the inside, and Black Pet on the outside. They were sent off on the second attempt well together, but Black Pet took the lead and kept it to the finish, winning by two lengths in 53½ seconds.

LAST DAY—SEPT. 28TH.

The free-for-all running race, one and one-fourth mile dash for a purse of $150, was first on the list. Thunderbolt, Why Not, Harry B., Maria and Amy B were started from the three-quarter pole with positions as named above. This race proved to be the most interesting one, so far, of them all.

They passed the judges stand with Thunderbolt in the lead, Amy B next, Harry B third, Why Not fourth and Maria fifth. After passing the first quarter pole the little two-year-old Why Not commenced to creep up on the rest and gained steadily to the finish, winning with a splendid spurt in 2:21½. Amy B second, Harry B third, Thunderbolt fourth, Maria fifth.

The next was a trotting race for three-year-olds, mile heats, two in three, for a purse of $125, postponed from previous day. Daisy Hayward and Silver Shield started, Daisy, who had the pole, winning in 2:51. Silver Shield broke badly all through the heat.

After this heat, Mr. Knight's Patchen, with running mate, trotted a mile in 2:30.

The second heat in the trotting race for three-year-olds was a repetition of the preceding one, Daisy Hayward winning the heat and race in 2:48.

The next race was a free-for-all running race, half mile and repeat for a purse of $150. Stoneman and Gray Eagle started. They came under the wire in 54½ with Stoneman slightly in the lead.

The next heat was a repetition, Stoneman winning easily. Neither horse did more than gallop in this heat.

Redding, Shasta Co., Cal.

FIRST DAY—SEPTEMBER 18.

There was a good assemblage at the race-track, but as usual on the first day there was not so great a crowd as on the days following.

The first speed contest was a running race, half mile and repeat, for a purse of $50, in which Eugene Parsons named Dutchman, D. H. Tighe Ida Mac, and J. E. Gibson Lady Vulchen. Dutchman got the pole and a start of about thirty yards, while Ida Mac balked and backed on to Lady Vulchen, Dutchman winning the heat by fifty feet, Ida Mac second and Lady Vulchen third. In the second heat Dutchman caused considerable trouble and delay in getting a start, but when he did he got to the winning post in the same time as in the first heat, winning the race and purse; Ida Mac second and Lady Vulchen third. In the first heat Ida Mac was the favorite in the pools, but in the second the Dutchman took her place.

In the second race, three-quarters mile and repeat for a purse of $100, G. Flitner named Minnie R.; M. McCrimmins named Menlo, and J. E. Gibson named Lulu. In the first heat Menlo got the pole, Lulu the center, and Minnie R. the outside. The race was won by Minnie R. by a neck. Time, 1:20. After this heat it was claimed by several who were heavy in the pools that McCrimmins, the owner of Menlo, was putting up money on Minnie R. This report caused considerable feeling, but McCrimmins denied that such was the case. After considerable wrangling an appeal was made to the judges, who ordered Menlo's rider to be changed; the order was afterwards revoked. The second heat was as close as the first, and caused the most intense excitement, Minnie R. winning again by a short neck, Menlo second and Lulu third.

SECOND DAY—SEPTEMBER 19TH.

There was a much larger attendance at the race track than on the day before. Fully a thousand people were present. The first of the evening was a running race, one mile and repeat, purse $125. D. H. Tighe named s m Ida Mac, J. E. Gibson named s m Lulu, and F. N. Coombs named brst Bayswater Jr. At the start Ida Mac got the pole, Bayswater in the center and Lulu the outside. In the first heat Lulu won in 1:53, beating Ida Mac six lengths and distancing Bayswater. In the second heat Lulu again beat Ida Mac by six lengths, winning the race in 1:56.

The next was a trotting race, one mile heats 3 in 5, for all horses that never beat 2:35. Purse $200. J. W. McDowell named b g Lohengrin and Marshall & Merrill named h m Bird. Bird got the pole, and in the first heat won by two lengths. Time, 2:37. Second heat Lohengrin won by a neck. Time, 2:35. Third heat Lohengrin won again by a neck. Time, 2:34. Fourth heat Lohengrin won by a length, winning race and purse. Time, 2:33.

THIRD DAY—SEPT. 20TH.

The throng at the pavilion in the evening was greater than ever. The address delivered by Francis Carr on the resources and development of Shasta county was listened to with great attention and highly applauded. The attendance at the race-track was greater than ever, the grand stand being crowded to its utmost capacity.

The first race on the programme was a trotting race, one mile heats, 2 in 3, free for all horses owned in Shasta county, purse $75. D. Kirkpatrick named h st Harry Z, and J. H. Hacke named h g Bay George; won by Bay George, Harry Z distanced in the first heat; time, 3:24.

The next was running race, single dash of one mile, free for all, purse $75. E. Flitner entered br m Minnie R., and M. McCrimmins entered b g Menlo. In this race, through a misunderstanding on the part of riders, one dash was made round the track which counted for nothing. When really sent away Minnie R. and Menlo made a beautiful start and kept up a close race to the finish, Minnie R. winning by a length; time, 1:48½.

Then came the event of the day—a match race, 660 yards single dash, purse $600; J. F. Gibson named Johnny Allen and Ed Lee named Bones. This race was for blood and excited great interest. They got off together and Bones won the dash by a length in 37 seconds. In the pools Johnny Allen was the favorite until Bones came on the track when the latter quickly went up in the pools.

FOURTH DAY—SEPTEMBER 21ST.

The attendance was better than on any previous day. The race was a novelty race, tree for all, purse—first quarter mile $35, half mile $40, three-quarters mile $40, one mile $75. E. Flitner named Minnie R., Ed. Lee named Sage Brush, J. W. Dowell named Little Cap, M. McCrimmins named Menlo and F. N. Coombs named Bayswater Jr. Minnie R. got the pole, and a splendid start was made. Little Cap reached the quarter-pole first, and at the half-mile post Sage Brush was ahead. Minnie R. reached the three-quarter pole and the wires in advance of her contestants, winning the two heaviest purses. Time, 24 seconds, 50 seconds, 1:18½ and 1:45.

The next was a trotting race, free for all, one mile heats 3 in 5, purse $600. D. Kirkpatrick named Harry Z, J. W. Dowell named Lohengrin, and Marshall & Merrill named Bird. The first heat was won by Lohengrin, Bird second, Harry Z distanced. Time, 2:37. The next three heats were won by Bird, winning the race and purse. Time, 2:36½, 2:38 2:39. Lohengrin was the favorite in the pools, and there were some heavy betting on the outside.

The third was a running race, single dash of a half mile, free for all, purse $100. E. Flitner named Minnie R., M. S. Gregory named Barney G., Ed. Leo named Bones, and J. W. Dowell named Little Cap. This was a close race, and Little Cap, to the surprise of many, came in first, winning the race and purse, Minnie R. second. Time 54 seconds.

"Gentlemen," said he, "I am something of a sportsman, as you know, and fond of experimenting with new brands of powder. I once tested s me that proved rather remarkable. I put in a fair charge and plenty of shot, and blazed away on a target about a hundred feet away. When the smoke cleared away I didn't see a mark on the target. This seemed inconceivable, for I flatter myself I can hit a three-foot target. I walked over and looked at it. Not a scratch on it. I filled a pipe, lighted it, and thought about it. It wasn't possible I could have missed so completely. Just then there was a little humming in the air, and a rattling on the target. I looked at it, and found it covered all over with shot. This was strange. It puzzled me. But at last the truth broke upon me. I scratched my head, and remarked to myself, 'Great Scott, but that's slow powder!' The barkeeper gazed blankly at the crowd from a corner. The brown cat mewed piteously, and strove to squeeze out of a broken window into the cold, cold storm. The wonder was the man was not hit by his own shot when looking on the target.

Yreka, Siskiyou County, Cal.—Tenth District Fair.

On Wednesday, Oct. 3, 1888, the ninth annual fair of the 10th Agricultural District began at Yreka and was largely attended, the weather being delightful all the week, though quite warm during the middle of the day. The rain of about ten days since made the track good for fast going, although rather dusty. The display of stock was much better than last year, principally horses and cattle.

FIRST DAY—WEDNESDAY, OCT. 3D.

Race No. 1, running, half mile and repeat, free for all, purse $100. Entries, Little Cap, Minnie R., Bessie Burke and Bones. Little Cap and Bessie Burke ran a dead heat, Minnie third, and Bones last; time :50. Little Cap won the second heat by three feet, Bessie second, Minnie third, and Bones again bringing up the rear. Third and last heat, Minnie pressed Little Cap more closely than in the last heat, but the latter came under the string first by only six inches, the others well up; time, :51. In this race the pools sold: Minnie $20, to $15 for the field.

Race No. 2, trotting, mile heats, 2 in 3, free for all horses owned in the district prior to April 1st, 1888, that have never beaten 3 minutes; purse $150. Lady Beach and Stemwinder were entered for this race. The former won easily in 2:33½, distancing Stemwinder.

SECOND DAY.

Thursday, October, 4th—First race, running, one mile and repeat; purse $200. Menlo, Jubilee and Bessie Burke were entered and started in this race. There was considerable chopping in the pools, each horse selling as favorite. In drawing for position Menlo got the inside, Jubilee second, and Bessie was placed on the outside. Jubilee led to the three-quarter pole, when the others collared him, and it was a rattling race down the homestretch. Bessie showed under the wire first, in 1:48½, Menlo second and Jubilee a good third.

Second heat—Bessie showed up very lame to the regret of her owners, backers and many admirers. Menlo was also lame, but did not show as much distress as Bessie. After considerable scoring the horses were sent off, and ran well together to the head of the stretch, when Menlo and Bessie pulled away, and there was a game and immensely exciting contest to the finish. Menlo came under the wire first by a neck; time 1:51.

Third heat—Only Menlo and Bessie started. Menlo won in 1:53.

Second race—The next in order was a trotting race, 3 in 5; purse $250; in which Lady Beach, Bird, Zilophone and Altena started. In the pools Bird was favorite the others bringing good prices. After some scoring a good start was obtained and the horses went off for the first heat. Altena went to the quarter first, the others well up, and at the half the same positions, and from there home it was a very spirited contest. On the stretch Altena went off her feet twice, but gathered quickly, losing no ground, and was first to reach the string, the others all being well up; time 2:33.

In the second heat the horses all showed up well, and were sent off at a fair start. Altena again took the lead and cut out the work. This was a grand struggle and the horses came under the wire in the following order: Altena, Zilophone, Bird, Lady Beach; time 2:32, the fastest time made on the track, the Walbridge mare having lowered the time on the previous day. Altena took the third heat in 2:34.

Late in the afternoon on account of the sudden death of the President of the Society, Wm. McConnell from apoplexy, the races not yet called were postponed until the following day as a mark of respect.

On the next day the programme was commenced before dinner, to get through with the postponed races, stock display and regular advertised races for the day, under the management of James Vance who had been elected by the Directors to act as President, until the close of the Fair.

THIRD DAY.

Friday, Oct. 5th—First race, three-fourths of a mile, single dash, free for all two-year-olds; purse $150, with the following entries and starters: Wild Robin, Jamhoree, Arch and Blue Jay. It was a close and spirited contest. Wild Robin was the most speedy and won in 1:25.

Second race—The trotting race, two in three, for four-year-olds and under, was called with but two animals to start, namely: Vance's Aggie F and Swan's Susie H. The latter won in 2:54½.

Third race—The running race, three-eighths of a mile, excited much interest. In the pools the horses sold as follows: Little Cap, $8; Barney G., $5; Bones, $3; Rnhy, $2.50. The horses came under whip and spur from start to finish. Barney won in :36, Little Cap second, with the others close up.

Fourth race—The last race for this day was a quarter of a mile contest in which Little Cap, Barney G and Frenchy started. Little Cap won in :23, the best time ever made on the track.

FOURTH DAY.

Saturday, Oct. 6th—First race, running, single dash of one mile, free for all; purse $100. Entries: Minnie R. and Jubilee. This was a good and exciting race in which Jubilee led to near the three quarter pole, when Minnie came up, and they came down the home stretch at a rapid pace, but Minnie out-footed the gelding, and won by a length in 1:50½.

Second race—The next race was the 2:30 class free for all; purse $600. The entries were Altena, driven by Poacock; Lady W., driven by Sutherland; Bird, driven by —; Lohengrin, driven by McDonald.

Altena led to the half-mile pole in 1:20, through Lohengrin's running Lady W. was caught in a pocket, from which her driver could not extricate her until they swung into the home stretch, too late to win the heat. Bird took the heat in 2:36, Lady W. second, Altena third, and Lohengrin distanced for running.

Second heat—Bird led to the quarter in :38; these positions were maintained to the half, which was made in 1:16, from this point the pace was increased, and Bird came home in 2:31, the fastest time ever made on this track, Lady W. being second and Altena well up at the finish.

Third heat—The third heat was trotted in 2:32½, Altena was off her feet a number of times in this heat, and although she came in ahead, there was a lively dispute as to whether she should be given the heat. The judges, however, after long conference, decided to give her the heat.

Fourth heat—Altena and Bird only started for the fourth heat. Altena won by a close shave in 2:35.

Fifth heat—In the fifth heat Bird went off his feet badly, from some cause, on the first turn, and got away off on the outside of the track. On the back stretch and around the last turn he closed up the gap, but flew to pieces again when near the stand. Altena won the heat and race; time 2:37.

Last race, five eighths of a mile, running. Joe Hooker, Little Cap and Barney G., were started in the order named. Little Cap was hard chased, but won; time not reported to us.

Susanville, Lassen County, Eleventh District Fair.

FIRST DAY, SEPTEMBER 26.

The first race, the 3 minute class, as announced in this speed programme, was declared off, and a special purse of $300 substituted for E. Smith's br s Engineer, Tom Raymond's b g Klamath, and J. D. Byers' b s Duster. Duster, whose driver was H. Gore, drew the pole, Klamath, driven by Tom Raymond, second, and Engineer driven by John Bransford was placed outside. Pools sold at $20 to $8 on Engineer over the field.

The horses got away with Duster in the lead. Just after passing the half Engineer drew to the front which position he maintained, winning in 2:43½. Duster a good second, and Klamath not far in the rear. In the second heat Engineer took the lead at once, and won the heat in 2:45½. Duster second, Klamath third. The third heat, which decided the race, was won by Engineer, although Duster made a good race, leading during the third quarter and finished second, Klamath third.

The next race was for two-year-olds, trotting heat two in three for a purse of $300, District horses only being admitted. Entries were made as follows: J. D. Byers named g m "Effie G.," E. P. Smith named b s "William B.," J. S. Carter named g g "J. C.," Effie winning in 3:02½, William B. second, J. C. third. In the second and last heat Effie led from the start, winning in 2:58.

The mile dash was declared off and the day's proceedings closed with a running race, ¼ mile and repeat, purse $250, free for all.

James Henry named a m Duster, W. M. Osborn named g g Silver Tail; M. Snyder named b s Jake Snyder; J. Stevenson named b s San Luis Obispo.

Pool selling was lively on this race, San Luis Obispo being the favorite in the first heat.

Silver Tail drew the pole, Jake Snyder second, San Luis Obispo third, and Duster outside. Jake Snyder won in 24, Duster second, San Luis Obispo third, Silver Tail fourth.

Jake Snyder now sold favorite in the pool box at the rate of $20 to $6 for the field. A protest being entered against the rider of San Luis Obispo, Samuel Cooper was substituted for E. Blunkall.

The horses again got away easily, Jake Snyder winning the second heat and the race in 23½, San Luis Obispo second, Duster third, Silver Tail fourth.

SECOND DAY—Sept. 27.

The first race for the day was the 2:30 class trotting, heat three in five, for a purse of $500. G. A. Dougherty named b s Victor by Echo; F. E. Keating named g g Sensation by Peacock; J. D. Byers named g m May Queen by Gray Buck. May Queen drew the pole, Victor second, Sensation outside.

The first four attempts were unsuccessful, but at the fifth trial the horses got away at a furious pace, beginning the best race ever seen north of Sacramento. May Queen led down to the quarter pole with Victor close on her heels, and Sensation some distance behind; the quarter was reached in 36½. After passing the quarter, the mare fell behind, but Victor still retained his lead, reaching the half in 1:12. Sensation now rapidly lessened the gap, but the same relative positions were retained to the three-quarters, May Queen far behind, and down the homestretch under the wire, Victor winning in 2:22½, Sensation second, May Queen shut out.

In the second heat the horses were sent off well together. Sensation soon took the lead of half a length over Victor, which was maintained to the finish, reaching the quarter in 36½; half in 1:10; three-quarters in 1:46 and the finish in 2:22.

The third and fourth heats were also won by Sensation, who thus took the race. Third heat: Quarter 36½, half, 1:12½; three-quarters was reached with the horses neck and neck. The excitement was now intense, and large bets were made on the result, which for a time was doubtful, but Sensation proved a little too fast for the bay and won in 2:24.

Fourth heat: Quarter 37, half 1:13, and won by Sensation in 2:25, the latter thus winning the race.

This was undoubtedly the best race ever trotted in Northern California, and it is largely due to the superior condition of the track that such good time was made.

The second race was a mile and repeat, running, purse $500. D. Dennison named b g Dave Douglas; J. Holland named b m Nettie Moak; J. Dyson named b g Lige Clark; A. Y. Stevenson named b m Avondale.

In the first heat Avondale led throughout, winning in 1:45½, Dave Douglas second, Lige Clark third, Nettie Moak distanced.

In the second heat the horses got off well together and remained bunched up to the quarter. Dave Douglas in the lead, Lige Clark, second Avondale behind. The gap between Avondale and the leaders was considerably lengthened at the quarter, while the first two were very close together. These positions were retained to the close, Dave Douglas winning in 1:47, Lige Clark second, Avondale third, Lige Clark having failed to secure a heat was sent to the stable.

In the third heat the rider of Avondale was removed and E. Nelson substituted. The two contestants went down to the quarter neck and neck. By the time the half was reached Dave Douglas had forged ahead half a length, which position as leader he retained to the close, winning the heat and race in 1:45½.

The attention of the audience was next claimed by the district yearlings, who were to trot for a purse of $250, half mile heats. G. H. Dougherty named B B H by Victor; E. P. Smith named b l m Samantha by Engineer; J. S. Carter named g a Thurman by Victor. Thurman took the lead from the start and retained it to the finish, Samantha coming in second and B B H third. Samantha won the second and third heats, thus winning the race.

The next race on the programme was the three-quarter mile dash, free for all, purse $400, in which J. R. Cain had entered Molly McShane; D. Dennison b m Haidee; J. Dyson b s Snuff Box and A. Y. Stevenson s m Susie S. Molly McShane got off in the lead closely followed by Snuff Box with the other two several lengths behind, Molly held her own for the half mile but Haidee and Susie S closed up and passed the leaders. Molly McShane now fell behind with Haidee leading Susie S second, and Snuff Box third, and in order they came under the wire.

THIRD DAY, SEPTEMBER 28.

The afternoon exercises began with the pacing and trotting races, 2:25 class; mile heats, 3 in 5, purse $600. F. E. Keating named b g Ned and G. A. Dougherty, b s Victor. As only two horses were entered, they were started for the entrance money. In the first heat the horses got away at the second attempt, Ned leading by a length and a half. As the horses approached the quarter, which was reached in 37½, Ned broke badly and Victor passed on several lengths ahead. Soon after passing the half, reached in 1:13, Ned again closed up and passed. As they neared the three-quarter pole the trotter again showed what was in him by forging ahead and winning the heat with comparative ease in 2:26½.

In the next heat, Victor and Ned got away well together, but Victor led by this time the quarter was reached, Ned pacing well, but losing greatly whenever he broke. He lessened the gap considerably up to the three-quarter pole, but again breaking, fell several lengths in the rear. Victor retained his lead down the home stretch and trotted at an easy gait under the wire in 2:28½.

In the third heat Victor led from the start, Ned gaining whenever steady, but breaking frequently. Victor won the heat, race and first money.

Sandwiched with the preceding were the heats of the special trot, for a purse of $400. E. P. Smith named b s Engineer; J. D. Byers named b s Duster; C. H. Lawrence named g g Maxwell. Duster drew the pole, Engineer second, Maxwell outside.

In the first heat at the stand, Maxwell started in the lead, Engineer second, Duster third. Up to the half, reached in 1:20½, the horses were neck and neck, but Engineer forged ahead and won the heat in 2:39½, Maxwell second, Duster third.

In the second heat Engineer showed his metal soon after passing the half, and took the lead, which position he retained throughout, winning the heat in 2:39, Maxwell second and Duster third.

A protest being entered by Jack Adams against the driver of Maxwell, Dan Dennison was substituted for the third heat. Engineer was ahead at the start, Duster second. Engineer, however, broke and Duster passed him. The latter held his place nearly to the three-quarter pole when Engineer and Maxwell both passed him. The horses held their positions down the homestretch, Engineer winning the heat and first money in 2:43½, Maxwell second, Duster third.

Sensation had a walk over in the 2:40 class.

The next race was the three-quarter mile dash, for a purse of $250, in which J. Q. Anderson had entered g m Baby Bunton; J. Dyson Lige Clark; J. Stevenson San Luis Obispo, and Mr. M. T. Walters Alfarrow. Lige Clark drew the pole, Alfarrow second, Baby Bunton third and San Luis Obispo outside. The horses started with Bunton in the lead, but she was not speedy enough and soon fell behind. Alfarrow, who was the favorite in the pool box, led, Lige Clark following close upon him. The position of the leaders were not changed, the horses coming under the wire with Alfarrow in the lead, Lige Clark second, Baby Bunton third and San Luis Obispo unplaced. Time, 1:18½.

One and one-half mile dash was the next thing on the programme, free for all, for a purse of $850, in which D. Dennison had entered Haidee; J. Dyson Snuff Box and Ottawa. Haidee drew the pole, Snuff Box second and Ottawa outside. The horses were easily started, Haidee taking and retaining the lead from the start. The half was reached in 0:55. Haidee won first money, Snuff Box second and Ottawa third.

A running race, mile dash, purse $300, followed immediately after. For this trial, D. Dennison had entered s m Blue Bonnet; J. Dyson, b g Lige Clark; A. Y. Stevenson, b m Avondale; and M. T. Walters, Alfarrow. The betting in the pool box was heavy and largely in favor of Alfarrow. The horses were well bunched to the quarter, reached in 25½, but at the half, reached in 50, Alfarrow forged ahead and won in the very good time of 1:44½, Blue Bonnet second, Avondale third, and Lige Clark fourth.

Napa and Solano Fair.—Napa, October 2-6.

FIRST DAY—Oct 2d.

The first race was run between Notidle and Welcome. They scored but once, and through the whole heat, under whip and spur, they were side by side; Notidle won in 1:16. The second heat was almost a repetition of the first, Notidle winning the heat and race in 1:18.

 Time, 1:16, 1:18.

The second race was a mile dash between Jack Brady, Nabeau, Lucifer and Bessie Shannon. They came under the wire in the order named in 1:45½.

The third was a trotting race, with the following entries: Cora C., Colema, Mambrino Chief and Budd. Four heats were trotted sandwiched in between the heats of the fourth race. It was not finished, four heats only being trotted. The first was won by Cora C., the second by Budd, the third by Cora C., and fourth by Budd, and then darkness came on and the race was continued until next day. The time in these heats was 2:35½, 2:34, 2:39 and 2:33. Cora C. was the favorite, the other horses being sold in the field.

The fourth race was between Ben Ali and Elscoter, and was won easily by the former in three straight heats in 2:27, 2:28 and 2:30½.

The next on the programme was the trot between Lillie Stanley and Woodnut. Pools sold at the rate of $100 to $10 in favor of the last named. The horses got away with an even start for the first heat. Lillie Stanley took the lead and maintained it to the end. Woodnut not going steadily and it seemed as though the pace was too fast for him. Lillie trotted steadily and flew around the turns like a bird. She came under the wire a winner by a length in the splendid time of 2:17½.

Stanley stock went up a little, but Woodnut was still the favorite. In the second heat Stanley was unsteady, breaking badly on the first turn, and also on the back stretch. Woodnut won in 2:22½.

The third and fourth heat was, repetitions of the second, the time being 2:22 in both heats. The Napa people expected the result and but few lost anything on the races. It showed beyond question that Lillie Stanley was a great mare and with another year's work will be able to complete with the fastest horses on the track.

The pacing race was won by Gold Leaf in three straight heats easily, in 2:21½, 2:24 and 2:15, the last heat breaking the world's record for three-year-olds.

The last race was for the 2:40 class, Van, Mortimer and Mambrino Chief Jr. being the contestants, Van the favorite. Burton won the first and second heats however, and then the betting changed, Burton being the favorite. The third heat was declared no heat as the horses went without the word and did not come back when called. Burton had a bad start but came in ahead. The heat was trotted over and Burton again won. The time was 2:40½, 2:33½ and 2:32½.

FOURTH DAY, SEPTEMBER 5.

The races were fully up to the excellent standard that has obtained all through the meeting. The first was a race for two-year-olds, heat two in three in which Captor and Washington were the contestants. The result was as follows:

Captor..... 1 2 2
 Washington..... 2 1 1
 Time, 2:48, 2:44½, 2:51½.

The next was the 2:25 class, Ben Ali, Allo and Franklin being the entries. Franklin was a hot favorite at $25 to $6 for the other two, but after the second heat this order was reversed. The summary is as follows:

 Allo..... 3 1 2 2 2
 Time, 2:25½, 2:22½, 2:23½, 2:25, 2:23½.

In the 2:30 race Flora B won in three straight heats without much effort. Time, 2:33, 2:30, 2:30.

The Two-Minute Horse.

A good deal is being said just now about the coming two-minute trotter, and intelligent breeders have expressed the opinion that by the year 1908 we shall have reached that rate of speed, while 2:20 performers will be as plenty as the 2:30 performers are to-day. If the 2:00 trotter is ever produced the whole credit must not be given to the advanced breeding. The best tracks are each year improved and made faster. Manufacturers of supplies are not standing still, but are studying to make lighter, easier running and better balanced vehicles. Harness-makers each year add some desirable idea to the many excellent ones which improve the harness. Better biting and hanging up of horses is practiced, for no intelligent driver can handle horses any length of time and not learn much. These facts have much to do with landing so many horses in the charmed circles.

Let me not be misunderstood. I do not wish to imply that breeding has not advanced. What I do mean is that just as the science of breeding becomes clearer to the man engaged in it the science of harnessing, hanging up, biting and track making is becoming better understood. Goldsmith Maid was, in my opinion, the greatest race horse ever bred, and I believe with the same track, harness, sulky, hitting and driving she could have trotted equal to Maud S.'s mark, and have done it in a race against other horses—not against time, as Maud S. did. The 2:14 of Goldsmith Maid was placed to her credit in a race, while the 2:08½ of Maud S. was in an exhibition mile.

The marked improvements in tracks and racing equipments did not commence over ten years ago. Tracks were repaired when defective, but road-making was an art unknown in the days of the Maid. The improvements since her day have been marvelous. Flora Temple made her record of 2:19½ in 1859, and it was seven years before this mark was beaten. Breeding naively had to do it, for, as I said, little was then known about making tracks fast. Seven years later the great Dexter came out and took 2½ seconds from the mark. Seven years of unaided breeding to add 2½ seconds to the speed of the trotter. This record (2:17½) was lowered by Goldsmith Maid in 1871, four years later, when she trotted in 2:14. Then began the track and equipment improvements. But it was not until 1878 that her mark was beaten, and then only three-quarters of a second by Rarua. St. Julien came out the year later, and over the improved track, and hitched in the latest improved style, he lowered the record two seconds, and 2:11½ was given to the world. The following year Maud S. scored 2:10, a second better, and it took four years to beat that. Jay Eye-See in 1884 trotted in 2:10, and the following day Maud S. went out and trotted in 2:08½.

There is nothing on which to base the belief that 2:08½ will be beaten this year, although the tracks are faster than ever before. Thus, then, in 30 years 11 seconds of speed has been gained for the trotter. If the record is not beaten this year the gain in 18 years from the time of Goldsmith Maid's record made in 1871, just 5½ seconds, less by half a second than was added to the speed in the 12 years preceding. This does not show that, with all our improved tracks and equipments, and our boasted knowledge of breeding, we are going backward. But it does show that after a certain rate of speed is reached, to go beyond requires years of patient waiting. That half second knocked from 2:08½ is more increase than two seconds from 2:20.

If the lower down we get the slower the fractions are erased, and if it took 18 years to gain 5½ seconds, how long will it take to wipe out the 8½ between 2:08½ and 2:00? Twenty years? The 2:20 horses may be as plenty 20 years from now as 2:30 horses are to-day; but the 2:00 horse will not be on the turf then. We can only judge by what has been done in the past. No one would welcome the 2:00 horse quicker than I, but I cannot conceive how, with the ratio of gain won in the past staring us in the face, we are to look for the big stride in so few years.—H. L. HIXES in Cultivator and Country Gentlemen.

Mr. Haggin's filly Daruna was cut down in her race at the Gravesend track, and her injuries may prevent her running again this season. This is a serious loss to the Haggin stables, as the filly had just been got into excellent racing shape, and would have won many races for Mr. Haggin.

"Enforce the Rules."

Some weeks ago an editorial under the above "head" was published, and in a late issue of the Sporting World there is a review of the trotting meeting at Philadelphia, a portion of which is appropriate. The rule forbidding "loud shouting" is clear enough, although the limit of the fine, $25, that can be imposed is altogether inadequate, and the other penalty "suspension during the meeting" is also too lenient. Still by fining for every loud shout the maxim amount, counting each distinct reverberation of the voice, a three-quarter-of-a-mile-halloo, or rather series of hulahalooos, would be somewhat expensive. A chance for being placed last would be more effective, however. It is not often that this rule is broken in California, and others which are frequently infringed of more importance.

In the very first race that was trotted the number of a horse that had finished quite a long way behind was about to be hung out as the winner of the heat when an outsider called attention to the mistake, and it was rectified just in time. In the same race two other horses were wrongly placed in the books, and again the proper change was made later on when the matter was called in question. These, however, were trifling errors compared with what was done on the last day. It is not in order for me to go into a long discussion of the proper application of the rule governing running during a heat. It is enough to say that in Goldsmith's hands J. B. Richardson trotted more steadily and did less running than in any race I have seen him go since he responded to the bell call at Cleveland nine weeks ago. John Splan was quick to take advantage of the incapacity of the judges, and he had scarcely got into the sulky to drive Protection against the horse that had so many times defeated him than he proceeded to pave the way for creating a strong prejudice against his opponent. Everybody felt that Richardson and Protection would virtually have a struggle by themselves for the first money in this 2:27 class. Protection got away well in the first heat and trotted a good mile, and defeated Richardson pretty well on his merits except for the fact that Splan exerted his full lung power for three-quarters of a mile, and it is probable that Richardson would have gone more steadily had not the hot-headed fellow been disturbed by the steady war whoop that sounded in his ear up the backstretch and round into the straight.

Goldsmith went up, made a strong protest against the unnecessary shouting, and the judges seemed disposed to protect Richardson against that sort of disturbance. After Splan had got the second heat he was in good spirits. He made one of his best drives in the third mile, for he knew that Richardson was getting better all the time. Protection was a tired horse after the first half of the third heat, and the break he made when Richardson got to his necktie near the third quarter was simply from leg weariness. Then the great track lawyer resorted to his old tactics of laying up a heat and preparing for a desperate effort in the fifth innings. Everybody knew that the race was for blood. The memory of Governor Hill's defeat at Hartford, coupled with earlier discomfitures, made Splan the more determined to win this race by hook or crook. He had a good horse for the fifth heat, and Protection showed that he was not wanting in gameness, but only required a little more speed to make the victory sure. It is a question whether a driver has a right to abandon an outside position and take his place immediately behind a pole horse, as Splan did in securing for the fifth heat. However, that did not greatly matter, though it enabled him to get away much better than he could otherwise have done, for Richardson went off much better than the rest, that Protection, by sticking close behind him, passed the rest of the party almost as soon as the leader did. It would have aroused the jealousy of Buffalo Bill's most stalwart Indian brave had he been present to listen to the wild war whoop that rang out on the evening air as Splan repeated his earlier performance of yelling like a Sioux chief on the war path.

It seems to me there can be no doubt that this was the principal cause of the break that Richardson made about half way up the back stretch. Goldsmith seemed to have full control of the horse, and he is the first driver I have seen behind him who could at once take him back when the thoroughbred in the gelding's veins gets the upper hand of him. Nobody could have more faithfully obeyed the rule than Goldsmith did, for he took such a strong hold of Richardson that Protection trotted right past him, though the son of Wilkes can run a two minute gait if his head is loose. When the horse settled he came very fast and, though Splan's shouting caused him to make a short skip as he swung into the homestretch, he lauded at once and fairly out trotted Protection to the wire. When Splan got out of the sulky it was a couple of minutes before he had breath and voice enough to make himself heard by the judges. When his old time volubility returned he was as eloquent as Bob Ingersoll himself, and while this method of trying to win a race is not the most honorable in the world, it must be conceded that Splan is a facile princeps at this business. Goldsmith is a pretty good talker himself, but he did not have much to say on this occasion, for he felt that he had won the race on its merits, and that there was little doubt that justice would be done to him and the horse. Splan made two or three visits to the stand and then walked nervously up and down, with his arms folded in the familiar attitude, awaiting the result. As the judges were in deep consultation John turned to a bystander and said: "I'll bet an even $100 that they give the race to Richardson, for every decision this year has been against me where he has been the contending horse." A member of the association who stood by offered to bet a modest dollar that Protection would be given the race. Splan took the bet, probably with a sort of hope that it might prove a good omen for his impending fate. I have no doubt that he was as much surprised as anybody when Lem Ullman, who was up with the judges, held up the big 7, which indicated that the game of bluff had been successful and Protection was to be given a race which certainly he did not win. I think the judges are to be congratulated on the fact that there was no pool selling this afternoon, for I verily believe there would have been a bigger riot than was seen at Hartford when Richardson was awarded the victory over Governor Hill in the memorable contest that still rankles deeply in the bosom of the Splan family.

Salt water bathing for bad legs is still popular with the trainers about Coney Island. Many of the crack performers are regular visitors to the ocean, where they are kept standing in the surf for an hour or more each day. E. J. Baldwin's pair, Volante and Emperor of Norfolk, have been to the water so often of late that they appear to thoroughly enjoy the bath. Norfolk is looking exceptionally well, but he appears a trifle howed. It is not probable that he will face the flag again this season.—Sporting World.

In the Antipodes.

The following is a portion of a letter which is the precursor of others sent by our old friend — to the S. F. Examiner. We published one to us, but as he has adopted a new pseudonym, and by that token evidently intending to cover his identity, no cue will be given to aid in penetrating his mask. But those who are the least familiar with his style will have no difficulty in locating the author, and will look for a racy and entertaining correspondence.

MELBOURNE, September 3.—There is something of a resemblance to the climate of California in that of Australia and in that of San Francisco to that of Melbourne, although I regard that of San Francisco, with all its cold winds in March and April and its leaden fogs in October and November, as the hatter of the two. I never saw the thermometer rise and fall as it does in Melbourne. Mr. McCoppin and I went out two weeks ago last Saturday, to be gone the entire afternoon. It was nearly 1 o'clock when we left the Exhibition Building, and we wore our ordinary street suits of gray corkscrew and carried our overcoats on our arms as we rode out six miles to the Flemington course. I felt the heat most oppressive and was about to give my overcoat to a lackey who stands at the Exhibition door, when Andrew Newell, a pioneer American merchant, cautioned me against doing so. "It broke clear and light this morning," said he, "and if you see the sun before 10 o'clock here during August, you can rely upon it that it will rain before dark." Accordingly, we both kept our overcoats on and were soon rewarded for doing so, for on reaching Flemington the sky had already become overcast and a chill wind was beginning to blow. The first race of the day was a spin of 820 yards for two-year-olds, for which there were twenty-one starters, and it was cleverly won by a handsome chestnut colt called Prince Consort.

Then came the great event, the hurdle race, for which there were thirteen starters, and the favorite was the once famous cup horse, Malua, by St. Albans. His owner was to ride him, and this gave additional confidence to the people, who plunged on him so persistently that he stood only two to one against him when the flag fell. His owner rode like a centaur, and allowed the others to get well in front of him. This was old Malua's first essay over the timbers, and I was in some doubt as to how he would fence. But I never had a doubt after seeing him take his second hurdle, over which he vaulted like a wild pigeon. He had so much speed that I predicted he would be the last horse over the last hurdle, and then win the race, for I saw that Mr. Inglis knew that "wait and win" has carried off more money than "take the track and keep it." And so the great horse lay behind all until a mile and a half had been traversed, when he moved up to fourth place with Leroy, Boolka and Bonnie Chester in front of him. Over the last hurdle he was fourth and then Mr. Inglis shook the bit through his mouth, and the great white-faced stallion began to forge to this front. Two or three strides vanquished Bonnie Chester and Boolka, and then he was alongside of Leroy, who carried twelve pounds less weight. But the race was never in doubt after the great horse once got over his last hurdle, and Malua won by two lengths. This horse won the Melbourne Cup of 1884, two miles, in 3:31, two miles and a quarter in 4:01. This race was followed by a steeple-chase, with fourteen starters, in which they rode around the punch-bowl-like hillsides that environ the Flemington course and over all sorts of stone walls and heavy log cribs.

A little brown mare called Ruby, about fifteen hands high, carried the second highest weight, 168 pounds, and won handsomely, the favorite (which carried 172 pounds) being wholly unplaced. Last Saturday I saw a very different sight. There were nine starters in the race. The flag fell to a good start, but Ruby lay behind for a waiting race, as she had done at Flemington. Going over the logs she fell and threw Scobie nearly ten feet, but he rose to his feet and mounted his mare, now nearly half a mile behind the leaders. The cheers were deafening, but the favorite was out of the race and went to the stable. At the ninth hurdle Beadsman II fell, and Kestrel went down at the tenth. At the fourteenth fence down went Royal Oak and Ellerslie, and at last poor old Curiosity took a header, leaving but three horses to race it out on the flat, and Eaglet went as she liked. Strange to say, not a man was hurt. The last race was the Balclava Handicap, one mile, for which there were nineteen starters. It was the finest race I ever saw, no less than seven horses finishing under the whip and the fourth horse was less than three feet behind the winner.

The great race here, however, is the Melbourne cup, which is a handicap race of two miles. No horse has ever yet won it twice, but old Malua is the first favorite this year, and I regard his chances as very good. Matador, Carlyon and the Australian Peer are next in favor. The toilets displayed by Melbourne ladies on "Cup Day" are simply gorgeous, and, although the race is nearly three months off, there are dress-makers at work to-day on costumes which will be aired for the first time on the day when the clans shall gather upon the Flemington Downs. On that day the great city takes its holiday, and the shops are locked up at noon.

Goodwood.

The English Sporting Calendar in the early spring of 1801 contained the following announcement: "The new racecourse on the Harroway, near Goodwood, is now completely formed for sport and much admired by the acknowledged amateurs of the Turf." This is the earliest mention of Goodwood. The first race was not run until 1802, the Duke of Richmond being at that time in his sixty-sixth year. It was many years, however, before the meeting attained a prominent position in the Calendar; during the first decades of the present century it was almost entirely local, and in those pre-railroad days was looked forward to by the south country folks, from peer to peasant, far and near, as the excitement of the year. It was the great time for inventions, and the mansions of the nobility and gentry were filled with visitors; the tradespeople in the towns and the cotters likewise, took the opportunity to entertain their London cousins. Of sporting men, unless among the visitors aforesaid, the supply was limited to what a single stage-coach would hold; for the swells came in their carriages, and the bailiffs, stewards, tradesmen, cotters, and their friends in gigs and carts, or on horseback. The grand stand was nothing more than a small wooden building with a thatch over it, and was exclusively occupied by the aristocracy, while the commonality saw the sport from their vehicles or on their nags.

There were no champagne luncheons on those days; indeed, champagne was a luxury even among the rich, so was claret-cup and ice, and all that sort of things. A glass of sound October, a sandwich, or a crust of bread-and-cheese was a midday repast for a lord—who lived in the country and had not been spoiled by town fads; while cakes, fruit, and cowslip wine were good enough for my lady and her daughter. A race Ordinary was open on the first or second day of the meeting, and furnished by some patron of the Turf with a haunch of venison, a saddle of mutton and huge pieces of beef making up the rest of the provisions; while the drink was strong ale, good black port, East India sherry and punch—they had digestions in these days! Matches were here arranged for the ensuing day, and the healths of the retiring and the coming stewards drunk, until both slipped beneath the table together. On the second day a hall was given at the Chichester Town Hall, where country dances and Sir Roger de Coverley were footed somewhat n-steadily by gentlemen fresh from the dinner table; quadrilles were unknown in the country at that time, and as to waltzes, if a youngster had proposed such a thing to a wife or daughter of one of these Squire Westerns, he would be called out and shot. Then there was a sitting down to supper, upon which the sun occasionally rose next morning. As to the racing, it was of the mildest description; a sweepstake of a guinea each, a silver cup, a farmer's plate, and a hunter's stakes, with perhaps a match or two, furnished sport for the two days, and as there were three or four heats for each race, there was plenty for the money. And everybody went home feeling they had had enough dissipation for a twelvemonth; to talk over the past event for the first six months, and the coming one for the following half-year.

Our Live Stock in Danger.

The investigation made on our coast by Mr. A. S. Mercer has resulted in the bringing into prominence the many dangers which have existed for a long time in our midst. He has requested me to say through the columns of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN that "He feels greatly pleased with the facilities which have been afforded him by those in the country whom he unwillingly had to inform of the diseased condition of their stock. At his request cattle were slaughtered, horses when dead were also brought to his notice. In these latter were found germs of anthrax, the remedy for which Mr. Mercer says is FIRE. Burn the carcasses in every instance. The Texas fever must be fought by quarantine—strict quarantine, and the railroads must find it their interest to back up the officials who may be appointed to carry out the rules. There is positively no safeguard in California against the importation of live stock infected with every disease on earth. It may come in rags, horse hair—even brushes from Russia may contain the germs. During the year 1864 no less than 72,000 horses were destroyed by it in that country. In the province of Novgorod, within four years, more than 56,000 horses, cows and sheep, as well as 525 men, fell victims to this terrible scourge. Veterinary practice is fast becoming a great science, in fact it has been productive of some results which are benefiting the human race through researches into diseases in the lower animals. As to actino-mykosis, if a swelling of the jaw does not subside within a reasonable time, but still keeps increasing the animal, it had better be destroyed. It is fatally communicable to man. The microscope will reveal the fungus, and its characteristics are known to skilled observers whom the Board of Health has chosen to look after the interests of San Francisco. The dangers of tuberculosis can be greatly overcome by a strict inspection of live stock. It can be easily diagnosed by experienced veterinarians in the living animal. The milk of such animals is liable to give the disease. To warn your people against the use of it is my imperative duty.

The autopsies which were made by Dr. Bowhill revealed to the astonished owners of anthrax, Texas Fevered, Tuberculosis and Actinomycosis cattle the accuracy of our opinion during the animal's life time."

With regard to all contagious diseases the writer has for long maintained that an isolated center should be treated like a fire and rigorously watched, without relaxation of vigilance until all danger of the disease spreading has passed away. The cost to counties is much less than the accumulated losses of individuals if proper precautions are taken by those in authority. This has been demonstrated over and over again in the United Kingdom.

A friend of mine who is no mean authority, said in the year 1883: "Every communicable, or transmissible, or contagious, or infectious, or specific disease depends upon living organisms for its production and development." This was Mr. James Lambert, F. R. C. V. S., Inspecting Veterinary Surgeon Ireland Army Department.
